This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

+ Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.

+ Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.

+ Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.

+ Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. You can search through the full text of this book on the web at `http://books.google.com/`

LT 10 S
10/19/33

HARVARD LAW LIBRARY

Received OCT 15 [illegible]

THE MICHIGAN DIGEST ANNOTATED

EMBODYING ALL REPORTED DECISIONS FROM THE EARLIEST PERIOD DOWN TO VOLUME 202 MICHIGAN, INCLUSIVE.

Being a
NEW EDITION OF JACOBS & CHANEY
By
GEORGE F. LONGSDORF
Editor New York Cyclopedic Digest, Illinois Cyclopedic Digest, Ohio Notes, etc.

VOLUME III
ELECTION AND WAIVER TO FRANCHISES

CHICAGO
CALLAGHAN & COMPANY
1920

Allowance has been made by the West Publishing Co. against the purchase of a new set.

To be retained by the Harvard Law Library

Copyright 1920
By
Callaghan & Company

OCT 15 1921
LRR

A DIGEST

OF

ALL THE REPORTED DECISIONS OF THE COURTS OF MICHIGAN

VOLUME III

ELECTION AND WAIVER.

TREATS of the occasion and manner of choosing one of two or more diverse rights or remedies and of the waiver of rights or remedies. It is not the intention to collect here all the cases on elections and waivers, but only the general law thereof, together with specific and concrete instances not treated in specific topics. The excluded matters are denoted by the cross-references in the body of this topic, which see.

Analysis.

§ 1. In general; intent and knowledge.
§ 2. Right, power and capacity to waive or elect.
§ 3. Occasion for election, inconsistency of alternatives.
§ 4. Different remedies and defenses.
§ 5. ——Tort or contract remedies.
§ 6. ——Legal and equitable remedies.
§ 7. ——Statutory and other remedies.
§ 8. Requisites and indicia of election or waiver.
§ 9. ——Acceptance or repudiation as whole.
§ 10. ——Bringing inconsistent action or claim.
§ 11. ——Making inconsistent defense.
§ 12. ——Affirmance, ratification and adoption.
§ 13. ——Acquiescence, delay and silence.
§ 14. ——Compromises and settlements.
§ 15. ——Election as to one of several parties.
§ 16. Stipulation or reservation against election.
§ 17. Mistake or nonexistence or futility of remedy pursued.
§ 18. Pleading and proofs of waiver or election.
§ 19. Questions for jury or court.
§ 20. Effect of waiver.
§ 21. Finality and consequences of election.
§ 22. ——Effect to bind or benefit parties in privity.

§ 1. In general; intent and knowledge.

Right, power, and capacity to waive or elect, see post § 2.
Occasion for election, see post § 3.
Different remedies and defenses, see post §§ 4-7.
Requisites and indicia of election or waiver, see post §§ 8-15.
Finality and consequences of election, see post §§ 21, 22.
Mistake or futility of chosen course as preventing waiver or election, see post § 17.
Estoppel founded on election to claim inconsistent right, see Estoppel, III.

¶ 1. To waive means, in law, to relinquish intentionally a known right, or intentionally to do an act inconsistent with claiming it. —Chamberlain v. City of Saginaw, 135 Mich. 61.

¶ 2. Waiver is voluntary, and implies an election to dispense with something of value, or to forego some advantage which the party waiving it might at his option have demanded or insisted upon.—Warren v. Crane, 50 Mich. 300; International Fair Expo. Ass'n v. Walker, 88 Mich. 62.

¶ 3. Waiver implies the right to object, and where such right does not exist there is no waiver.—English v. Franklin Fire Ins. Co. of Philadelphia, 55 Mich. 273.

¶ 4. A waiver usually involves an intention to yield some known right, or something equivalent to such intention, in the nature of an estoppel.—Sherwood v. Central Michigan Sav. Bank, 103 Mich. 109.

¶ 5. There can be no waiver without knowledge of the defect waived.—Waldron v. Murphy, 40 Mich. 668.

¶ 6. Actions of a party in ignorance of facts affecting his rights cannot be considered a waiver of such rights.—Hoyne v. Wells, 180 Mich. 19.

¶ 7. A merchant, supposing that an insolvent customer to whom he had forwarded goods had received and appropriated them, made an affidavit as a creditor under the assignment. But the goods had not been received. Held, that the affidavit did not estop him from replevying them from the carrier.—Lentz v. Flint & P. M. Ry. Co., 53 Mich. 444.

¶ 8. One bringing assumpsit for the collection of a note in ignorance of the fact that the note had been paid to an agent is not thereby deprived of his right to discontinue and sue in trover for the money so paid.—Hogue v. Wells, 180 Mich. 19.

§ 2. Right, power and capacity to waive or elect.

Consent or waiver of objections to jurisdiction, see Courts §§ 63, 64, 83.
Power of legislature to authorize waiver of tort, see also Constitutional Law § 187.
Waiver of illegality of contract, see Contracts § 95.
Construction of wills as to electives, see Wills, VI.
Election to accept or reject terms of will as against other right, see Wills, VII, B.

¶ 9. A party may waive an absolute right in his favor even though it be granted by statute.—Peninsular Stove Co. v. Osmun, 73 Mich. 570.

§ 3. Occasion for election, inconsistency of alternatives.

Requisites and indicia of election or waiver, how accomplished or shown, see post §§ 8-15.
Remedies calling for election and cumulative remedies, see post §§ 4-7.
Elective rights under contracts or on breach thereof, see Contracts, VI, B, VII; Sales, VIII, IX.
Election between dower and other estates or rights, see Dower, V.
Election to take under or against terms of will, see Wills, VII.
Election between restitution of premises and improvements, in ejectment, see Ejectment §§ 76, 77.
Election of infant to affirm or avoid contract, see Infants.
Election between several securities, see Marshalling Assets.
Elective right of creditor against estate of deceased partner or against surviving partner, see Partnership, IV.
Election of counts in declaration, see Pleading, II.
Election between counts in indictment, see Indictment, I, C.
Necessity that seller who has received money on unapportionable contract elect to repay before action for partial delivery, see Sales, VIII.

¶ 10. Right of action for breach of contract is independent of clause therein providing for deduction from last payment of liquidated damages for breach.—Mitchell v. McKinnon, 65 Mich. 683.

§ 4. Different remedies and defenses.

Tort or contract remedies, see post § 5.
Legal or equitable remedies, see post § 6.
Statutory or other remedies, see post § 7.
Election between action on contract of exchange and action on implied contract for goods sold and delivered, see also Exchange of Property.
Elective right of creditor to bring action on account or on indorsement of draft, see Negotiable Instruments, XIV.
Between remedies of agent against principal, or vice versa, see Agency § 104.
Between seeking resale on foreclosure and pursuing agent for fraud therein, see Agency ¶ 506.

Election of remedies for injuries by and against dogs, see Animals §§ 14, 20.
Right to maintain concurrent actions and suits without abatement where issues are different, see Abatement §§ 10-13.
Election between methods of review, see Appeal § 8.
Urging inconsistent theory on appeal, see Appeal § 268.
Changing theory on appeal or on retrial or second review, see Appeal §§ 267-269, 468, 559.
Concurrent remedies for review of or relief from drain proceedings and assessments, see Drains §§ 96-98, 113, 114.

¶ 11. Where a brewing company makes a sale of beer to another liquor dealer in violation of the conditions of an agency contract, which it had the right to rescind because the agent could not legally sell, and the agent thereupon treats the contract as rescinded, he cannot, in a suit by the company to recover the amount due for beer theretofore ordered, recoup damages for plaintiff's breach of the contract.—Niagara Falls Brewing Co. v. Wall, 98 Mich. 158.

¶ 12. One who has repudiated a contract cannot afterward claim the benefit of it for the purpose of turning the other party out of court on the ground that the latter should have sued him on the alleged contract instead of under the common counts.—McQueen v. Gamble, 33 Mich. 344.

¶ 13. Where an express contract exists, the commencement of an action of assumpsit affirms such contract, and precludes recovery on the theory of an implied contract.—Hathaway v. Vaughan, 162 Mich. 269.

¶ 14. By commencing and trying an action upon his contract of sale a vendor is not precluded from suing on notes given for the price.—Kingsbury v. Kettle, 90 Mich. 476.

¶ 15. A tender in money to prevent a default on contract does not estop the tenderer to assert that by virtue of an independent agreement the same obligation was to be discharged by the performance of work which was done and accepted. They are not inconsistent defenses.—Hill v. Carter, 101 Mich. 158.

¶ 16. Replevying property transferred under false representations does not necessarily bar an action for damages from the deceit.—Lenox v. Fuller, 39 Mich. 268.

§ 5. ——Tort or contract remedies.

See also post ¶ 89.
Waiver of tort to sue in assumpsit or of contract to sue in tort, see Assumpsit, I; Conversion, II; Fraud, § 88; Contracts, VII, D; Sales, VIII, IX; Vendors and Purchasers, VIII, IX.
Waiving tort and shifting to other contract, see Assumpsit § 5.
Elective rights and remedies for breach of contract or for fraud in contracts, see Contracts, VII, D; Sales, VIII, IX; Vendors and Purchasers, VIII, IX.
Right to sue either in tort or on contract where breach amounted to a tort, see also Contracts § 252.
Election to sue on contract or for fraud inducing it, see also Contracts § 275.
Election of assumpsit as bar to remedy of replevin for goods sold, see Sales, VIII.
Recovery of damages for fraud after election to repudiate contract and retake possession of property sold, see Fraud, III.
Assumpsit or tort action for extortion by abuse of process, see Malicious Prosecution.
Contract or tort remedies against carriers, see Carriers §§ 78, 106, 142, 146, 206, 256.
Right to assumpsit or to action ex delicto for breach of contract by telegraph company, see Telegraphs and Telephones.

¶ 17. Where a plaintiff in ejectment has been aggrieved by the defendant's removing timber from the premises, although a tort may be waived by him and assumpsit brought, the statute does not require that in all cases a tort must be waived.—Wilson v. Hoffman, 93 Mich. 72.

¶ 18. By bringing assumpsit for the value of chattels in the possession of defendant under an option to purchase from plaintiff, the latter elects his remedy, and cannot thereafter maintain replevin for the property, although the suit in assumpsit has in the meantime been discontinued.—Cooper v. Smith, 109 Mich. 458.

¶ 19. Suing in assumpsit for the price under a contract reserving title until paid for does not amount to an election to treat the title as having passed and prevent replevin.—Canadian Typograph Co. v. Macgurn, 119 Mich. 533.

¶ 20. Where by a contract for the sale of wood, title to such wood was reserved in the vendor until the wood was fully paid for and payment was provided to be made as the wood was sold, and where the vendor had made an ineffectual attempt to recover in assumpsit a sum not due, such attempt did not constitute a waiver of a future tort in selling wood after default in making payment to the vendor, nor an election to treat the title of all the wood as having passed to the vendee.—Bryant v. Kenyon, 123 Mich. 151.

¶ 21. Section 10421, Comp. Laws 1897, provides that where a plaintiff has suffered an injury for which an action of deceit would lie, he may recover for the same in an action of assumpsit. Held, that in a case of money obtained by fraud, the starting of a suit in assumpsit to recover it and the abandoning of such suit does not prevent the plaintiff from later suing in an action on the case.—Mintz v. Jacob, 163 Mich. 280.

¶ 22. Plaintiff began an action in assumpsit to recover money obtained from him by fraud, by capias ad respondendum, under Comp. Laws 1897, § 9998. He took a nonsuit in this action. Held, he was not by this course estopped to bring a later action of deceit in case, to recover damages.—Mintz v. Jacob, 163 Mich. 280.

§ 6. ——Legal and equitable remedies.

Choice of and right to equitable remedy because more adequate than legal remedy, see Equity, III, B.

Elective right of payee of promissory note to have equitable relief or to intervene in action by indorsee against maker, see Negotiable Instruments, XIV.

Quo warranto and chancery dissolution suit as concurrent remedies, see Corporations § 201.

Common law, chancery and statutory remedies for enforcement of stockholders' liability for creditors as cumulative, see Corporations § 326.

¶ 23. One who takes a chattel mortgage for the purchase price of goods shipped by him, and brings a suit in chancery to protect his security and for the appointment of a receiver, and an action in assumpsit to recover the entire amount claimed to be due, will be held to have elected to treat the title to the property as in the debtor, and to be estopped from thereafter maintaining an equitable proceeding against the receiver based on the theory that title had not passed.—McDonald v. Preston Nat. Bank, 111 Mich. 649.

¶ 24. Where the complainant had entered into a contract with defendant for the purchase of a certain lot, which defendant had obtained from her deceased husband by will, and had made all payments and gone into possession and made improvements on the lot, but before making the last payment insisted that the defendant give him a conveyance authorized by the probate court, and bringing suit for breach of contract was defeated, he is not estopped because of this action from maintaining a suit in equity to enforce specific performance of the contract, upon refusal of a deed by the vendor.—Wilson v. Knapp, 143 Mich. 64.

¶ 25. Where an action at law and a suit in equity are substantially for the same cause of action the plaintiff should elect in which he will proceed, for the defendant should not be harassed and annoyed by oppressive litigation.—Monier v. Mizner, How. N. P. 60.

¶ 26. The fact that a claim for a mechanic's lien and a bill to enforce have been filed will not prevent recovery in an action of trover for the value of an elevator installed in a building under an agreement that it is to remain the property of the seller until paid for.—Warner Elevator Mfg. Co. v. Capitol Investment, Building & Loan Ass'n, 127 Mich. 323.

¶ 27. There is no election of remedies by the executor of the estate of a beneficiary under a will of a portion of stock, which was bequeathed to trustees in trust for the benefit of testator's wife and children, including plaintiff's testate, to be held until a specified date, the dividends to be paid equally to the beneficiaries, and the principal equally divided after the expiration of such period, where the executor of the estate of such beneficiary first unsuccessfully attempts by a bill in chancery to secure a share of the dividends due to the estate of such beneficiary and petitions for the removal of the executor, and, after the expiration of such period, files a petition in the probate court asking for an accounting of the dividends declared and paid since the death of said beneficiary and to compel the payment of same to him as executor of the estate of such beneficiary, as the remedies were not inconsistent.—Wessborg v. Merrill, 195 Mich. 556.

§ 7. ——Statutory and other remedies.

Statutory action in assumpsit for money obtained by fraud or other remedy, see also ante ¶ 22.

Exclusiveness of statutory remedy for unlawful distraint of animals, see Animals § 11.

Between motion to vacate an award and action for relief in equity from it, see Arbitration § 15.

Cumulative remedies by suit against association or against members, see Associations § 10.

Resort to contempt proceedings as barring other remedy against officer, see Sheriffs, VI.

Election between general claim and lien against estate, see Estates of Decedents, VI.

Election between statutory remedy under Log Lien Law and assumpsit, see Forestry, III.

Elective rights of plaintiff on appeal in forcible entry cases, to sue on bond or in trespass, see Forcible Entry, II.

Election of employee injured in interstate commerce between Workmen's Compensation Act and Federal Employers' Liability Act, see Workmen's Compensation Law.

¶ 28. There are some cases where a party has an election of remedies, and where the result of the remedy chosen is decisive; but private remedies for an officer's omission to execute legal process are not lost by the failure of statutory proceedings against him for contempt.—Schwab v. Coots, 44 Mich. 463.

¶ 29. The remedies of garnishment proceedings at law wherein the plaintiff, a creditor, relies upon the defendants' liability as garnishees and suit under the Bulk Sales Act, Pub. Acts 1905, No. 223, How., 2nd Ed., § 2612 et seq., wherein the complainant relies upon the same defendants' liability as trustees for the complainant and other creditors of the value of the proceeds of goods obtained by the debtor and sold by him to one of the defendants and by such defendant to another defendant without complying with the provisions of the act, are consistent.—Humiston, Keeling & Co. v. Bridgman, 195 Mich. 82.

§ 8. Requisites and indicia of election or waiver.

Occasions and alternatives calling for election, see ante § 3.
Right and capacity to waive or elect, see ante § 2.
Acceptance or repudiation as whole, see post § 9.
Bringing inconsistent action or claim, see post § 10.
Making inconsistent defenses, see post § 11.
Affirmance, ratification and adoption, see post § 12.
Acquiescence, delay, and silence, see post § 13.
Compromises and settlements, see post § 14.
Election as to one of several parties, see post § 15.
Stipulation or reservation against election, see post § 16.
Degree and sufficiency of proof of waiver or election, see post § 18.
Necessity that waiver be in writing, see Frauds, Statute of, I, G.
[Note. Since it is the purpose to treat in this topic the general law of election and waiver only and to treat in specific topics the waiver of given rights pertaining to such topics or the elections between alternative rights pertaining to them, the reader is cautioned to search the topic treating of the right in question. See illustrative cross-references which follow.]
Waiver of right to appeal or error, see Appeal, V.
Waiver of right under contract to have arbitration, see Arbitration § 7.
Effect of receiving dividend from assigned estate, see also Assignments for Creditors ¶ 183.
Waiver or abandonment of attachment lien, see Attachment § 97.
Waiver of attorney's lien, see Attorneys § 51.
Waiver of prepayment of freight, see Carriers ¶ 190.
Waiver of constitutional questions, see Constitutional Law § 29.
Requisites and indicia of waiver of defaults and delays under contracts, see Contracts § 237.
Notice of election under contract to call for alternative right, see Contracts § 231.
Election and waiver of rights on breach of contract, see Contracts § 259.
Denial of right as tantamount of waiver of demand for possession by person entitled, see also Conversion § 10.
Sale on execution as bar to bill in aid of execution, see Creditors' Suits § 15.
Election between dower and husband's will, see Dower § 38.
Waiver of conditions on subscriptions for corporate stock, see Corporations §§ 53, 54.
Waiver of prepayment of costs, see Costs § 146.
Waiver of fees by officers or of right to prepayment, see Courts, I; Sheriffs, III.
Waiver of corporation's lien on its stock, see Corporations § 314.
Waiver of breach of condition in deed, see Deeds § 90.
Waiver of log labor lien, see Forestry, III.
Waiver or election under insurance policies, see Insurance.
Waiver of right to cancel for breach of warranties in application for insurance, see Insurance, XII, C.
Waiver of forfeiture by landlord, see Landlord and Tenant.
Election and renunciation between will and other right, see Wills, VII.

¶ 30. By asserting a valid ground of defense one does not waive reliance on a different one that is equally valid and consistent with it.—Vanneter v. Crossman, 39 Mich. 610.

¶ 31. Where the remedies are consistent there is no election until one of them has been prosecuted to judgment, unless the plaintiff has gained an advantage or the defendant has suffered a disadvantage.—Humiston, Keeling & Co. v. Bridgman, 195 Mich. 82.

¶ 32. Where the remedies are inconsistent the failure to secure satisfaction by means of the remedy adopted does not take the case out of the doctrine of election.—Humiston, Keeling & Co. v. Bridgman, 195 Mich. 82.

¶ 33. Plaintiff sued in assumpsit to recover for plumbing done in a house which a third party contracted to erect for defendant, and with whom plaintiff agreed in the first instance to do the plumbing, upon the theory of an abandonment by the contractor of his contract, and an agreement by defendant to pay plaintiff for the work agreed to be done for the contractor if plaintiff would finish said work, and make certain changes at an additional price, which defendant agreed to pay. It appeared on the trial that, prior to bringing suit, plaintiff had filed a statement of lien, in which he swore that the work and materials sued for were furnished in pursuance of his contract with said contractor. Held, that plaintiff did not thereby elect his remedy so as to preclude the bringing of the suit against defendant.—McLaughlin v. Austin, 104 Mich. 489.

¶ 34. A defendant in ejectment who files a bill in equity to enjoin the prosecution of the suit, plaintiff consenting by his answer that the question of whose is the superior title may be transferred to that forum, cannot invoke the doctrine of election of remedies to defeat plaintiff's right to a decree.—McKenzie v. Cook Co., 113 Mich. 452.

¶ 35. A payee who has repudiated a payment in securities cannot avoid a defense of such payment by showing a breach of the warranty of the securities in an action of assumpsit for the amount to be paid.—Bulen v. Burroughs, 53 Mich. 464.

§ 9. ——Acceptance or repudiation as whole.

See also post ¶ 54.

Repudiation of contract as indicia of election, see also ante ¶ 12.

Necessity of repudiation as whole, see also ante ¶ 35.

Election as involving repudiation of other remedy, see also post ¶ 38.

Necessity of complete acceptance or complete rejection of offer to contract, see Contracts § 20.

¶ 36. One cannot repudiate a contract and claim under it at the same time.—Alpena Lumber Co. v. Fletcher, 48 Mich. 555.

¶ 37. F. bought property upon a foreclosure which turned out to be invalid, and conveyed it with warranty. The mortgagor then conveyed the equity of redemption to N. for the protection of F.'s grantees, but by an understanding between N. and F. a portion of the premises was excepted from this arrangement. Held, that if the grantees relied on the arrangement made for their protection they must recognize its terms throughout, and could not insist on rights in the land that was thus excepted, even though the original conveyance to them antedated the arrangement and exception.—Norris v. Michigan State Ins. Co., 51 Mich. 621.

§ 10. ——Bringing inconsistent action or claim.

See also ante ¶¶ 7, 8.

Pursuing inconsistent remedies without satisfaction, see also ante ¶¶ 32-34.

Inconsistent remedy after pursuit of mistaken or futile one, see post § 17.

Inconsistent defenses, see post § 11.

Adherence on appeal to theory chosen on trial, see Appeal §§ 267-269.

Bringing suit as revocation of submission to arbitration, see Arbitration § 6, ¶ 23.

Pursuit of remedy on main case as waiver of dissolution proceedings in attachment, see Attachment §§ 125, 127.

Election to litigate in state courts as estopping party from resort to Federal courts, see Courts ¶ 299.

Resort to one remedy for relief from drain proceeding as election against other, see also Drains § 114.

Election to bring action to recover back taxes as bar to certiorari to review drain proceedings, see Drains § 114, ¶¶ 359, 363.

Suing for breach of warranty or on theory contract has been rescinded, see Sales, VIII.

Replevin for goods sold or trover for their value, see Sales, VIII.

Elective right of action or defense of vendee in land contract where house on land encroaches on adjoining property, see Vendor and Purchaser, VIII.

¶ 38. Where the deliberate choice of one mode of redress involves the repudiation of another the party cannot change his election of a remedy; e. g., where one sued in assumpsit for the wages of his minor son on the basis of an implied contract with the person to whom the latter's services were rendered, and on the disagreement of the jury discontinued his suit, and sought to bring an action in case against the same defendant for unlawfully enticing away and harboring the son.—Thompson v. Howard, 31 Mich. 309.

¶ 39. It is the inconsistency of the demands which makes the election of one right of action an estoppel against the subsequent assertion of the other and not the fact that the forms of action are different.—Humiston, Keeling & Co. v. Bridgman, 195 Mich. 82.

¶ 40. Suing for compensation for use and occupation is a waiver of any claim for treble damages on obtaining restitution of leased premises.—Hogsett v. Ellis, 17 Mich. 351.

¶ 41. One who has sued to recover money lent to an executrix as her individual debt can hardly claim redress from the heirs, afterwards, on the ground that the money was used for the benefit of the estate.—Alterauge v. Christiansen, 48 Mich. 60.

¶ 42. As to effect upon application for mandamus of relator's having previously brought an action of assumpsit which he has left undetermined, quære.—Walcott v. City of Jackson, 51 Mich. 249.

¶ 43. Certiorari will not be allowed to review irregularities in laying out drain, where plaintiff has elected another remedy, viz., action to recover tax paid under process.—Mathias v. Mason, 66 Mich. 524.

¶ 44. Where a creditor secured by bill of sale sold the property privately instead of publicly as his agreement required in case the debt was not paid, and refused to account for the surplus, the debtor by suing in assumpsit for the surplus elected his remedy, and to treat the title to the property as in the creditor; and if, after his suit has been dismissed for his failure to secure costs, he sues in trover, for the value of the property, the defense of election is admissible in the trover suit under the general issue without notice; since it tends to show a title passed by contract.—Thomas v. Watt, 104 Mich. 201.

¶ 45. The bringing of an action of assumpsit, waiving tort, under Comp. L. 1897, § 10421, after plaintiff's property has been seized under a writ of replevin, and before sale of such property, is not an election of remedy barring an action of trover for the same property, brought subsequently and after the dismissal by the plaintiff of the action of assumpsit; since the defendant had not yet converted the property and had committed no tort.—Holmes v. Smith, 149 Mich. 327.

¶ 46. Where timber has been cut and removed from plaintiff's land, he may bring trespass quare clausum, or replevin, or assumpsit (under Comp. L. 1897, § 11207) or trover, but having elected to bring trover he waives the other remedies.—Anderson v. Besser, 131 Mich. 481.

¶ 47. A creditor's right of action is not affected by his having filed a claim in assignment proceedings.—Detroit Stove Works v. Osmun, 74 Mich. 7; Hinchman v. Weeks, 85 Mich. 535.

§ 11. ——Making inconsistent defense.

Waiver of right to claim default of plaintiff by answer or plea, see Defaults ¶ 28.

¶ 48. Defendant, having a license to cut timber, gave a mortgage on the timber lands to complainant. By failing to pay taxes as required by the license the defendant had forfeited all his rights. Complainant mortgagee brought a bill to foreclose. Intervening petitioners came in and claimed title by a grant from the owner, after defendant's forfeiture. Defendant first denied such forfeiture, and then by amended pleadings asked to be relieved of the effects of the same by paying the taxes. Held, the defendant could not take such inconsistent positions, and relief from the forfeiture would not be granted.—Scott v. Sullivan, 159 Mich. 297.

§ 12. ——Affirmance, ratification and adoption.

Ratification of acts of agent, see Agency, II, C.

Affirmance, reliance or waiver as elements in actionable fraud, see Fraud, I.

Adoption of results or benefits of situation created by fraud as waiver, see Fraud, III.

Acceptance of performance as election to waive defects, see Contracts, VII, C; Sales, V, C.

Waiver of right to rescind contract by later acceptance of goods delivered under it where acceptance is caused by mistake of goods for those of another seller, see Sales, VIII.

Waiver of right to rescind contract by bringing action on it, see also Rescission, I, III.

¶ 49. Parties gave a mortgage in exchange for a promissory note against their father, and afterwards obtained an allowance of the note as a claim in their favor against their father's estate; held, that they were estopped from defending against the foreclosure of the mortgage on the ground that it had been procured by false representations, of which they knew before prosecuting their claim; having elected to confirm the original exchange by making the note the basis of their claim, they could not, when called upon to pay the mortgage, elect again in such a way as to stultify their first election.—Sloan v. Holcomb, 29 Mich. 153.

¶ 50. A conveyance of her interest in the assets of her husband's estate, made by a woman while under the stress of being charged with the murder of her husband, was not set aside where after the occasion for the stress had passed and after she knew that her bargain was an unwise one, she accepted and appropriated the proceeds, less a considerable amount as consideration for anticipating the time of payment, thus making an election which for all times affirmed the transaction.—Sanderson v. Adams, 133 Mich. 359.

§ 13. ——Acquiescence, delay and silence.

See also post ¶ 53.

Acquiescence as indicia of election, see also post ¶ 73.

Acquiescence curing void execution sale of plank road franchise, see Corporations ¶ 726.

Waivers effected by default, see Defaults §§ 17, 18.

Failure to bring proceedings for assignment of dower within the statutory period as waiver of right, see Dower § 38, ¶ 99.

¶ 51. A debtor waives no rights by his silence when he is not called upon to act.—Chippewa Lumber Co. v. Phenix Ins. Co., 80 Mich. 116.

¶ 52. Where a complainant conveys a remainder to defendant, reserving possession and a life estate to himself, and the defendant takes possession and fails to pay to complainant the monthly sum stipulated, the fact that complainant does not sue the defendant in ejectment is not a waiver of his rights to the payments.—Herpel v. Herpel, 162 Mich. 606.

§ 14. ——Compromises and settlements.

Waiver of original dispute by accord and satisfaction, see Accord and Satisfaction.

Waiver and discharge by formal release, see Releases.

¶ 53. Parties are barred by such subsequent dealings as indicate a waiver of their right to complain for fraud. Compromises, even though under pressure of pecuniary difficulty, constitute waiver. To keep his claim in force the defrauded party must act consistently in refusing acquiescence.—Craig v. Bradley, 26 Mich. 353.

¶ 54. One who has settled with his licensee under an oral agreement changing the discounts allowable and the percentages payable under a royalty contract, and has received increased discounts thereby, cannot repudiate it while retaining and not accounting for the increased discounts.—Mouat v. Bamlet, 123 Mich. 345.

§ 15. ——Election as to one of several parties.

Election against one of several parties where action held void, see post ¶ 63.

Election as to one of several parties where remedy is mistaken, see also post ¶ 66.

Election to bring suit against one of several parties as precluding separate suits against others, see Equity, III, C.

¶ 55. By proceeding to enforce collection of a judgment that has been recovered against one of several parties jointly guilty of conversion, plaintiff elects to look to him alone and bars himself from recourse to the rest.—Kenyon v. Woodruff, 33 Mich. 310.

¶ 56. Plaintiff sued defendant corporation for services rendered. The case was appealed, reversed, and remanded. At the first trial it did not appear that plaintiff had sued one Foss individually to recover for said services, and the declaration in the Foss suit did not clearly indicate that the services sued for were identical with those relied on in the suit against defendant. Held, the court properly refused to direct a verdict for defendant on the theory that plaintiff had elected to hold Foss liable.—Ruttle v. What Cheer Coal Mining Co., 161 Mich. 150.

§ 16. Stipulation or reservation against election.

Finality and consequences of election in absence of reservation, see post § 21.

¶ 57. The presentation in the probate court of a claim against an estate does not estop the claimant from afterwards suing it in equity as a partnership claim if its former presentation was not intended as an abandonment of it as such, and if it was expressly rejected on that ground at the respondent's instance.—Way v. Stebbins, 47 Mich. 296.

¶ 58. The taking of additional security by a creditor providing for the payment of his debt does not constitute an election of remedies such as to preclude him from enforcing his original security where the agreement for additional security expressly provide, that it does not waive any of his rights under the original agreement.—Schmidt v. Gaukler, 156 Mich. 243.

§ 17. Mistake or nonexistence or futility of remedy pursued.

See also ante ¶¶ 20, 24, 28, 38, 44.

Election where court without jurisdiction, see also post ¶ 89.

Effect of following nugatory remedy to waive right to question validity of statute giving no other remedy, see Constitutional Law § 29, ¶ 150.

Right to proceed in contempt after void and ineffective levy, see Contempt § 22.

¶ 59. Clients having improvidently given a bond of indemnity to secure their attorney from the effect of selling, without consulting them, more of the mortgaged goods than was sufficient to satisfy the client's mortgage interest, their right to have the bond canceled, on becoming aware of the facts, is not affected by their employing counsel to defend the suit against the attorneys; they having already given the bond, and there being no evidence that they knew at the time what their rights were.—Gray v. Emmons, 7 Mich. 533.

¶ 60. The rule that one who has elected his remedy by bringing an action upon one theory cannot afterwards sue upon another, is not inconsistent with bringing a second and different action where it appears plaintiff never had a right of action as first brought, and therefore could not have elected. —McLaughlin v. Austin, 104 Mich. 489.

¶ 61. The prosecution of a claim against a decedent's estate for the purchase price of logs alleged to have been sold and delivered to decedent under an oral agreement, though carried on with knowledge that the claim as presented is unfounded, and with an intent to deceive the court by keeping it in ignorance of a written contract by which the relations of the parties are defined, will not, on grounds of public policy, estop the claimant from thereafter asserting his rights under the written contract, and from seeking a recovery based upon the breach of a trust thereby created.—Sullivan v. Ross's Estate, 113 Mich. 311.

¶ 62. Where a purchaser of a lot has entered into possession, made improvements thereon and has tendered the amount due on the payments he is entitled to specific performance of the contract, even though he may have instituted an unsuccessful action against the vendor for breach of contract, his first suit not being an election on which theory to sue, inasmuch as he never had a right of action in the suit first brought.—Wilson v. Knapp, 143 Mich. 64.

¶ 63. In an action to recover for services, the fact that plaintiff had previously sought to recover the debt by action against a third person is immaterial where such action proceeded upon oral guaranty, which the court in that action held to be void.—Lemiette v. Starr, 66 Mich. 539.

¶ 64. Whether the bringing of an action upon a promissory note was such an election of remedies as estopped the plaintiff, when such action was found to be barred, from suing for fraud and deceit practiced on him by the defendant, to induce the purchase of the note, quære.—Black v. Miller, 75 Mich. 323.

¶ 65. While a person is bound by an election between two inconsistent remedies, one having a meritorious claim, who mistakes his remedy, and attempts to enforce it in an inappropriate action, wherein no recovery can be had, is not precluded thereby from resorting to his proper remedy.—Sullivan v. Ross's Estate, 113 Mich. 311.

¶ 66. The fact that a consignee of wheat brought suit against the sheriff in trover when it was replevied in transit by order of the farmer who sold it to the local dealer for cash is not an election of remedies so as to prevent the consignee from dismissing his action in trover and enforcing his right of action against the bank on the theory of a failure of consideration for the drafts attached to the bill of lading by the bank.—Shanahan v. Coburn, 128 Mich. 692.

§ 18. Pleading and proofs of waiver or election.

Election of another remedy as defense under general issue, see Pleading, IX.

Proof of election to sue in assumpsit rather than trover under general issue in trover action, see Conversion § 27.

Presumptions in general, see Evidence, II.

Evidence of election or waiver of rights under contract, see Contracts § 330.

¶ 67. Evidence of the waiver of stipulated rights should be explicit.—Gault v. Van Zile, 37 Mich. 22.

¶ 68. Slight evidence of waiver may be held sufficient when no substantial rights are to be lost thereby.—Snyder v. Washtenaw Circuit Judge, 80 Mich. 511.

¶ 69. A waiver of a legal right is not to be implied from slight circumstances.—Bird v. Hamilton, W. 361.

¶ 70. A waiver may be proved by circumstances as well as by direct testimony.—Cobbs v. Fire Ass'n of Philadelphia, 68 Mich. 463.

¶ 71. The question of waiver is one of intent, and is a proper subject of inference from surrounding circumstances.—Hibernia Ins. Co. v. O'Connor, 29 Mich. 241.

¶ 72. The question of waiver is one of intent, and is a proper subject of inference from surrounding circumstances, and it may be proved by circumstances as well as by direct testimony.—International Fair & Expo. Ass'n v. Walker, 88 Mich. 62.

¶ 73. Plaintiff, in an action against a railroad company for the breach of a contract to retain him in its employ for life at a fixed monthly salary in settlement of a claim for personal injuries, may show, for the purpose of rebutting a presumption of waiver of his right to the stipulated salary, arising from his acceptance of a smaller salary for several years, that he protested against the reduction to several in authority, that he consulted his attorney in regard to it, and that the latter advised him in effect that his acceptance of the lesser sum would not deprive him of the right to recover, in the event of his wrongful discharge, the full amount due under his contract.—Brighton v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co., 112 Mich. 217.

§ 19. Questions for jury or court.

Questions for court and jury in general, see Trial, VI.

¶ 74. Whether waiver is made out is a question for the jury unless the facts are admitted or the evidence undisputed.—Marthinson v. North British, etc., Ins. Co., 64 Mich. 372; Cobbs v. Philadelphia Fire Assoc., 68 Mich. 463, 465; Peninsular Stove Co. v. Osmun, 73 Mich. 570; International Fair & Expo. Ass'n v. Walker, 88 Mich. 62.

¶ 75. When the fact of waiver is sought to be established by circumstances, or inferred from facts proved, or where the testimony is doubtful or conflicting, the question of waiver is one of fact for the jury.—Cobbs v. Fire Ass'n of Philadelphia, 68 Mich. 463.

¶ 76. Where there is no conflicting testimony, and all the facts are admitted or conceded, it is the province of the court to inform the jury, as matter of law, whether a waiver has or has not been established.—Cobbs v. Fire Assn. of Philadelphia, 68 Mich. 465 on rehearing.

¶ 77. Waiver by delay of the right to sue is one of fact and not of law in all cases that are not within the statute of limitations.—Dayton v. Monroe, 47 Mich. 193.

¶ 78. Where the facts relied on as amounting to a waiver of irregularities in the proceedings in a case are undisputed, the question of such waiver is for the court.—Peninsular Stove Co. v. Osmun, 73 Mich. 570.

¶ 79. Where it is claimed to be established by conduct and circumstances from which different minds might draw different conclusions, the question whether waiver is made out or not is one for the jury.—International Fair & Expo. Ass'n v. Walker, 88 Mich. 62.

¶ 80. A waiver is a mixed question of law and fact, and each case depends much upon its own peculiar circumstances and surroundings. It is a question for the court to determine whether there is any evidence tending to show a waiver; but, when there is any evidence, the jury must determine what the intent of the party was, as the question of waiver is usually one of intent, as indicated by the acts and declarations of the party.—Griswold v. Ludington, 116 Mich. 401.

§ 20. Effect of waiver.

Effect of election, see post § 21.
Consents and waivers as considerations for promises, see Contracts, §§ 117, 118.

¶ 81. A waiver cannot renew an estate that has expired by limitation and accordingly the failure of the state to institute proceedings did not continue a franchise to take bridge tolls after its expiration.—Grand Rapids Bridge Co. v. Prange, 35 Mich. 400.

§ 21. Finality and consequences of election.

See also ¶¶ 49, 50.
Effect of waiver, see ante § 20.
Effect to bind or benefit parties in privity, see post § 22.
Election where remedy mistaken, futile or nonexistent, see ante § 17.
Of election of remedy, see also ante ¶¶ 23, 28.
Of election by commencement of action, see also ante ¶¶ 13, 14, 16.
Of election of remedy where inconsistent action or claim is made, see also ante § 10.
Stipulation or reservation against election, see ante § 16.

¶ 82. By electing to pursue one of two inconsistent remedies, the plaintiff is precluded from resorting to the other.—Black v. Miller, 75 Mich. 323.

¶ 83. A party having elected by bringing an action upon one theory has no right afterwards to sue upon another.—Wilson v. Knapp, 143 Mich. 64.

¶ 84. An execution debtor, by bringing trover for the value of property wrongfully levied on, elects to sever the seizure from the act of entry and cannot thereafter bring trespass for the latter.—Finn v. Peck, 47 Mich. 208.

¶ 85. Waiving the tort of a conversion and suing in assumpsit amounts to an election to regard defendant as owner of the property converted and such election is a bar to a subsequent action for conversion.—Nield v. Burton, 49 Mich. 53.

¶ 86. Where a plaintiff has a choice between inconsistent claims, the commencement of action upon one theory constitutes an election, and while he may discontinue and sue again upon the same claim, he cannot be allowed to sue upon an inconsistent claim.—Mintz v. Jacob, 163 Mich. 280.

¶ 87. Where a railroad company had contracted to haul timber, and upon being sued for damages for a breach thereof had elected to treat the contract as severable and not as entire, it was bound to perform its part of the contract, and seek compensation in damages for any breaches which it was in a position to complain of.—Gates v. Detroit & M. R. Co., 147 Mich. 523.

§ 22. ——Effect to bind or benefit parties in privity.

¶ 88. Estoppel by an election between remedies extends beyond the immediate parties thereto, and binds all who claim under them or are in privity with them.—Rowley v. Towsley, 53 Mich. 329.

¶ 89. Waiving the tort of a conversion and suing in assumpsit amounts to an election to regard the defendant as owner of the property converted, and estops the plaintiff from bringing trover against the defendant's vendee. And the fact that the first action was brought in a court which did not have jurisdiction does not destroy the effect of such election so far as the vendee is concerned.—Nield v. Burton, 49 Mich. 53.

¶ 90. A vendor, who elects to pursue his remedy against his vendee by obtaining judgment against him for the value of his interest in the property, cannot thereafter claim the property itself from one to whom the vendee has sold it.—Button v. Trader, 75 Mich. 295.

ELECTIONS.

TREATS of the procedure to ascertain the choice or will of the people by ballot of the electors for candidates for office or for some public project or policy submitted to them. It excludes "appointment" of officers and the constitutional power of appointment (see Officers; Constitutional Law), the induction and status and rights of the officer (see Officers), the trial of title to office (see Officers; Quo Warranto), and the election by supervisors or city councils in exercise of their power of appointment (see Counties; Municipal Corporations).

Analysis.

I. In general; time, place and calling.

§ 1. In general; nature and kinds.
§ 2. Time for elections; general or special.
§ 3. Notification of election.
§ 4. Sufficiency of notice of special or vacancy election.
§ 5. ——Specification of office to be filled.
§ 6. Implied, constructive or presumptive notice.
§ 7. Place or district for elections.
§ 8. Conduct of and facilities for elections.
§ 9. Cost and expenses of elections.

II. Officers and attendants at polls.

§ 10. In general.

III. Eligibility and registration of electors.

§ 11. In general.
§ 12. Women as voters.
§ 13. Residence of voter.
§ 14. ——Students, soldiers and sailors.
§ 15. Registration.
§ 16. Examination for registration.
§ 17. Effect and validity of registration.
§ 18. Party enrollments.

IV. Nominations and preparation of official ballot.

§ 19. Primary election in general.
§ 20. ——Unopposed nominations.
§ 21. ——Special elections to fill vacancy.
§ 22. Time for primaries.
§ 23. Voting and ballots at primaries.
§ 24. Count, canvass, returns, and recount of primary vote.
§ 25. Nominations by convention.
§ 26. ——Choice and qualification of delegates and alternates.
§ 27. Nominations by petition.
§ 28. Certification or showing, filing and acceptances of nominations.
§ 29. Official ballot.
§ 30. Persons entitled to place on ballot as nominees.
§ 31. ——Candidates of minor parties.
§ 32. Position or column on official ballot.
§ 33. ——Nominees of more than one party.
§ 34. Party designations and emblems on ballot.
§ 35. ——Factional divisions and new parties.

V. Receiving and polling the ballots.

§ 36. In general.
§ 37. Voting on machines.
§ 38. Challenges of voters and action thereon.
§ 39. Time for voting.
§ 40. Marking or denoting choice on ballot.
§ 41. ——Writing or pasting name of candidate on ballot.
§ 42. ——Ballots on submitted question.

VI. Count, canvass, returns, contests, and declaration of result.

§ 43. Counting the vote.
§ 44. ——Excessive number of ballots cast.
§ 45. Sealing and custody of counted ballots.
§ 46. Returns by inspectors.
§ 47. Conclusiveness and finality of returns.
§ 48. ——Of state canvass.
§ 49. Amended and further returns.
§ 50. Canvass of the votes and the returns.
§ 51. Votes necessary for choice.
§ 52. ——Casting off or deciding tie votes.
§ 53. Powers, functions and duties of board of canvassers.
§ 54. ——Correction of errors and rejection of ballots.
§ 55. ——Of state board of canvassers.
§ 56. Recanvass of state returns.
§ 57. Recount and contest.
§ 58. ——Of vote taken by machines.
§ 59. ——Of vote for congressmen or senators or state legislators.
§ 60. ——Of vote for city aldermen, councilmen or other officers.
§ 61. Preservation of ballots and boxes as requisite of recount.
§ 62. Petition and showing for recount.
§ 63. Resolution or order for recount.
§ 64. Notice, time and conduct of recount.
§ 65. Scope of recount and matters investigated.
§ 66. Recount commission and report by it.
§ 67. Conclusiveness of recount.
§ 68. Recanvass after invalid or defective recount.
§ 69. Statements or reports and certification of results.
§ 70. ——Of vote on amendments to constitution.
§ 71. ——Of result of recount.
§ 72. ——Presumptions, conclusiveness and effect.
§ 73. ——Conclusiveness of tie vote cast off by lot.

VII. Irregularities in voting and conduct of election.

§ 74. In general.
§ 75. In place of election or adjournment.
§ 76. Irregularity or informality in ballot in general.
§ 77. ——Misnomer and misspelling.
§ 78. Indorsement and folding of ballots irregularly.
§ 79. Irregular marking of ballots.
§ 80. ——Erasure, scratching, writing or pasting.
§ 81. Voting in wrong district or repeating.
§ 82. Mistakes and misdoing of officers.
§ 83. ——Improper assistance or meddling.
§ 84. Improper printed instructions.

§ 85. Deposit of ballot in wrong box.
§ 86. Tampering with or changing ballots cast.
§ 87. Improper care and custody of ballots.
§ 88. Avoidance of entire vote or election.
§ 89. Cure or validation of irregularities.
§ 90. Estoppel or waiver of question.

VIII. Distinguishing marks on ballots.

§ 91. In general.
§ 92. What constitute distinguishing marks.

IX. Review and supervision by courts.

§ 93. In general.
§ 94. Internal affairs of party.

X. Misfeasance and malfeasance about election or voting.

§ 95. In general; liability for.

XI. Privileges of electors and secrecy of ballot.

§ 96. In general.
§ 97. Exclusion of evidence violating secrecy.

[Note. Because of the statutory changes in the systems of balloting and elections, some of the earlier decisions collected herein are doubtless obsolete. Nevertheless they have been retained in order that the searcher may make his own selections, and also in order that historical and analogical values may not be lost.

The references herein to the statutes are not copious or detailed, for the reason that to have made them so would have produced a confusing mass of details. But references general in nature have been freely made.]

Constitutional and suffrage and validity of laws under them, see Constitutional Law, XII.

Validity, construction and effect of statutes relating to elections, see Constitutional Law; Statutes.

Submission of matters of public action, such as location and removal of county seats, issuance of bonds or creation of public debt, adoption locally of legal regulations, or the like, see Counties §§ 2, 16, 27, 42; Municipal Bonds, I; Public Contracts, I; Municipal Corporations, III; Schools, III; Townships, II; Intoxicating Liquors, III, A.

Submission of constitutions or of amendments thereto, see Constitutional Law, I.

Initiative and referendum of statutes, see Statutes, VIII.

Matters peculiar to elections in municipalities and townships, see also Municipal Corporations, XV; Townships, V; Schools, III.

Meetings of townships and school districts, see Schools, III; Townships, II.

Corporate elections by stockholders and members, see Corporations, IX.

General and special election statutes, see Comp. L. 1915, chap. 80; and see Pub. Acts 1917, No. 203.

Party committees and how composed, see Pub. Acts 1917, No. 203, chap. XXIII.

1. IN GENERAL; TIME, PLACE AND CALLING.

§ 1. In general; nature and kinds.

Provisions for "election" of officers, see Constitutional Law § 265.

Power to make interim or provisional appointments, see Constitutional Law § 266.

For first county officers, see Counties § 2.

Statutory meanings of "election," see Pub. Acts 1917, No. 203, chap. I.

¶ 1. By general election, as the term is used in the constitution and statute with reference to the office of probate judge, is meant the biennial election held in November; and an election at any other time to fill that office is a special election.—People v. Palmer, 91 Mich. 283.

¶ 2. How. St., § 2, subd. 19, provides that the term "general election" means the election held in November unless such construction would be inconsistent with the manifest intent of the legislation, and there is nothing in Pub. Acts 1895, No. 271, § 14, to indicate that the term "general election" has any other meaning.—Edgar v. Board of Election Commissioners of Livingston County, 118 Mich. 418.

§ 2. Time for elections; general or special.

What constitutes "special elections," see also ante ¶ 1.
Primaries for special elections, see post § 21.
Sufficiency of notice of election, see post §§ 3, 4, 6.
Separate ballot boxes for different elections held simultaneously, see post § 36.
Effect of election in fact to validate insufficiently called special election, see also post ¶ 261.
Changing time for elections as changing terms, see also Constitutional Law § 270.
Time for submission of amendments to constitution, see Constitutional Law § 5.
Time for election on proposal to change county seat, city elections and township meetings at different times, see Counties § 16.
Special elections, statutory provisions, see Pub. Acts, 1917, No. 203, chap. III.
Statutory times for elections and offices to be filled at the several elections, see Pub. Acts 1917, No. 203, chap. II.
Recall elections and ballots, see Comp. L. 1915, chap. 82.

¶ 3. The term "organized townships," used in Const., art. 2, § 1, which provides for the annual election in such townships of certain officers, including constables, does not embrace organized or incorporated cities and villages.—White v. Manistee County Sup'rs, 105 Mich. 608.

¶ 4. Where a vacancy occurs in the office of county prosecuting attorney after the commencement of a term of service and more than six months before the next general election, it is proper to fill the vacancy at a special election as provided by 1 Comp. Laws, 1897, § 5936, subd. 4, or at the coming general election as provided by 1 Comp. Laws, 1897, § 3597.—Board Election Com'rs Wayne Co. v. Wayne Circuit Judges, 172 Mich. 430.

¶ 5. An election to fill a vacancy in office of probate judge can take place only at the general biennial election in November or at a special election ordered, under the statute, by the governor or board of supervisors.—People v. Palmer, 91 Mich. 283.

¶ 6. Comp. L. 1871, § 34 (How. St., § 146), in providing that vacancies in certain offices, if not supplied before the next general election, may be filled then, is merely permissive.—Secord v. Foutch, 44 Mich. 89.

¶ 7. Where an election of county auditors for unexpired terms is ordered for the general spring election at which state officers are elected, a call by the board of supervisors for a special election is unnecessary; nor would a two-thirds vote be required for such call.—Attorney-General v. Trombly, 89 Mich. 50.

§ 3. Notification of election.

Call for special election, see also ante ¶ 7.
Of special or vacancy election, see post §§ 4, 5.
Implied or constructive notice, see post § 6.
Statutory provisions as to notices, see Pub. Acts 1917, No. 203, chap. V.

¶ 8. In general, notice of an election is indispensable and an election held without it is void where the time and place thereof are not fixed by law and in cases of special elections which do not occur at fixed or regular periods but only on the happening of a contingency.—Board Election Com'rs Wayne Co. v. Wayne Circuit Judges, 172 Mich. 430.

¶ 9. Laws 1891, Act No. 50, providing for the election of presidential electors, cannot be regarded as inoperative and void because it does not require notice of election of the district electors provided for; How. St., § 147, which requires the secretary of state to give notice that presidential electors are to be chosen at the general election, remains in force.—McPherson v. Secretary of State, 92 Mich. 377, affirmed 146 U. S. 1, 36 L. ed. 869, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 3.

¶ 10. Statutory notice of an election was held to be dispensed with, in the particular instance, where the statute was so amended as to require the election of an officer not previously provided for, but the amendment went into effect too late to give the statutory notice before the election.—Powell v. Jackson Common Council, 51 Mich. 129.

§ 4. Sufficiency of notice of special or vacancy election.

Necessity of call for special election, see ante § 2, ¶ 7.
Implied or constructive notice, see post § 6.
Naming or describing office in notice, see post § 5.
Notice of election on proposal to remove county seat, see Counties §§ 15, 16.

¶ 11. An election to fill a vacancy in the office of judge of probate, though held at the same time as a general election of other officers, is void unless some distinct and public notice was so given that voters might clearly understand that it was to be held.—Secord v. Foutch, 44 Mich. 89.

¶ 12. Where there is no statute requiring that a vacancy in the office of prosecuting attorney be filled at the next general election and no special election had been held, an intention to supply the vacancy either at a special or general election must be evidenced by the statutory notice or such a general understanding of the electors as to take the place and accomplish the same purpose of the statutory notice.—Board Election Com'rs Wayne Co. v. Wayne Circuit Judges, 172 Mich. 430.

¶ 13. If it is intended to fill a vacancy in the office of prosecuting attorney which occurred more than six months before the next general election, at such election notice thereof should be given before the primary election is held.—Board Election Com'rs Wayne Co. v. Wayne Circuit Judges, 172 Mich. 430.

¶ 14. Form of notice under statute for a special election ordered by board of supervisors to fill a vacancy, held sufficient. Such notice need not copy the preamble of the order of the board.—People ex rel. Andrews v. Lord, 9 Mich. 227.

§ 5. ——Specification of office to be filled.

¶ 15. Where a city charter required a vacancy in a city office to be filled at the next general election, and directed the city clerk to give notice of the election, and of the offices to be filled, and the notice actually given by him took no notice of the vacancy, it was held that this default of the clerk did not invalidate the election for the vacancy.—People ex rel. Speed v. Hartwell, 12 Mich. 508; People ex rel. Moore v. Witherell, 14 Mich. 48.

¶ 16. An election to fill a vacancy is invalid, if held at a general election for city officers, where no notice of the election for filling such vacancy was given, and where a charter provision requiring the filling of vacancies at the next general election and the giving of notice specifying the offices did not apply to the particular office under which charter provision the clerk's omission to mention the vacancy in the notice would have amounted to a mere irregularity not invalidating the election to such office.—People ex rel. Moore v. Witherell, 14 Mich. 48.

§ 6. Implied, constructive or presumptive notice.

¶ 17. Where a statute makes the time and occasion of an election imperative, requiring it to be at the next general state election, the election cannot be made nugatory by any failure to give notice.—Attorney-General v. Iron County Board of Canvassers, 64 Mich. 607.

¶ 18. Where a statute makes the time and occasion of an election imperative, the election is not void because of failure to give notice. Every one is bound to take notice of what the statute requires.—Adsit v. Osmun, 84 Mich. 420.

¶ 19. An election to fill a vacancy, of which no notice is given, and which is in fact known to but few of the voters, is void. But though the official notice was not given, or, if given, not in the prescribed form, yet if the election has been held, and the great body of the voters had notice in fact of the vacancy, this, coupled with the fact that they are presumed to know that the law requires the vacancy to be filled at the next election, is sufficient, even though many refrained from voting because of a difference of the construction of the law.—Adsit v. Osmun, 84 Mich. 420.

¶ 20. Act 97 of Laws 1889, creating the office of additional circuit judge for Kent county, declared such office vacant and authorized the governor to appoint a person to fill the vacancy, who was to hold the office after the general spring election in 1893. The democratic party, claiming that the person so appointed could not constitutionally hold office after the general fall election in 1890, nominated, prior to such fall election, relator for the unexpired term. Unofficial notices of election were posted in every precinct, and relator received the average vote of his party, which carried the county by a considerable plurality. The other political parties made no nomination for this office and refrained from voting. Held, that the refusal of the secretary of state to give the statutory notice did not invalidate the election.—Adsit v. Osmun, 84 Mich. 420.

¶ 21. Electors of a city are presumed to have notice of the proceedings of the common council, which are published in the official paper of the corporation. They are therefore presumed to have notice of a vacancy which has been declared by the council.—People ex rel. Speed v. Hartwell, 12 Mich. 508.

¶ 22. In the absence of a statute requiring that a vacancy in the office of prosecuting attorney shall be filled at the next general election where there has been no special election, there is no public duty to take notice that such an election will be held.—Board Election Com'rs Wayne Co. v. Wayne Circuit Judges, 172 Mich. 430.

¶ 23. A judge of probate having moved from the county during his term, the governor appointed another to fill his place. In giving notice of the next general election, it was intimated in two notices that an election would be held to fill the vacancy, but this intimation was afterwards omitted. At the election there was no competition, and the number of votes cast for the one candidate indicated that it was not generally understood a probate judge was to be chosen. Held, on quo warranto proceedings against the governor's appointee, that the election was void, as held without sufficient notice, and the respondent was entitled to the position.—Secord v. Foutch, 44 Mich. 89.

¶ 24. Where no notice is given of an intention to fill a vacancy in the office of prosecuting attorney at the coming general election and no general public understanding of such an intention exists, no election can be held, and votes cast at the primary before such election for a person as a candidate for the vacancy are without significance in fact or in law.—Board Election Com'rs Wayne Co. v. Wayne Circuit Judges, 172 Mich. 430.

¶ 25. It would seem that the number of votes cast for candidates for nomination to fill a vacancy in the office of prosecuting attorney at a primary election before a general election is conclusive of the general understanding as to an intention to fill the vacancy at the general election.—Board Election Com'rs Wayne Co. v. Wayne Circuit Judges, 172 Mich. 430.

¶ 26. Where no notice is given of an intention to fill a vacancy in the office of prosecuting attorney at the next general election, no general understanding by the electors that such an intention exists is manifest where only three votes are cast for the nomination of persons to fill the vacancy at the primary before the general election, and such votes were cast for a candidate whose name was written on the ballot by the voters.—Board Election Com'rs Wayne Co. v. Wayne Circuit Judges, 172 Mich. 430.

§ 7. Place or district for elections.

Place of residence as voting qualification, see post §§ 13, 14.

Invalidity of vote on right district after erroneous vote in wrong one, see post ¶ 243.

Irregularity in place or adjournment as affecting result, see post § 75.

Constitutional requirements as to districts and changes, see also Constitutional Law § 255.

Apportionment of the state into representative and electoral districts, see Constitutional Law §§ 258-260.

Certainty, validity and effect of statutes not specifying voting place or district, see also Statutes, V.

Statutory provisions as to election precincts, see Pub. Acts 1917, No. 203, chap. VI.

Election districts in townships and villages, see Comp. L. 1915, chap. 79.

¶ 27. A legislative act authorizing the annual meeting of the township of Pontiac to be held within the city of Pontiac would not authorize the polls for said township, for a general election, to be held in the city.—People v. Knight, 13 Mich. 424.

¶ 28. Laws 1891, Act No. 50, providing for the election of presidential electors, held not inoperative on the ground that no means are provided for canvassing votes in Wayne county; in such county the inspector should designate the district in which the elector is voted for.—McPherson v. Secretary of State, 92 Mich. 377, affirmed 146 U. S. 1, 36 L. ed. 869, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 3.

¶ 29. While the apportionment act of 1901 was supplanted by the apportionment act of 1905 it must be presumed that the legislature in passing the apportionment act of June 16, 1905, had in mind the local act of June 8, 1905 (Local Acts 1905, No. 627) which had been given immediate effect, and by the provisions of which certain territory annexed to the city of Detroit was not to be annexed until the first Monday of April, 1906. Construing the two acts together it was the intention of the legislature that the new act should not supplant the old as to the territory annexed until the arrival of the time of the actual annexation, and during the interval the rights of the electors in such territory should be determined by the old law.—Attorney General ex rel. Battishill v. Township Board of Springwells, 143 Mich. 523.

¶ 30. An election of senators must be called under the last enacted valid senatorial apportionment act, where later acts providing for such apportionment have been declared invalid because of unconstitutional inequalities in apportionment; even though, owing to changes of population, equal, if not greater, inequalities may exist under such valid act.—Williams v. Secretary of State, 145 Mich. 447.

§ 8. Conduct of and facilities for elections.

Official ballots, see post § 29.

Ballots and preparation of them, see post, IV.

Ballot boxes and management of voting place during reception of votes, see post §§ 36, 40.

Separate boxes where several votes are taken at one election time, see post § 36.

Voting on machines, see post § 37.

Election officers and attendants, see also post § 10.

Receiving votes, see post, V.

Counting votes, sealing boxes and making returns, see post, VI.

Improper printed instructions as affecting election, see post § 84.

Polling places and their equipment, provisions of the statute, see Pub. Acts 1917, No. 203, chap. VII.

¶ 31. The provisions of Laws 1889, Act No. 263, regulating the conduct of elections, do not apply to municipalities whose elections are governed by special enactment, except in so far as they relate to the ballots and booths to be used.—Common Council of Detroit v. Rush, 82 Mich. 532.

¶ 32. The provisions of the election law of 1889, Act No. 263, with reference to the construction of booths, the admission of voters within the railing, the stationing of gatekeepers and the preparing, depositing, printing, furnishing and filing of tickets, explained.—Common Council of Detroit v. Rush, 82 Mich. 532.

¶ 33. Under Laws 1889, Act No. 263 it is the duty of the secretary of state to see that tickets are printed and furnished; of the municipal authorities to provide the booths, and have them ready for use the morning of election; and of the election boards to perform the duties imposed upon them.—Common Council of Detroit v. Rush, 82 Mich. 532.

¶ 34. The printing of election tickets under Laws of 1889, Act No. 263 is not to be done at the expense of the state, and the secretary of state is not bound to have it done at the state printing-office, but may select his own place of printing.—Common Council of Detroit v. Rush, 82 Mich. 532.

§ 9. Cost and expenses of elections.

Printing costs, see also ante ¶ 34.
Necessity of deposit to have recount, see also post ¶ 193.
Proper county and state charges, see Counties, IV; State of Michigan, IV.
Certainty, validity and effect of statutes silent as to provision for election expenses, see Statutes, V.

II. OFFICERS AND ATTENDANTS AT POLLS.

§ 10. In general.

Relative duties of state and local officers as to preparing and furnishing ballots, etc., see ante ¶ 33.
Ministerial nature of duties of canvassers of primary vote, see post § 28.
Functions of registration officers, see also post ¶ 58.
Function in receiving challenged vote, see post § 38.
Effect of mistakes and misdoings of officers on validity of elections, see post §§ 82, 83.
Effect of illegal appointment and presence of "instructor" on the result, see post ¶ 248.
Canvassing boards and their powers, duties and functions, see post, VI.
Interest of member of canvassing board as reason for inspectors to act as recount board, see post ¶ 192.
Qualifications of recount commissioners, recital in appointment, see post ¶ 198.
United States officers and marshals at elections, see post ¶ 250.
General law of officers, see Officers.
Illegally appointed election officers as officers de facto, see Officers, III, VI.
Provisions as to inspectors and clerks of election, see Pub. Acts 1917, No. 203, chap. VIII.
Boards of election commissioners in townships, cities and villages, see Pub. Acts 1917, No. 203, chap. IX § 28.
Gate keepers at polls, see Pub. Acts 1917, No. 203, chap. VII §§ 8 et seq.
Challengers in polls at election, see Pub. Acts 1917, No. 203, chap. X §§ 27 et seq.
Oaths and compensation of officers, see Pub. Acts 1917, No. 203, chap. XXIV.

¶ 35. The common council, upon redistricting a city for election purposes, may reappoint for undisturbed districts the inspectors of election previously elected and may appoint additional inspectors for the other districts; for it cannot be said that vacancies exist in the new districts, and Laws 1891, Act No. 190 is therefore applicable.—Conely v. Common Council of Detroit, 93 Mich. 446.

¶ 36. Appointment by the village council of its president and one of its trustees as election inspectors, though they were candidates for re-election, was an irregularity and did not invalidate the election, where it was done in good faith and in the belief that the board was to be appointed under How. St., § 2794 and that such section was not repealed by Laws 1893, Act No. 202, which disqualifies a candidate to be inspector.—People ex rel. Hartwick v. Avery, 102 Mich. 572.

III. ELIGIBILITY AND REGISTRATION OF ELECTORS.

§ 11. In general.

Residential qualifications, see post §§ 13, 14.
Registration, see post §§ 15-17.
Registration as prima facie evidence of qualifications, see post ¶ 59.
Duty to receive challenged vote when sworn in, see post § 38.
Actionable rejection of vote, see post § 95.
Privileges of electors and secrecy of ballot, see post, XI.

¶ 37. It cannot be presumed that any legislature means to set up different rules of suffrage in different parts of the state, so as to create inequalities among voters.—Warren v. Board of Registration, 72 Mich. 398.

¶ 38. For a general discussion of the qualifications of electors, see the opinions of the justices in People v. Blodgett, 13 Mich. 127.

¶ 39. A person born abroad of parents of African descent born in this country, and held as slaves until they left it, does not, by removing to the United States, become a citizen.—Hedgman v. Board of Registration, 26 Mich. 51.

¶ 40. All persons in whom white blood so far preponderated that they had less than one-fourth of African blood are within the meaning of that clause of the constitution which limited the elective franchise to "white male citizens," and no other person of African descent could be so regarded.—People v. Dean, 14 Mich. 406.

§ 12. Women as voters.

See Const. art. III, § 1.

¶ 41. While no person can vote for the election of any officer mentioned in the constitution unless he possesses the qualifications of an elector prescribed in that instrument, it does not follow that none but such electors can vote for officers whom the legislature has the right to provide for to carry out the educational purposes declared in that instrument. Provision allowing women to vote at school elections sustained.—Belles v. Burr, 76 Mich. 1.

¶ 42. Laws 1893, Act No. 138, providing that "in all school, village and city elections women shall be allowed to vote for all school, village and city officers," is unconstitutional as conferring a franchise not given by the constitution.—Coffin v. Board of Election Com'rs of Detroit, 97 Mich. 188.

¶ 43. How. St., § 5049, prescribing who shall be voters at school-district meetings, does not enable women to vote for members of a city board of education, who are to be voted for at the annual city election (How. St., § 781), since the constitution confines the right to vote at such elections to male persons.—Mudge v. Jones, 59 Mich. 165.

§ 13. Residence of voter.

Transients, such as soldiers, sailors and students, see post § 14.
Domicile and changes of domicile, see Domicile.
Registering as voter as evidence of place of residence, see Domicile ¶ 22.

¶ 44. Under Const., art. 7, § 1, no one can vote except in the township or ward where he resides.—People ex rel. Twitchell v. Blodgett, 13 Mich. 127; People v. Maynard, 15 Mich. 463; Allor v. Wayne County Auditors, 43 Mich. 76.

¶ 45. In determining the residence of a voter whose family lives in one place while he works in another, account must be taken of his intention as to where he will fix his residence.—Harbaugh v. People ex rel. Cicott, 33 Mich. 241.

¶ 46. The temporary absence of a person or his family, though extending over a series of years, does not necessarily, without regard to his intentions, make him lose his residence, or deprive him of his right as an elector.—Harbaugh v. People ex rel. Cicott, 33 Mich. 241.

¶ 47. For voting purposes a man who is not a householder and who is unmarried must, if the statute is silent, be regarded as having his residence in the ward where he takes his meals, rather than in that where he lodges and sleeps and keeps his office and library.—Warren v. Board of Registration, 72 Mich. 398.

¶ 48. For voting purposes, the residence of an unmarried nonhouseholder in Detroit, the charter being silent on the subject, is in the ward where he takes his regular meals rather than in that where he lodges and sleeps.—Warren v. Board of Registration, 72 Mich. 398.

¶ 49. Temporary abode in a city or ward does not make a person a resident and an elector. Unless the person coming in does so with the honest and settled intention of obtaining a new domicile, he gains no rights.—Warren v. Board of Registration, 72 Mich. 398.

¶ 50. The period of residence required of a voter means actual and permanent sole residence, and not a few days' commorancy for the purposes of one election. A temporary resort to a precinct for no other honest purpose of residence is a fraud and no residence, and gives no rights.—Warren v. Board of Registration, 72 Mich. 398.

¶ 51. Though the charter of Detroit contains no clause determining what place is to be regarded as a voter's residence, the rule under former charters applies, that the ward or precinct in which one takes his regular meals rather than that where he lodges should govern.—Warren v. Board of Registration, 72 Mich. 398.

§ 14. ——Students, soldiers and sailors.

¶ 52. The Michigan Constitution of 1908, art. 3, § 2, providing that no elector shall be deemed to have gained or have lost a residence by reason of being a student of any seminary of learning, a person may nevertheless become a citizen at the place of location of such an institution where, having no domicile, he in good faith makes a domicile at such institution.—People v. Osborn, 170 Mich. 143.

¶ 53. Inmates of the Michigan soldiers' home, admitted from other localities than the township in which the home is situated, are not legal voters in said township.—Wolcott v. Holcomb, 97 Mich. 361; People v. Hanna, 98 Mich. 515.

¶ 54. The Michigan Soldiers' Home is an "asylum" within meaning of Const., art. 7, § 5, which provides that "no elector shall be deemed to have gained or lost a residence while kept at any almshouse or other asylum at public expense"; and where a soldier when admitted as an inmate has a legal residence in a township other than that where the Home is located, he does not lose such residence while he remains an inmate, nor is he a legal voter in the latter township (disregarding dictum in Warren v. Board of Registration of Detroit, 72 Mich. 401).—Wolcott v. Holcomb, 97 Mich. 361; People v. Hanna, 98 Mich. 515.

§ 15. Registration.

Examination of the elector, see post § 16.
Effect and validity of the registration, see post § 17.
Validity of registration laws, see Constitutional Law § 253.
General registration law, see Comp. L. 1915, chap. 78.

¶ 55. The statute requiring registration is imperative, and an election cannot be supported where—owing to a failure of the board of registration to meet, or to provide the opportunity for registration—there has been no registration, notwithstanding the persons who voted were legal voters.—People ex rel. Foley v. Kopplekom, 16 Mich. 342.

¶ 56. Previous registration is an indispensable preliminary to the right to take any of the oaths prescribed in 1 Comp. L. 1857, pp. 107, 108, § 25, How. St., § 161, to be administered to a person offering to vote, and until such registry there can be no duty on the part of the inspectors to administer such oath.—Wattles v. People, 13 Mich. 446.

§ 16. Examination for registration.

¶ 57. When an applicant for registration appears to be sworn as to his qualifications, the board should examine him on oath, and, while it would not be absolutely bound by his statements, it has no right to reject him on mere inspection.—People ex rel. Dean v. Nankin Board of Registration, 15 Mich. 156; People ex rel. Wood v. Detroit Board of Registration, 17 Mich. 427.

¶ 58. It is the board's duty to hear any testimony offered by him relative to his right to be registered as a local elector, and to draw a reasonable conclusion from the evidence and to decide the question. A ward board in Detroit cannot reserve the question for the consideration of the city board; that board acts merely as a board of review in specified cases, and cannot entertain cases cognizable in the first place by the ward board.—People ex rel. Wood v. Detroit Board of Registration, 17 Mich. 427.

§ 17. Effect and validity of registration.

¶ 59. Where a person is registered in a ward or precinct he is prima facie entitled to vote there. The presumption is that he is a legal voter where he is registered; and this presumption covers and includes the necessary residence and everything required to make him a qualified voter.—Harbaugh v. People ex rel. Cicott, 33 Mich. 241.

¶ 60. Registration, conducted by illegally appointed officers who were de facto incumbents, was held valid in order that electors might not be disfranchised.—Dingwall v. Common Council of Detroit, 82 Mich. 568.

§ 18. Party enrollments.

Enrollment in party as depriving nominee or right to go on ballot as nominee of other party, see post § 30.

¶ 61. Act 281, P. A. 1909, § 4, as amended by Act 279, P. A. 1911, and § 11 of Act 281, can be harmonized by a literal construction holding that § 4 only provides for the initial enrollment of a person in a political party and that only persons not enrolled may enroll by written request and affidavit, and that § 11 provides that a person who has changed his party affiliation can make personal application for re-enrollment as a member of another party only on enrollment day to the enrollment board whose duty it shall be to re-enroll such voter. DeFoe v. Board Election Com'rs Bay City, 174 Mich. 472.

IV. NOMINATIONS AND PREPARATION OF OFFICIAL BALLOT.

§ 19. Primary election in general.

When dispensed with, see also post §§ 20, 21.

Nominations by convention or petition, see post §§ 25-27.

Primary election law, see Comp. L. 1915, chap. 77.

Times for party caucuses to nominate, see Pub. Acts 1917, No. 203, chap. IX § 29.

¶ 62. A primary election is not an election to public office, but is merely the selection of candidates for office by the members of a political party, in a manner having the form of an election.—Line v. Board of Election Canvassers Menominee Co., 154 Mich. 329.

¶ 63. Act No. 728, Local Acts 1907, amending Act No. 326, Local Acts 1903, which provides for primary elections in Kent County and the City of Grand Rapids, by omitting the provision for a city primary, repeals such provision of the former act, and leaves the law in regard to such elections just as it was before the passage of the Act of 1903.—Ellis v. Boer, 150 Mich. 452.

¶ 64. The general primary election law (Act No. 4 of the Laws of Extra Session, 1907) does not apply to the election of city officers of the City of Grand Rapids, this act expressly exempting Kent County from its operation.—Dykstra v. Holden, 151 Mich. 289.

¶ 65. Act No. 471, Local Acts 1901, was repealed by Act No. 326, Local Acts 1903, providing for primary elections in the City of Grand Rapids, which was in turn repealed by Act No. 728, Local Acts 1907, hence there is no local act regulating primary elections in the City of Grand Rapids.—Dykstra v. Holden, 151 Mich. 289.

¶ 66. The repeal of the local act relating to primary elections in the City of Grand Rapids made the general law (Pub. Acts of 1895, Act No. 135) again operative in that city.—Dykstra v. Holden, 151 Mich. 289.

¶ 67. The fact that the Kent County Primary Law no longer provides for the nomination of city officers cannot prevent the political organization of the City of Grand Rapids from using the ordinary party machinery for making nominations; the provision of section 2 of the Act (No. 326, Local Acts 1903), that the primaries for all parties shall be held upon the same day, having reference only to the primary elections included within the act.—Ellis v. Boer, 150 Mich. 452.

¶ 68. The provision of Pub. Acts 1905, No. 181, chap. 3, § 2, providing that the petition for the submission of the question of a direct primary shall be delivered to the city clerk, county clerk, or secretary of state at least 30 days before the second Tuesday in June, is mandatory, and the secretary of state cannot be compelled by mandamus where he refuses to consider a petition not presented within the statutory time.—Crampton v. Secretary of State, 144 Mich. 341.

§ 20. ——Unopposed nominations.

¶ 69. Under Pub. Acts 1913, No. 118, § 17, providing that if, upon the expiration of the time for the filing of petitions in any primary for city or county, it appears that there is no opposition to a particular candidate for office upon any ticket, then the city or the county clerk, as the case may be, shall certify to the board of election commissioners the names of all persons whose petitions have been properly filed and the offices for which such petitions were filed and such persons shall be declared by such board of election commissioners as nominees for the respective offices, and such clerk shall give notice to specified officers that the primary will not be held as contemplated, and also give a public notice of such determination by publication in a newspaper published in the county, it is unnecessary to hold a primary election for the office of circuit judge when there is but one candidate from all the political parties who has filed a petition therefor.—North v. Cady, 194 Mich. 561.

§ 21. ——Special elections to fill vacancy.

¶ 70. The provisions of section 16 of the Primary Election Law of 1909 as amended in 1911, relating to special elections called to fill vacancies, are not applicable in case of a vacancy in the office of circuit judge occurring more than thirty days before a general election, and where no special election has been called.—Oren v. Secretary of State, 171 Mich. 590.

§ 22. Time for primaries.

¶ 71. Under Act No. 281, Pub. Acts 1909, the first Wednesday in March must be held as the time fixed for holding primaries for nominating circuit judges and county auditors throughout the state, and the county clerk may be compelled by mandamus to file the petitions of persons seeking to run for these offices.—Mandell v. Farrell, 164 Mich. 585.

§ 23. Voting and ballots at primaries.

Party enrollments, see ante § 18.

¶ 72. Act No. 4, Extra Session 1907, does not expressly authorize the use of voting machines at primary elections, and since it is impossible with them to comply with important provisions of the law, their use is illegal.—Line v. Board of Election Canvassers Menominee Co., 154 Mich. 329.

¶ 73. Voting machines may not be used in primary elections held under Act No. 4, Extra Session 1907, since Act No. 287, Pub. Acts 1907, § 1, authorizing the use of such machines, does not apply to primary elections.—Line v. Board of Election Canvassers Menominee Co., 154 Mich. 329.

¶ 74. Petitioner was a candidate for nomination for prosecuting attorney, at the primary election held under Act No. 4, Extra Session 1907. In one precinct a voting machine was used, and petitioner for a recount asked that a mandamus issue on the county board of election commissioners directing them to disregard the vote of said precinct, and treat it as a nullity. Held, the use of the voting machine was illegal, and that the writ requested should issue.—Line v. Board of Election Canvassers Menominee Co., 154 Mich. 329.

§ 24. Count, canvass, returns and recount of primary vote.

Certifying the nominations, see post § 28.

¶ 75. Under § 41, Act No. 4, Extra Session 1907, giving the board of state canvassers power to make a recount of votes cast at the primary election, the board must proceed in the manner laid down by the statute, and its acts and methods are reviewable by the courts.—Bradley v. Board State Canvassers, 154 Mich. 274; Warner v. Same, Id.

¶ 76. Under § 41, Act No. 4, Extra Session 1907, the board of state canvassers in recounting the votes cast at a primary election are performing not a judicial but a ministerial duty, and cannot compare the enrollment lists with the poll lists, for the purpose of discovering and rejecting votes illegally cast.—Bradley v. Board State Canvassers, 154 Mich. 274; Warner v. Same, Id. (McAlvay, J., dissenting.)

¶ 77. The Primary Election Law, Act No. 279 of Public Acts of 1911, authorizes a recount by the boards of county canvassers of the several counties for candidates for offices in districts comprising more than one county.—Beakes v. Board State Canvassers, 172 Mich. 408.

¶ 78. Under the General Election Law after a primary election a recount can be made only when the canvassing board can determine from an inspection of the ballot box that it has been sealed as the statute requires.—Ritze v. Board Canvassers Iron Co., 172 Mich. 423.

¶ 79. Where the inspectors of primary election have failed to place upon the ballot box the election seal to be furnished by the township clerk as required by the General Election Law, Comp. Laws 1897, § 3617, the board of county canvassers should refuse to make a recount of the ballots in the box, despite the fact that the omission to supply such seal is due to the failure of the clerk to furnish same to the inspectors.—

Ritze v. Board Canvassers Iron Co., 172 Mich. 423.

¶ 80. Where the board of county canvassers at a primary election tallies a vote upon the tally sheet with the purpose of later considering whether it is legally cast, it may, prior to its final adjournment, change its determination to allow such ballot and reject it in making up the count.—Abbott v. Board Canvassers Montcalm Co., 172 Mich. 416.

¶ 81. The county board of canvassers has no authority to take the testimony of the primary election inspectors with reference to the condition of the ballot box involved in a recount, nor are they authorized to compare the poll list with the enrollment book.—Ritze v. Board Canvassers Iron Co., 172 Mich. 423.

¶ 82. Relator, a candidate for the nomination for representative in congress, filed a petition for recount of primary election with the board of county canvassers one day after said board had certified and returned the election of his opponent to the state board of canvassers, but within the time allowed by the statute for the filing of such petition. The county board made a recount resulting in relator's favor and the result was thereupon certified by the county board to the state board. Respondent, state board, had no notice of the recount. Held, the first statement and return of the county board was not conclusive upon relator so as to disentitle him to the benefits of the recount resulting in his favor.—Beakes v. Board State Canvassers, 172 Mich. 408.

¶ 83. Under the Primary Election Law, § 41. providing that "All votes cast for any candidate upon the ballots of one political party, when such candidate is enrolled as a member of another party, shall not be counted," one enrolled as a Republican under the Primary Election Law is not selected as a candidate of the National Progressive Party, and votes cast for him as a candidate of such party at a primary election cannot be counted though he received the highest number of votes for the nomination of that party.—Cook v. Board Election Com'rs Cheboygan Co., 172 Mich. 437.

§ 25. Nominations by convention.

In city elections, see also ante ¶ 67.
Certifying the nominations, see post § 28.

¶ 84. Mandamus will not be granted to compel the election commissioners to place relator's name upon the official ballot as the nominee of a political party where the chairman of the nominating convention ruled that relator had not received a majority of the votes and no nomination had been made, which ruling was not appealed from, and another candidate received a majority upon the next ballot and was declared the nominee of the party.—Jennings v. Board of Election Com'rs of Delta Co., 137 Mich. 720.

¶ 85. Where relator receives six out of eleven votes in a regularly constituted convention, his opponent receiving five votes in a seceding body, mandamus will lie to compel the board of election commissioners to put relator's name on the regular party ticket.—Burns v. Board Election Com'rs, 154 Mich. 471.

§ 26. ——Choice and qualification of delegates and alternates.

¶ 86. A political convention is a law unto itself and as a judge of the qualifications of its own members, its decision is final. —Stephenson v. Boards of Election Commissioners, 118 Mich. 396.

¶ 87. In a nominating convention where a dispute arose as to the right of a delegate to sit, the objection being that he was not qualified, it was proper to refer the matter to a committee on credentials.—Beck v. Board of Election Commissioners of Wayne County, 103 Mich. 192.

¶ 88. In the case of a tie vote there is no election, and, in the absence of statutory authority, neither election officers nor candidates have power to determine the result by lot; so, where at a caucus to choose a delegate to a nominating convention the rival candidates sought to decide a tie vote by "odd or even" coins, it was held that the winner was rightly refused a seat in the convention.—Beck v. Board of Election Com'rs of Wayne County, 103 Mich. 192.

¶ 89. An allegation that a delegate chosen to a nominating convention was absent from the state when the caucus chose him, and that a proxy given by him is irregular and void, is insufficient in a petition for mandamus to compel a board of election commissioners to rescind its action in placing upon the official ballot the name of the candidate nominated at said convention—upon which to base a finding that the committee on credentials erred in determining that the holder of the proxy was entitled to a seat in the convention.—Beck v. Board of Election Com'rs of Wayne County, 103 Mich. 192.

¶ 90. Comp. L. 1897, § 11466, which forbids a delegate elected to any city, county, congressional, or state political convention to give a proxy to any person to represent him at such convention, and requiring vacancies to be filled by the delegation, if it can be said to apply to a meeting of a district committee held for the purpose of filling a vacancy on the ticket, is not violated by the election by the committee in a majority vote of a citizen of an otherwise unrepresented county, although he holds a proxy from the committeeman from such county.—Potter v. Deuel, 149 Mich. 393.

§ 27. Nominations by petition.

¶ 91. A candidate for member of the Charter Commission of Grand Rapids, provided for by Act No. 279, Pub. Acts 1909, is required to file with the city clerk a petition in accordance with the provision of Act No. 281, Pub. Acts 1909, requiring the signatures of voters equal to at least two per cent of the votes cast for the secretary of state at the last election, before he is entitled to have his name placed on the ballot for nomination.—Meves v. Schriver, 162 Mich. 358; Irwin v. Same, Id.

§ 28. Certification or showing, filing and acceptances of nominations.

Certification without primary where nomination is unopposed, see ante § 69.

Statutory provisions, see Pub. Acts 1917, No. 203, chap. IX.

¶ 92. Before the board of election commissioners places the names of candidates for office on the official ballot, some showing of the right of such candidates to be placed thereon should be in the possession of the Board.—Brown v. Board Election Com'rs Kent Co., 174 Mich. 477.

¶ 93. The courts will not interfere by mandamus to annul ministerial acts of the board of state canvassers in certifying the name of a particular candidate to the Board of Election Commissioners where it does not appear that any one was entitled by a better right to the certificate in question, and such certificate is conclusive until in some proper action or proceeding to contest the right to the election it is decided that another person was in fact nominated.—Withey v. Board of State Canvassers, 194 Mich. 564.

¶ 94. Local Acts 1903, No. 326, § 3 denying a place on the ballot to a candidate for office unless he declare on oath in advance that he is a candidate for such office, violates Constitution, art. 18, § 1, prescribing the oath required of public officers and providing that no other oath, declaration, or test shall be required. It deprives the electorate of the right to vote for a man not seeking the office.—Dapper v. Smith, 138 Mich. 104.

¶ 95. The duties of the board of state canvassers in canvassing returns made to it from the several counties and certifying the nominees shown by such returns to the respective boards of election commissioners are purely ministerial.—Withey v. Board of State Canvassers, 194 Mich. 564.

¶ 96. It must be presumed that the board of state canvassers in canvassing the returns made to it from the several counties and certifying the nominee shown by such returns to the board of election commissioners performed its official duty, where the certificate, when issued, authorized the name certified to be printed on the official ballot.—Withey v. Board of State Canvassers, 194 Mich. 564.

§ 29. Official ballot.

Persons entitled to place on ballot, see post § 30.

Right of minority parties to have nominees on ballot, see post § 31.

Position or column to which party or its nominees are entitled, see post §§ 32, 33.

Party designations and emblems, see post §§ 34, 35.

Practice in case of party splits, see post § 35.

Duties of various officers, see ante ¶ 33.

Effect of informality or irregularity in ballot, see post §§ 76, 77.

Effect of irregularity in initialing, numbering and folding of ballots at polls, see post §§ 78, 82.

Misspelled names or misnomer of candidates, see post § 77.

Name under wrong party enrollment, inapplicability of primary law to official ballot, see also post ¶ 221.

Mandamus to compel preparation of ballot, see Mandamus.

Ballots for constitutional amendments, see Constitutional Law § 4.

Form of ballots on proposal to change county seat, see Counties §§ 15-17.

Sufficiency and certainty of ballots and votes on proposal to remove county seat, see Counties § 16.

Separation of ballots on proposal to change county seat from official ballots, see Counties § 16.

Provisions relating to preparation and printing, see Pub. Acts 1917, No. 203, chap. IX.

Form of official ballot, see Pub. Acts 1917, No. 2003, chap. IX, § 15.

¶ 97. By the term "general ticket" in Const., art. 4, § 3, providing for election of legislators for one district on a general ticket, is meant a ticket which is not "partial" or "special," and it signifies that the whole number of representatives to which the town or city is entitled shall be placed upon the ticket to be voted, though no elector is compelled to vote for every person on the ticket.—Maynard v. Board of Canvassers of Kent County, 84 Mich. 228.

¶ 98. In designating an office on a ballot, nothing is required beyond such a description as leaves no doubt of what is meant. Omitting the word "for" before the name of the office is immaterial.—People v. Cicott, 16 Mich. 283.

§ 30. Persons entitled to place on ballot as nominees.

Nominees of conventions, see ante §§ 25, 26.

Sufficiency of nominating petition, see ante § 27.

Necessity of acceptance or oath of candidacy, see ante § 28.

In cases of factional splits, see post § 35.

Mandamus to compel placing of name on ballot, see Mandamus.

¶ 99. One who has not been selected by some assemblage of the electors of his ward is not entitled as of right to have his name placed as a candidate for alderman upon a ballot by the commissioners, though any one may announce himself as a candidate and may be voted for by writing his name upon the ballot in the blank reserved for the purpose.—Chateau v. Jacob, 88 Mich. 170.

¶ 100. In the case of the split in a convention where two factions nominate candidates, both factions are entitled to places upon the ballot unless there is a statute expressly forbidding it.—Stephenson v. Boards of Election Commissioners, 118 Mich. 396; Jennings v. Board of Election Com'rs of Delta Co., 137 Mich. 720.

¶ 101. A candidate of the National Progressive Party for a city office is entitled to a place on the ticket though he was not entitled to have his name printed on the ballots at the primary because his enrollment as a member of another party was not changed in the manner required by statute where it appears that such candidate was certified to the Board of Election Commissioners by the city committee of such Progressive Party and that he is a member of such party.—DeFoe v. Board Election Com'rs Bay City, 174 Mich. 472.

¶ 102. Mandamus will not issue to compel the board of election commissioners to place the name of a person on the election ballot where by the conceded facts such person is enrolled as a Republican and has received the highest number of votes at a primary election as a candidate of the National Progressive Party, since it is provided by the Primary Election Law, § 41, that such votes "shall not be counted."—Cook v. Board Election Com'rs Cheboygan Co., 172 Mich. 437.

¶ 103. Under Act 281, P. A. 1909, § 4, as amended by Act 279, P. A. 1911, and §§ 11 and 41 of Act 281, where a person enrolled as a member of one political party by request and affidavit seeks to become enrolled as a member of another party and a petition is filed naming him as a candidate for nomination for an office on the ticket of such other party, such person is not entitled to have his name appear on the printed ballots at the primary election.—DeFoe v. Board Election Com'rs Bay City, 174 Mich. 472.

§ 31. ——Candidates of minor parties.

Mandamus to compel omission from ballot, see Mandamus.

¶ 104. If the legislature acting within its authority prescribed an unreasonable regulation of the right of franchise by Act 281, P. A. 1909, § 37, relating to the nomination at a primary election of a candidate whose party cast a vote less than 15 per cent of such party's vote for Secretary of State at the last November election, and to the right of such party to have the names of its candidates printed on the official ballot, the legislature and not the courts must remedy it.—Brown v. Board Election Com'rs Kent Co., 174 Mich. 477.

§ 32. Position or column on official ballot.

Same person nominated by two or more parties, see post § 33.

¶ 105. The supreme court will not, in mandamus proceedings to compel election commissioners to assign to party tickets the positions upon the official ballot to which they are respectively entitled, inquire into the regularity of the certification of a particular ticket, where it appears from the showing of all the parties that the ticket certified is entitled to a place upon the ballot.—Baker v. Board of Election Com'rs of Wayne County, 110 Mich. 635.

§ 33. ——Nominees of more than one party.

Statutory provisions, see Pub. Acts 1917, No. 203, Chap. IX.

¶ 106. Laws 1895, Act No. 17, prohibiting printing in more than one column on official ballot name of candidate nominated by two or more political parties, is not retroactive, and is not applicable where the time within which the candidate is authorized by the act to exercise his choice of tickets had expired before the act took effect.—Todd v. Board of Election Com'rs of Kalamazoo County, 104 Mich. 474.

§ 34. Party designations and emblems on ballot.

Improper vignette as distinctive mark, see post ¶ 265.

Statutory provisions, see Pub. Acts 1917, No. 203, Chap. IX.

¶ 107. Where the vignette adopted by a political party was a part of the certificate and notice served upon the board of election commissioners and combined within it the name of the party or political organization which they represented, and where the name of the party is combined with the vignette, it is not necessary to put another heading below it.—Shields v. Jacobs, 88 Mich. 164.

¶ 108. The provision of Detroit City Charter (Local Acts 1895, No. 468) inserted in the section which provides for the certification of nominations for city officers by the officers of city committees of political parties, that "no vignette shall be furnished or printed on any ballot" (chap. 2, § 28), is not applicable only to ballots to be cast within the city for city officers. The subsequent provision (chap. 2, § 57) requiring the election commissioners of the county to print all ballots intended for use in the city in the manner prescribed for elections of city officers did not forbid the use of party vignettes on state tickets, but the general statute governs with respect to such matters.—Baker v. Board of Election Com'rs of Wayne County, 110 Mich. 635.

§ 35. ——Factional divisions and new parties.

Right of both factions to be on ballot, see ante § 30.

Column or position for double nominations, see ante §§ 32, 33.

Disability of courts to determine factional disputes, see post § 94.

¶ 109. Where there is a divisional split in a party convention and both parties nominate candidates for offices, each of the tickets nominated, containing the names of the persons nominated with the vignette and heading, if any is furnished by the committee should be printed upon the ballot; and it is not within the province of the board of election commissioners to determine which faction represented the regular nominating convention, but the board must print and place upon the ballot the names of the candidates certified by the committee of either branch of the party representing the two conventions.—Shields v. Jacobs, 88 Mich. 164.

¶ 109a. Where a party nominating convention has split into two factions and each side nominated officers it is the duty of the board of election commissioners if the same party name shall be certified by each of the two committees, that the name so certified shall be printed without further addition or distinctive designation than such as is contained in the certificate furnished.—Shields v. Jacobs, 88 Mich. 164.

¶ 110. A state convention of the Democratic party, regularly called, convened on the same day and in the same city with the state conventions of the People's party, a party which had been represented at the last preceding election, and of the Union Silver party, an organization of recent origin. An arrangement was effected whereby the delegates to the three conventions met together and nominated a fusion ticket, under an agreement requiring a majority of all the votes cast to nominate, and giving to the Democratic delegates the right to cast one-half the entire number of votes. The ticket nominated was termed the "Democratic People's Union Silver Ticket," and a new and distinctive vignette was adopted. Held, that the ticket adopted was not the Democratic ticket, and was therefore not entitled to that place on the official ballot which the Democratic party had a right to demand by virtue of the number of votes cast by it at the last preceding election according to Pub. Acts 1895, No. 271, § 14.—Baker v. Board of Election Com'rs of Wayne County, 110 Mich. 635.

¶ 111. After action had been taken by joint convention of Democrats, the People's party, and a newly organized Union Silver party to form a fusion of such parties, a mass convention, composed wholly of Democrats, was held in another city, and this convention placed in nomination candidates for the various offices, and termed its ticket the "Democratic Ticket." The convention was not called by officers having authority from the Democratic party as previously organized. Held, that this party, while it was entirely justified in calling its ticket the "Democratic Ticket," was not the successor of the Democratic party as it had existed in the previous campaign so as to entitle its ticket to the position upon the official ballot which would have been accorded to the ticket of the Democratic party, regularly nominated in a convention called and organized by the proper officers.—Baker v. Board of Election Com'rs of Wayne County, 110 Mich. 635.

¶ 112. In the case of a split in a congressional district convention where two factions of a party nominate candidates, election commissioners are bound to print in adjoining columns the names of both candidates upon the ballots headed by the party vignette and shall decide for themselves which shall be placed upon the general ticket of the party.—Stephenson v. Boards of Election Commissioners, 118 Mich. 396.

V. RECEIVING AND POLLING THE BALLOTS.

§ 36. In general.

Polling places and equipment, see ante § 8.

Eligibility and registration of voters, see ante, III.

Time allowed in booth for voting, see post § 39.

Manner of denoting choice, see post §§ 40-42.

Counting and returning results of the count, see post VI.

Sealing up ballot boxes after counting, see post § 45.

Irregularities in voting and effect on result, see post §§ 78-85.

Allowing voter to withdraw ballot cast by mistake, see post ¶ 255.

Effect of deposit of ballot in wrong box, see post § 85.

Effect of meddling by officers or of improper assistance to voter, see post § 83.

Effect of irregular folding and indorsement of ballots, see post § 78.

Rejection of ballot for disclosure of vote by elector, see post ¶ 277.

Voting at primaries, see ante § 23.

Constitutional requirement of ballot method, see Constitutional Law § 256.

Ballot boxes for votes on proposal to change county seat submitted at general election, see Counties § 16.

Conduct of elections and manner of voting, see Pub. Acts 1917, No. 203, Chap. X.

Provisions for absent voters, see Pub. Acts, 1917, No. 203, Chap. XII.

¶ 113. The provisions of the election law governing custody of ballots and access to voters while in the voting booths, are mandatory.—Attorney General ex rel. McCall v. Kirby, 120 Mich. 592.

¶ 114. Where state or county measures are to be voted upon, or where state or county officers are to be elected, to fill vacancies at the spring election, the county election commissioners may furnish the ballot, which may be separate from that of the township, and may be cast in a separate box.—Peck v. Berrien County Sup'rs, 102 Mich. 346.

¶ 115. Use of separate ballot-boxes at election to determine county seat of new county under Laws 1885, Act No. 35, was proper.—Attorney-General v. Iron County Board of Canvassers, 64 Mich. 607.

¶ 116. All ballots cast under statutory requirements are formal and final, if there is an election, and cannot be repeated; when the law requires certain officers to be elected by ballot, there can be no such thing as an informal ballot.—People ex rel. Conrad v. Stone, 78 Mich. 635.

§ 37. Voting on machines.

At primary elections, see ante § 23.
Challenges and admission to machine, see post § 38.
Recount or rereading of machine records, see post § 58.
Validity of vote by machine, as vote by ballot, see Constitutional Law § 256.
Sufficiency of voting machine law to be an enforceable certainty, see also Statutes, V.
Partial validity of the law if deemed invalid in part, see Statutes, V.
Voting machine law, see Comp. L. 1915, Chap. 81.

¶ 117. A vote by voting machine is a vote by ballot.—Henderson v. Board of Election Com'rs City of Saginaw, 160 Mich. 36.

¶ 118. Any voting machine may be used at any election where the choice between candidates can be expressed by the use of the machine or by any other method which does not disclose to others the purpose of the voter.—Helme v. Board of Election Com'rs Lenawee Co., 149 Mich. 390.

¶ 119. The fact that the voter cannot have visual evidence at the time of using the voting machine that it correctly records and counts the ballot which he votes does not preclude the use of the machine.—Henderson v. Board Election Com'rs City of Saginaw, 160 Mich. 36.

§ 38. Challenges of voters and action thereon.

Failure to challenge as working estoppel, see post ¶ 262.
Provisions of statute, see Pub. Acts 1917, No. 203, Chap. X.

¶ 120. Inspectors of election cannot reject the ballot offered by a registered voter who tenders the oath prescribed by the statute; the provision that "if the person so challenged shall take such oath, his vote shall be received," is mandatory, and the inspectors' functions are not judicial but only ministerial.—Wolcott v. Holcomb, 97 Mich. 361.

¶ 121. The inspectors cannot reject the ballot of a registered voter who takes the proper oath prescribed in the election law.—People v. Cicott, 16 Mich. 283.

¶ 122. The purpose of Act No. 214, Pub. Acts 1909, providing that a challenged voter taking the statutory oath shall be allowed to use the voting machine is to purify elections.—Henderson v. Board Election Com'rs City of Saginaw, 160 Mich. 36.

¶ 123. Although 1 Comp. Laws 1897, §§ 3720, 3721, providing for the identification of challenged votes is unrepealed, it does not apply to votes cast by voting machines under §§ 11, 12, Act No. 214, Pub. Acts 1909, which provides that a challenged voter may use the machine upon taking the statutory oath.—Henderson v. Board Election Com'rs City of Saginaw, 160 Mich. 36.

¶ 124. Act No. 214, Pub. Acts 1909, provides that a voter who is challenged, and who thereupon takes the statutory oath as to his qualifications, shall be allowed to use the voting machine. Held, the act is not unconstitutional as permitting one not a constitutional elector to vote.—Henderson v. Board Election Com'rs City of Saginaw, 160 Mich. 36.

§ 39. Time for voting.

¶ 125. The provision of Laws 1889, Act No. 263, § 30, authorizing the board of elections to limit the time which a voter may remain in the room or booth while preparing and voting his ballot, is applicable to elections in cities as well as towns, and it is the imperative duty of such boards to limit the time as provided in said section.—Common Council of Detroit v. Rush, 82 Mich. 532.

§ 40. Marking or denoting choice on ballot.

Sufficiency of the ballots, see ante § 29.
Oath of illiterate voter for assistance, see post ¶ 249.
Assistance by United States marshals in voting for congressman, see post ¶ 250.
Erasure as negation of vote, see also post § 80.
Writing or pasting in names, see post § 41.
Effect of irregular marking to invalidate ballot, see post § 79.
Effect of distinguishing marks and what constitute distinctive marks, see post §§ 91, 92.
Provisions of the statute, see Pub. Acts 1917, No. 203, Chap. X.

Assistance to voter, see Pub. Acts 1917, No. 203, Chap. XI.

¶ 126. A ticket bearing no cross but only a blot in the center of the ticket should not be counted.—Attorney General v. Glaser, 102 Mich. 405.

¶ 127. Drawing a straight line beneath one of the tickets on the ballot indicates no choice.—Attorney General v. Glaser, 102 Mich. 405.

¶ 128. Crossing the name of one candidate and drawing a line beneath, but not erasing, the name of the opponent indicates no vote.—Attorney General v. Glaser, 102 Mich. 405.

¶ 129. Drawing a circle around the square and marking the cross beneath the heading of the ticket invalidates the ballot in that it is not marked as required.—Attorney General v. Glaser, 102 Mich. 405.

¶ 130. A ballot whose only mark is two parallel horizontal lines across the circle at the head of the ticket should not be counted. —Christopherson v. Common Council of Manistee, 117 Mich. 125.

§ 41. ——Writing or pasting name of candidate on ballot.

See also ante ¶ 128.

Right to have name written in when not nominated or entitled to be on ballot, see also ante ¶ 99.

Effect of irregular writing, scratching, pasting, or erasure, see post § 80.

Writing or pasting so as to mark ballot distinctively, see post § 92.

§ 131. Where but a single ticket is printed upon a ballot the mere placing of a slip containing the name of a candidate not appearing on the ballot is a sufficient indication of the intention of the voter.—Sawyer v. Hart, 194 Mich. 399.

¶ 132. Under Laws 1889, Act No. 263, a voter desiring to write his ballot may do so; he may erase any or all of the names upon any ticket and write in any names he may choose. If he has no political affiliations he may erase the heading of any ticket and write such a heading as he chooses.—Common Council of Detroit v. Rush, 82 Mich. 532.

¶ 133. Pub. Acts 1893, No. 202, § 26, provides that, if an elector wishes to vote for a candidate not on any ticket, he must write or paste the name of such candidate on his ticket, opposite the name of the office, and make a cross in the circle under the party name, in which case the name so written shall be counted one vote for the person so mentioned, whether the original name on the party ticket is erased or not, unless there is a cross in the square before the name of some opposing candidate on some other party ticket; that, if no cross is placed in the circle under the party name, a cross in the square before the name of any candidate shall be deemed a vote for such candidate, except in cases where the elector votes for more candidates for the same office than are to be elected. Held, that the pasting of a name, which did not appear on any ticket, over the name of one of the candidates, without designating by a cross the party ticket, or the candidate sought to be voted for, and without erasing the name of a third candidate for the same office, was not a compliance with the law.—Oatman v. Fox, 114 Mich. 652.

¶ 134. The provisions of Pub. Acts 1893, No. 202, § 26, as to pasted names and marks are not modified, so as to make the mere pasting of the name a sufficient indication of the voter's choice, by the printed instructions appended to ballots, in the form provided by statute, that "if you wish to vote for a candidate not on any ticket, write or place the name of such candidate on your ticket, opposite the name of the office," since the instructions contain the further direction: "In all cases stamp a cross in the circle under the name of your party, at the head of the ballot."—Oatman v. Fox, 114 Mich. 652.

§ 42. —— Ballots on submitted question.

Sufficiency of ballots on submitted questions, see specific topics, e. g., Counties § 2; Intoxicating Liquors, III, A.

¶ 135. Where a law submits a question to the vote of the people without prescribing the form of ballot to be used, an elector's ballot must show that he voted upon the specific question or it will be ineffectual.—People ex rel. Colby v. Woodhull Township Board, 14 Mich. 28.

VI. COUNT, CANVASS, RETURNS, CONTESTS, AND DECLARATION OF RESULT.

Count, canvass and return of primary vote, see ante § 24.

Count, canvass and publication of result of elections on submitted questions, see Counties §§ 2, 17 et seq.; Intoxicating Liquors, III; and like topics.

§ 43. Counting the vote.

Irregularities necessitating rejection of ballot, see post §§ 76-85.

Effect of mistake in name as printed on ballot, see post § 77.

Rejection of distinctively marked ballots, see post § 91.

Canvass of the vote as returned, see post § 50.

Recount and contest, see post § 57 et seq.

Presumption as to time of count and return, see also post ¶ 141.

Precinct count and canvass, provisions of the statutes, see Pub. Acts 1917, No. 203, Chap. XIV.
Precinct counting boards of inspectors, see Pub. Acts 1917, No. 203, Chap. XV.

¶ 136. An official count of ballots not legally made is void, and can neither be received in evidence nor made the ground of an official certificate or return.—Keeler v. Robertson, 27 Mich. 116.

¶ 137. The inspector should not postpone counting the votes where the statute requires an immediate count.—People ex rel. Dickinson v. Sackett, 14 Mich. 320.

¶ 138. Under the election law of 1891 (Laws 1891, Act No. 190, § 36), which requires the inspector of election immediately on closing the polls to proceed to canvass the votes, and, after the counting of the tickets or ballots has been completed, immediately to publish and to declare the result, neglect to complete the canvass on the night of the election and the dating of the inspector's report on the next day, does not invalidate the poll.—Attorney General v. Glaser, 102 Mich. 396.

§ 44. ——Excessive number of ballots cast.

¶ 139. Where an excess of ballots is found in the box, and the inspectors fail to draw them out as required by law, they should be apportioned among the candidates respectively in proportion to the whole number of their votes; the probability being that the legal and illegal votes have been cast ratably for the several candidates.—People v. Cicott, 16 Mich. 283.

§ 45. Sealing and custody of counted ballots.

Preservation and custody of boxes as requisite to use of contents in recount, see post § 61.
Effect of improper care or custody on the election, see post § 87.
Presumption as to proper care, see also post ¶ 257.
Of boxes used at primary, see also ante ¶ 79.
Provisions of statutes, see Pub. Acts 1917, No. 203, Chap. XIV, § 5.

¶ 140. The action of the inspectors is final when they have finished their count and sealed up the ballots, all of which the law requires to be done without delay, in public. Every opening of the ballots thereafter, except upon a contest, is unlawful, and cannot be made the basis of official action.—People ex rel. Keeler v. Robertson, 27 Mich. 116.

§ 46. Returns by inspectors.

Time for count and return, see ante § 43.
Dating on day after election, see also ante ¶ 138.
Amended and further returns, see post § 49.
Uniformity in returns, see Pub. Acts 1917, No. 203, Chap. XIII.

¶ 141. Where the returns by the inspectors of election bear date as of the day on which the election was held, it will be presumed that the inspectors prepared the same "without recess or adjournment" as required by the statute.—Giddings v. Wells, Van Buren County Treas., 99 Mich. 221.

§ 47. Conclusiveness and finality of returns.

Amended and further returns, see post § 49.
Conclusiveness of recount, see post § 67.
Conclusiveness and effect of certificates or statements of results, see post §§ 69-73.
Presumption from return as to time thereof, see ante ¶ 141.

¶ 142. The ultimate determination of a right to an elective county office is by the ballots themselves. But the law makes certain official counts and returns presumptive evidence of the number of votes cast, and such official counts will prevail if lawfully and regularly made, until overthrown by county of the ballots.—Keeler v. Robertson, 27 Mich. 116.

§ 48. ——Of state canvass.

Recanvass of state returns after change in returns from counties, see post § 56.

¶ 143. There can be no judicial inquiry into the decision of the board of state canvassers in cases where the board determines, under the statute, the result of an election; and, if contested, it can be examined only by the legislature in joint convention.—People ex rel. Royce v. Godwin, 22 Mich. 496.

¶ 144. Where mandamus is brought to compel the state board of canvassers to issue a certificate of nomination to relator, the respondent may not resist the writ on the ground that there are affidavits filed with it showing the casting of illegal votes in relator's favor, which if rejected would result in his defeat, since such a question can only be raised upon a recount.—Beakes v. Board State Canvassers, 172 Mich. 408.

§ 49. Amended and further returns.

Amended returns from counties as ground for recanvass by state, see post § 56.

¶ 145. When inspectors of election have completed their count, and have executed and delivered the returns to the canvassing board, their legal powers end, and any attempt on the part of these inspectors thereafter to change or modify the original returns, except by way of correcting a clerical error, is beyond their powers.—Roemer v. Board of Canvassers of Detroit, 90 Mich. 27.

¶ 146. Whether a clerical error patent upon the face of the papers may not be corrected by a board of inspectors after the returns have been made up and signed, quære.—Roemer v. Board of Canvassers of Detroit, 90 Mich. 27.

¶ 147. Three of the inspectors signed the original canvass of the votes given in their township, and apparently all joined in the returns that were canvassed by the board of supervisors. Held, that the board had power to require an amended return if the one made was incomplete, and might, in certain cases, proceed and complete the canvass without a return.—Thomas v. Abbott, 105 Mich. 687.

§ 50. Canvass of the votes and the returns.

Recount and contest, see post § 57 et seq.
Recanvass after invalid recount, see post § 68.
Statement or certification of the results of the election, see post §§ 69-73.
Conclusiveness of the returns, see ante §§ 47, 48.
Effect of illegality to avoid entire election or district, see post § 88.
County canvass, see Pub. Acts 1917, No. 203, Chap. XVI.
District canvass for senators and representatives, see Pub. Acts 1917, No. 203, Chap. XVIII.
State canvassing board, see Const., Art. VI. § 20.
State canvass, see Pub. Acts 1917, No. 203, Chap. XIX.

¶ 148. A board of canvassers cannot dissolve its meeting or go out of office without completing its work; and it can be compelled by mandamus to proceed to canvass the votes.—Attorney General v. Iron County Board of Canvassers, 64 Mich. 607.

¶ 149. The common council of the city of Marquette is a board of canvassers within the meaning of Comp. L. 1897, § 3725, under the city charter which provides that on the Thursday following election day the common council shall meet at the recorder's office and determine who are elected.—Ward v. Culver, 144 Mich. 57.

§ 51. Votes necessary for choice.

In primary election, see ante § 24.
Casting off tie, see post § 52.
Majority or number requisite to adopt submitted proposal, see specific topic treating of the matter proposed, e. g., Constitutional Law, I; Counties § 2; Highways, VII; Intoxicating Liquors, III, A.

¶ 150. No person is elected at a popular election unless he has more votes for the office than any other person. A minority candidate can never be deemed elected, notwithstanding the person receiving the greatest number of votes is ineligible, or cannot be installed.—People ex rel. Crawford v. Molitor, 23 Mich. 341; People ex rel. Attorney General v. Van Cleve, 1 Mich. 362.

¶ 151. In the absence of any statutory provision expressly requiring more, a plurality of the votes cast will elect.—People ex rel. Conrad v. Stone, 78 Mich. 635.

¶ 152. In this state no one is elected who receives only the vote of a minority of the electors voting; no matter whether he who receives a majority of the votes is ineligible, or whether an elector votes more than once for a candidate.—Maynard v. Board of Canvassers of Kent County, 84 Mich. 228.

¶ 153. Under a law authorizing the election of two circuit court commissioners an election was held, but it was conducted in all respects as if one only was to be chosen; two persons were opposing candidates, and each elector voted for one of the two, but in no instance did a ballot contain more than one name for this office. It was held that only the one receiving the highest number of votes was chosen, and as to the other there was a failure to elect.—People ex rel. Rogers v. Kent County Canvassers, 11 Mich. 111.

§ 52. ——Casting off or deciding tie votes.

Conclusiveness of the lot, see post § 73.
Estoppel after lot to contest election in courts, see Officers, III.
Provisions of statute, see Pub. Acts 1917, No. 203, Chap. XVII.
Decision by legislature of tie vote, see Const. Art. XVI, § 4.

¶ 154. The provision of Comp. L. 1871, § 136, How St., § 188, for drawing lots for an office when the number of votes received by the candidates is equal cannot be construed as a regulation under the power granted to the legislature by the constitution (art. 4, § 37), to declare and fill vacancies; it applies where no vacancy exists, and the power given is subject to an express qualification, excluding its exercise where the constitution provides, as in art. 10, § 3, for filling vacancies.—Keeler v. Robertson, 27 Mich. 116.

¶ 155. Under Comp. L. 1871, § 137, How. St., § 188, providing that in case of a tie vote for the office of county clerk lots should be drawn before the sheriff, the deputy-sheriff may act in case of the sheriff's inability.—Evans v. Sutherland, 41 Mich. 177.

§ 53. Powers, functions and duties of board of canvassers.

Power to make recount, see post §§ 57-60.
Disability to correct errors as part of canvass, see post § 54.
Powers and functions of state canvassers, see post § 55.
Interest of member of canvassing board in result as affecting capacity of board to conduct recount, see post ¶ 192.

¶ 156. Canvassing boards, as such, may not exercise judicial functions.—Attorney General v. Board Sup'rs Genesee Co., 166 Mich. 61.

¶ 157. The duties of the county and district boards of canvassers are wholly ministerial, and consist in determining who are elected and in authenticating and preserving the evidence of such election.—People ex rel. Attorney General v. Van Cleve, 1 Mich. 362.

¶ 158. A county board of canvassers charged with the duty of canvassing the votes certified by the election officers at an election to determine the location of a county seat can make no inquiry beyond the returns of the local boards.—Attorney General v. Iron County Board of Canvassers, 64 Mich. 607.

¶ 159. When the board of county canvassers has completed its count, and has executed and delivered the returns, its legal power ends; and it cannot change or modify the original returns except in the performance of a mere clerical duty.—Belknap v. Board of Canvassers of Ionia County, 94 Mich. 516.

¶ 160. The duty of the city board of canvassers of election in Detroit is purely clerical—to foot up the returns of the boards of inspectors, and declare result and issue certificate accordingly; mandamus was therefore issued.—Coll v. City Board of Canvassers, 83 Mich. 367.

§ 54. ——Correction of errors and rejection of ballots.

Powers of board on recount and contest, see post § 65.
On report of recount commission, see post §§ 66, 71.
Avoidance of entire vote by irregularities, see post § 88.

¶ 161. Canvassing boards act ministerially and cannot go behind inspectors' returns to determine questions of fraud in the election. —McQuade v. Furgason, 91 Mich. 438.

¶ 162. Its power being ministerial and not judicial, the board of canvassers cannot on a recount throw out the votes of a ward or precinct for fraud alleged to have been committed at the election.—May v. Board of Canvassers of Wayne County, 94 Mich. 505.

¶ 163. The duties of a canvassing board are purely ministerial, and such board should issue a certificate of election to the person having the largest number of votes on the face of the returns; but where relator admits that he is not entitled to the certificate unless votes can be counted for him cumulatively, and that a less number of electors voted for him than for those whom the canvassing board declared elected, mandamus will not be granted to compel the board to reverse its action.—Maynard v. Board of Canvassers of Kent County, 84 Mich. 228.

§ 55. ——Of state board of canvassers.

Duty of succeeding board to make recanvass after canvass by predecessors, see post § 56.
Effect of informal return of vote on constitutional amendment, see post ¶¶ 205, 206.

¶ 164. Where there is no contest over the election of a circuit judge it is the ministerial duty of the state board of canvassers under Pub. Acts 1913, No. 320, to canvass the returns and issue to the officer elected a certificate of election.—Dingeman v. Board of State Canvassers, 198 Mich. 135.

§ 56. Recanvass of state returns.

Of primary vote, see ante § 24.
Conclusiveness of state canvass, see ante § 48.
Recount of state canvass, see Pub. Acts 1917, No. 203, Chap. XXI.

¶ 165. The state board of canvassers, after its predecessor has canvassed the vote for an office from the returns before it, and after the result of a recanvass made by a county board of canvassers under a mandamus from the supreme court has been reported to the secretary of state, is compellable by mandamus to recanvass the returns as they appear from the recanvass by the county board; the case being treated as though the returns had not been received until the new board had entered upon its duties.—Belknap v. Board of State Canvassers, 95 Mich. 155.

¶ 166. Where, after the board of state canvassers has canvassed the votes cast for and against the adoption of a constitutional amendment, and after the officers composing the board have gone out of office, it is made to appear that a palpable mistake was committed, due in part to the unauthorized rejection of the returns from one county, and in part to a fraudulent and criminal alteration of the returns from another county, thereby changing the result of the vote in the state, the succeeding board has authority to right the wrong thus committed by a recanvass of the vote, and may be required by mandamus to do so.—Rich v. Board of State Canvassers, 100 Mich. 453.

§ 57. Recount and contest.

Of primary vote, see ante § 24.
Rereading record of machines, see post § 58.
Petition and showing for recount, see post § 62.
Resolution or order for recount, see post § 63.
Notice of recount and time for and conduct of same, see post § 64.
Scope of recount and matters investigated, see post § 65.
Report of recounting officers, see post §§ 66, 71.
Powers and functions of canvassers as recount board, see also ante § 54.
Cessation of canvassers' functions on making canvass, see ante § 53.
Conclusiveness and effect of recount and certificate thereof, see post §§ 67, 68, 71, 72.

Legislative power to recount or conduct contest on members' election, see post § 59.
Council as judge of election of members, see post § 60.
Power of new or old council to judge of qualifications and election of members, see Municipal Corporations, XV.
Mandamus to compel recanvass or recount, see Mandamus.
Recount under statutes as incident of quo warranto, see Quo Warranto, IV.
Decision by legislature on tie or when state canvass is contested, see Const. Art. XVI, § 4.
Provisions as to reopening boxes and examining ballots, see Pub. Acts 1917, No. 203, Chap. X, § 24 et seq.
Provisions as to recount of returns by county, city, village, or township boards, see Pub. Acts 1917, No. 203, Chap. XX.

¶ 167. The proceedings for a recount of votes cast in an election are purely statutory, and the statute requirements must be observed.—Wheeler v. Coleman, 176 Mich. 285.

¶ 168. A candidate for a state office is not entitled to a recount under Pub. Acts 1897, No. 125, which provides that "any candidate voted for at any election at which state, county or district officers are voted for" may file a petition for a recount, the act being no broader in this regard than Pub. Acts 1887, No. 208, under which no recount was permitted in case of candidates for state office.—Pound v. Board of Canvassers of Wayne Co., 120 Mich. 181.

¶ 169. Laws 1887, Act No. 208 (How. St., § 234a), providing for a recount of ballots, on petition of an aggrieved candidate, does not apply to elections for circuit judges, inasmuch as the determination of the result of such elections is by law referred to the state board of canvassers; and, therefore, a county board which has recounted the ballots cast for circuit judge will be compelled by mandamus to canvass the returns as filed in the office of the county clerk, and to make return thereof to the state treasurer.—Vance v. Board of Canvassers of St. Clair County, 95 Mich. 462.

¶ 170. The legislature has exclusive jurisdiction of a recount contest on the election of a circuit judge.—Dingeman v. Board of State Canvassers, 198 Mich. 135.

¶ 171. A candidate whose election is shown by the face of the returns to the canvassing board is not estopped to question the authority of the board under Pub. Acts 1887, No. 208, to recount the votes in certain precincts upon the petition of his rival, because he petitioned for a like recount in some of the other precincts.—Hilton v. Common Council of Grand Rapids, 112 Mich. 500; Belknap v. Board of Canvassers of Ionia County, 94 Mich. 516.

§ 58. ——Of vote taken by machines.

¶ 172. The legal presumption, based upon the statutory provisions for returning the ballots to boxes by the inspectors and the sealing and custody of the boxes, that such ballot boxes had been preserved, after an election, in their integrity, does not warrant a presumption that voting machines, authorized to be used by Comp. L. 1897, §§ 3804-3823, remained unchanged after an election; since there is no similar law to insure such machines from change after an election.—Trumbull v. Board of Canvassers of City of Jackson, 140 Mich. 529.

¶ 173. The rereading of the totals of a voting machine is not provided for in Comp. L. 1897, § 3725, which provides for a recount of the votes by the board of canvassers in the event of fraudulent or illegal voting, and contestant's remedy, if any he had, in a city election in which such machines were used, was by quo warranto proceedings and not mandamus to compel the board of canvassers to make such recount.—Trumbull v. Board of Canvassers of City of Jackson, 140 Mich. 529.

§ 59. ——Of vote for congressmen or senators or state legislators.

¶ 174. Pub. Acts 1887, No. 208, providing for a recount does not apply to a candidate for the federal house of representatives, that house being the judge of the election and qualifications of its own members.—Belknap v. Board of Canvassers of Ionia County, 94 Mich. 516.

§ 60. ——Of vote for city aldermen, councilmen or other officers.

¶ 175. Laws 1887, Act No. 208 (How. St., § 234a), providing for recount of ballots in cases of fraud or mistake, does not apply where office sought is membership in a body that is made by law absolute judge of election and right to office of its own members; recount not compelled of votes for member of common council.—Naumann v. Board of City Canvassers of Detroit, 73 Mich. 252. Or for member of state senate.—Wheeler v. Board of Canvassers of Manistee County, 94 Mich. 448.

¶ 176. Laws 1887, Act No. 208 (How. St., § 234a), which provides for the correcting on petition of the aggrieved candidate, of frauds and mistakes in the canvass and returns made by inspectors of elections, does not cover village elections.—Johnson v. Board of Canvassers of Village of Casnovia, 101 Mich. 187.

¶ 177. Laws 1887, Act No. 293 (How. St., § 234b), providing for preservation of evidence of error or fraud in counting ballots, etc., does not apply to the election of officers in cities where the charter makes it the common council's duty to canvass the votes and gives it the exclusive right to determine the qualifications of its officers and the election of its members, and where it has discharged that duty; so held in regard to election of mayor who is also member of council.—Weston v. Kent Probate Judge, 69 Mich. 600.

¶ 178. Where the city charter contains no provision making either the board of city canvassers or the common council judges of the election or qualifications of aldermen, Laws 1887, Act No. 208, entitles a candidate for the office of alderman to a recount.—McKenzie v. Board of Canvassers of Port Huron, 70 Mich. 147.

¶ 179. Under Laws 1887, Act No. 208, it is the duty of the board of city canvassers on a proper petition being filed, and the other requisites being complied with, to grant a recount of the votes cast for alderman, there being no provision making the board or common council judges of the election and qualifications of aldermen; and the board of canvassers cannot refuse to do so on the ground that it is satisfied that the count made was correct, or because the applicant does not charge fraud or intentional error.—McKenzie v. Port Huron City Canvassers, 70 Mich. 147.

¶ 180. Pub. Acts 1887, No. 208, providing for recount of votes on a contest, does not apply to a contest over the office of alderman of the city of Grand Rapids, since the common council of that city is by the charter thereof made the judge of the election and qualification of its own members.—Hilton v. Common Council of Grand Rapids, 112 Mich. 500.

§ 61. Preservation of ballots and boxes as requisite of recount.

Sealing up of boxes after count, see ante § 45.

Presumption as to machines remaining as voted, see ante ¶ 172.

For purposes of quo warranto, see also Quo Warranto, IV.

¶ 181. A recount of votes can be had under Comp. L. 1897, § 3725 only in cases when the recount board can find from an inspection of the ballot box that the statutory requirements for the preservation of the ballots as cast have been observed, the test being, have the ballots been preserved as the law directs?—Keith v. Wendt, 144 Mich. 49.

¶ 182. Under Pub. Acts 1913, No. 327, evidence of the lack of statutory sealing of the ballot boxes is not conclusive against the right of the board of supervisors to recount the votes, as it was the intention of the legislature to abolish the test as to whether the ballots were preserved as the law directs and to substitute one of fact as to whether the ballots have been in fact preserved notwithstanding the failure to observe the legal requirements for preservation, so as to authorize a recount if the board is satisfied that the original ballots canvassed by the inspectors of election, and all of them, and no others, are in fact in the box.—Baldwin v. Board Sup'rs of Alger County, 189 Mich. 372.

¶ 183. A failure to cause the ballot-boxes to be brought before the board for a preliminary investigation is not fatal to a recount, where no suggestion has been made to the board that the ballot-boxes have been tampered with prior to the opening thereof and to the recount.—May v. Board of Canvassers of Wayne County, 94 Mich. 505.

¶ 184. Under How. St., § 234a, the purpose for which the board of canvassers has power to cause the ballot-boxes to be brought before it is not to ascertain whether a recount shall be made, but of ascertaining by a recount whether there was fraud or mistake in the original count.—May v. Board of Canvassers of Wayne County, 94 Mich. 505.

§ 62. Petition and showing for recount.

Resolution or order allowing recount, see post § 63.

Time for recount and conduct of it, see post § 64.

Scope and matters investigated, see post § 65.

Invalidity of recount had without petition and statutory deposit, see post ¶ 193.

¶ 185. Resort to the proceedings for a recount under How. St., §§ 234b-234i, should be speedy, and one who delays until December 26 before petitioning for a recount of ballots cast November 6 is guilty of inexcusable laches.—Andrews v. Otsego Probate Judge, 74 Mich. 278.

¶ 186. An application for recount, under How. St., § 234a, of votes cast at an election for a state office is too late if not filed with the board of county canvassers until the last day on which, under section 217, the state board can canvass the returns; the remedy in such case being with the legislature, under Const., art. 8, § 5, which empowers the legislature in joint session to decide when the determination of the state board is contested.—Newton v. Board of Canvassers of Wayne County, 94 Mich. 455.

¶ 187. Under Pub. Acts 1887, Act No. 208 (How. St., § 234a), a candidate desiring a recount of the votes cast at an election must apply therefor on or before the last day of the regular session of the board of canvassers, and by merely filing a protest on the last day, and thereby securing an adjournment, he cannot extend the time within which to file his petition.—Drennan v. Common Council of Wyandotte, 106 Mich. 117.

¶ 188. A petition to the judge of probate by a candidate desiring a recount, under How. St., §§ 234b-234i, must show who has been decided by the board of canvassers to be elected to the office, in order that notice of the contest may be given to him.—Andrews v. Otsego Probate Judge, 74 Mich. 278.

¶ 189. A petition for the recount of votes in a mayoralty election case is sufficient, although it does not assert upon the knowledge of the relator any errors in the count of the votes where it does aver that relator received 1001 votes and his opponent received 1008, because slight changes in one or all of the wards specified if in his favor would be sufficient to change the result as announced.—Ward v. Culver, 144 Mich. 57.

§ 63. Resolution or order for recount.

¶ 190. A resolution by the board authorizing a recount of all the ballot-boxes must be construed as limited to the ballot-boxes in the precincts for which the petition asks a recount; and by proceeding under such resolution the petitioner is not estopped from denying the board's authority to recount the votes cast in a precinct not named in his petition.—May v. Board of Canvassers of Wayne County, 94 Mich. 505.

§ 64. Notice, time and conduct of recount.

Time for application for recount, see ante § 62.

Showing in petition as to person to be notified, see ante ¶ 188.

¶ 191. Under Comp. L. 1897, §§ 3671, 3672, governing election recounts, requiring that 12 hours' notice be given whereupon the board shall proceed to open the ballot-boxes and make the recount, a candidate does not lose his right to have a recount by the fact that the board after receiving the petition adjourned for 12 days, and a recount made after such adjournment is valid where notice was given to the other party who was present with counsel at the recount.—Attorney General ex rel. Garthe v. Campbell, 130 Mich. 283.

¶ 192. The fact that a party interested in a recount of votes for the office of supervisor is a member of the canvassing board does not render it necessary that the recount should be taken before the inspectors of election.—Miner v. Beurmann, 165 Mich. 672.

¶ 193. Where election inspectors allow a recount of votes cast in an election for township treasurer, without the contestant filing a written petition therefor, and making a deposit as provided by Comp. Laws 1897, § 3725, How., 2nd Ed., § 322, and a recount is had in the absence of the opposing candidate, the contestor and his brother handling the ballots and advising as to them, such proceeding is illegal.—Wheeler v. Coleman, 176 Mich. 285.

¶ 194. Where a recount in the absence of the contestee of votes cast in an election is illegal for a failure to comply with statutory requirements, the fact that the contestee appeared the same afternoon and participated in a second recount without protest, is of no effect.—Wheeler v. Coleman, 176 Mich. 285.

§ 65. Scope of recount and matters investigated.

Order as fixing which boxes to be reopened, see ante ¶ 190.

Rereading machine records, see ante § 58.

Reopening ballot-boxes and recounting ballots, see ante § 61.

Estoppel to question result after failing to challenge at polls, see post ¶ 262.

¶ 195. Pub. Acts 1913, No. 327, is intended to give a board of supervisors greater power in recounting votes canvassed by the board than is conferred by previous statutes, inasmuch as the board is given the right to subpoena witnesses, and take all necessary proceedings to insure a correct count of votes.—Baldwin v. Board Sup'rs of Alger County, 189 Mich. 372.

¶ 196. No judicial powers are given to the board of supervisors by Pub. Acts 1913, No. 327, providing for a recount of votes, but the power to determine facts finally.—Baldwin v. Board Sup'rs of Alger County, 189 Mich. 372.

¶ 197. A recount before a board of canvassers under 1 Comp. Laws 1897, § 3725, is properly limited to the ballot box named in the petition for recount.—Miner v. Beurmann, 165 Mich. 672.

§ 66. Recount commission and report by it.

Validity of certificate by recount board of which contestant was passive member, see post ¶ 207.

Discretion of examiners in contest as involving judicial power, see Constitutional Law § 35.

¶ 198. A statement that the persons selected are "citizens" of the county does not show that they are electors, within How. St., § 234g, which requires that the board of examiners in a contested election shall consist of three persons who are electors of the county.—Andrews v. Otsego Probate Judge, 74 Mich. 278.

¶ 199. Pub. Acts 1897, No. 267, providing that the board of canvassers on receiving the report of a recount committee "shall accept the same as correct, anything in the previous declaration, certificate or returns to the contrary notwithstanding" deprives the board of any duty to correct any errors made by the committee but not shown in the report; and accordingly mandamus to compel issuance of a certificate based on such errors will be denied. The case of Christopherson v. Common Council of Manistee, 117 Mich. 125, in so far as it appears to sanction the duty or power to correct such errors, is not to be followed as a precedent, because the point was not raised.—Atwood v. Mayor, etc., of Sault Ste. Marie, 141 Mich. 295.

¶ 200. Under Comp. L. 1897, § 3725, providing that the board of canvassers upon receiving the report of the committee to recount votes shall accept the same as correct, the common council acting as a board of canvassers must adopt the majority report and cannot adopt a minority report of the committee.—Ward v. Culver, 144 Mich. 71.

§ 67. Conclusiveness of recount.

Of precinct and state canvass and returns, see ante §§ 47, 48.
Of the certificate issued on the returns or on the recount, see post § 72.
Recanvass after invalid recount, see post § 68.

¶ 201. Under Laws of 1887, Act No. 293 (How. St., §§ 234b-2341), a recount by the board of examiners is not conclusive evidence of the ballots cast at the election; nor does the act prevent a party in a subsequent contest from showing that ballots were illegally cast, or that the boxes had been tampered with since the result was officially declared.—Andrews v. Otsego Probate Judge, 74 Mich. 278.

§ 68. Recanvass after invalid or defective recount.

¶ 202. Where the board of canvassers has recounted the votes of a precinct not included in the petition, its action is so far unauthorized and void and it will be compelled to make a recanvass.—May v. Board of Canvassers of Wayne County, 94 Mich. 505.

§ 69. Statements or reports and certification of results.

Necessity of legal count as basis for certificate, see ante ¶ 136.
Of vote on constitutional amendments, see post § 70.
Of result of recount, see post § 71.
Conclusiveness and effect of the certificate, see post § 72.
Conclusiveness of lot casting off tie, see post § 73.
Conclusiveness and finality of returns by inspectors, see ante § 47.
Conclusiveness of state canvass, see ante § 48.
Ministerial nature of duties and functions, see ante § 53.
Duty to issue certificate where no contest was made, see ante ¶ 164.
Duty to issue certificate where illegal voting is claimed, see also ante ¶ 144.

¶ 203. How. St., § 130, providing for the consolidation of reports of elections, is superseded by Pub. Acts 1891, No. 190, so far as it relates to the manner of the return by the inspectors of elections of the result of an election to the federal house of representatives.—Belknap v. Board of State Canvassers, 95 Mich. 155.

¶ 204. The county board of canvassers in canvassing the returns from a township, that is divided into two or more election districts, should, in congressional elections, canvass the returns from such districts as certified by the inspectors of election thereof; since Laws 1891, Act No. 190, makes no provision for the consolidation of the returns of the district inspectors of election where a township is so divided.—Belknap v. Board of State Canvassers, 95 Mich. 155.

¶ 204a. A certificate of election may be ordered issued by the new body (common council) where the old one has become functus officii.—Christopherson v. Common Council of Manistee, 117 Mich. 125.

§ 70. ——Of vote on amendments to constitution.

¶ 205. Failure to comply with the provision of How. St., § 187, requiring the number of votes cast for and against the adoption of a constitutional amendment to be written out in words at length in stating the result of the canvass (numerals being used instead), does not justify the board of state canvassers in excluding the returns from a county.—Rich v. Board of State Canvassers, 100 Mich. 453.

¶ 206. How. St., § 205, which provides that, in case no certified copy of the statement of the votes cast for and against the adoption of a constitutional amendment shall have been received from any county clerk by the secretary of state, governor, or state treasurer, within the time limited therefor, such secretary shall forthwith send a special messenger to obtain such statement, evidences the intention of the legislature that the error or omission of duty by the clerk should not result in disfranchising the voters of any county, and, if the instrument returned by the clerk is not conceived to be a sufficient return, it is the duty of the board of state canvassers to dispatch a messenger to obtain a correct copy of the canvass.—Rich v. Board of State Canvassers, 100 Mich. 453.

§ 71. ——Of result of recount.

Duty to issue certificate on report regardless of extraneous errors in recount, see ante ¶ 199.
Duty to issue certificate on strength of majority report of recount officers, see ante ¶ 200.
Conclusiveness of certificate based on recount, see post § 72, ¶ 209.

¶ 207. Respondent, running for the office of supervisor, demanded a recount before the board of canvassers of which he was a member. The recount, resulting in his favor, was made by a majority of the board, respondent taking no part therein. He did, however, sign the final certificate along with the majority of the board. Held, the recount was valid and the decision of the board in respondent's favor final, under 1 Comp. Laws 1897, § 3725.—Miner v. Beurmann, 165 Mich. 672.

§ 72. ——Presumptions, conclusiveness and effect.

Of statements and returns of primary vote, see ante § 24.
Of the returns of the election, see ante §§ 47, 48.
Of the recount, see ante § 67.
Of certifications of nominations, see ante § 28.
Certificate issued to person receiving less than majority, see also ante ¶ 163.
Duty of supervisors to admit properly certified member elect, power to judge of qualifications and election, see also Counties § 49.

¶ 208. The evidence contained in the ballots is the foundation of the statements to be prepared both by the inspectors and by the county canvassers; and also of the certificates of election issued by the latter. A party may go behind the canvass and certificate to the ballots to show the number of votes cast for him.—People ex rel. Attorney General v. Tisdale, 1 D. 59; People ex rel. Attorney General v. Van Cleve, 1 Mich. 362; People ex rel. Lake v. Higgins, 3 Mich. 233.

¶ 209. The public declaration of the count of ballots by the board of canvassers is an official act, and will prevail over any statement or certificate founded upon a subsequent and unlawful recounting.—Keeler v. Robertson, 27 Mich. 116.

¶ 210. The statement required by law to be made out by the canvassers, showing the votes given for the respective offices, is prima facie evidence only of the facts stated in it. The county canvass may be corrected by the township canvasses, and these by the ballots themselves.—People ex rel. Attorney General v. Van Cleve, 1 Mich. 362.

¶ 211. The determination by the board of county canvassers as to the persons elected is only prima facie evidence of election.—People ex rel. Attorney General v. Van Cleve, 1 Mich. 362.

¶ 212. When, in proceedings in the nature of quo warranto, the right of the respondent is referred by a verdict entirely to a county canvass, and the verdict finds facts which invalidate the returns on which the canvass was founded, the canvass is thereby prevented from being conclusive.—Keeler v. Robertson, 27 Mich. 116.

¶ 213. The board of education of Grand Rapids cannot go behind the canvassers' statements of election of one of its members.—People ex rel. Godwin v. Grand Rapids Board of Education, 38 Mich. 95.

§ 73. ——Conclusiveness of tie vote cast off by lot.

¶ 214. A trial by lot, under C. L. 1871, § 136 (see How. St., § 188), for an office for which the candidates have received an equal number of votes, does not preclude the attorney general from inquiring, at the relation of the losing party, into the legality of the votes counted by the board of canvassers for the respondent.—Keeler v. Robertson, 27 Mich. 116.

¶ 215. The certificate granted under the statute providing for drawing lots for an office in case the candidates have an equal number of votes is no more conclusive than a regular certificate of election, and leaves the public at liberty to inquire into the anterior proceedings.—Keeler v. Robertson, 27 Mich. 116.

VII. IRREGULARITIES IN VOTING AND CONDUCT OF ELECTION.

§ 74. In general.

Sufficiency of notice of election, see ante §§ 3-6.
Effect of want of notice, see also ante ¶ 8.
Failure to give notice where notice is implied by law, see also ante § 6.
Appointment of candidate as election inspector, see also ante ¶ 36.
Failure to register voters, see ante ¶ 55.
In place or time of election, see post § 75.
In the ballots or markings, see post §§ 76-83.
In the instructions to voters, see post § 84.
In deposit of the ballot or matters thereafter, see post §§ 85-87.
Avoidance of entire vote or single ballots only, see post § 88.
Cure or validation of the election or ballots or waiver of objections, see post §§ 89, 90.
Effect of majority for ineligible person, see ante ¶ 152.
Disability of canvassers to correct errors in making canvass, see ante § 54.
Balance or neutralizing effect of errors as making question immaterial on quo warranto, see Quo Warranto, IV.

¶ 216. An election in favor of a loan for the erection of county buildings is not invalid for corruption because of the use of posters urging working men to vote therefor on the ground that it would furnish them employment.—Wayne County Sup'rs v. Wayne Circuit Judges, 106 Mich. 166.

§ 75. In place of election or adjournment.

¶ 217. The adjournment of an election in good faith from one polling-place to another is at most an irregularity, unless it prevents persons from voting or prejudices the rights of candidates; and such an irregularity will not sustain proceeding in the nature of quo warranto against the successful candidate, in the absence of any showing that if the change had not been made the result would have been different.—Farrington v. Turner, 53 Mich. 27.

§ 76. Irregularity or informality in ballot in general.

¶ 218. A voter has a right to presume that officers have done their duty in placing tickets upon election ballots, and therefore irregularities do not vitiate his vote.—Bragdon v. Navarre, 102 Mich. 259.

¶ 219. A ticket is not to be rejected from the count because the candidate voted for was not the nominee of any party, and because such ticket was not properly certified and so not entitled to a place upon the official ballot. A voter is not required to determine at his peril the regularity of a ticket which he finds upon such ballot.—Bragdon v. Navarre, 102 Mich. 259.

¶ 220. The general law prohibiting the printing of the name of a candidate on the ballots more than once, is in force under section 4, Act No. 272, Pub. Acts 1907, notwithstanding the provision in a different section of such act that the names of the candidates nominated shall be printed upon the official ballots of the various political parties.—Helme v. Board Election Com'rs Lenawee County, 149 Mich. 390.

¶ 221. Act 281, P. A. 1909, § 41, providing that votes shall not be counted which are cast for a candidate on the ballots of one political party when such candidate is enrolled as a member of another party, is expressly limited to acts of the board of election inspectors in the counting of votes at the primary election.—DeFoe v. Board Election Com'rs Bay City, 174 Mich. 472.

§ 77. ——Misnomer and misspelling.

¶ 222. Ballots that give initials only for the candidate's Christian name cannot be counted as if giving the full name.—People ex rel. Attorney General v. Tisdale, 1 D. 59; People ex rel. Lake v. Higgins, 3 Mich. 233; People ex rel. Williams v. Cicott, 16 Mich. 283.

¶ 223. Where the designation of an individual upon a ballot is by an abbreviation sanctioned by common usage and universally understood—as Geo. for George, Jas. for James, or Thos. for Thomas—the ballot may be counted for the person for whom it was evidently designed.—People ex rel. Attorney General v. Tisdale, 1 D. 59.

¶ 224. A slight error in the spelling of a name should not prevent the vote from being counted for the person for whom it was evidently intended.—People ex rel. Attorney General v. Tisdale, 1 D. 59.

¶ 225. An error in spelling the name does not prevent the ballot being counted for the person for whom it was designed—the rule of idem sonans applying.—People ex rel. Finnegan v. Mayworm, 5 Mich. 146.

¶ 226. Where a portion only of the candidate's surname is given, the ballot cannot be counted unless such portion is idem sonans with the whole.—People v. Cicott, 16 Mich. 283.

¶ 227. Ballots for Michael Finnegan and Michael Finegan should be counted for the same person.—People ex rel. Finnegan v. Mayworm, 5 Mich. 146.

¶ 228. A ballot for Samuel Toley cannot be counted for Samuel Tobey.—People ex rel. Tobey v. McNeal, 63 Mich. 294.

¶ 229. Where John W. Jochim was a candidate for election in a district in which there was no other John Jochim, ballots cast for John Jochim were presumptively intended for John W. Jochim, and should have been counted for him.—Jochim v. Kennedy, 37 Mich. 67.

¶ 230. Christian Ott was a candidate for township supervisor and through error his name was printed on the ballots as O. H. Christian, and 22 votes were cast before the error was discovered. In an action to try title to the office, held that the votes cast for O. H. Christian, though there was no person by that name in the township, should not be counted for Christian Ott, even though it appeared that the ballots had not been filed with the township clerk for inspection two days before election as required by Comp. L. 1897, § 3660.—Ott v. Brissette, 137 Mich. 717.

§ 78. Indorsement and folding of ballots irregularly.

¶ 231. The statute (Act No. 55, Pub. Acts 1905, § 22) requiring election inspectors to initial ballots and making ballots not correctly initialed void, is in accordance with the Constitution.—People ex rel. Anderson v. Rinehart, 161 Mich. 585.

¶ 232. An election inspector failed to initial the ballots on the lower left-hand corner as required by Act No. 55, Pub. Acts 1905, § 22, but initialed instead the perforated corners and tore off such perforated corners after he received the ballots from the electors and before depositing them in the box. Held, the ballots were void.—People ex rel. Anderson v. Rinehart, 161 Mich. 585.

¶ 233. Where the indorsements of the initials of an inspector of election were made upon such ballots in all respects as required by law, except that instead of being in the upper left-hand corner as required by Pub. Acts 1891, Act No. 190, § 22, they were in the lower right-hand corner; and where the ballots when folded could not be told from folded ballots with the initials in the upper left-hand corner; and where no wrong was intended by the inspectors, and the electors who were all qualified voters, voted them in good faith without objection or challenge, they should be counted.—Horning v. Board of Canvassers of Saginaw County, 119 Mich. 51.

¶ 234. If two or more ballots are so folded together as to present the appearance of a single ballot, both must be destroyed, thus depriving the person casting them of any vote, whether so folded by mistake or intentionally.—Harbaugh v. People ex rel. Cicott, 33 Mich. 241.

§ 79. Irregular marking of ballots.

See also ante ¶ 129.

Marks coupled with erasures, writing, pasting, etc., see post § 80.

Distinguishing marks and their effect, see post, VIII.

Peculiar cross marks or additions to marks as distinctive, see post § 92.

¶ 235. A ballot is not spoiled because the voter has indicated in more than one authorized way for whom he desires to vote. —Sawyer v. Hart, 194 Mich. 399.

¶ 236. An elector casting at the polls a ballot with a single ticket upon it containing the name of but one candidate for each office and without making any cross in the circle at the head of the ballot legally votes the ticket.—Sawyer v. Hart, 194 Mich. 399.

¶ 237. In an election contest ballots are properly counted where one bears a cross in blue pencil apparently retraced and in the other the cross looks as if it were made with a blue pencil with a double point or by both a down and an up stroke for each line in the cross.—People ex rel. DeJonge v. Kamps, 129 Mich. 217.

¶ 238. Where the official ballot used at a village election in 1894 contains but one name for each office, the failure of electors to stamp their ballots in exact compliance with the statute, will not authorize the rejection of the ballots.—Johnson v. Board of Canvassers of Village of Casnovia, 101 Mich. 187.

§ 80. ——Erasure, scratching, writing, or pasting.

¶ 239. Under Pub. Acts 1901, Act No. 214, § 26, a ballot with a cross placed under the party emblem or name, and from which the name of a candidate was erased and the name of the candidate on the opposing ticket written in, could not be counted for such opposing candidate.—People ex rel. Anderson v. Byers, 135 Mich. 45.

¶ 240. Under Laws 1893, No. 202, § 26, How., 2nd Ed., § 236, the erasure of a candidate's name is to be recognized as an appropriate manner of expressing the voter's intent not to vote for such candidate, and where the elector, casting a ballot containing but one ticket, desires to vote for some and not for all of the candidates whose names appear thereon he may effectually and lawfully so indicate by erasing or striking off the name of any candidate for whom he does not desire or intend to vote.—Sawyer v. Hart, 194 Mich. 399.

¶ 241. When a slip is placed on a ballot so that it contains two names for an office when but one is to be voted for, the ballot cannot be counted for either.—People ex rel. Williams v. Cicott, 16 Mich. 283.

¶ 242. Where, on a ballot, a slip is pasted over a name so as to partially obliterate it, the slip should be counted.—People ex rel. Williams v. Cicott, 16 Mich. 283; People ex rel. Keeler v. Robertson, 27 Mich. 116.

§ 81. Voting in wrong district or repeating.

¶ 243. One who has first by mistake voted in the wrong precinct, and upon discovering his mistake has requested and procured the inspectors to withdraw and cancel a ballot such as he asserted he had voted, has no right afterwards to vote again in his proper precinct, and his second ballot is illegal.—Harbaugh v. People ex rel. Cicott, 33 Mich. 241.

§ 82. Mistakes and misdoing of officers.

Placing ballot in wrong box, see post § 85.

¶ 244. Irregularities on the part of election officers do not of necessity defeat the election, though they may require it to be subjected to severe scrutiny.—People ex rel. Dickinson v. Sackett, 14 Mich. 320.

¶ 245. Electors are not to be deprived of the result of their votes by the mere mistakes of election officers which do not appear to have affected the result. But, on the other hand, where fraud appears upon the part of the inspectors, the voter must sometimes be deprived of his vote; and this must always be the case where mandatory provisions of the election law are disregarded, if the result would thereby be changed.—Attorney General v. Stillson, 108 Mich. 419.

¶ 246. The failure of the clerk of the board of election inspectors properly to place the numbers of ballots opposite the names of the voters in the poll book as required by Act No. 281, § 35, Public Acts of 1909, does not invalidate the ballots cast by said voters.—Abbott v. Board Canvassers Montcalm Co., 172 Mich. 416.

§ 83. ——Improper assistance or meddling.

¶ 247. In quo warranto proceedings to try title to a county office, it appeared that, outside of one township, the relator received a plurality of the votes cast; that, including the vote of said township, as canvassed, respondent had a plurality of 33; that, of the voters in said township who voted at said election, 150 were Hollanders, who were able to converse in their own language; that, before the polls were opened, the inspectors of election appointed a Hollander, who was opposed to the election of relator, to act as interpreter, and he was sworn to perform that duty; that he was thereupon permitted to be and remain, throughout the day, within the railing of the polling place, and to converse freely, in his own language, with said electors, after they had received their official ballots, and before depositing or marking the same, although none of them had requested an interpreter, and the inspectors had not called upon him to act as such. Held, that the vote of the township should be thrown out.—Attorney-General v. Stillson, 108 Mich. 419.

¶ 248. The vote of a township should be excluded where it appears that a person was appointed "instructor" and permitted to distribute ballots to the voters in the polling place and to instruct them how to vote, there being no provision in the election law for any such official, though the election officers acted in good faith and there is no showing that voters were influenced in any way.—Attorney General ex rel. McCall v. Kirby, 120 Mich. 592.

¶ 249. Under Laws 1891, Act No. 190, an inspector of elections cannot lawfully assist in marking a ballot for an elector who claims to be unable to read English, until such elector shall have made oath to the fact; and the ballots cast by assisted voters not so sworn cannot be counted.—Attorney-General v. May, 99 Mich. 538.

¶ 250. Deputy United States marshals are not authorized under the federal law (Rev. St. U. S. §§ 2017, 2019, 2021, 2022) to mark ballots, or see them marked, for the purpose of seeing that the election of a member of congress is fairly and properly conducted; whatever might be the authority of United States supervisors of elections thereunder.—Attorney-General v. May, 99 Mich. 538.

§ 84. Improper printed instructions.

¶ 251. The posting of notices in the nature of instructions to voters, which conform to those provided for by the election law of 1891, instead of 1893, under which latter law the election is to be held, are irregularities, and will not invalidate the election; it appearing that in making and acting under such appointments the council and members of the board of election inspectors acted in good faith.—People v. Avery, 102 Mich. 572.

§ 85. Deposit of ballot in wrong box.

¶ 252. An elector is not to be deprived of his vote, either by the mistake or fraud of the inspector in depositing it in the wrong box, if the intention of the voter can be ascertained with reasonable certainty.—People ex rel. Hayes v. Bates, 11 Mich. 362.

¶ 253. Ballots should not be rejected because of being put in the wrong box by the honest mistake of the voters themselves.—People ex rel. Hayes v. Bates, 11 Mich. 362.

¶ 254. Where a city and state election were both held at the same time, under the charge of the same inspectors, and seven ballots for city officers were found at the closing of the poll in the state box, and the circumstances of the case made it reasonably certain that these ballots were in good faith put in by electors who did not put in other ballots for city officers at the same election, it was held that they were properly counted by the inspectors.—People ex rel. Hayes v. Bates, 11 Mich. 362.

§ 86. Tampering with or changing ballots cast.

¶ 255. Inspectors of election have no authority, on the assertion of one who claims to have voted by mistake in the wrong precinct, to withdraw from the ballot-box and destroy a ballot which he identifies as the one, or similar to the one, which he voted.—Harbaugh v. People ex rel. Cicott, 33 Mich. 241.

§ 87. Improper care and custody of ballots.

Allowing ballot to be withdrawn after deposit, see ante ¶ 255.

¶ 256. The failure of the inspectors to keep the ballots in the manner pointed out by the statute will not affect the rights of persons for whom they were cast; the statute is directory merely.—People ex rel. Lake v. Higgins, 3 Mich. 233.

¶ 257. The ordinary presumption that a public officer has performed his duty leads to the conclusion that ballots found in the money box were deposited there by the electors.—People ex rel. Hayes v. Bates, 11 Mich. 362, 368.

§ 88. Avoidance of entire vote or election.

Election for one where two should have been chosen, see ante ¶ 153.

Effect of failure of county board to return vote on constitutional amendment, see also ante ¶ 206.

Apportionment of excessive votes, see also ante § 44.

Improper use of voting machine in primary, see ante ¶ 74.

¶ 258. Illegal votes do not avoid an election unless it is shown that they affect the result.—People v. Cicott, 16 Mich. 283.

¶ 259. The entire vote of an election district must be rejected if it appears that ballots of unregistered persons and ballots shown after being marked were put into the ballot-box, and that third persons were allowed to enter the polling booths with the electors.—Attorney-General v. McQuade, 94 Mich. 439.

¶ 260. Relator and respondent were opposing candidates for the office of justice of the peace at the spring election of 1892 in the township of Grand Rapids. The township is divided into two election precincts, in one of which the Michigan Soldiers' Home is situated. The face of the returns showed a majority of three for the respondent, but 82 inmates of the home, who were not legal voters in the township, voted at the election, and it was impossible to ascertain for which candidate they voted. Held, that the vote of the precinct must be excluded.—People v. Hanna, 98 Mich. 515.

§ 89. Cure or validation of irregularities.

Cure of illegal recount by appearance at later recount, see also ante ¶ 194.

Equalizing or neutralizing effect of invalid ballots as rendering error harmless, see also Harmless Error.

Neutralized or balanced errors and irregularities as eliminating questions on quo warranto, see Quo Warranto, IV.

¶ 261. A special election for probate judge, invalid as not called by the proper authorities, is not validated by the fact that the people voted for the several candidates put in nomination.—People v. Palmer, 91 Mich. 283.

§ 90. Estoppel or waiver of question.

Admission of question as to votes as affecting prima facie right to certificates, see ante § 163.

Estoppel or disability to question right to office in general, see Officers, III.

¶ 262. The failure of a candidate for office to be present and to challenge the voters personally will not estop him from attacking his opponent's title on the ground that illegal votes were cast, contestant having sent an inspector to challenge any disqualified persons.—People v. Hanna, 98 Mich. 515.

VIII. DISTINGUISHING MARKS ON BALLOTS.

Sufficiency of marks to denote choice, see ante §§ 40-42.

§ 91. In general.

Irregular markings not distinctive in character, see ante §§ 79, 80.

Marks regarded as distinctive, see post § 92.

¶ 263. Election ballots are not invalidated by distinguishing marks fraudulently placed upon them after they have been deposited in the ballot box.—Attorney-General v. Howcroft, 107 Mich. 85.

¶ 264. The provision in Pub. Acts 1891, No. 190, § 36, that in the canvass of votes any ballot which shall bear any distinguishing mark shall be void, and shall not be counted, applies to a distinctive mark made by the voter, and an unauthorized vignette printed by the election commissioners on all the ballots does not invalidate them.—Lindstrom v. Board of Canvassers of Manistee County, 94 Mich. 467.

¶ 265. Where the ballots furnished by the election commissioners as provided by Pub. Acts 1891, No. 190, bore an unauthorized vignette, a voter who voted such a ballot was not disfranchised because of such "distinguishing mark," and a candidate who received a plurality of the votes cast, and who was not a party to the placing of such vignette upon the ballots, was not defeated in consequence thereof.—Lindstrom v. Board of Canvassers of Manistee County, 94 Mich. 467.

§ 92. What constitute distinguishing marks.

See also ante ¶ 129.

¶ 266. The rule that any mark on a ballot not necessary and appropriate to express the voter's intention shall be regarded as a "distinguishing mark" and the ballot rejected is too rigid in view of a well settled practical construction of the statute otherwise (Laws 1891, Act No. 190); and marks needlessly made to indicate that candidates running on two tickets were voted for, both tickets having the same candidates, were not to be regarded as distinguishing.—Attorney General v. Glaser, 102 Mich. 405 rev'g on rehearing 102 Mich. 396.

¶ 267. A ballot with the name of a candidate on the ticket voted erased and the bare surname of the opposing candidate written in is not thus distinguished, and is valid.—Attorney General v. Glaser, 102 Mich. 405, rev'g on rehearing 102 Mich. 396.

¶ 268. Marks like commas under another ticket than that marked with a cross at the head are distinguishing.—Attorney General v. Glaser, 102 Mich. 405, rev'g on rehearing 102 Mich. 396.

¶ 269. Half circling a cross on one ticket and writing a figure 9 on another ticket constitute distinguishing marks.—Attorney General v. Glaser, 102 Mich. 405, rev'g on rehearing 102 Mich. 396.

¶ 270. Using more than a single cross under one heading of the ballot is a distinguishing mark.—Attorney General v. Glaser, 102 Mich. 405, rev'g on rehearing 102 Mich. 396.

¶ 271. Needlessly erasing the name of a candidate and marking a cross opposite the name of his opponent on the other ticket is not a distinguishing mark.—Attorney General v. Glaser, 102 Mich. 405, rev'g on rehearing 102 Mich. 396.

¶ 272. Marking the head of the ticket, partly erasing one of the names thereon, and writing in another name in pencil indicates a vote for the name written in, and is not a distinguishing mark.—Attorney General v. Glaser, 102 Mich. 405, rev'g on rehearing 102 Mich. 396.

¶ 273. Imperfect cross marks in the circle at the head of the ticket, whose imperfection consists apparently in an attempt to make a more distinct mark, or with a pencil having a split or broken point, or by making the strokes with an up and down movement of the pencil, should not be rejected for that reason if there is nothing distinctive about the marks.—People ex rel. DeJonge v. Kamps, 129 Mich. 217.

IX. REVIEW AND SUPERVISION BY COURTS.

§ 93. In general.

[Note. Generally speaking the remedies of mandamus and quo warranto and that by injunction have nothing peculiar to elections in them, even though resorted to for relief in election cases. Topics treating of those remedies should be consulted. The right to and the remedies for trial of rights in office are also treated in Officers, III.]

Mandamus to compel official action in preparing ballot or counting vote or certifying result, see Mandamus.

Nonjudicial contest or review of vote, see ante, VI.

Finality of state canvass, see ante § 48.

Trial of title to office, see Officers, III; Quo Warranto.

Power to judge of qualifications and election to office, see Officers, III.

When mandamus and when quo warranto is proper remedy, see Mandamus, I, III; Quo Warranto, I.

Judicial and jury questions and evidence on quo warranto, see Quo Warranto, IV.

Certiorari or quo warranto to review contest, see Certiorari § 7.

Certiorari to review official recounts, see Certiorari § 17, ¶ 59a.

Service and time to make return to certiorari to review official recount, see Certiorari § 33.

Finality of canvass of votes on proposal to change county seat, judicial review, see Counties § 17.

Disability of courts to judge of election and qualification of officers in legislative body, see Constitutional Law § 42.

Nonjudicial nature of canvassing boards' functions, see ante § 53.

Ballots as best evidence, see Evidence, IV.

Incompetency of parol evidence to explain ballot, see Evidence, V.

Inadmissibility of opinions or conclusions as to how elector voted, see Evidence, VI.

§ 94. Internal affairs of party.

Political convention as judge of qualifications of members, see ante § 26.

Rights of factions to party name or emblems on ballots, see ante § 35.

Inquiry into regularity of factions to assign place on ballot, see ante ¶ 105.

Mandamus to control certification of nominee by convention, see also ante ¶¶ 84, 85.

Rule of judicial noninterference in internal affairs of societies, see Associations; Religious Societies.

¶ 274. In the absence of controlling legislation, the composition of a political committee according to the custom and usage of the party, with the sanction of the conventions of the party will not be disturbed by the courts.—Potter v. Deuel, 149 Mich. 393.

¶ 275. It is not the province of the courts to determine upon technical grounds which portion of a convention represents the political party, when there is a split in the convention and a considerable faction leaves the meeting and nominates other candidates.—Stephenson v. Boards of Election Commissioners, 118 Mich. 396.

X. MISFEASANCE AND MALFEASANCE ABOUT ELECTION OR VOTING.

§ 95. In general; liability for.

Effect of official mistake or misdoing on election, see ante §§ 82, 83.

Effect of appeals to personal motive as corruption, see also ante ¶ 216.

Offenses against election laws, see Crimes § 67; Indictment.

Actionable misfeasance or malfeasance of officers generally, see Officers, VI.

Offenses against Corrupt Practices Act, see Crimes § 67.

Police power to regulate campaign contributions, see Constitutional Law § 100.

Prohibition of campaign contributions as invasion of right of freedom of speech and of the press, see Constitutional Law § 186.

Validity of law regulating campaign contributions, see Constitutional Law § 254, ¶ 1094.

Evidence of conspiracy to deprive of office by miscounting vote, see Conspiracy ¶ 21.

Offenses under Michigan Election Law, see Pub. Acts 1917, No. 203, chap. XXV.

Corrupt practices law, see Comp. L. 1915, § 3828 et seq.

¶ 276. Inspectors of election act judicially in determining whether a person offering to vote has the requisite qualifications as to color or descent to entitle him to vote as a "white male citizen," under the constitution; and they are not liable to an action for improperly refusing a vote because the person offering it was partly of African descent.—Gordon v. Farrar, 2 D. 411.

Liability of election officers to candidate for office for negligence depriving him of rights in election laws, see note 7 N. C. C. A. 384-387.

XI. PRIVILEGES OF ELECTORS AND SECRECY OF BALLOT.

§ 96. In general.

Effect of officer's meddling on validity of the vote, see ante § 83.

Use of machine as denying constitutional right to see vote cast, see ante ¶ 119.

Validity of law as impairing secrecy of ballot, see Constitutional Law, XII.

Privilege of electors against service of civil process on election day, see Pub. Acts 1917, No. 203, chap. XXIV, § 4; Jud. Act, chap. XIII, § 25; Comp. L. 1915, § 12428.

¶ 277. The provision of Laws 1891, Act No. 190, § 26, that if the elector shows his ballot or any part thereof to any person other than one lawfully assisting him in the preparation thereof, after the same shall have been marked, it shall not be received or deposited in the ballot box is mandatory.—Attorney General v. May, 99 Mich. 538.

§ 97. Exclusion of evidence violating secrecy.

Sealing, preservation and custody of ballot boxes requisite to use in recount or contest, see ante §§ 45, 61.

¶ 278. The election law of 1891 is designed to secure absolute secrecy to the elector, and thus to prevent all opportunity for corrupt practices; and no voter can be compelled to remove the secrecy of his ballot and state how he voted.—Attorney General v. McQuade, 94 Mich. 439.

¶ 279. A legal voter cannot be compelled to disclose for whom he voted, and no one else can give testimony upon that point unless the voter himself has at the time of voting made the contents of his ballot public by his own consent. No knowledge of its contents obtained without his consent is admissible.—People v. Cicott, 16 Mich. 283.

¶ 280. What the voter may have said, either before or after voting, not accompanied by an exhibition of his ballot, is not admissible to prove for whom he voted. Nor can the appearance of his ticket be shown for the same purpose.—People ex rel. Williams v. Cicott, 16 Mich. 283.

¶ 281. One who has voted, but whose qualifications are disputed, is entitled to the same privilege of secrecy as any other; but when the illegality of his vote is not in controversy the immunity ceases, and the contents of his ballot may be shown.—People ex rel. Williams v. Cicott, 16 Mich. 283.

¶ 282. Testimony that witness saw ballots cast folded and that he was confident that they were straight tickets does not violate the rule against evidence impairing the secrecy of the ballot without the voter's consent, where it does not appear how or by what means witness became confident of the fact.—Harbaugh v. People ex rel. Cicott, 33 Mich. 241.

ELECTRICITY.

TREATS of the generation and use of electricity, of service of the public with electric current, and of injuries to persons or property in such use, except injuries to servants (see Master and Servant, III; Workmen's Compensation Law) or to passengers (see Carriers, IV), and further excepting injuries by electric car lines to persons not servants or passengers and not due to the use of electricity but rather to the operation of cars and trains (see Street Railways, IV; Railroads, VIII).

Analysis.

§ 1. In general.
§ 2. Franchises and service to the public.
§ 3. Rates, charges and service.
§ 4. Liability for injuries to person and property.
§ 5. ——Wires crossed or falling on other conductors.
§ 6. ——Injuries to trespasser or licensee.
§ 7. ——Person or corporation responsible.
§ 8. Contributory negligence.
§ 9. Actions, pleading and evidence.
§ 10. ——Questions for jury.
§ 11. ——Instructions.

§ 1. In general.

Franchises and service to public, see post § 2.

Rates, charges and service, see post § 3.

Liability for injuries to person or property, see post §§ 4-7.

Law of electric railways in general, see Street Railways.

Power of cities and villages to light streets or to engage in generating and distributing electric current, see Municipal Corporations, III.

Necessity of approval of corporation by public authority, see Corporations § 24.
General law of corporations, see Corporations.
Propriety of receivership in corporate foreclosure, see Corporations ¶ 867.
Regulations of transmission of current and of wires, see Comp. L. 1915, §§ 4842-4850, 8365-8371.
Incorporation of electric companies, see Comp. L. 1915, § 8920 et seq.

§ 2. Franchises and service to the public.

Franchises in general, see Franchises.
Power to grant franchises, see Franchises.
Public control over and regulation of highways and streets, see Highways, IX.
Certiorari to review order for removal of wires, see Certiorari § 18.
Public contracts for municipal electric lighting, see Public Contracts; Municipal Corporations, XI.
Right to use highways and streets for transmission, see Comp. L. 1915, § 4841.

¶ 1. Under a contract for the lighting of streets of a city, made with individuals who had bought their dynamo and prepared to erect their plant three months prior to such contract, followed by new contracts for over ten years, during which time no extensions were made except as required by the contracts and a few buildings were lighted along the used streets without protest from the city, the status was merely that of furnishing lights for the city, and the furnishing of light to private citizens was merely incidental; no vested rights were created, and the granting of a new contract to other parties could not be enjoined.—Horner v. City of Eaton Rapids, 122 Mich. 117.

¶ 2. A contract by the city of St. Clair, a city of the fourth class, to purchase electric power to be generated at Port Huron, for a period of ten years, and wherein there is granted to a contractor permission to erect and maintain poles, wires, conduits and other appliances necessary for the transmission of electricity in and through the city of St. Clair, and it was further agreed that the furnisher of the electricity should not sell or supply electricity or power to purchasers within a certain named restricted district without the permission of the city of St. Clair, is the grant of a franchise through the city and not merely the grant of a permission to erect poles and other appliances for the transmission of electricity through the streets, and where entered into by the tie vote of the aldermen, with the affirmative vote of the mayor, is void under Comp. L. 1897, § 3111 providing that no franchise shall be granted except by a two-thirds vote of the aldermen.—Vossen v. City of St. Clair, 148 Mich. 686.

¶ 3. It is immaterial that a franchise to an electric light company, attaching as an incident to the incorporation of such a company, specifies no time for the existence of the franchise, as in such case the grant would be limited to the period of existence fixed by the charter.—Wyandotte Electric Light Co. v. City of Wyandotte, 124 Mich. 43.

¶ 4. How. St., § 4191, provides that electric-lighting companies shall have power to lay, construct and maintain conductors for conducting electricity through the streets, etc., "with the consent of the municipal authorities, under such reasonable regulations as they may prescribe." An ordinance of the city of Manistee provides that all poles erected for electric lighting shall be and remain under the council's control so far as to permit their use by other parties for lighting purposes on payment of the reasonable portion of their cost. Held, that after a company had erected poles the council could not by resolution allow another to use such poles unless the manner of such use were first definitely fixed and regulated.—Citizens' Electric Light & P. Co. v. Sands, 95 Mich. 551.

¶ 5. Rights acquired in the public streets of a city by an electric lighting and power company under Act No. 264, Public Acts 1909, How. St., 2nd Ed., § 2941, constitute a franchise and not a mere license.—City of Lansing v. Michigan Power Co., 183 Mich. 400.

¶ 6. An electric light and power company using the streets of a city under a franchise granted by the latter need not expressly disclaim its rights thereon in order to acquire rights subsequently conferred on such companies by Act No. 264, Public Acts 1909, How. St., 2nd Ed., § 2941.—City of Lansing v. Michigan Power Co., 183 Mich. 400.

§ 3. Rates, charges and service.

General public service regulations and practice before Railroad Commission, see Public Service.

¶ 7. In an action for breach of a contract whereby plaintiffs were to put into defendant's store an electric apparatus and furnish defendant light, defendant to pay at a certain rate and give up gas and other lights, so as to enable plaintiffs to make a public trial and exhibition of their light, held, that the inferior or worthless quality of the light furnished by plaintiffs would constitute a breach of contract; that defendant was not held for the expense of experiments that failed on other grounds than his fault, and that he was not bound to keep and pay for material used in abortive experiments.—Brush-Swan Light & Power Co. v. Gardiner, 59 Mich. 424.

¶ 8. The user of electricity furnished by a public service corporation which has filed a schedule of rates with the railroad commission has no right to transform high tension current into light voltage where the charge made for the two services differs.—Alpena Electric Light Co. v. Kline, 180 Mich. 279.

§ 4. Liability for injuries to person and property.

Wires crossed or falling on other conductors, see post § 5.

Injuries to trespassers or licensee, see post § 6.

Persons or corporations responsible, see post § 7.

Contributory negligence, see post § 8.

Actions, pleading and evidence, see post §§ 9-11.

Liability for injuries to passengers of electric railways, see Carriers, IV.

Liability of masters towards servants injured by electric current, see Master and Servant, III; Workmen's Compensation Law.

Liability of electric companies for injuries caused by dangerous street conditions other than from electric current, see Highways, XII.

Liability for injuries by electric car lines to persons not servants or passengers and not due to electricity, see Street Railways, IV; Railroads, VIII.

Liability of municipal corporation for injuries caused by its employees in operation of electric light plant, see Municipal Corporations, XII.

Adequacy or excessiveness of damages for injuries, see Damages § 236 et seq.

¶ 9. An electric light company maintaining an electric arc street lighting system is relieved from liability for the loss of a team electrocuted and burned by coming into contact with an arc and its connections which have fallen as a result of the natural parting of the rope used to elevate and lower the lamp, where the rope had been previously inspected on the day of the accident and found to be sound.—Sumner v. Eastern Michigan Edison Co., 187 Mich. 169, 12 N. C. C. A. 84.

§ 5. ——Wires crossed or falling on other conductors.

Injury by contact with or fall of arc lamp, see note, 12 N. C. C. A. 84-98.

Liability of electric company for fires caused by defective insulation or installation, see note, 12 N. C. C. A. 209-218.

Liability of electric light companies for injuries to employees of third persons, see note, 7 N. C. C. A. 466-484.

Injuries by electric shock while using telephone, see note, 1 N. C. C. A. 675-685.

Injuries to telephone operators by electric current, see note, 12 N. C. C. A. 328, 329.

Duty to cut off electric current at time of fire, see note, 1 N. C. C. A. 349-353; 8 N. C. C. A. 884-887.

Liability of electric company for personal injury caused by overcharged service wire, see note, 14 N. C. C. A. 253-280.

Liability of street railroad company for injuries caused by charged rails, see note, 9 N. C. C. A. 25-36.

¶ 10. The same duty devolves upon a municipality furnishing light for commercial purposes to properly inspect and maintain its wires so they may not become loose and dangerous as rests upon a private corporation, and where a telephone company has placed its wires in dangerous proximity to those of the city's electric light wires, proper inspection should be made and the telephone company improperly maintaining its wires, should be directed to remedy the defect.—Sykes v. Village of Portland, 177 Mich. 290.

¶ 11. A municipal electric light wire defectively insulated came into contact with a wire of a telephone company subsequently installed in dangerous proximity, burnt through and caused the death of a boy passing by. Reasonable inspection would have discovered the condition and ordinary prudence would have required precautions by both city and company to prevent accidents. Held, the accident was the result of concurring causes and the city cannot urge that as they were first on the ground the proximate cause was the negligence of the telephone company.—Sykes v. Village of Portland, 177 Mich. 290.

¶ 12. A telephone company which permits a loose guy wire to remain in such a condition that it may be either blown or thrown so as to come into contact with a live third rail on a railroad right of way, after notice of its condition, is guilty of negligence.—Kruis v. Grand Rapids, G. H. & M. Ry. Co., 190 Mich. 105. (Ostrander, Brooke, Person, Steere, and Bird, JJ., concurring in result.)

¶ 13. Allowing a trolley span wire to become charged was the proximate cause of injury from electric shock though the train of causation was that of a storm broke a limb of a tree, which pressed down a telephone wire on the hot span wire, that the telephone wire was thus burned off permitting the end to fall on the ground charged with a current, and that plaintiff there came in contact with it while in a public street.—Warren v. City Elec. Ry. Co., 141 Mich. 298.

¶ 14. There was no negligence on the part of an electric company where a boy and his mates while playing broke down a telephone line carried on the same poles with the electric wires, and then still in play threw the broken wire while holding the end of it over the electric wires carried above the telephone wires and was shocked, the occurrence being within an hour after the first break.—Stark v. Muskegon Traction & Lighting Co., 141 Mich. 575.

¶ 15. The fact, if it was a fact, that wires of defendant were defectively insulated was not the proximate cause of shock to a boy, who with his mates broke a telephone wire in play, which was carried below on the same poles, and then still in play threw the broken wire while holding the end of it over the electric wire and was shocked.—Stark v. Muskegon Traction & Lighting Co., 141 Mich. 575.

¶ 16. Stringing electric light wires about twenty feet from the ground, when a city ordinance required them to be at least twenty-five feet, is not presumably the cause of a shock incurred by a boy throwing a broken end of a telephone wire up and catching it on the light wire while playing. —Stark v. Muskegon Traction & Lighting Co., 141 Mich. 575.

¶ 17. The failure for three months to repair a "pull off" wire, which, when in its proper place, ran from the top of an electric railroad line pole to the trolley wire over the center of the track, but the end of which attached to the trolley wire had in some way become detached and fallen and become entangled with a wire fence along the railroad right of way, and the other end of which remained attached to the eye bolt of a span wire on the pole connected with the trolley wire by an insulated "hanger" or circuit breaker, which became charged during an electrical storm, communicating electricity to the fence and killing some horses, is the proximate cause of the death of such horses, and not the electrical storm, since the danger of charging the wire by an electrical storm was a danger which should have been foreseen and guarded against.—Wilmarth v. Michigan United Traction Co., 198 Mich. 428.

Injuries to pedestrians caused by charged guy wires, see note, 12 N. C. C. A. 447-467.

§ 6. ——Injuries to trespasser or licensee.

¶ 18. An electric company owes no duty to make railway premises traversed by its wires safe for trespassers, even though others traveled that way, and there can be no recovery for wrongful death of one electrocuted by a live brace wire negligently attached to a pole where the plaintiff is a trespasser.—McCaughna v. Owosso & Corunna Elec. Co., 129 Mich. 407.

Liability for injury to or death of volunteer attempting to adjust lights used for street lighting, see note, 11 N. C. C. A. 1063-1071.

§ 7. ——Person or corporation responsible.

¶ 19. The fact that an electric light and power company is the owner of a light fixture on the premises of another does not determine the question of liability of the company for personal injuries sustained by a third person through negligent insulation. —Griffin v. Jackson Light & Power Co., 128 Mich. 653.

¶ 20. An electric light and power company is not liable to a third person for injuries sustained through the defective insulation of a fixture owned by it where the fixture was located on the premises of another who knew of the defect and danger and continued to use it.—Griffin v. Jackson Light & Power Co., 128 Mich. 653.

¶ 21. In an action for the wrongful death of a telephone lineman caused by coming in contact with high tension wires of a power company, the latter is not relieved from liability because under its contract with an interurban railroad company the power was sold to the latter at a point reached before the place of the accident, thereby making the current the property of the interurban road where the power company was also using the line to transmit electricity to others than the railroad company.—Teachout v. Grand Rapids, G. H. & M. Ry. Co., 179 Mich. 388.

¶ 22. Quære, whether electricity transmitted through a fixture on the premises of another is a dangerous substance within the meaning of the rule that one transmitting such dangerous substance shall be liable to third persons for injuries sustained thereby. —Griffin v. Jackson Light & Power Co., 128 Mich. 653.

Liability of electric company for injury growing out of defective appliance installed by another, see note, 12 N. C. C. A. 346-360.

Liability of generating company for negligence of electric distributing company, see note, 12 N. C. C. A. 1038-1048.

§ 8. Contributory negligence.

Question of contributory negligence for jury, see also post ¶ 36.

Child's touching fallen wire as contributory negligence, see Negligence, IV.

Presumption of due care by person killed by current from 'crossed current, see Death by Wrongful Act § 18.

¶ 23. An employee of a telephone company required to climb a pole to repair telephone wires situated within fifteen inches of uninsulated high tension wires of a power company, is not guilty of contributory negligence as a matter of law, although he knew that the wires were highly charged.—Teachout v. Grand Rapids, G. H. & M. Ry. Co., 179 Mich. 388.

§ 9. Actions, pleading and evidence.

Questions for jury, see post § 10.

Instructions, see post § 11.

Judicial notice of dangerous character of electricity, see Evidence, I.

Pleading negligence towards passenger in protection from charged wire, see Carriers ¶ 597.

Judicial notice of dangerous qualities of electricity, see Evidence, I.

Sufficiency of evidence of shock to passenger as cause, see also Carriers ¶ 665.

¶ 24. In an action for injuries incurred from escape of an electric current over trolley span wires, claimed to be improperly insulated, and thence through a telephone wire, it is proper to introduce the insulator in evidence.—Warren v. City Elec. Ry. Co., 141 Mich. 298.

¶ 25. Evidence in an action against an electric light company for damages for the loss of a team electrocuted and burned by coming into contact with a fallen street arc lamp and connections, held to sustain a finding that the rope used in elevating and lowering the lamp parted because of old age and wear and from the weight to which it was attached.—Sumner v. Eastern Michigan Edison Co., 187 Mich. 169, 12 N. C. C. A. 84.

¶ 26. In an action against a village and a telephone company for personal injuries caused by coming in contact with a fallen electric light belonging to the village, and alleged to have been maintained by the village in too close proximity to those of the telephone company, as a result of which they came in contact, causing the electric light wire in question to burn off and fall, evidence that the village on the day following the accident, installed a new electric light wire in place of the one which caused the injury and secured it with brackets which would make it impossible for the wires to come together, is competent to show that the wire burned off, about to be introduced in evidence, had not been marked as a result of coming in contact with any other wires since the accident, and such evidence is admissible for that reason, although it might be incompetent for another purpose.—Sykes v. Village of Portland, 193 Mich. 86.

Application of doctrine of res ipsa loquitur in action for injuries caused by electricity and electric wires, see note, 5 N. C. C. A. 51, 52.

§ 10. ——Questions for jury.

Questions for jury in general, see Trial, VI.

¶ 27. It is a jury question whether inspections of trolley span wires was sufficiently frequent as proved in view of the character of electricity and the risk that span wires might become live by reason of poor insulation.—Warren v. City Elec. Ry. Co., 141 Mich. 298.

¶ 28. Evidence in an action by the owner of a team against an electric light company for damages for the loss of a team which was electrocuted and burned as a result of coming into contact with an arc lamp and connections which had fallen to the highway, held to present a disputed question of fact as to the condition of the rope used to elevate and lower the lamp so as to necessitate a submission of such question to the jury.—Sumner v. Eastern Michigan Edison Co., 187 Mich. 169, 12 N. C. C. A. 84.

¶ 29. On evidence which presented a disputed question of fact as to the sufficiency of the rope used to elevate and lower the light which fell, a reference of such question to the jury is necessary.—Sumner v. Eastern Michigan Edison Co., 187 Mich. 169, 12 N. C. C. A. 84.

¶ 30. It cannot be said as matter of law that a street railway company had not had time to discover the danger and make repairs where a limb of a tree broken in a storm pressed a telephone wire upon a trolley span wire which was charged, and so carried a current injuring plaintiff, where there was evidence to go to the jury on which it might find that previously the span wires were poorly insulated and carried currents.—Warren v. City Elec. Ry. Co., 141 Mich. 298.

¶ 31. A verdict is properly directed for the defendant in an action against a street railway company for the death of a person by coming in contact with a telephone wire heavily charged with electricity, which was blown down during a heavy storm, where it is not shown that the deadly current escaped from the defendant's trolley wire, and it was reasonably probable that it might have escaped from wires owned by other companies.—Broudy v. Detroit, J. & C. Ry. Co., 184 Mich. 330.

¶ 32. Where a telephone company was negligent in leaving a guy wire in a loose condition so that it might be blown or thrown so as to come into contact with a live third rail on a railroad right of way, and where it appeared that children frequently passed at that point on the adjoining highway, and that the wire was thrown on the rails by one of three boys, held that it was a question for the jury whether defendant's negligence was the proximate cause of the death of a person on the highway due to the carrying of the current from the rail to a fence on the highway.—Kruis v. Grand Rapids, G. H. & M. Ry. Co., 190 Mich. 105. (Ostrander, Brooke, Person, Steere, and Bird, JJ., concurring in result.)

¶ 33. Where a defectively insulated municipal electric wire comes into contact with a telephone wire subsequently installed in dangerous proximity, burns through and causes the death of a boy passing by, and neither city nor company inspect or take precautions to avoid accident, whether they acted as ordinarily prudent men would have acted is properly submitted to the jury.—Sykes v. Village of Portland, 177 Mich. 290.

¶ 34. In an action against a village and a telephone company for personal injuries resulting from a shock received by a woman when she attempted to rescue her child from contact with a charged electric wire belonging to the defendant village, and which had fallen as a result of coming in contact with wires of the defendant telephone company because of an insecurely fastened telephone pole which swayed in the breeze and permitted the telephone wire to sag down upon the electric light wire in question, and there was a sharp conflict in the evidence, held the trial court properly refused to direct a verdict for either defendant.—Sykes v. Village of Portland, 193 Mich. 86.

¶ 35. Where high-tension, uninsulated wires of a power company were strung on cross arms within fifteen inches of telephone wires, which employees of the telephone company were required to repair, it was held that the power company's negligence was for the jury.—Teachout v. Grand Rapids, G. H. & M. Ry. Co., 179 Mich. 388.

¶ 36. In an action against a village and a telephone company for personal injuries received by a woman when, under circumstances of great haste and excitement, she attempted to rescue her 10-year-old son from contact with a charged electric light wire maintained by the defendant village, and it was alleged that the boy was apparently alive and so seemed to her, and that she did not then know that it was dangerous to touch his body, held, under the evidence, it could not be said that the plaintiff's attempt to rescue her son was so rash as to entail certain injury to her, and the question of her contributory negligence was one of fact to be submitted to the jury.—Sykes v. Village of Portland, 193 Mich. 86.

§ 11. ——Instructions.

¶ 37. A charge that the duty requisite in respect to use of electricity is such as ordinarily careful and prudent persons would exercise in dealing with it under similar circumstances, is sufficiently favorable to the user sued for escape of a current and injury to plaintiff.—Warren v. City Elec. Ry. Co., 141 Mich. 298.

¶ 38. Where there is evidence that a defectively insulated municipal electric light wire came into contact with a telephone wire maintained in dangerous proximity and caused the death of a boy, an instruction as to the duty of the city to request the telephone company to remove the danger is not improper.—Sykes v. Village of Portland, 177 Mich. 290.

¶ 39. In an action against a village and a telephone company for personal injuries alleged to have resulted from a shock received when a woman came within the circuit caused by a fallen charged wire maintained by the village, charge to the jury stating, "It is for you to say whether the village was negligent, and in what way," but calling the jury's attention, in other parts thereof, to the declaration and the negligence there alleged, and the necessity of evidence to support it, is not objectionable for lack of limitation or qualification of matters of negligence to those specified in the declaration and supported by the evidence.—Sykes v. Village of Portland, 193 Mich. 86.

ELEEMOSYNARY INSTITUTIONS to EMERGENCIES.

Cross-References.

Eleemosynary Institutions—
See Charities; Asylums and Hospitals; Schools, X, XII.
Exemption from taxation, see Taxes, III.

Elevators—
In buildings, liability for injuries from, see Buildings.
Liability of master to servant injured by or because of elevator, see Master and Servant, III; Workmen's Compensation Law.
Grain elevators, see Warehousing.

Elopement—
Validity of marriage, see Marriage.
Civil liability to husband of eloping wife, see Husband and Wife, V, B.

Emancipation—
Of infants, see Parent and Child, III.

Embankments—
On or near highways as defects or dangers, liability for injuries, see Highways, XII.
Against surface or stream waters, see Waters, II, V.
Of railroads, mode of construction and liability for injuries, see Railroads, III, IV, VIII.

Embezzlement—
See Crimes, II; Indictment.

Emblements—
See generally Agriculture § 2.

Emblems of Political Parties—
On ballot, see Elections §§ 34, 35.

Embracery—
See Crimes § 50; Indictment.

Emergencies—
Acts in emergency amounting to care or neglect, see Negligence; and see specific topics treating of particular negligence, e. g., Carriers, II, IV, E; Highways, XII, XIII; Master and Servant, III; Railroads, VIII; Street Railways, IV.

EMINENT DOMAIN.

TREATS of the appropriation of private property to the use of the public, either by the public itself or by corporations or persons to whom the power is delegated by the state, of the scope and limitations of the right, the occasions for its exercise, the procedure, the rules of compensation, and the title and rights attendant thereon. It excludes various specific condemnations (see Highways, II, B, and other topics referred to below) and acquisitions of property by the public without condemnation against the private owner's will (see Dedication; Highways, II; Parks; etc.).

Analysis.

I. Power in general and exercise of delegated right.

§ 1. Nature and source of power.
§ 2. Distinction from taxing or police power.
§ 3. Limitations and scope of power.
§ 4. ——Federal and state powers.
§ 5. Delegation to public corporations, officers and agencies.
§ 6. ——To private corporations and individuals.
§ 7. ——Subdelegation and exercise through agents.
§ 8. Existence and legality of corporate delegate.
§ 9. Germaneness to corporate objects and powers.
§ 10. Loss, bar or forfeiture of delegated right.

II. Public uses and necessities, and property subject to appropriation.

§ 11. Public uses and necessity in general.
§ 12. Water power plants.
§ 13. Depots, branch lines, sidings, and other accessories.
§ 14. Criteria of necessity.
§ 15. Necessity of particular parcel.
§ 16. Property and titles subject to appropriation.
§ 17. Property already in or affected by public use.
§ 18. ——Cemetery lands.
§ 19. Area, width or estate which may be taken.

III. Taking or damaging.

§ 20. What constitutes "taking" in general.
§ 21. Interests of mortgagees, lienors and others in secondary right.
§ 22. Interest of railroad in land devoted to prior use.
§ 23. "Adjacent" or adjoining property damaged by railroad on highway.
§ 24. Impairment of building or property restriction.
§ 25. Impairment or vacation of highway use or access.
§ 26. Interference with drainage, riparian or navigation rights.
§ 27. Imposed liability or burden.
§ 28. Tax or assessment.
§ 29. Repeal or amendment of charter or franchise.
§ 30. Onerous police and sanitary regulations.
§ 31. Loss of rights through fish and game laws.

IV. Necessity, time and measure of compensation.

§ 32. Constitutional right and necessity.
§ 33. ——Public property and property in public use.
§ 34. Damages for injury without "taking."

§ 35. Waiver or loss of right.
§ 36. Time for compensation.
§ 37. Measure and elements in general.
§ 38. ——Injury to remainder; severance of tract.
§ 39. ——Depreciation in rental or business value.
§ 40. ——Business loss.
§ 41. ——Illegal occupancy before condemnation.
§ 42. ——Costs in other actions or proceedings.
§ 43. Valuation of the property.
§ 44. ——Comparisons with other values or damages.
§ 45. ——Condemnor's improvements.
§ 46. Setting off benefits against damage.
§ 47. Speculative, punitive or vindictive damages.
§ 48. Damages for highways and street openings.
§ 49. ——For closing street or destroying access.
§ 50. ——For changes of grades.
§ 51. ——For crossing of railroad by highway.
§ 52. ——For crossing of railroad by railroad.
§ 53. ——For railroads on highways.

V. Condemnation proceedings.

A. In General; Preliminaries and Jurisdiction.
§ 54. Nature of proceedings.
§ 55. Strictness of procedure.
§ 56. Validity, effect and application of statutes.
§ 57. Jurisdiction of courts.
§ 58. Filing survey and map.
§ 59. Previous effort to purchase or obtain consents.

B. Petition and Process, Objections and Answers.
§ 60. Petition.
§ 61. ——Jurisdictional facts.
§ 62. ——Averments of public use, necessity and intent of condemnor.
§ 63. ——Averments as to location, survey and approval.
§ 64. ——Description of property and particular uses.
§ 65. ——Averment as to lands abutting on street taken.
§ 66. ——Averments as to negotiations for purchase or consent.
§ 67. ——Averments to condemn crossings over other railroads.
§ 68. ——Averments for condemning dam and flowage rights.
§ 69. Lands to be joined in one petition.
§ 70. Notice of proceedings and service of notice.
§ 71. Appearance and waiver of notice.
§ 72. Proper and necessary parties.
§ 73. Answer and objections.
§ 74. Dismissal or discontinuance.
§ 75. New proceeding after defective one.

C. Hearing and Trial.
§ 76. Constitutional mode; necessity of jury.
§ 77. ——Functions of jury and questions triable.
§ 78. Character of jury and jury trial.
§ 79. Number and qualifications of jurors.
§ 80. Commissioners of appraisal.
§ 81. Venire list, drawing and impaneling.
§ 82. Challenges.

§ 83. Waiver of jury or objections and challenges.
§ 84. Oath of jurors.
§ 85. Compensation of jurors.
§ 86. Venue and change of venue.
§ 87. Consolidation and severance of proceedings.
§ 88. Procedure on hearing.
§ 89. ——Functions of judge.
§ 90. ——Regulation of evidence and number of witnesses.
§ 91. ——Record of proceedings; stenographic report.
§ 92. ——Argument and assistance by counsel.
§ 93. ——Propriety of instructions and requests.
§ 94. Interference with and misconduct of jury.

D. EVIDENCE.
§ 95. Burden of proof and presumptions.
§ 96. Admissibility and competency.
§ 97. ——Opinions and conclusions as to value and award.
§ 98. ——As to necessity of taking.
§ 99. Requisites and sufficiency of proofs.
§ 100. ——Admissions on pleadings.
§ 101. ——View as overcoming evidence.

E. AWARD, FINDINGS AND JUDGMENT.
§ 102. Award or verdict.
§ 103. ——Finding as to necessity.
§ 104. ——Description of property.
§ 105. ——Specification of amounts or gross award.
§ 106. ——Specification of mortgagees', lienors' or lessees' shares.
§ 107. Splitting, severance and joinder of verdicts.
§ 108. Special questions and findings.
§ 109. Unanimity in verdict.
§ 110. Decision by commissioners; number requisite.
§ 111. Confirmation or rejection of award and new trial.
§ 112. ——Excessiveness or inadequacy of compensation.
§ 113. ——Procedure to confirm or reject.
§ 114. ——Affidavits to impeach or sustain award.
§ 115. Judgment or decree.
§ 116. Costs and allowances.

VI. Payment or enforcement of award, and rights in same.

§ 117. In general; pendency of appeal or rehearing.
§ 118. Payment into court for division.
§ 119. Awards to estates or representatives.
§ 120. Execution and enforcement of judgment.
§ 121. ——Lesser award on second proceedings with judgment for difference.

VII. Right to possession pending vesting of title.

§ 122. In general.

VIII. Appeal and review of judgment and award.

§ 123. Mode of review and jurisdiction to review.
§ 124. Right to appeal and allowance of appeal.
§ 125. Appellate procedure, notice, exceptions and record.
§ 126. Saving questions for review.

§ 127. ——Acquiescence and waiver.
§ 128. ——Jurisdictional defects.
§ 129. Scope of appeal and matters reviewable.
§ 130. ——Construction and effect of the record and presumptions thereon.
§ 131. ——Verdicts and findings on the evidence.
§ 132. ——Inadequacy or excessiveness of award.
§ 133. Review on certiorari; grounds and propriety of writ.
§ 134. ——Judgments and proceedings reviewable.
§ 135. ——Time for writ to issue.
§ 136. ——Objections to writ; quashal or dismissal.
§ 137. ——Return to writ and effect of return.
§ 138. ——Scope and subjects of review.
§ 139. Ground for reversal or harmlessness of error.
§ 140. Law of case in subsequent proceedings.
§ 141. Costs on appeal or certiorari.

IX. Injunction, action for damages and other indirect remedies; collateral attack.

§ 142. Indirect remedies in general.
§ 143. Equitable relief in general; injunction.
§ 144. ——Relief on condition.
§ 145. Trespass and actions for damages.
§ 146. Ejectment.
§ 147. Collateral attack.
§ 148. Right of action and effect of transfer of land.

X. Title acquired and liabilities ensuing.

§ 149. Nature of title acquired.
§ 150. Transferability and rights of grantees.

Acquisition of property for public uses by dedication or purchase, see Dedication; Highways, II; Municipal Corporations, X; Parks; Railroads, III.

I. POWER IN GENERAL AND EXERCISE OF DELEGATED RIGHT.

§ 1. Nature and source of power.

Distinction from taxing or police power, see post § 2.
Scope and limitations of power, see post § 3.
State and federal powers, see post § 4.
Delegation of power, see post §§ 5-9.
Loss, bar or forfeiture of delegated right, see post § 10.
Constitutional provisions for eminent domain, see Const. Art. XIII, §§ 1, 2.

¶ 1. Eminent domain is that sovereign power vested in the people by which they can, for any public purpose, take possession of the property of any individual, upon just compensation paid to him.—Board of Health of Township of Portage v. Van Hoesen, 87 Mich. 533.

¶ 2. Each state by virtue of its statehood has the right to exercise the power of eminent domain.—Loomis v. Hartz, 165 Mich. 662.

¶ 3. General nature of the right of eminent domain considered.—People ex rel. Detroit & H. R. Co. v. Salem Township Board, 20 Mich. 452.

¶ 4. The right of eminent domain is the rightful authority which exists in every sovereignty to control and regulate those rights of a public nature which pertain to its citizens in common, and to appropriate and control individual property for the public benefit, as the public safety, necessity, convenience, or welfare may demand.—Woodmere Cemetery v. Roulo, 104 Mich. 595.

¶ 5. Eminent domain is the rightful authority which exists in every sovereignty to control and regulate those rights of a public nature which pertain to its citizens in common, and to appropriate and control individual property for the public benefit, as the public safety, necessity, convenience and welfare may demand. It has its foundation in the imperative law of necessity which alone justifies and limits its exercise.—People ex

rel. Trombley v. Humphrey, 23 Mich. 471; Woodmere Cemetery v. Roulo, 104 Mich. 595.

¶ 6. The right of eminent domain cannot be bartered away and any contract by the legislature or any agencies of the state having such effect is ineffectual and void.—Leggett v. City of Detroit, 137 Mich. 247.

§ 2. Distinction from taxing or police power.

Taxing power in general, see Taxes, I.

Eminent domain distinguished from police power, see also Constitutional Law § 99.

Power to make local improvements and assess cost of same locally, see Local Improvements.

Paramount right and control of navigable waters by public, see Navigable Waters, II.

¶ 7. The distinction between the exercise of the right of eminent domain in taking private property for a public use and the injury, damage, and loss to property incidental to the exercise of the police power of the state in the promotion of the public welfare, is well defined.—People v. Eberle, 167 Mich. 477. Affirmed in 232 U. S. 700, 58 L. ed. 803, 34 Sup. Ct. Rep. 464.

¶ 8. The terms "private property," and "the property of individuals," in the constitutional provisions prohibiting the taking of private property for public use without compensation, etc., were not intended to include money raised by assessment for the purpose of paving streets. Money attempted to be raised for that purpose is not sought to be taken by virtue of the sovereign right of eminent domain, but in the exercise of the sovereign power of taxation.—Williams v. City of Detroit, 2 Mich. 560.

§ 3. Limitations and scope of power.

Federal and state powers, see post § 4.

Public use as a limitation on power, see post ¶ 28.

Relative provinces of legislature and judiciary in exercise of right, see Constitutional Law § 48.

Constitutionality of acts for condemning property assailed on grounds other than limitations of the power of eminent domain, see Constitutional Law; Statutes, II, III.

¶ 9. The exercise of the power of eminent domain is entirely under the control of the legislature, subject to such restrictions as are found in the Constitution, and the necessity, the occasion, time, and manner of its exercise are wholly legislative questions, with the exception stated.—Loomis v. Hartz, 165 Mich. 662.

¶ 10. The clause in the Ordinance of 1787 that no man shall be deprived of his liberty or property but by the judgment of his peers or the law of the land, and that should the public exigencies make it necessary for the common preservation to take any person's property, or to demand his particular service, full compensation should be made for the same, was not designed to restrict, legislative or judicial authority, but rather to limit and confine the power over persons and property to those authorities.—Swan v. Williams, 2 Mich. 427.

§ 4. ——Federal and state powers.

¶ 11. The right of eminent domain in any sovereignty exists only for its own purposes. The states of the Union cannot, even within their own territorial limits, exercise that right for purposes which, under the division of powers between the United States and the individual states, lie within the sovereignty of the United States. Laws 1867, Act No. 119, authorizing the governor to condemn private lands in Michigan, that they might be turned over to the United States for the erection and maintenance of light-houses thereon, was accordingly unconstitutional, as appropriating the property of individuals without due process of law. Such aid is not analogous to that rendered in making the war power of the government effectual.—Trombley v. Humphrey, 23 Mich. 471.

¶ 12. The United States, in providing for the regulation, control and protection of commerce, erects light-houses, and may, in the exercise of its eminent domain, by observing the constitutional requirement of making due compensation therefor, seize and condemn the property of individuals for that purpose. The consent of the state is not a condition precedent to such taking, but is required only for the purpose of a transfer of jurisdiction.—People ex rel. Trombley v. Humphrey, 23 Mich. 471.

¶ 13. The United States has never conferred authority upon any of the states to judge of its need of land for national purposes, or to assess the compensation it should pay, and any such judgment and assessment must be wholly provisional, and subject to its acceptance and ratification.—People ex rel. Trombley v. Humphrey, 23 Mich. 471.

§ 5. Delegation to public corporations, officers and agencies.

To private corporations and individuals, see post § 6.

Subdelegation and exercise through agents, see post § 7.

Existence and legality of corporate delegate, see post § 8.

Germaneness to corporate objects and powers, see post § 9.

Upon whom authority is conferred to bring proceedings in behalf of the State, see Comp. L. 1915, § 349.

"Public corporations" and "state agencies" entitled to bring proceedings defined, see Comp. L. 1915, § 353.

Right of public corporation or state agency to institute proceedings, see Comp. L. 1915, §§ 355, 356.

Power of council to institute village proceedings, see Comp. L. 1915, § 2786.

¶ 14. Proceedings by a village to condemn land outside of its jurisdiction for water supply purposes are unlawful unless the village charter expressly gives the power to do so; the general act (Sess. L. 1883, p. 554, Act No. 124, p. 115) does not permit it.—Houghton Village Common Council v. Huron Copper Min. Co., 57 Mich. 547.

¶ 15. A city of the fourth class cannot take land by condemnation proceedings for the enlargement of a harbor upon navigable water, under Pub. Acts, 1899, No. 136, chap. 25, § 1, which provides for the "improvement of water courses"; since it has no authority to enlarge or maintain a harbor on navigable water.—City of South Haven v. Van Buren Probate Judge, 140 Mich. 117.

¶ 16. Since Act No. 149, Pub. Acts 1911, How. Ann. St., 2nd Ed., §§ 10155-10175, providing for the condemnation of private property by state agencies and public corporations, does not contain a repealing clause, it does not repeal Act No. 541, Local Acts 1903, empowering the city of Detroit to take private property for public use.—City of Detroit v. Weil, 180 Mich. 593.

¶ 17. Const., art. 10, § 11, giving boards of supervisors power, "under such restrictions and limitations as shall be prescribed by law," to provide for laying out highways, etc., does not preclude the legislature from conferring power over this subject to township highway commissioners.—People ex rel. Goldsmith v. Nankin Highway Com'rs, 15 Mich. 347.

§ 6. ——To private corporations and individuals.

Power of corporation in receivership to exercise right of eminent domain, see Corporations ¶ 894.

Power of railroad bridge and tunnel companies to bring eminent domain proceedings, see Comp. L. 1915, § 8251.

¶ 18. The union railroad depot law of 1881, Act No. 244 (How. St., §§ 3458-3494) is not unconstitutional in conferring the power of eminent domain on the corporations organized under it.—Fort-Street Union Depot Co. v. Morton, 83 Mich. 265.

¶ 19. The territorial legislature had power to incorporate railroad companies, and to authorize the appropriation of private property for their purposes, without the consent of the owner; and an act to that effect was not repugnant either to the constitution of the United States or the ordinance of 1787.—Swan v. Williams, 2 Mich. 427; Mercer v. Williams, W. 85.

¶ 20. The territorial legislature had power to appropriate private property for public use on securing proper compensation, and could lawfully authorize a railroad corporation to take such property for such use.—Swan v. Williams, 2 Mich. 427.

¶ 21. The act of March 7, 1834, incorporating the Detroit & Pontiac Railroad Co., in so far as it authorized the appropriation of private property for the purposes contemplated in the act, without the owner's consent, was not repugnant to the constitution of the United States or to the ordinance of 1787.—Swan v. Williams, 2 Mich. 427.

¶ 22. A railroad company has the right to proceed to condemn land for railroad purposes in a street under the eminent domain statute, independently of a city franchise.—Horton v. Grand Rapids & I. Ry. Co., 199 Mich. 472.

§ 7. ——Subdelegation and exercise through agents.

¶ 23. A contractor employed by a railroad company to secure the right of way, and to construct a railroad, and authorized by such company to use the company's name in condemnation proceedings where necessary, could maintain a suit in such condemnation proceedings, under the right of eminent domain as conferred upon railroad companies by statute; since a corporation must act through individuals as agents, and such contractor was such agent.—Detroit & T. S. L. R. Co. v. Campbell, 140 Mich. 384.

§ 8. Existence and legality of corporate delegate.

¶ 24. The power of a railroad company to begin proceedings for the condemnation of lands within the state is not lost by its consolidation with another railroad company into a new organization so as to constitute a corporation subject to the laws of the same state as the original company.—Toledo, A. A. & G. T. R. Co. v. Dunlap, 47 Mich. 456.

¶ 25. A de facto railroad company can maintain condemnation proceedings, since the state only can raise the question of the validity of such corporation.—Detroit & T. S. L. R. Co. v. Campbell, 140 Mich. 384.

§ 9. Germaneness to corporate objects and powers.

Corporate purposes and powers in general, see Corporations, XI, XIII; Railroads, III, IX; Street Railways, I.

¶ 26. A water power company organized to construct and maintain a dam across a navigable river and operate and maintain water power appurtenant to such dam and to sell water and water power and do a transportation business, has not the power to condemn lands to improve the navigability of such river for the double purpose of carrying on a public transportation business and a private water power business.—Berrien Springs Water Power Co. v. Berrien Circuit Judge, 133 Mich. 48.

§ 10. Loss, bar or forfeiture of delegated right.

¶ 27. That a railroad company has taken possession before filing a petition for condemnation does not, where there was no criminal entry, justify a refusal to award an inquest of damages.—Grand Rapids, L. & D. R. Co. v. Chesebro, 70 Mich. 466.

II. PUBLIC USES AND NECESSITIES, AND PROPERTY SUBJECT TO APPROPRIATION.

§ 11. Public uses and necessity in general.

Water power plants as public use, see post § 12.
Depots, branch lines, sidings and other accessories, see post § 13.
Criteria of necessity, see post § 14.
Necessity of particular parcel, see post § 15.
Averments in petition as to public use and necessity, see post § 62.
Evidence as to necessity of taking, see post § 98.
Finding as to public necessity, see post § 103.
Necessity of compensation, see post § 32.
Presumption on appeal of showing of public necessity where record is incomplete, see post ¶ 431.
Conclusiveness of finding of public necessity on appeal, see post ¶ 439.
Public uses and purposes supporting exercise of the taxing or disbursing power, see Taxes, I; Counties § 37; Municipal Corporations, XIII; Townships, VI, VII; Constitutional Law § 275.
Purposes for which proceedings may be brought by villages, see Comp. L. 1915, § 2784.

¶ 28. The exercise of the right of eminent domain is limited to cases in which the public has an interest.—Board of Health of Township of Portage v. Van Hoesen, 87 Mich. 533.

¶ 29. Property of individuals, taken by railroad corporations for the purpose of constructing their roads, is, in legal contemplation, taken not for private but for public use. The tenure of the corporations in the land is in the nature of a trust for public use, subject to the supervision of government.—Swan v. Williams, 2 Mich. 427.

¶ 30. Land can be taken under the power of eminent domain for a legitimate public purpose, even though a private purpose will be thereby incidentally subserved.—Berrien Springs Water Power Co. v. Berrien Circuit Judge, 133 Mich. 48.

¶ 31. A statute authorizing rural cemetery associations to acquire land by exercising the right of eminent domain is unconstitutional and void, the use being private. So held of Laws of 1875, Act No. 219 (How. St., §§ 4778-4787), which seeks to amend the act of 1869 authorizing the formation of corporations to establish rural cemeteries (How. St., §§ 4763-4777), and which provides for the condemnation of land by such corporations and by boards of health, etc.—Board of Health of Township of Portage v. Van Hoesen, 87 Mich. 533.

¶ 32. Independent of the consideration of necessity on account of the public health the legislature cannot enact laws for the condemnation of private property and levy taxes for the construction of drains.—Attorney General ex rel. Alexander v. McClear, 146 Mich. 45.

¶ 33. The necessity for taking property for public must be real; and in estimating such necessity it makes no difference to the public who owns the land. The necessity must be as great where the land is owned separately as where it is part of a larger property.—City of Detroit v. Daly, 68 Mich. 503.

§ 12. Water power plants.

Authority of water power company to condemn lands to improve navigation, see ante ¶ 26.

¶ 34. Laws 1873, Act No. 196 (vol. 1, p. 486), in providing for condemnation proceedings whenever the proprietors of water-power manufactories wish to overflow the lands of others, is unconstitutional, because the exercise of the right to condemn is not clearly made to depend on public necessity, nor is it so restricted that the use to which it may be put must necessarily be a public use, either as regards the kind or manner of manufacture. Whether the acquisition of water-power can be a proper subject for the exercise of eminent domain, so long as other motive forces are to be had, quære.—Ryerson v. Brown, 35 Mich. 333.

¶ 35. Public Acts 1887, No. 202, § 9, subd. 6 (Comp. L. 1897, § 6814) providing that corporations organized under the act shall have power to condemn lands needed in constructing a navigable waterway with or without water power appurtenant thereto, and to sell water and water power, and do a transportation business upon such waterway, is unconstitutional, in that it grants the right to take such land as is necessary to make a navigable waterway with private water power appurtenant thereto, without limiting the taking to the public necessities.—Berrien Springs Water Power Co. v. Berrien Circuit Judge, 133 Mich. 48.

§ 13. Depots, branch lines, sidings, and other accessories.

Right of railroad company to institute proceedings to acquire land for spur tracks or branches, see Comp. L. 1915, § 8262.

¶ 36. Taking is for public use in condemnation proceedings if necessary for branches that will reach freighting business not attainable by main line.—Toledo, S. & M. R. Co. v. East Saginaw & St. C. R. Co., 72 Mich. 206.

¶ 37. Where a railroad company seeks to condemn a right of way for a spur to be built to serve a single party, and to carry off mill products not necessary to public use, and it appears that said party is to advance the money for construction, and the sole purpose of the spur is to accommodate his business, and build up the railroad's traffic, the proposed use is not a necessary public use entitling the railroad company to exercise the power of eminent domain.—Pere Marquette R. Co. v. United States Gypsum Co., 154 Mich. 290.

¶ 38. That portion of land used to provide for the public the means of ready access to the depot to be built by a railroad for the accommodation of the public is devoted to a railway purpose no less than that portion actually covered by the structures of the railroad, and the condemnation of land for such purpose may be made on the ground of public necessity.—Michigan Cent. Ry. Co. v. Miller, 172 Mich. 201.

§ 14. Criteria of necessity.

See also ante ¶ 33.

¶ 39. The damaging effect of a public improvement upon any portion of the public is competent for the jury to consider in determining whether there is a public necessity for making the improvement.—Board of Education City of Grand Rapids v. Brown, 159 Mich. 148.

¶ 40. The fact that the taking of land by a water company would result in improving the navigability of a river, did not of itself prove the public necessity, and under Const. art. 18, § 2, the necessity for the taking must be determined by a jury, and not by the legislature.—Berrien Springs Water Power Co. v. Berrien Circuit Judge, 133 Mich. 48.

§ 15. Necessity of particular parcel.

¶ 41. Whether or not the property of a railroad is not in use and not needed, so as to be condemnable for depot and terminal facilities by another railroad under How. St., § 3357, cannot be tried collaterally in order to show that the property of other parties not affected with any railroad ownership is being needlessly condemned because the property of the other railroad could be taken instead.—Fort Street Union Depot Co. v. Backus, 92 Mich. 33.

§ 16. Property and titles subject to appropriation.

Property already in or affected by public use, see post §§ 17, 18.

Area, width or estate which may be taken, see post § 19.

Impairment of interests of mortgagees, lienors and others in secondary right as "taking," see post § 21.

Nature of ownership or title in public properties, see Highways, X; Parks; Municipal Corporations, X.

Private property subject to condemnation by public corporations defined, see Comp. L. 1915, § 354.

¶ 42. If necessary, intangible rights may be condemned provided compensation is made.—Dunlap v. Toledo, A. A. & G. T. R. Co., 50 Mich. 470.

¶ 43. Whether a homestead entryman's inchoate title is such an interest as can be appropriated under the general railroad law by adverse proceedings, quære.—Flint & P. M. R. Co. v. Gordon, 41 Mich. 420.

¶ 44. A leasehold is property for which compensation must be made if damaged.—City of Detroit v. C. H. Little Co., 141 Mich. 637.

¶ 45. All contracts are subject to the power of eminent domain whenever the public necessity requires its exercise.—In re First Street (City of Grand Rapids v. Grand Rapids & I. R. Co.), 66 Mich. 42.

§ 17. Property already in or affected by public use.

See also, post ¶ 52.

Admission on pleadings as to property of one railroad company being subject to condemnation by another, see post ¶ 339.

Extent and measure of servitudes imposed by existing uses, see Highways, X; Railroads, III; Navigable Waters, II.

When railroad company may take unused right of way of roadbed of another company, see Comp. L. 1915, § 8251.

¶ 46. Neither under the Union Depot Act (How. St., chap. 93), which expressly limits the right to "crossings," nor under the general statutes relating to condemnation is there any power in a union depot company to condemn lands and property of another railroad company in actual use for railroad purposes; but How. St., § 3357, provides that railroad property "in or adjacent to its depot grounds * * * not in actual use for depot or other purpose pertaining to the operation of a railroad, and * * * not needed * * * for depot or other terminal facilities" by such railroad, may be condemned by any other railroad for such purposes.—Fort Street Union Depot Co. v. Backus, 92 Mich. 33.

¶ 47. In a railroad's petition for the condemnation of land for a depot, it appeared that the depot itself was not to be built upon respondent's land, but half of said ground was to be covered by tracks and the train shed, a further portion to be occupied by a private driveway to the baggageroom, and the balance to be used for a "Depot Esplanade," a way for the use of the public generally in reaching the depot. The petitioner had acquired and paid for all the lands lying between its original right of way and respondent's property. Held, respondent's land was "adjacent" to the main line of the railroad within the meaning of the condemnation statute.—Michigan Cent. Ry. Co. v. Miller, 172 Mich. 201.

§ 18. ——Cemetery lands.

Cemetery as public use, see ante ¶ 31.

Answer and objections in suit for condemnation of lands for cemetery, see post ¶¶ 244, 245.

¶ 48. How. St., § 4772, which provides that no streets, highways, railways, sewers, or canals shall be opened or constructed through the grounds of rural cemetery associations without the assent of the board of directors, if of any validity whatever, must be construed as no more than an assurance of immunity from unnecessary interference by local officers, by precluding action on their part, without such assent, until the legislative will is manifested by further legislation.—Woodmere Cemetery v. Roulo, 104 Mich. 595.

§ 19. Area, width or estate which may be taken.

¶ 49. Since under How. St., §§ 3568, 3577, 3578, 3581, plank road companies have power to condemn a right of way 66 feet wide, and after constructing a roadway upon one side, they would have a strip of land 50 feet in width, upon which to construct a gate-house and keeper's residence: there is no absolute necessity or express authority for them to go outside the limit which the law allows. —Detroit & Saline Plank Road Co. v. Detroit, 81 Mich. 562.

III. TAKING OR DAMAGING.

§ 20. What constitutes "taking" in general.

Impairment of interest of mortgagees, lienors and others in secondary right, see post § 21.

Impairment of interest of railroad in land devoted to prior use, see post § 22.

Impairment of property by railroad on adjacent highway, see post § 23.

Impairment of property restriction or of highway use or access, see post §§ 24, 25.

Interference with drainage riparian or navigation rights, see post § 26.

Imposed liability, tax or assessment, see post §§ 27, 28.

Repeal or amendment of charter or franchise, see post § 29.

Onerous police or sanitary regulations, see post § 30.

Loss of rights through fish and game laws, see post § 31.

Taking and condemnation of lands for public highways in so far as the procedure is peculiar or distinctive, see Highways, II, B.

Alterations, extensions and changes of grade of highways, see Highways, V.

Appropriation of property for drains under drain laws as a taking, see Drains, II, A.

Whether cleaning out drain constitutes a "taking," see Drains § 87.

Appraisements and assessments incident to making of public local improvements, see Local Improvements, III, V, VI.

¶ 50. A taking for public use exists not merely where property is absolutely converted, but also where value is destroyed or serious injury done to the property, or where the owner is excluded from the enjoyment thereof or of any of its appurtenances.—Pearsall v. Eaton County Sup'rs, 74 Mich. 558.

§ 21. Interests of mortgagees, lienors and others in secondary right.

Necessity in award or verdict of specification of shares of mortgagees, lienors and lessees, see post § 106.

Right of mortgagee to appeal, see post ¶ 406.

Necessity of making mortgagees parties defendant and adjudicating their rights, see post ¶¶ 241, 243.

¶ 51. In condemnation proceedings for a railroad right of way over certain mortgaged land, where the jury found that the loss of the land for the right of way did not impair the security, held that an award of damages for such land taken, would not be warranted where the mortgagor had released same.—Detroit, B. C. & W. R. Co. v. First Nat. Bank of Yale, 196 Mich. 660. (Fellows, Stone, Ostrander and Bird, JJ., dissenting.)

§ 22. Interest of railroad in land devoted to prior use.

Proceedings necessary where one railroad seeks to acquire property of another, see post ¶ 169.

Averments in petition to condemn crossings on other railroads, see post § 67.

Laying drain across railroad right of way as "taking," see Drains § 56.

¶ 52. One railroad company has no right to appropriate, without compensation, the franchises or property of another for the construction of its road; the fact that property has been taken for a particular public use does not make it public property for all purposes; and the property rights of a railroad company in its right of way are protected by the same restrictions against appropriation by any other railroad company for railroad purposes or other public use as is afforded by the constitution and laws in the case of the private property of an individual.—Grand Rapids, N. & L. S. R. Co. v. Grand Rapids & I. R. Co., 35 Mich. 265.

§ 23. "Adjacent" or adjoining property damaged by railroad on highway.

Title and estate of public in highways and rights of abutters in general, see Highways, X.

Obstructions, encroachments and unauthorized uses of highways, see Highways, XI.

¶ 53. Where a railroad track has been laid in a public street without authority to use the street for that purpose, any adjacent proprietor who has not consented to such use is entitled to damages for such injury as he may have suffered in consequence thereof.—Grand Rapids & I. R. Co. v. Heisel, 38 Mich. 62; Grand Rapids & I. R. Co. v. Heisel, 47 Mich. 393.

¶ 54. Under Comp. L. 1897, § 6234, subd. 5, providing that no road shall be constructed upon any public street, etc., until compensation shall be made by the railroad to owners of property adjoining such street, and opposite where the road is to be constructed; property on the north side of a street was adjoining property within the act, although the road to be constructed was south of the center line of the street.—Marquette & S. E. Ry. Co. v. Longyear, 133 Mich. 94.

¶ 55. Under Comp. L. 1897, § 6234, subd. 5, providing that no road shall be constructed upon any public street, etc., until compensation shall be made to owners of property adjoining such street and opposite where the road is to be constructed, property a considerable distance away, with a street and other space intervening, was not adjoining property that damages thereto should have been awarded, although other land involved was used in connection therewith.—Marquette & S. E. Ry. Co. v. Longyear, 133 Mich. 94.

¶ 56. Under section 6234, Comp. Laws 1897, subd. 5, providing that a railway company shall not construct a railroad on a private way without compensation to the adjoining owners, the intention of the legislature was to include all private roads and ways, however created, and not to restrict the meaning to those roads laid out as "private roads" under statutory provisions.—Detroit Leather Specialty Co. v. Michigan Cent. R. Co., 149 Mich. 588.

¶ 57. The right of way of an abutting owner in a public alley is a "private way," within the terms of the statute which provides that a railroad company cannot construct a railroad on a private way without making compensation to the owners of property adjoining such way.—Detroit Leather Specialty Co. v. Michigan Cent. R. Co., 149 Mich. 588.

§ 24. Impairment of building or property restriction.

¶ 58. Building restrictions are private property, are an interest in real estate in the nature of an easement, go with the land, and are a property right of value, which cannot be taken for the public use without due process of law and compensation therefor; the validity of such restriction not being affected by the character of the parties in interest.—Allen v. City of Detroit, 167 Mich. 464; Frumveller v. Post, Id.

¶ 59. A city under its general police power cannot ignore a building restriction and erect its fire engine house within the restricted district, because it is necessary for the public good and to protect the lives and property of citizens in that locality, for since such action deprives the individual of a vested right in property, it goes beyond regulation under police power, and becomes an act of eminent domain, governed by the appropriate condemnation laws.—Allen v. City of Detroit, 167 Mich. 464; Frumveller v. Post, Id.

§ 25. Impairment or vacation of highway use or access.

See also post ¶ 240.

Alterations, extensions and changes of grade of highways in general, see Highways, V.

Abandonment, vacation or diminution of highways, see Highways, VI.

Title and estate of public in highways and rights of abutters in general, see Highways, X.

Obstructions, encroachments and unauthorized uses of highways, see Highways, XI.

¶ 60. The grading of a city street in such a manner as to throw the foot of an embankment on the front of plaintiff's premises, casting earth upon such premises to a depth of many feet and burying a part of complainant's dwelling, is a taking of private property for public use within the meaning of the constitution.—Vanderlip v. City of Grand Rapids, 73 Mich. 522.

¶ 61. There has been a "taking" of plaintiff's property where it appears that a city has constructed approaches to a bridge built above the grade of the street so that access to his property by driving is entirely cut off and those traveling on foot must descend from the street by a flight of steps.—Ransom v. City of Sault Ste. Marie, 143 Mich. 661.

¶ 62. A statute giving a city power to separate the grades of its streets from those of railroads, and prescribing the measure of damages to abutting owners, is not unconstitutional as contravening the constitutional provisions relating to the exercise of the right of eminent domain.—City of Detroit v. Grand Trunk Ry. of Canada, 163 Mich. 229.

¶ 63. The act of a city in separating the grades of railroads and streets is not a taking of private property for public uses within the meaning of the Constitution.—City of Detroit v. Grand Trunk Ry. of Canada, 163 Mich. 229.

§ 26. Interference with drainage, riparian or navigation rights.

Petition for condemning dam and flowage rights, see post § 68.

Assertion of paramount right of public in navigable waters without notice or compensation, see also Constitutional Law ¶ 602.

Injury to adjacent property by construction of bridge, see Bridges § 22.

¶ 64. Riparian rights cannot, without compensation, be taken for the purpose of making a non-navigable stream a public highway.—Thunder Bay River Booming Co. v. Speechly, 31 Mich. 336.

¶ 65. Unless compensation is made riparian rights cannot be taken for the purpose of making a stream that is only periodically navigable a public highway at all times.—Thunder Bay River Booming Co. v. Speechly, 31 Mich. 336.

¶ 66. The state cannot interfere with a riparian's profitable enjoyment of the shore without compensating him.—Maxwell v. Bay City Bridge Co., 46 Mich. 278.

¶ 67. The state has no more right to interfere with private property, without compensation, to make or improve a canal, than it has for a road upon land.—Ryan v. Brown, 18 Mich. 196.

¶ 68. Without compensation to or consent from the riparian owners, a dock-line cannot be drawn outside of navigable water, thus taking private property for public use.—City of Grand Rapids v. Powers, 89 Mich. 94.

¶ 69. Depriving a riparian proprietor of the beneficial use and enjoyment of his lands, e. g., by flowing them against his consent and without making compensation, is as much an unconstitutional appropriation of his property as the taking of the land itself without compensation; without the beneficial use, and the right to control the lands with reference thereto, the mere right to dispose of the land would be worthless to the owner.—Grand Rapids Booming Co. v. Jarvis, 30 Mich. 308.

¶ 70. Act No. 189, Pub. Acts 1905, making it lawful for individuals charged with no public or quasi public duties to temporarily boom and assort logs along the shores, and for that purpose to secure booms at points along the shore, thus giving the right of entry upon the land of others without compensation, is unconstitutional.—Garth Lumber & Shingle Co. v. Johnson, 151 Mich. 205.

¶ 71. A ditch which has been recognized by the township authorities for 20 years, cannot be legally condemned by a road proceeding in which only nominal damages were awarded, and wherein there was no pretense that the right to maintenance of the ditch was condemned, nor that any payment was made for the lowering of certain lakes in question.—Chase v. Middleton, 123 Mich. 647.

¶ 72. A stream capable in its natural condition of floating logs at some seasons of the year was made navigable for a steamer of more than fifteen tons burden, belonging to the owner of a flouring mill, by the erection of the dam which furnished the water-power for the mill. Two bridges spanning the stream above the dam were, under an arrangement with the township authorities, furnished by the owner of the mill with draws for the accommodation of the steamer, which was used to transport the products of the mill up the stream, and through the lake in which it had its rise, to a railroad station near the lake, for shipment. The bridges were afterwards rebuilt, and placed sufficiently high above the stream to permit the steamer to pass under them, the extra expense being borne by the mill-owner. One of the bridges broke down, and the township authorities prepared to rebuild it in such a way as to prevent the passage of the steamer, and the mill-owner filed a bill to enjoin such action on their part. No testimony was offered upon the hearing of the cause tending to show that complainant's right of flowage was in any way limited, or that he had not the right so to run his boat at all seasons. Held, that complainant cannot be thus deprived of his right to navigate the stream without compensation or condemnation.—Stoffiet v. Estes, 104 Mich. 208.

¶ 73. The legislature cannot extend dock-lines upon the natural bank of a river, or authorize a municipality to establish such a line so as to pass across the bank at certain points; such action would be unconstitutional as taking private property for public use without compensation.—City of Grand Rapids v. Powers, 89 Mich. 94.

§ 27. Imposed liability or burden.

Abatement of nuisance by chancery decree as imposed liability, see post ¶ 86.

Imposed liability of opening and maintaining highway across railroad, see also post ¶ 140.

¶ 74. A railroad company whose road is crossed by another's cannot be compelled to pay any part of the expense of making a crossing; and How. St., § 3350, as amended by Laws of 1883, p. 187, § 36, is unconstitutional in so far as it contemplates this.—Toledo, A. A. & N. M. R. Co. v. Detroit, L. & N. R. Co., 62 Mich. 564.

¶ 75. Laws 1873, Act No. 198, art. 4, § 15, as amended by Laws 1889, Act No. 165 (How. St., § 3377), which requires a railroad company, whose track is immediately adjacent to or laid upon a highway, to provide open, unobstructed, residence crossings, suitably guarded, substantially as are provided for highway and street crossings, on the same being so ordered by the railroad commissioner, is unconstitutional and void in so far as it provides for taking the property of a railroad company for public use without compensation.—People v. Detroit, G. H. & M. R. Co., 79 Mich. 471.

¶ 76. Comp. L. 1897, § 11653, which provides among other things that any person negligently or wilfully permitting fire to escape from his premises to those of another, shall be liable to the party injured in double the amount of damages sustained, is not unconstitutional, as taking the property of one person and giving it to another without any compensation; since the statute recognizes that where one has been damaged by the negligent act of another, compensation should follow.—Allen v. Bainbridge, 145 Mich. 366.

§ 28. Tax or assessment.

¶ 77. An assessment for the expense of constructing a drain is not such a taking of private property as entitles one who is subjected to such assessment but whose land is not taken for the drain, to a hearing upon the question of the public necessity for the drain; and the drainage law of 1895 (Pub. Acts 1895, No. 217) is not therefore unconstitutional because it does not provide for a hearing upon the question of necessity except in condemnation proceedings.—Roberts v. Smith, 115 Mich. 5.

¶ 78. Pub. Acts 1897, No. 254, Chap. 6, § 16, providing that in case any drain tax shall be set aside except for causes that would deprive the county drain commissioner of jurisdiction to control the drain, he may begin proceedings anew at the stage where they shall be correct, is not unconstitutional on the ground of subjecting persons to assessment to pay for the mistakes of the commissioner in the first proceeding; since the increased expense must be borne by those who are benefited by the drain, as a part of its costs.—Anketell v. Hayward, 119 Mich. 525.

§ 29. Repeal or amendment of charter or franchise.

Provisions in corporate charter for compensation on amending or repealing it, see Corporations, § 29.

¶ 79. Repealing the charter of a corporation franchised for a public service does not take private property for public use.—People ex rel. Ellis v. Calder, 153 Mich. 724, affirmed 218 U. S. 591, 54 L. ed. 1163, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 122.

¶ 80. Where a street railway company gets its franchise from a village whose charter does not expressly confer power to authorize the use of streets for street railways without compensating adjoining owners, it accepts such franchise subject to the right of the legislature to prescribe such compensation as a condition precedent to the use of streets for the construction of new lines of road.—Taylor v. Bay City Street R. Co., 80 Mich. 77.

¶ 81. A statute repealing the charter of a corporation engaged in municipal water supply, giving it the right to present a claim for its tangible property to the common council of the city, is not unconstitutional as permitting property to be taken for public use without the determination of the necessity therefor, or because the compensation provided is unlawful and inadequate, where the provision has no force unless the corporation chooses to accept it.—People ex rel. Ellis v. Calder, 153 Mich. 724. Affirmed in 218 U. S. 591, 54 L. ed. 1163, 31 Sup. Ct. Rep. 122.

§ 30. Onerous police and sanitary regulations.

Stopping trains at crossings and opening trains so as not to obstruct streets as police regulations, see also post ¶¶ 147, 148, 150.

Compensation for destruction of diseased live-stock, see Animals § 21.

¶ 82. A municipal regulation of the use of property, or a prohibition of its repair when partially destroyed, is not a condemnation to public use.—Brady v. Northwestern Ins. Co., 11 Mich. 425.

¶ 83. A city ordinance providing that bread shall be manufactured into loaves of certain weights and prohibiting the sale of bread deficient in weight does not authorize the seizure of short-weight bread, and does not constitute a taking of private property without compensation.—People v. Wagner, 86 Mich. 594.

¶ 84. An ordinance regulating the disposition and removal of garbage or refuse from the tables of hotels was not unconstitutional as an attempt to take private property without compensation, since it is preventive of nuisances.—People v. Gardner, 136 Mich. 693, affirmed in 199 U. S. 325, 50 L. ed. 212, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 106.

¶ 85. There is no deprival of a hotel keeper of his property without compensation, in violation of the 14th Amendment to the Federal Constitution, by the enactment of an ordinance by a large city providing for the making of a contract by the city for the exclusive collection and removal of garbage from required and specified receptacles within the city limits and forbidding removal by anyone else or interference with the work of the contractor, under penalty, even though the garbage may be valuable, for the purpose of feeding animals, or for the manufacture of grease or other merchantable products.—Gardner v. Michigan, 199 U.

S. 325, 50 L. ed. 212, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 106, affirming 136 Mich. 693.

¶ 86. Private property of the city of Detroit is not taken without just compensation by a decree requiring the abatement of a nuisance by the enlargement of a sewer into which the Village of Highland Park has emptied sewage for fifteen years under a decree of a court of chancery and the payment of annual rentals.—City of Detroit v. Village of Highland Park, 186 Mich. 166. (Equally divided court.)

§ 31. Loss of rights through fish and game laws.

¶ 87. Local Acts of 1885, Act No. 329, prohibiting the taking or catching by spears, etc., of fish in the waters of Gun lake, which lake is connected with other lakes and streams where fish migrate, even though it interferes with the catching of fish by one who owns the soil under the water, does not take his private property without compensation.—People v. Collison, 85 Mich. 105.

IV. NECESSITY, TIME AND MEASURE OF COMPENSATION.

Admissibility of opinions as to necessity, see Evidence, VI.
Compensation for property taken for drains under drain laws, see also Drains §§ 55, 56.
Damages for statutory destruction by public of diseased animals, see Animals, § 21.

§ 32. Constitutional right and necessity.

See also, ante ¶¶ 42, 44.
Public property and property in public use, see post § 33.
Incidental damages without such a "taking" as to require compensation, see post § 34.
Waiver or loss of right, see post § 35.
Necessity of compensation for interference with drainage riparian or navigation rights, see also ante § 26.
Necessity for public use, see ante §§ 11-15.
Presumption of compensation in collateral proceedings, see post § 147.
Previous decisions as law of the case on lawfulness of taking precluding recovery of damages, see also Courts ¶ 105.

¶ 88. The legislature has no power to create any exception to the rule of "just compensation."—Chicago & G. T. R. Co. v. Hough, 61 Mich. 507.

¶ 89. Compensation is a constitutional condition of the taking of private property for public use.—Sheldon v. Village of Kalamazoo, 24 Mich. 383.

¶ 90. There is no case where the actual taking of private property is damnum absque injuria.—Sheldon v. Village of Kalamazoo, 24 Mich. 383.

¶ 91. The condemnation statute as to railroads seeks to and does protect the owner in the possession of his property until it is shown that his private rights must yield to a larger public necessity; when such private rights are made so to yield, just compensation must be made.—Michigan Cent. Ry. Co. v. Miller, 172 Mich. 201.

¶ 92. Comp. L. 1897, § 4334, providing that whenever it is necessary to run a drain across the right of way or roadbed of a railroad, the proceedings shall be the same as in cases for obtaining private lands for drains, and making it the duty of the railroad company upon notice to maintain the necessary opening and build and maintain a culvert, is unconstitutional in so far as it requires the improvement to be made without compensation for the benefit of those to whom the drain is an advantage.—Chicago & Grand Trunk R. Co. v. Chappell, 124 Mich. 72.

§ 33. ——Public property and property in public use.

See also ante ¶ 52.
Necessity of compensation for damage to "adjacent" or adjoining property by railroad on highway, see ante § 23.
Right of railroad to compensation for drain crossing right of way, see Drains § 56.

¶ 93. How. St., § 1476 et seq., permitting courts to vacate city streets, cannot be regarded as unconstitutional as taking property from the city without compensation; for a city has no proprietary interest in the public streets that entitles it to compensation when a street is vacated on petition of the abutting owners.—In re Albers' Petition, 113 Mich. 640.

¶ 94. Railroad property is so far public in its nature as to be subject at all times to reasonable legislative regulation, and, on the other hand, is so far private in its character that its owners cannot be deprived of any part thereof without just compensation. —Ann Arbor R. Co. v. Fellows, 236 Fed. 387.

§ 34. Damages for injury without "taking."

Damages for closing street or destroying access as damages without "taking," see also post § 49.
Inconvenience caused by closing of street as damage without a "taking," see also post ¶ 240.

¶ 95. Under the right of eminent domain, where there is no other limitation of the power than such as is contained in our Constitution, which provides that private property shall not be taken for public use without just compensation, it is competent for the legislature to provide for a public improvement which may work incidental damage to property without providing compensation for property not actually taken.—

Buhl v. Fort Street Union Depot Co., 98 Mich. 596.

¶ 96. The diminution in value of adjoining property from maintenance of public market is not an element of damage to be paid for.—Henkel v. City of Detroit, 49 Mich. 249.

§ 35. Waiver or loss of right.

¶ 97. The rules in regard to waiver, recognized in ordinary actions, are not rigidly applied in proceedings to condemn private property for public use.—Specht v. City of Detroit, 20 Mich. 168.

¶ 98. Where a contract between the city and a railroad for the separation of grade crossings provides that the city shall pay all abuttal damages to parties other than the railroad, and that the railroad waives any and all claim for damage by reason of change of grade of streets to abutting property owned or controlled by it, the railroad is not entitled to any damages for property owned by it, regardless of whether such property is used in the operation of its road at street intersections or for other independent purposes.—City of Detroit v. Detroit United Ry., 156 Mich. 106.

§ 36. Time for compensation.

Time for recovery of past and prospective damages, see post ¶ 160.

Constitutional necessity for payment for land condemned before it is taken, see post ¶ 267.

Right of subsequent action for damage not covered in original condemnation proceedings, see post ¶ 161.

§ 37. Measure and elements in general.

[Note. Though the underlying principle of damages for wrong to property is compensation, yet it has been deemed better digesting to maintain a strict separation between this topic and Damages. For precedents on the measure of damages for tort, see Damages, III. The measure of damages for appropriation of land to public use without compensation, usually recovered in an action of trespass is treated here for the reason that although sounding in tort, the damages being permanent are measured as in condemnation cases.]

Injury to remainder, severance of tract, see post § 38.

Depreciation in rental or business value, see post § 39.

Business loss, see post § 40.

Illegal occupancy before condemnation, see post § 41.

Costs in other actions or proceedings, see post, § 42.

Valuation of property, see post §§ 43-45.

Setting off benefits against damage, see post § 46.

Speculative, punitive or vindictive damages, see post § 47.

Damages for street openings, highways and railroads, see post §§ 48-53.

Specification of amounts or gross award in determination of compensation, see post § 105.

Measure and determination of damages by jury, see post ¶ 342.

Necessity of money basis of compensation, see post ¶ 346.

Propriety of instructions as to measure and elements of compensation, see post § 93.

¶ 99. Just compensation upon the appropriation of private property involves making good all the pecuniary loss or outlay which it causes the owner.—Chicago & G. T. R. Co. v. Hough, 61 Mich. 507.

¶ 100. Compensation for, rather than the value of, the land taken is what should be allowed in condemnation proceedings, and includes more.—Grand Rapids v. Grand Rapids & I. R. Co., 58 Mich. 641.

¶ 101. When land is taken for public use the whole public, or the allotted district, or both, must pay for all that the public appropriates; the damage to property by the establishment of a public way can never be less than the value of the property taken, though it may be more.—City of Detroit v. Daly, 68 Mich. 503.

¶ 102. The condemnation statute is not intended to aid an owner in enhancing his claim for damages against the railroad to the end that he may receive a sum much in excess of the true value of the land.—Michigan Cent. Ry. Co. v. Miller, 172 Mich. 201.

¶ 103. When proceedings are had to condemn land for railway use, the damages awarded should include all the consequences of the appropriation of the land in the manner in which the company will use it. The company cannot be required to resort to a new condemnation whenever some new expenditure is to be made or change effected, unless it is something so plainly repugnant to or varying from the purpose originally contemplated as to amount to a change of user.—Barnes v. Michigan Air Line Ry., 65 Mich. 251.

¶ 104. An instruction that the jury must "award to the owners of the land the full value of the land to be taken and all additional expenses entailed upon said owners in opening said street" covers all damages to which these owners are entitled.—City of Detroit v. Beecher, 75 Mich. 454.

§ 38. ——Injury to remainder; severance of tract.

Raising question of injury to contiguous lands by answer that they with land taken constitute homestead, see post ¶ 246.

¶ 105. Where proceedings are taken to condemn a portion of a city lot for a railroad right of way, and the lot is part of a homestead lying on both sides of an alley, the award of damages cannot be confined to the land actually taken, but must cover such actual injury as is done to the entire homestead, including the easement in the alley.—Port Huron & S. W. R. Co. v. Voorheis, 50 Mich. 506.

¶ 106. Where, by the construction of a railroad, a tract of suburban land is made unsuitable for a single farm, and a part of it made inaccessible for that purpose in whole or to some extent, it is error to confine the damages of the owner to the proportionate value of the part taken to that of the entire tract for farming purposes, but he is entitled to such damages as will fully make good all that results, directly or indirectly, to his injury in the whole premises and interests affected.—Grand Rapids, L. & D. R. Co. v. Chesebro, 74 Mich. 466.

§ 39. ——Depreciation in rental or business value.

See also post ¶ 159.

Depreciation of adjoining property through the maintenance of public market as element of damage, see also ante ¶ 96.

Illegal occupancy of street by city in changing grade before instituting condemnation proceedings, see also post ¶ 139.

Instruction as to depreciation of rental value as measure of compensation, see post ¶ 323.

¶ 107. Adequate compensation for land actually taken under proceedings for its condemnation includes its value or the amount to which the value of the property from which it is taken is depreciated. Where the injury affects the rental value or enjoyment, the same principle applies.—Grand Rapids & I. R. Co. v. Heisel, 47 Mich. 393.

¶ 108. Where a railroad has been laid in a city street without the authority of the abutting owners, such an owner, who does not own the soil in the street may recover such damages as result from the interference with the natural advantage of the frontage, and for actual injuries from unusual annoyances from unusual management; and the reduction of rental value during the years sued for is a reasonable test of damage.—Grand Rapids & I. R. Co. v. Heisel, 38 Mich. 62.

¶ 109. The measure of damages to an abutting lot-owner against a railroad company which, under a mere license from the city has laid its tracks in the street, is the depreciation in the rental value of the premises by reason of the company's occupancy of the street during the time the cause of action covers.—Hoffman v. Flint & P. M. R. Co., 114 Mich. 316.

¶ 110. Under Comp. Laws 1897, § 4244, authorizing an award of damages to abutting property owners on separation of railroad and highway grades, which, with other sections of the act of which it is a part, contemplates that such damages shall be awarded in gross before the improvement is made, there can be no recovery for damages to a business, as such, carried on upon the land by the owner or by a tenant.—City of Detroit v. Detroit United Ry., 156 Mich. 106.

¶ 111. The owner of an apartment house abutting on a street on which a railroad is laid is awarded just compensation under the Constitution, art. XIII, § 1, where he is allowed as damages the depreciation in rental value for residence purposes only, although the property is more valuable than before the building of the railroad because it can be used for factory purposes.—Piantenga v. Grand Rapids Terminal Ry. Co., 190 Mich. 661. (Kuhn and Bird, JJ., dissenting.)

§ 40. ——Business loss.

Presumption on appeal as to damages for loss of business where award exceeds value of land taken, see post ¶ 430.

¶ 112. Where land used as a business stand is taken, the owner of the business is entitled, apart from the money value of the property itself, to compensation for the interruption of such business and its damage by the change.—Grand Rapids & I. R. Co. v. Weiden, 70 Mich. 390.

¶ 113. One whose land whereon stands a building, occupied by him as his place of business, is taken for public use should be compensated for such loss as he is able to show, with reasonable certainty, he will suffer during the time his business is thereby necessarily interrupted.—Commissioners of Parks of City of Detroit v. Moesta, 91 Mich. 149.

§ 41. ——Illegal occupancy before condemnation.

Trespass and action for damages for illegal occupancy, see post § 145.

¶ 114. In probate court proceedings for condemnation the land-owner may have damages assessed for a previous illegal occupancy by the company; but he is not bound to do so, and he may bring suit therefor.—Callanan v. Port Huron & N. W. R. Co., 61 Mich. 15.

¶ 115. Where land has been injured by a railroad company that has gone upon it under void condemnation proceedings, the owner's right to recover damages is unaffected by his having sold it to a third person, for the depreciation would have been taken into account in fixing the price.—Dunlap v. Toledo, A. A. & G. T. R. Co., 50 Mich. 470.

§ 42. ——Costs in other actions or proceedings.

¶ 116. The damages recoverable for laying a car track fronting on abutters cannot include costs and solicitors' fees incurred by plaintiffs in a previous suit to enjoin the laying of such track, or compensation for the time spent in such suit.—Taylor v. Bay City St. R. Co., 101 Mich. 140.

§ 43. Valuation of the property.

Comparisons with other values or damages, see post § 44.

Condemnor's improvements, see post § 45.

Excessiveness or inadequacy of compensation as determined from valuation of property taken, see post § 112.

Admissibility and competency of opinions and conclusions as to values, see post § 97.

Values and evidences of value in general, see Values.

¶ 117. The value of land for farm use is a proper subject of inquiry in proceedings to condemn it for railway purposes.—Michigan Air Line R. Co. v. Barnes, 44 Mich. 222.

¶ 118. In street opening proceedings damages on account of the destruction of a vineyard cannot be based upon testimony as to the value of the wine actually produced from the vines, where there is nothing to show the cost of cultivation or of manufacture.—City of Detroit v. Robinson, 93 Mich. 426.

§ 44. ——Comparisons with other values or damages.

¶ 119. Where the statements of the petition that the railroad corporation has sought in good faith to acquire the title, and that the land-owner demanded an exorbitant price, are denied by the answer, and where evidence is given of the sum offered and of the price asked, it is error to exclude testimony of the value of the property and of other lots in the vicinity, offered to support the answer.—Grand Rapids, L. & D. R. Co. v. Weiden, 69 Mich. 572.

¶ 120. In proceedings to determine damages for the separation of railroad and highway grades under Comp. Laws 1897, § 4244, it is not error to exclude testimony of the effect of other separations of grades upon property in the immediate vicinity, and that on other streets the slope or inclination exceeded that upon the street in question after the improvement was completed.—City of Detroit v. Detroit United Ry., 156 Mich. 106.

§ 45. ——Condemnor's improvements.

¶ 121. A railway track or other improvement wrongfully placed upon land by a railroad company, and not abandoned to the owner of the premises, cannot be treated as a part of the realty for the purpose of increasing its value in estimating the damages due to the owner in subsequent proceedings to condemn the land for the use of the company.—Toledo, A. A. & G. T. R. Co. v. Dunlap, 47 Mich. 456.

¶ 122. In assessing damages for the taking of land for railroad purposes, work already done by the railroad company upon the land in the reasonable belief that the land would be obtained by amicable means cannot be regarded as part of the realty for the purpose of increasing the damages.—In re Morgan's Appeal v. Chicago & N. E. R. Co., 39 Mich. 675.

§ 46. Setting off benefits against damage.

Setting off increase in factory value against depreciation in residence value, see also ante ¶ 111.

Specification of benefits in verdicts in street opening cases, see Highways, II, B.

Reckoning benefits and damages in fixing amount of assessments for local improvements, see Local Improvements, VI.

¶ 123. In proceedings for condemnation of land for a railroad right of way, benefits cannot offset damages, in the absence of statutory authority.—Detroit, B. C. & W. R. Co. v. First Nat. Bank of Yale, 196 Mich. 660.

§ 47. Speculative, punitive or vindictive damages.

Instruction as to speculative damages, see post ¶ 321.

¶ 124. On an inquest in proceedings for a right of way there can be no treble and no vindictive damages.—Grand Rapids, L. & D. R. Co. v. Chesebro, 74 Mich. 466.

¶ 125. A city which has taken possession of and used a house of the plaintiff for a pest house is liable for the reasonable sum which such use is worth under the circumstances, unaffected by the fact that the possession was obtained by a trick practiced by the health officer of the city.—Bodewig v. City of Port Huron, 141 Mich. 564.

§ 48. Damages for highways and street openings.

For closing street or destroying access, see post § 49.

For changes of grades, see post § 50.

For crossing of railroad by highway, see post § 51.

For crossing railroad by railroad, see post § 52.

For railroads on highways, see post § 53.

Instruction as to measure of compensation in street opening, see post ¶ 324.

Alterations, extensions and changes of grade of highways in general, see Highways, V.

Title and estate of public in highways and rights of abutters in general, see Highways, X.

Obstructions, encroachments and unauthorized uses of highways, see Highways, XI.
Dedication as implied waiver of damages for any and all servitudes incident to and contemplated in highways, see Dedication, § 30, ¶¶ 127, 129, 131.
Occupation of street without condemnation as continuous tort admitting of successive recoveries, see Damages ¶ 150.
Instruction as to addition of interest as damages to abutting owners, see also Damages ¶ 1480.

¶ 126. In proceedings for opening a street damages to be awarded a property owner cannot include the cost, of grading and paving the street, that may hereafter be assessed on his adjoining property.—City of Detroit v. Beecher, 75 Mich. 454.

¶ 127. The damages awarded in proceedings to take private property for a public street cover the possible injury from future changes of grade.—City of Pontiac v. Carter, 32 Mich. 164.

¶ 128. Expense of cleaning snow from the prospective street cannot be considered as an item of damage to be allowed the property owner through whose land the streets will pass.—City of Detroit v. Beecher, 75 Mich. 454.

¶ 128a. There being no ordinance requiring streets to be fenced, and no evidence showing necessity for such fencing, the expense thereof cannot be included in the damages to a property owner in proceedings for opening a street.—City of Detroit v. Beecher, 75 Mich. 454.

§ 49. ——For closing street or destroying access.

¶ 129. The inconvenience to a land-owner —whose means of ingress or egress is not thereby cut off but only rendered less convenient—resulting from the closing of a part of a street upon which part his premises do not front is damnum absque injuria.—Buhl v. Fort St. Union Depot Co., 98 Mich. 596.

¶ 130. The injury sustained by a land owner whose land fronts upon a public street, but not upon that part occupied and closed by a union depot company under Laws 1891, Act No. 94, and whose means of ingress and egress are not thereby cut off, but only rendered less convenient, is damnum absque injuria, and damages are not recoverable under said act, which provides that, in case of such occupancy and closing the company shall pay to all parties entitled to the same any and all damages that may accrue to them in consequence thereof.—Buhl v. Fort St. Union Depot Co., 98 Mich. 596.

¶ 131. The injury caused an abutting property owner by the closing of a public street for the construction according to law of a railway station, is damnum absque injuria, where his means of egress and ingress are not completely cut off but merely rendered less convenient.—Sioux City Seed & Nursery Co. v. Detroit & Mackinac Ry. Co., 184 Mich. 181.

¶ 132. Under Comp. Laws 1897, § 4244, authorizing an award of damages to abutting property owners on separation of railroad and highway grades, construed with other sections of the act of which it is a part, inconvenience caused to the general public and to the plaintiff, temporarily or permanently, on account of rendering the street less convenient for use, and injury and inconvenience resulting from closing the street, in whole or in part, to public travel during the progress of the work, does not support a claim for damages.—City of Detroit v. Detroit United Ry., 156 Mich. 106.

§ 50. ——For changes of grades.

See also ante ¶ 110.
Necessity of presenting in lower court material points affecting right to damages for charges of grade, see post ¶ 418a.
Impairment of property rights by separation of street and railroad grades, see ante ¶¶ 62, 63.
Right to damages for separation of crossing grades, see Highways, V.

¶ 133. The award of damages in an action by an abutting owner for injury to his land from a change of grade in the street for the purpose of carrying it across a railroad, made without a prior ascertainment of damages as contemplated by Pub. Acts 1893, No. 92, should be in gross, and not merely for the damage which has already accrued, since the statute contemplates an award in gross in proceedings instituted thereunder.—Harper v. City of Detroit, 110 Mich. 427.

¶ 134. Under Comp. Laws 1897, § 4244, authorizing an award of damages to abutting property owners on separation of railroad and highway grades, abutting property which is not taken, and which is worth no less after the improvement is made than it was worth before, is not damaged, and the owner thereof is entitled to no compensation.—City of Detroit v. Detroit United Ry., 156 Mich. 106.

¶ 135. In proceedings for the determination of damages for the separation of railroad and highway grades, a city is not liable to an abutting owner for expenses incurred by it in removing its business structure to the changed elevation of the railroad tracks, so as to preserve its connection with such tracks.—City of Detroit v. Michigan Cent. R. Co., 156 Mich. 121.

¶ 136. In proceedings commenced under Comp. L. 1897, Chap. 102, for the separation of grades and the abolition of grade crossings damages may be awarded for injuries to the interest of a tenant of a railroad right of way.—City of Detroit v. C. H. Little Co., 146 Mich. 373.

¶ 137. In proceedings to enforce the separation of grades and to assess damages, a tenant of a railroad right of way can only recover compensation due to improvements upon which his property actually abutted; and as to other improvements on that street, while the damages may have been greater to him than to others having occasion to use the streets the difference was one of degree and not of kind and he cannot recover them. —City of Detroit v. C. H. Little Co., 146 Mich. 373.

¶ 138. In proceedings for the separation of grades under Comp. L. 1897, Chap. 102, the measure of damages to a tenant of a railroad right of way caused by their being compelled to move their warehouses is not the value of the term of the lease less the rent reserved, and the court did not err in refusing to adopt such measure.—City of Detroit v. C. H. Little Co., 146 Mich. 373.

¶ 139. Where a city had begun the tearing up of streets whereby they had become impassable before commencing judicial proceedings for the separation of grades, a tenant of a railroad right of way who has moved his buildings before the judicial proceedings were legally commenced does not lose his right to damages because he has in good faith treated the city's unlawful proceedings as lawful and moved his buildings to lessen his damages.—City of Detroit v. C. H. Little Co., 146 Mich. 373.

§ 51. ——For crossing of railroad by highway.

Necessity of indemnification for expense of maintaining crossing gateman as determined by view, see post ¶ 344.

Condemnation procedure for crossing of railroad by highway, see Highways, II, B.

Condemnation for right to change grades in separating grades of railroads and intersecting highways, see Highways, V.

Duty of railroads to erect and maintain crossings for benefit of individuals, see Railroads, IV.

¶ 140. Laws 1883, Act No. 166, relating to highways over railroad crossings, is invalid in so far as it provides that the expense of opening and maintaining a highway across the track of a railroad company shall rest on the company, while nothing but the actual value of the land shall be paid on condemnation thereof. Private property cannot be appropriated to public use without just compensation.—Chicago & G. T. R. Co. v. Hough, 61 Mich. 507.

¶ 141. Where a boulevard is extended across a railroad company's tracks, the company is entitled to compensation for the expense of maintaining safety-gates at the crossing.—Commissioners of Parks of Detroit v. Michigan Cent. R. Co., 90 Mich. 385; Commissioners of Parks of Detroit v. Detroit, G. H. & M. R. Co., 93 Mich. 58.

¶ 142. Whether the compensation to be made to a railroad company on the opening of a street across its tracks should include the expense of constructing, maintaining and operating a gate or tower, if the jury finds the same to be necessary for the protection of the public is ruled by City of Grand Rapids v. Grand Rapids & I. R. Co., 58 Mich. 641; Commissioners of Parks v. Chicago, D. & C. G. T. J. R. Co., 91 Mich. 291; Commissioners of Parks v. Michigan Cent. R. Co., 90 Mich. 385; City of Grand Rapids v. Bennett, 106 Mich. 528.

¶ 143. In a condemnation proceeding by a park commission as against a railroad company for a boulevard across its right of way whether the erection and maintenance of gates or the employment of flagmen is at the time of condemnation necessary for the proper protection of the railroad company and the public is a question of fact for the jury; and, if such necessity is found, the company is entitled to compensation for the damage consequent upon such erection and maintenance or employment.—Commissioners of Parks of City of Detroit v. Chicago, D. & C. G. T. J. R. Co., 91 Mich. 291.

¶ 144. Where, by reason of the condemnation of a highway crossing over a railroad company's tracks, an adjacent warehouse, and the land on which it stands, are rendered less available and less valuable for warehouse purposes, the company is entitled to be compensated for such damage.—Commissioners of Parks of City of Detroit v. Chicago, D. & C. G. T. J. R. Co., 91 Mich. 291.

¶ 145. Compensation and not the value of the land within the right of way is the measure of damages where a crossing is condemned for a street opening over a railroad. —City of Grand Rapids v. Bennett, 106 Mich. 528, per McGrath, C. J.

¶ 146. The compensation to be made to a railroad company for crossing its right of way for street purposes not only includes the use of the land occupied by the street for such crossing, but any extra expense created by the use of the right of way for the street in the ordinary use of the company's road, and such other damage as it may sustain for injury to its track, right of way and franchise, occasioned by the crossing, and which may properly be considered as the natural and proximate cause thereof. Such compensation does not include expenses required for compliance with the police regulations of the state or municipality, but covers only the expenses that arise in making the structural changes necessary to comply with statutory regulations, and that must necessarily continue in the future operations of the railroad.—In re First St., City of Grand Rapids v. Grand Rapids & I. R. Co., 66 Mich. 42.

¶ 147. Upon condemnation of a right of way for a street across a railroad, the railroad is not entitled to compensation for expense of observing public regulations.—Village of Plymouth v. Pere Marquette R. Co., 139 Mich. 347.

¶ 148. In condemnation proceedings for a right of way for a street across a railroad tract, compensation should not be awarded because it would be necessary to open certain of the trains at the crossing to avoid obstructing the street for more than five minutes as prohibited by statute, since such five minute rule may be repealed at any time by the legislature and to that extent is a police regulation.—Village of Plymouth v. Pere Marquette R. Co., 139 Mich. 347.

¶ 149. Upon condemnation of a right of way for a street across a railroad, the railroad company is entitled to compensation for structural changes made necessary and for any direct expense made necessary thereby such as maintaining a flagman, or gates or cattle guards.—Village of Plymouth v. Pere Marquette R. Co., 139 Mich. 347.

§ 52. ——For crossing of railroad by railroad.

Imposing part of expense of crossing on established railroad as a "taking," see ante ¶ 74.

Right of condemnor to possession pending vesting of title, see post ¶ 402b.

Estimate of compensation by commissioners for crossing of railroad by railroad illegally made as condition for injunction against interference, see post ¶ 492.

Permit or approval by Railroad Commission or other authority after condemnation as condition precedent to crossing, see Railroads, IV.

¶ 150. The damages to be paid by one railroad company for the right to cross another's track should include the cost of maintaining signals, a crossing system, and a watchman, if necessary; but the value of the land, since it is not acquired, and the cost of stopping trains at the crossing, since that is required as a police regulation are not proper items of damage.—Flint & P. M. R. Co. v. Detroit & B. C. R. Co., 64 Mich. 350.

¶ 151. The compensation to be paid to one railroad where a crossing is effected by another includes the value of the land taken, the damage suffered from the interruption of its business, and the damages accruing from the expense made necessary by such crossing.—Toledo, A. A. & N. M. R. Co. v. Detroit, L. & N. R. Co., 63 Mich. 645.

¶ 152. The compensation to one railroad for a crossing effected by another properly includes the value of the land and any additional expense created in the ordinary use of respondent's road, or any other injury or damage to its track, right of way or franchise occasioned by the crossing, and which may properly be considered as the natural, necessary and proximate cause thereof.—Toledo, A. A. & N. M. R. Co. v. Detroit, L. & N. R. Co., 62 Mich. 564.

§ 53. ——For railroads on highways.

See also ante ¶¶ 108, 109, 111.

Right to damages for railroad in highway as affected by transfer of land by abutting owner, see post ¶ 509.

Necessity of presenting in lower court points as to measure of damages for maintenance of crossing, see post ¶ 419.

Rights of abutters for street railways on highways, see Highways, X.

¶ 153. The general principles on which to assess the damages resulting to a freehold from the operation of a railroad on the adjacent highway are the same as if no highway had previously existed; and its existence would only be a circumstance tending to diminish the recovery.—Grand Rapids & I. R. Co. v. Heisel, 38 Mich. 62.

¶ 154. Where a railroad has been laid in a city street without authority and without the consent of, or compensation to, the abutting owners, such an owner who does not own the soil in the street cannot recover damages for permanent diminution in value of his premises or for the appropriation of the soil in such street.—Grand Rapids & I. R. Co. v. Heisel, 38 Mich. 62; Grand Rapids & I. R. Co. v. Heisel, 47 Mich. 393.

¶ 155. Where a public street is taken by a railroad company for its track, an abutting owner whose ownership does not extend beyond the street line is not entitled to be compensated as owner for the taking of the land, but is confined to such damages as would affect her as adjacent occupant and proprietor.—Grand Rapids & I. R. Co. v. Heisel, 38 Mich. 62; Grand Rapids & I. R. Co. v. Heisel, 47 Mich. 393.

¶ 156. An owner whose land has been taken for a street, and subsequently appropriated for railroad purposes is entitled to such damages as he would have been allowed to recover on proper proceedings for condemnation.—Grand Rapids & I. R. Co. v. Heisel, 38 Mich. 62; Grand Rapids & I. R. Co. v. Heisel, 47 Mich. 393.

¶ 157. Where under the law of the case a street railway is liable for all damages resulting to abutters from the construction of the road, damages are included which ensue from the construction of its track raised above the pavement, even though the track was laid on the grade established by the city, and though defendant could not lay its track on any other grade.—Taylor v. Bay City St. R. Co., 101 Mich. 140.

¶ 158. Diminution in value of estate of abutting owner who does not own soil in street from laying track and properly operating railroad in such street is damnum absque injuria.—Grand Rapids & I. R. Co. v. Heisel, 38 Mich. 62; Grand Rapids & I. R. Co. v. Heisel, 47 Mich. 393.

¶ 159. The measure of damages for the construction of a railroad in a public street opposite an apartment house without previously paying damages as required by Comp. Laws of 1897, § 6234, subd. 5, How. 2nd. Ed., § 6587, is the depreciation in the rental value for residence purposes only, although the property is more valuable than before because it can be used for factory purposes.—Plantenga v. Grand Rapids Terminal Ry. Co., 190 Mich. 661. (Kuhn and Brooke, JJ., dissenting.)

¶ 160. An abutting owner, suing for damages for the construction of a railroad in the highway without his consent (Comp. L. 1897, § 6234, subd. 5), may recover in one action all damages past and prospective measured by the rule in condemnation cases.—Keyser v. Lake Shore & M. S. Ry. Co., 142 Mich. 143.

¶ 161. For constructing a railroad in a highway on which plaintiff abuts the damages analogous to those in condemnation cases should not include any but permanent damages due to the proper operation of the railroad in the usual way; and others should be left to be recovered in another action.—Keyser v. Lake Shore & M. S. Ry. Co., 142 Mich. 143.

¶ 162. The damages in an action on the case against a railroad company which without consent or condemnation built in a highway on which plaintiff abutted do not include the value of the soil in the highway, where plaintiff's title deed excluded it.—Keyser v. Lake Shore & M. S. Ry. Co., 142 Mich. 143.

V. CONDEMNATION PROCEEDINGS.

Due process in condemnation proceedings, see Constitutional Law § 151.
Street opening proceedings other than matters common to condemnations generally, see Highways, II, B.
Procedure in change of grade cases in so far as peculiar to them, see Highways, V.
Procedure for laying out private roads, see Highways, XV.
Condemnation proceedings for drains, see Drains, §§ 27-45.
Special proceedings to condemn land for school sites, see Schools, II.
Procedure for local improvements, see Local Improvements, III.
General provisions of the constitution, see Const., art. XIII, §§ 1-4.
Condemnation proceedings by the State, see Comp. L. 1915, §§ 349-352.
Condemnation proceedings by state agencies and public corporations, see Comp. L. 1915, §§ 353-373.
Proceedings by cities of fourth class, see Comp. L. 1915, §§ 3136-3164.
Purposes for which proceedings may be brought by fourth class city, see Comp. L. 1915, § 3136.
Proceedings by cities and villages in general, see Comp. L. 1915, §§ 3376-3400.
When and how proceedings by cities and villages commenced, see Comp. L. 1915, § 3377.
General proceedings by cities and villages for property outside their corporate limits, see Comp. L. 1915, § 3395.
Authority of cities and villages to proceed under their charters or under other special acts, see Comp. L. 1915, § 3399.
Proceedings by villages, see Comp. L. 1915, §§ 2784-2819.
Village proceedings before justice of peace, see Comp. L. 1915, §§ 2787-2799.
Village proceedings in circuit court, see Comp. L. 1915, §§ 2801-2814.
Optional right to take fourth class city proceedings or general city and village proceedings, see Comp. L. 1914, § 3137.
Alternative right to condemn under village proceedings or under general proceedings for cities and villages, see Comp. L. 1915, § 2785.
Proceedings by railroad, bridge or tunnel company as lessee, see Comp. L. 1915, § 8253.
Proceedings for acquiring title to state or municipal lands in railroad, bridge or tunnel proceedings, see Comp. L. 1915, § 8261.
Proceedings to acquire unused right of way or roadbed of another railroad company, see Comp. L. 1915, § 8251.

A. IN GENERAL; PRELIMINARIES AND JURISDICTION.

§ 54. Nature of proceedings.

Strictness of procedure, see post § 55.
Validity, effect and application of statutes, see post § 56.
Special nature of proceedings, see also post ¶ 309.

¶ 163. Condemnation proceedings are not judicial in the ordinary sense.—Toledo, A. A. & G. T. R. Co. v. Dunlap, 47 Mich. 456.

¶ 164. Proceedings to condemn land are special and summary in character, and, while subject to judicial review and supervision for certain purposes, are not judicial proceedings.—United States Gypsum Co. v. Kent Circuit Judge, 150 Mich. 668.

¶ 165. A proceeding for the condemnation of land for railroad purposes is not strictly judicial in character, but is summary rather, and dilatory proceedings are not favored.—Chicago & K. Terminal R. Co. v. Grand Rapids & I. Ry. Co., 153 Mich. 686.

§ 55. Strictness of procedure.

¶ 166. Every material requirement must be strictly observed in carrying out laws for condemning private property to public uses, and the proceedings must show affirmatively on their face a substantial adherence to the course prescribed by the statute.—Kroop v. Forman, 31 Mich. 144; Power's Appeal, 29 Mich. 504; Detroit Sharpshooters' Ass'n v. Hamtramck Highway Com'rs, 34 Mich. 36; Toledo, A. A. & N. M. R. Co. v. Munson, 57 Mich. 42.

¶ 167. In proceedings to take private property for public use there can be no substantial departure from any of the fundamental requirements of the statute without vitiating the whole proceeding.—Specht v. City of Detroit, 20 Mich. 168.

§ 56. Validity, effect and application of statutes.

Effect of enactment of general law for condemnation by state agencies and public corporations on local Detroit act, see ante ¶ 16.

Effect on pending proceedings of repeal without saving clause of local Detroit Condemnation Act by enactment of Local Acts of 1895, No. 467, see Statutes, V.

¶ 168. The act of 1869, in providing for condemnation for improvement of navigable waters, was fatally defective in its provisions (adopted by reference to the plank-road act) relating to the inquiry before commissioners and the duties of such commissioners in condemnation since no method for ascertaining necessary facts was provided.—Clark v. Pennoyer Creek Improvement Co., 34 Mich. 204.

¶ 169. The same legal proceedings must be had where one railroad company seeks to acquire the property of another to effect a crossing as in the condemnation of private property for public purposes in other cases.—Toledo, A. A. & N. M. R. Co. v. Detroit, L. & N. R. Co., 62 Mich. 564.

¶ 170. An application, under Laws 1885, Act No. 94, for the appointment of a special commissioner to superintend the improvement of Maple river, was void because it was executed before the statute was passed.—Wilcox v. Paddock, 65 Mich. 23.

¶ 171. The right of a street railway company to condemn private property as conferred by Act No. 133, Public Laws, 1905, amendatory of Comp. Laws, 1897, § 6446, is not invalidated by a reference in the act to the provisions of another statute, making it and the procedure indicated by it applicable.—Detroit United Ry. v. Barnes Paper Co., 172 Mich. 586.

¶ 172. Section 2834, c. 87, Comp. Laws 1897, provides that before ordering any public improvement the council shall publish the estimated expense and diagrams thereof. Held, this act does not control steps taken under Act 176, Pub. Acts 1903, concerning condemnation proceedings.—Weber v. City of Detroit, 158 Mich. 149.

¶ 173. The statutes providing for the construction of the state railroads, and constituting a board to which claims might be presented for lands taken, considered.—People ex rel. Green v. Michigan Southern R. Co., 3 Mich. 496.

§ 57. Jurisdiction of courts.

Functions of judge on hearing, see post § 89.

Necessity of proof of service of notice to confer jurisdiction on court, see post ¶ 235.

Jurisdiction of court to grant order allowing possession to condemnor without hearing or notice, see post §§ 402a, 402b.

Jurisdiction for appeal and review, see post § 123.

Want of jurisdiction as ground for review on certiorari, see post ¶ 450.

Jurisdiction of probate court in general, see Probate Courts, I.

General powers of probate court, see Probate Courts, I.

Jurisdiction of recorders' courts under city and village improvement act, see Comp. L. 1915, § 3377.

Jurisdiction of court for proceedings instituted by the State, see Comp. L. 1915, § 349.

¶ 174. The jurisdiction of the probate court in condemnation proceedings is not a part of the ordinary and general jurisdiction of that court.—United States Gypsum Co. v. Kent Circuit Judge, 150 Mich. 668.

¶ 175. Recorder's court has exclusive jurisdiction in City of Detroit, of proceedings to acquire land under Act No. 541, Local Acts 1903, for public use.—City of Detroit v. Weil, 180 Mich. 593.

¶ 176. Whether a railroad company seeking to condemn land is such a public corporation as is authorized to exercise the right of eminent domain cannot be passed upon by the inferior tribunals vested with the power of entertaining condemnation proceedings.—Traverse City, K. & G. R. Co. v. Seymour, 81 Mich. 378.

¶ 177. The probate court cannot direct a continuance in condemnation proceedings before commissioners appointed by it.—Michigan Cent. R. Co. v. Tuscola Probate Judge, 48 Mich. 638.

§ 58. Filing survey and map.

Averments in petition as to location and survey, see post § 63.

Sufficiency of map and survey as subject for special finding, see post ¶ 367.

Map as supplemental to description in petition, see post ¶ 225.

¶ 178. Under Comp. Laws 1897, § 6243, as amended by Act No. 80, Public Acts of 1901, and under Comp. Laws 1897, § 6232, as amended by Act No. 128, Public Acts of 1905, relating to condemnation proceedings for railroad purposes, a proceeding is not defective because of the failure of petitioner to make, certify and file a map.—Michigan Cent. Ry. Co. v. Miller, 172 Mich. 201.

¶ 179. The certificate of location of the petitioner's road in condemnation proceedings for a railroad right of way, if expressly under the hands of the company's directors, or a majority of them and which certifies the accompanying map or survey as being descriptive of the proposed line and sets forth the purpose of the filing, is sufficient to comply with the general railroad law.—Bay City Belt Line R. Co. v. Hitchcock, 90 Mich. 533.

¶ 180. A map of a proposed railroad on which the center line of the track is designated by a colored line indicates with reasonable certainty the location of the line, and hence the space to be occupied by the standard-gauge road proposed to be laid along the line so designated.—Bay City Belt Line R. Co. v. Hitchcock, 90 Mich. 533.

¶ 181. Neither the map nor certificate of location of a railroad stated the gauge or width between the rails, but the articles of association declared the purpose of the company to be to construct a road of the standard gauge. Held, in condemnation proceedings, to be sufficiently definite.—Bay City Belt Line R. Co. v. Hitchcock, 90 Mich. 533.

¶ 182. The map and survey required by Laws 1859, pp. 559, 560, must embody or be accompanied by such full and accurate notes and data as will furnish complete means for identifying the precise position of every part of the line, with courses and distances throughout, so that there can be no doubt as to where any portion of it is to be found.—Convers v. Grand Rapids & I. R. Co., 18 Mich. 459.

¶ 183. The failure of a plat to conform to the statutory requirements as a good one for all purposes does not prevent it from being the proper legal definition of lands by the act of the parties for purposes of description in condemnation proceedings.—Manistee & N. E. R. Co. v. Fowler, 73 Mich. 217.

¶ 184. If it is to be implied that the filing of a map or survey is a prerequisite to maintaining condemnation proceedings by a railroad company, then a map which points out in a general way the route of the proposed road and the termini, is sufficient, as complying with the statute and it need not contain the description of the particular real estate sought to be condemned (Pub. Acts 1901, No. 80, § 7).—Detroit & T. S. L. R. Co. v. Campbell, 140 Mich. 384.

¶ 185. Whether the map and survey sufficiently identified the property sought to be acquired in condemnation proceeding is a jurisdictional question to be determined by the court on the application for the appointment of commissioners.—Toledo, S. & M. R. Co. v. Campau, 83 Mich. 33.

§ 59. Previous effort to purchase or obtain consents.

Averments in petition as to negotiations for purchase or consent, see post § 66.

Effect of proceedings where petition was sworn to before effort made to purchase or obtain consent, see post ¶ 466.

Alternative power of purchase of property by village without condemnation proceedings, see Comp. L. 1915, § 2819.

¶ 186. A street-opening law is not made unconstitutional by the omission to provide that before proceedings can be taken thereunder there must be some attempt to get the permission of the owners of property to be effected.—Grand Rapids v. Grand Rapids & I. R. Co., 58 Mich. 641.

¶ 187. Where it appears that one of the respondents is an infant, that fact alone is enough to save the court's jurisdiction of a railroad company's proceedings for a right of way, though a previous offer of payment made by the petitioner may have been insufficient.—Grand Rapids, L. & D. R. Co. v. Chesebro, 74 Mich. 466.

¶ 188. The negotiations required by the statute before instituting condemnation proceedings contemplate knowledge on the landowner's part of the purpose for which the land is wanted.—Fort-Street Union Depot Co. v. Jones, 83 Mich. 415.

¶ 189. All that a statute requires of a railroad before bringing a condemnation proceeding is that a bona fide effort be made to acquire the property by purchase.—Michigan Cent. Ry. Co. v. Miller, 172 Mich. 201.

¶ 190. A bona fide offer by a railroad company of the amount which it considers a fair price for land, and the owner's refusal to accept it, are sufficient negotiations even though the agent making the offer did not expect that the offer would be accepted.—Fort-Street Union Depot Co. v. Jones, 83 Mich. 415.

¶ 191. Where prior to bringing a condemnation petition a railroad offers a certain sum for the property, and the testimony of experts at the trial and the amount of the verdict of the jury indicate that the offer was adequate, the petition cannot be defeated on the ground that the offer was not made in good faith.—Michigan Cent. Ry. Co. v. Miller, 172 Mich. 201.

¶ 192. Attempts to secure options for the purchase of land do not satisfy the requirement that there must be an attempt to purchase the land before eminent domain proceedings are begun.—Michigan Cent. R. Co. v. Ferguson, 162 Mich. 220.

B. PETITION AND PROCESS, OBJECTIONS AND ANSWERS.

§ 60. Petition.

Jurisdictional facts, see post § 61.
Averments of public use, necessity and intent of condemnor, see post § 62.
Averments as to location, survey and approval, see post § 63.
Description of property and particular uses, see post § 64.
Averments as to lands abutting on street taken, see post § 65.
Averments as to negotiations for purchase of consent, see post § 66.
Averments to condemn crossings on other roads, see post § 67.
Averments for condemning dam and flowage rights, see post § 68.
Lands to be joined in one petition, see post § 69.
Filing survey and map and previous effort to purchase or obtain consent as condition precedent to petition, see ante §§ 58, 59.
Necessity for filing new petition, see post ¶ 210.
Effect of petition sufficient in part and denied in part, see post ¶ 248.
Joint petition as validating a joint award, see post ¶ 360.
Petition for street opening or location or establishment of highway, see Highways, II, B, 1.
Petition for private way, see Highways, XV.
Averments of petition in proceedings instituted by the State, see Comp. L. 1915, ¶ 350.
Petition in proceedings brought by state agency or public corporation, see Comp. L. 1915, § 357.
Amendment of petition, process, record or proceedings in suit by public corporation or state agency, see Comp. L. 1915, § 364.
Petition in general city and village proceedings, see Comp. L. 1915, § 3378.
Petition in fourth class city proceedings, see Comp. L. 1915, § 3139.
Petition in village proceedings before justice of peace, see Comp. L. 1915, § 2787.
Petition in village proceedings in circuit court, see Comp. L. 1915, § 2801.
Petition in proceeding by railroad, bridge or tunnel company, see Comp. L. 1915, § 8252.

¶ 193. Petition for condemnation of land for use of railroad set forth and held sufficient in form and substance.—East Saginaw & St. C. R. Co. v. Benham, 28 Mich. 459.

¶ 194. A petition by one railroad to condemn land owned by another railroad is sufficient if it avers the facts required by statute, without negativing the exceptions of the statute, or setting out by way of exclusion and inclusion every fact which the owner may rely on to show the property to be exempt.—Chicago & K. Terminal R. Co. v. Grand Rapids & I. Ry. Co., 153 Mich. 686

§ 61. ——Jurisdictional facts.

Negotiation for purchase as jurisdictional fact to be alleged, see also post ¶¶ 217, 218.
Sufficiency of map and survey as jurisdictional fact, see ante ¶ 185.

¶ 195. A petition to condemn lands for the erection of a dam for mill purposes is jurisdictional, and must allege every fact necessary to entitle the petitioners to make the alleged improvement.—Fox v. Holcomb, 34 Mich. 298.

¶ 196. In condemnation proceedings where a river is to be improved the petition is jurisdictional and must set forth all the facts necessary to show that the petitioning corporation is authorized to make the proposed improvement and has taken all the necessary preliminary steps.—Clay v. Pennoyer Creek Improvement Co., 34 Mich. 204.

¶ 197. A petition to condemn lands for railroad right of way, alleging that petitioner was organized to construct a railroad between stated points; that it caused surveys to be made; that it had located its road in accordance with such surveys and that it was petitioner's intention in good faith to construct, finish and maintain said railroad on the line so located, from the stated junction through certain named territory to the shore of Lake Michigan, contained sufficient jurisdictional allegations to comply with Comp. L. § 6243, as amended by Act No. 80, Pub. Acts 1901.—Marquette & S. E. Ry. Co. v. Longyear, 133 Mich. 94.

§ 62. ——Averments of public use, necessity and intent of condemnor.

Intent of condemnor, see also post ¶ 215.
Public uses and necessity in general, see ante §§ 11-15.
Finding based on petition failing to show condemnor's intent as to lands mentioned, see post ¶ 354.

¶ 198. A petition to acquire title to land for railroad purposes must allege that the taking is necessary for the public use.—Grand Rapids, N. & L. S. R. Co. v. Van Driele, 24 Mich. 409.

¶ 199. A petition which alleges that the property sought is "required" for public use is sufficient. "Required" is synonymous with "necessary."—Flint & P. M. R. Co. v. Detroit & B. C. R. Co., 64 Mich. 350.

¶ 200. Where a railroad seeks to condemn a right of way, under the condemnation statute, the use mentioned in the petition must be a public use, and the necessity a public necessity.—Pere Marquette R. Co. v. United States Gypsum Co., 154 Mich. 290.

¶ 201. The petition need not show an intention to build the entire road if a division of fifteen miles has been lawfully designated; but in such case it must appear in the petition affirmatively that such division has been lawfully made in such manner as to conform to the statute.—Chicago & M. L. S. R. Co. v. Sanford, 23 Mich. 418.

¶ 202. Proceedings to condemn land for the erection of a passenger station cannot be sustained where it does not appear affirmatively from the face of the proceedings that the petitioner has determined to erect a passenger station and to acquire land in the district for that purpose.—Michigan Cent. R. Co. v. Ferguson, 162 Mich. 220.

§ 63. ——Averments as to location, survey and approval.

Sufficiency of averments as to location and surveys, see also ante ¶ 197.

Necessity and sufficiency of survey and map, see ante § 58.

¶ 203. Under Pub. Acts 1901, No. 80, it is not necessary that a railroad company in proceeding to the condemnation of land shall allege the filing of a map or survey.—Detroit & T. S. L. R. Co. v. Campbell, 140 Mich. 384.

§ 64. ——Description of property and particular uses.

Effect of mistakes and ambiguities in description of finding, see post § 104.

Sufficiency of description in map and survey, see ante ¶¶ 179-185.

Description of property in petition in proceedings brought by state agency or public corporation, see Comp. L. 1915, § 357.

Description of property in general city and village proceedings, see Comp. L. 1915, § 3378.

¶ 204. Where land is to be taken for public purposes the description in the petition should be as definite as is necessary in a deed.—Detroit, S. & D. R. Co. v. Wayne Circuit Judge, 95 Mich. 318.

¶ 205. Where it is sought to appropriate the land of several persons for a right of way for a railroad, the petition therefor must distinctly describe each parcel and the purposes for which it is wanted, and must give the reasons for the necessity of proceeding to take it under the statute.—Chicago & M. L. S. R. Co. v. Sanford, 23 Mich. 418.

¶ 206. The description of land to be taken for public purposes should be made as definite as would be necessary for a deed, at every stage of the proceedings at which it has to be set forth.—Mathias v. Carson, 49 Mich. 465.

¶ 207. The proper description should be petitioned for and left to the jury free from any questions except as to necessity of condemnation and value.—Manistee & N. E. R. Co. v. Fowler, 73 Mich. 217.

¶ 208. A petition for condemnation is jurisdictionally defective if it only describes the land as a strip 100 feet wide, commencing on the east line of the W. ½ of the S. W. ¼ of section 22, running N. 59° 10′ W. across certain designated governmental subdivisions, and lying 50 feet on each side of the center line of a specified railroad as located by a certain survey and indicated by stakes. And a report by the jury which describes the land in this way, and gives no map and does not name, as far as possible, the owners of land to be condemned, will not sustain an award.—Toledo, A. A. & N. M. R. Co. v. Munson, 57 Mich. 42.

¶ 209. The application for the appointment of commissioners to condemn land must describe each owner's land proposed to be taken with as much certainty as is required in conveyance, and should contain such data that the precise location of each parcel of land may be found by the commissioners and its area computed.—Kinnie v. Bare, 68 Mich. 625.

¶ 210. A petition for a right of way for a railroad is too defective to maintain proceedings if it does not distinguish the lands of the several owners, nor show the cause of proceeding against each; and when a verdict under it is set aside, the case cannot be referred back to a new jury, but the parties must proceed by a new application.—Chicago & M. L. S. R. Co. v. Sanford, 23 Mich. 418.

¶ 211. A petition in condemnation proceedings for a railroad not stating that the company intends to lay more than one track, the line whereof is located according to its map and survey, is not objectionable as not stating the number of tracks to be laid, for under it not more than the track thus indicated could be laid.—Bay City Belt Line R. Co. v. Hitchcock, 90 Mich. 533.

¶ 212. A petition by a street railway company seeking to condemn the franchises of a plank-road company is insufficient if it states that the company needs "a strip of land not exceeding ten feet wide except at switches," which switches it does not locate, and that the strip is to be somewhere between the existing road-bed and prospective sidewalks, but does not state which side of the existing road-bed is desired, nor where the strip is to begin or end.—Detroit, S. & D. R. Co. v. Wayne Circuit Judge, 95 Mich. 318.

¶ 213. In proceedings by a railroad company to condemn for warehouse purposes land abutting on a street in which its track is located, a petition describing the premises by lot, block, and plat, and averring its said road to be adjacent and contiguous thereto, is free from ambiguity. The condemnation of the lots would carry with it all rights in the street attaching by reason of the ownership of the abutting property, and no others. —Cincinnati, S. & M. R. Co. v. Bay City & B. C. R. Co., 106 Mich. 473.

¶ 214. The petition for condemnation for a railroad need not set forth the terminal branches or spur trucks; these are sufficiently certified if shown by survey of main line duly certified by majority of directors.—Toledo, S. & M. R. Co. v. East Saginaw & St. C. R. Co., 72 Mich. 206.

§ 65. ——Averment as to lands abutting on street taken.

¶ 215. A petition by a railroad company to acquire title, for railroad purposes, to lands used and occupied as a street, is fatally defective if it does not disclose whether it is designed to appropriate the lands as the respondent's property, or whether they were included in the petition for the purpose of having an assessment of the respondent's damages, by reason of his ownership of premises fronting on the street; if the latter, the petition must show that he owns such premises. —Mansfield, C. & L. M. R. Co. v. Clark, 23 Mich. 519.

¶ 216. The petition in proceedings to condemn for a railroad right of way must accurately state the quantity of land sought, and, where an adjoining owner's right to the use of a street is to be taken, should state his frontage on such street.—Bay City Belt Line R. Co. v. Hitchcock, 90 Mich. 533.

§ 66. ——Averments as to negotiations for purchase or consent.

Necessity and sufficiency of previous effort to purchase or obtain consent, see ante § 59.

¶ 217. The fact of petitioner's inability to acquire title amicably by agreement with the owner is jurisdictional and must be alleged, and may be controverted.—Chicago & M. L. S. R. Co. v. Sanford, 23 Mich. 418; Grand Rapids, L. & D. R. Co. v. Weiden, 69 Mich. 572.

¶ 218. The petition for condemnation to effect a railroad crossing must show a bona fide attempt and failure to obtain, by treaty between the two railroad companies, the property and franchises described therein. This is jurisdictional.—Toledo, A. A. & N. M. R. Co. v. Detroit, L. & N. R. Co., 62 Mich. 564.

¶ 219. The petition for condemnation for a railroad need not state the particulars of the unsuccessful negotiations to acquire title —what offers were made or declined—but it is enough to state that the owner asked what petitioner considered an unreasonable price, and that he refused to accept a reasonable sum offered.—Grand Rapids, L. & D. R. Co. v. Weiden, 69 Mich. 572.

¶ 220. A petition by a railroad company, for the condemnation of land, alleging that the petitioner has not been able to acquire title to the property, although it has tried to do so, because the owner refuses to sell the same or to set a price thereon, sufficiently shows a bona fide effort to obtain the property by purchase.—Cincinnati, S. & M. R. Co. v. Bay City & B. C. R. Co., 106 Mich. 473.

§ 67. ——Averments to condemn crossings over other railroads.

Condemnation by one railroad of the property of another, see ante § 22.

Sufficiency of petition by one railroad to condemn land owned by another, see ante ¶ 194.

Proceedings necessary where one railroad seeks to acquire property of another, see ante ¶ 169.

Condemnation of highway over railroad, see Highways, II, B.

¶ 221. A petition by one road, seeking to condemn a right to cross another, is fatally defective if it seeks for condemnation of the title to the land in the right of way sought to be obtained and nothing else. It must describe the rights and franchises it may condemn under the statute, or that petitioner wishes to condemn.—Toledo, A. A. & N. M. R. Co. v. Detroit, L. & N. R. Co., 62 Mich. 564.

¶ 222. The petition of one railroad for the right to cross or connect with another need not contain statements not required by the statute for obtaining title to real estate or other property; e. g., it need not state the manner of the crossing, whether above or below the grade, that being left to decision of the crossing board.—Flint & P. M. R. Co. v. Detroit & B. C. R. Co., 64 Mich. 350.

¶ 223. A petition stating that it is necessary for the public use to cross respondent's road, and that petitioner's directorate has determined that taking is necessary to accommodate petitioner's tracks, and to develop business along its road, is sufficient.—Toledo, S. & M. R. Co. v. East Saginaw & St. C. R. Co., 72 Mich. 206.

¶ 224. The petition for condemnation for a railroad crossing need not state the grade of the petitioner's road.—Toledo, S. & M. R. Co. v. East Saginaw & St. C. R. Co., 72 Mich. 206.

¶ 225. The petition for condemnation for a railroad need not set forth where crossing over another road is desired, if it appears by the surveyor's map of the line duly certified. —Toledo, S. & M. R. Co. v. East Saginaw & St. C. R. Co., 72 Mich. 206.

¶ 226. The petition for condemnation for a branch railroad crossing need not aver that road is in operation, or that ties or rails have been laid on any part of it.—Toledo, S. & M. R. Co. v. East Saginaw & St. C. R. Co., 72 Mich. 206.

§ 68. ——Averments for condemning dam and flowage rights.

¶ 227. Where a petition avers that a stream is navigable and that the improvements include dams, it must not only allege that the assent of the governor and attorney-general and the approval of the canal board have been procured, but also that authority has been obtained from the board of supervisors to dam the stream (Const., art. 18, § 4).—Clay v. Pennoyer Creek Improvement Co., 34 Mich. 204.

¶ 228. As Const., art. 18, § 4, forbids the damming of navigable streams except by authority of the board of supervisors, a petition under Laws 1873, Act No. 196 (revising and amending Comp. L. 1871, ch. 221) to condemn lands for the erection of a dam for mill purposes must show whether the stream is navigable or not, and if navigable, that the requisite permission has been obtained. —Fox v. Holcomb, 34 Mich. 298.

¶ 229. A petition to condemn lands for the erection of a dam for mill purposes must show affirmatively that the proposed dam will not injure any mill or millsite above or below on the same stream.—Fox v. Holcomb, 34 Mich. 298.

§ 69. Lands to be joined in one petition.

Consolidation and severance of proceedings, see post § 87.

¶ 230. Under Comp. L. 1897, § 6242, and other sections it is not essential that all the lands within a county required for a railroad, must be included in one petition for condemnation and passed upon by one jury. —Marquette & S. E. Ry. Co. v. Longyear, 133 Mich. 94.

§ 70. Notice of proceedings and service of notice.

Appearance and waiver of notice, see post § 71.

Necessity of notice and hearing before order allowing possession by condemnor, see post ¶¶ 402a, 402b.

Effect of dismissal of petition as to joint owners not served with notice of proceedings, see post ¶ 247.

Issuance and service of summons in proceedings instituted by the State, see Comp. L. 1915, § 350.

Issuance and service of summons in proceedings by public corporation or state agency, see Comp. L. 1915, §§ 358, 359.

Issuance and service of process in general city and village proceedings, see Comp. L. 1915, §§ 3379, 3380.

Issuance and service of process in fourth class city proceedings, see Comp. L. 1915, §§ 3140, 3141.

Service of petition and notice in proceedings by railroad, bridge or tunnel company, see Comp. L. 1915, § 8252.

¶ 231. Although a statute is silent on the subject of notice, the necessity of notice must be implied where private property is sought to be taken thereunder.—Swan v. Williams, 2 Mich. 427; Strahan v. Brown, 39 Mich. 168.

¶ 232. The charter of a railroad corporation is not unconstitutional because not expressly requiring notice to the owners of proceedings to assess the compensation for property taken, the charter evidently contemplating notice; so that it is the duty of the tribunal in which the proceeding is taken to see that it is given.—Swan v. Williams, 2 Mich. 427.

¶ 233. Under express terms of How. St., § 3332, providing for the service of notice on nonresidents in condemnation proceedings, it is optional whether notice be served on the agent within this state, or on the owner within or without the state.—Saginaw, T. & H. R. Co. v. Bordner, 108 Mich. 236.

¶ 234. In proceedings to condemn land, where the original notice is served on a person in no way connected with the owner of the land, and who had gone on the land only for the purpose of having service made on him so as to bind the owner such service is illegal, and confers no jurisdiction to appoint commissioners of appraisal.—Dunlap v. Toledo, A. A. & G. T. R. Co., 46 Mich. 190.

¶ 235. The jurisdiction of the probate court in proceedings to condemn lands for railroad purposes is dependent upon proof of a valid notice to the land-owners; and notice mailed to a party whose residence was in fact, and was so alleged in the petition, at Aurora, New York, directed to him at Batavia, Cayuga county, New York, is void. —Morgan v. Chicago & N. E. R. Co., 36 Mich. 428.

§ 71. Appearance and waiver of notice.

¶ 236. Want of publication of notice in condemnation proceedings is waived by voluntary appearance.—East Saginaw & St. C. R. Co. v. Benham, 28 Mich. 459.

¶ 237. The want of publication of notice to owners and parties interested cannot be insisted upon on appeal when all concerned have voluntarily appeared in the case.—East Saginaw & St. C. R. Co. v. Benham, 28 Mich. 459.

§ 72. Proper and necessary parties.

Necessity for all persons interested being made parties and heard before the same jury, see post ¶ 300.

Effect on other parties defendant of dismissal as to joint owners, see post ¶ 247.

Proper and necessary parties in street opening proceedings, see Highways, II, B.

¶ 238. All the owners of any parcel sought to be condemned must be before the court;

the necessity of taking undivided interests in the same land cannot be determined separately.—Grand Rapids, N. & L. S. R. Co. v. Alley, 34 Mich. 16, 18.

¶ 239. Under a petition by a board of education to condemn land to be used as a schoolhouse site, it is sufficient that the person owning said land at the time of the filing of the petition be served with summons, and it is not necessary that the person to whom he conveyed said land shortly after the filing of said petition be served as a defendant in said proceedings.—Board of Education City of Holland v. Van Der Veen, 169 Mich. 470.

¶ 240. The inconvenience suffered by taxpayers residing on their own property one block distant from parks and public grounds, which a board of education proposes to condemn, with the consent of the common council, for the purpose of a school site, in being compelled, because of the closing of a street, to divert one block does not establish an interest in the condemnation proceedings so as to warrant their intervention in such proceedings.—Board of Education of Hastings v. Gilleland, 191 Mich. 276.

¶ 241. In proceedings to condemn lands for a railroad right of way, mortgagees of the land must be defendants; and a discontinuance as to them without adjudicating on their rights is fatal to the proceedings.—Michigan Air Line R. Co. v. Barnes, 40 Mich. 383.

¶ 242. The objection that certain parties entitled to damages were not made defendants to a condemnation proceeding, was not open to others than such parties themselves, and as to them they were not precluded by reason of not having been made parties.—Marquette & S. E. Ry. Co. v. Longyear, 133 Mich. 94.

¶ 243. The failure to make two of three former owners of one of various parcels sought to be condemned for railroad right of way, parties defendant, did not deprive the court of jurisdiction as to such parcel on the ground that by reason of the failure to bring in such parties, the mortgage interest could not be considered; where such two former owners had conveyed their interests to petitioner and the other owner had been made a party and the value of the parcel taken had been ascertained by the jury and paid, and the mortgagee was a party.—Marquette & S. E. Ry. Co. v. Longyear, 133 Mich. 94.

§ 73. Answer and objections.

Effect on burden of proof of denial of public use in answer, see post ¶ 326.

¶ 244. In an eminent domain suit to appropriate land for a cemetery, the defendant in her answer acknowledged that the old cemetery was overfilled, and that a new one was demanded to conserve public health. Held, that by admitting the proposed enterprise to be necessary to the public welfare, the answer left open only the question of the necessity of condemning the land of defendant.—McDonald v. Marquette Circuit Judge, 159 Mich. 367.

¶ 245. In an eminent domain suit to appropriate land for a cemetery, the defendant in her answer set out that the city had contracted with a mining company by which the latter was to mine the land under the old cemetery for its own profit; that the mining company had secured new ground, to which it agreed to remove the bodies from the old cemetery; that it had a predominating influence on the city government; and other like allegations. Held, mandamus would not lie to compel the circuit judge to vacate an order striking out these and other immaterial parts of the answer.—McDonald v. Marquette Circuit Judge, 159 Mich. 367.

¶ 246. The title of a land-holder cannot be litigated in proceedings before commissioners to condemn the land for railway purposes: and his averment, in answer to the petition for the condemnation of a particular lot, that this and certain other specified lots, lying together, constituted his homestead, and that he occupied them as such, was held sufficient to raise the question of injury to the contiguous lots.—Port Huron & S. W. R. Co. v. Voorheis, 50 Mich. 506.

§ 74. Dismissal or discontinuance.

New proceedings after defective ones, see post § 75.

When proceedings by the State dismissed, see Comp. L. 1915, § 352.

Disability of council to discontinue after verdict in general proceedings by cities and villages, see Comp. L. 1915, § 3396.

Right to discontinue before report of jury or commissioners in railroad, bridge and tunnel company proceedings, see Comp. L. 1915, § 8255.

¶ 247. A dismissal of the petition as to joint owners not served with notice of the proceedings operates as a dismissal as to all.—Grand Rapids, N. & L. S. R. Co. v. Alley, 34 Mich. 16, 18.

¶ 248. Where a petition for more than one branch railroad is sufficient as to one and is denied as to the other, it may be discontinued as to the latter and prosecuted as to the other.—Toledo, S. & M. R. Co. v. East Saginaw & St. C. R. Co., 72 Mich. 206.

§ 75. New proceeding after defective one.

Lesser award on second proceedings with judgment for difference, see post § 121.

New trial, see post § 111.

Right to possession during pendency of new proceedings following defective ones, see post ¶¶ 402a, 402b.

¶ 249. Where condemnation proceedings prove abortive because of lack of jurisdiction or failure of proof, the petitioner may, under Comp. Laws 1897, § 6251, bring a new proceeding and correct thereby the errors in the earlier proceeding.—Michigan Cent. Ry. Co. v. Miller, 172 Mich. 201.

C. HEARING AND TRIAL.

§ 76. Constitutional mode; necessity of jury.

Functions of jury and questions triable, see post § 77.

Necessity for condemnation of lands within a county to be passed on by one jury, see ante ¶ 230.

Relative powers of legislature and judiciary, see Constitutional Law § 48.

Provisions of the constitution as to jury trial of damages, see Const., art. XIII, § 2.

Right to jury in proceedings instituted by the State, see Comp. L. 1915, § 351.

Request for jury in petition in proceedings by public corporation or state agency, see Comp. L. 1915, § 357.

Right to jury in railroad, bridge and tunnel proceedings, see Comp. L. 1915, § 8254.

¶ 250. The Const., art. 18, § 2, provides that, when private property is taken for the use and benefit of the public, the necessity of using such property, etc., and the just compensation to be made therefor, except, etc., shall be ascertained by a jury. As the laws then in force relative to laying out roads were inconsistent with this provision, it was held that, until new laws were passed, there was no authority for laying out roads compulsorily.—People v. Kimball, 4 Mich. 95.

¶ 251. In condemning land for railroad purposes, but for the specific provisions of our constitution the state could have provided that the inquiries as to necessity and value should be made by any medium it might select.—Toledo, A. A. & G. T. R. Co. v. Dunlap, 47 Mich. 456; and see People ex rel. Green v. Michigan Southern R. Co., 3 Mich. 496.

¶ 252. The right to a jury trial in railroad condemnation cases is a substantial one that cannot be refused or evaded when asserted in proper time.—Port Huron & N. W. R. Co. v. Callanan, 61 Mich. 12.

¶ 253. The constitutional amendment of 1859 (forming the proviso to Const., art. 18, § 2), dispensing with a jury to determine the necessity of taking land for public uses in the case of action by commissioners of highways, has no application to the taking of land for a city street, and in such case a jury is essential.—Campau v. City of Detroit, 14 Mich. 276.

¶ 254. Const., art. 15, § 15, providing that "private property shall not be taken for public improvements in cities, etc., without the consent of the owner, unless compensation be determined by a jury," etc., does not dispense with the ascertainment by a jury or commissioners of the necessity of such taking, as provided in art. 18, § 2.—Horton v. City of Grand Haven, 24 Mich. 465.

¶ 255. Under Const. 1835, land may be taken by the state for the public use without stipulation between the owners and the legislature, or the intervention of a jury, or of commissioners mutually chosen. It is only requisite that an impartial tribunal be provided for assessing the compensation; and such tribunal may be constituted without the intervention of the owner of the land.—People ex rel. Green v. Michigan Southern R. Co., 3 Mich. 496.

¶ 256. U. S. Const., Amend. XIV, does not require that in proceedings in a state court for the condemnation of private property for public purposes the questions of necessity and compensation shall be passed upon by the same jury.—Backus v. Fort Street Union Depot Co., 169 U. S. 557, 42 L. ed. 853, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 445; affirming 103 Mich. 556.

¶ 257. The XIVth Amendment does not require that condemnation proceedings under state authority be had by a jury of inquest rather than before a common law jury presided over and controlled by a judge.—Backus v. Fort Street Union Depot Co., 169 U. S. 557, 42 L. ed. 853, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 445; affirming 103 Mich. 556.

§ 77. ——Functions of jury and questions triable.

Determination of amount of award as function of jury, see also post ¶ 334.

Special questions for jury, see post § 108.

Viewing premises as function of jury, see post § 101.

Discretion of jury in determining award, see post ¶ 383.

Sufficiency of description of property as question for jury, see ante ¶ 207.

Questions triable collaterally on issue as to necessity of particular parcel, see ante ¶ 41.

Determination of necessity for taking as function for jury, see ante ¶ 40.

Duties of jury in proceedings instituted by the State, see Comp. L. 1915, § 351.

Duties of jury in proceedings by public corporation or state agency, see Comp. L. 1915, § 361.

Functions of jury and questions determined in verdict in fourth class city proceedings, see Comp. L. 1915, §§ 3143, 3144, 3154, 3155.

Powers and duties of jury in railroad, bridge and tunnel company proceedings, see Comp. L. 1915, § 8255.

¶ 258. Under the constitutional limitations on the right of eminent domain, the necessity for the use, and the compensation for the property taken, must be found by the jury, and no legislative or municipal authority can determine either; it is a purely judicial inquiry.—Powers' Appeal, 29 Mich. 504; Paul v. City of Detroit, 32 Mich. 108.

¶ 259. The inquiry in proceedings to condemn lands for railroads is as to an appraisal or estimate of values and a determination of the necessity of the proposed taking.—Toledo, A. A. & G. T. R. Co. v. Dunlap, 47 Mich. 456.

¶ 260. Act No. 359, Laws 1873, §§ 18, 19, provides that a jury shall decide whether it is necessary to take a given piece of land by eminent domain for a public improvement. Held, the act is unconstitutional, since it fails to provide in addition that a jury shall decide whether or not the proposed public improvement is necessary.—Board Water Com'rs City of Detroit v. Lorman, 158 Mich. 608.

¶ 261. The jury or commissioners in proceedings to condemn land for railway uses are judges of the law as well as of the facts. Toledo, A. A. & G. T. R. Co. v. Dunlap, 47 Mich. 456; Port Huron & S. W. R. Co. v. Voorheis, 50 Mich. 506.

¶ 262. In proceedings to condemn a railroad right of way the jury are judges of the law as well as of the facts.—Detroit, B. C. & W. R. Co. v. First Nat. Bank of Yale, 196 Mich. 660. (Fellows, Stone, Ostrander and Bird, JJ., dissenting.)

¶ 263. It cannot be said as a matter of law that public necessity requires improvements to be made in a navigable river any more than it can be said, as a matter of law, that public necessity requires a railroad to be built and the constitutional tribunal and not the legislature must determine whether public necessities require the improvement.—Berrien Springs Water Power Co. v. Berrien Circuit Judge, 133 Mich. 48.

¶ 264. It is for a jury to determine the damages to an adjacent proprietor from the malicious and unnecessary operation of a railroad in the public street.—Grand Rapids & I. R. Co. v. Heisel, 47 Mich. 393.

§ 78. Character of jury and jury trial.

Number and qualification of jurors, see post § 79.
Venire list, drawing and impaneling, see post § 81.
Challenges, see post § 82.
Waiver of jury or waiver of challenges, see post § 83.
Oath and compensation of jurors, see post §§ 84, 85.
Necessity of unanimous verdict by jury, see post § 109.
Interference with or misconduct of jury, see post § 94.

¶ 265. All the safeguards ordinarily attaching to jury trials are implied in the use of the term "jury" in the constitutional provisions on the exercise of the right of eminent domain, and no action by laws or by proceedings under them can be maintained if any of these securities are impaired and disregarded.—Paul v. City of Detroit, 32 Mich. 108.

¶ 266. Under so imperative a constitutional provision as controls in Michigan, no legislation can be maintained which does not plainly require the question of the necessity of taking private property for public use to be left to the jury; their finding without such requirement is extrajudicial and not within their oaths, the oath being the measure and limit of their legal action; and property taken under legislation which does not provide expressly for every constitutional safeguard framed to govern such action cannot be said to be taken by due process of law.—Powers' Appeal, 29 Mich. 504.

¶ 267. Act 124 of 1883, as amended by Act 48 of 1887 (How. St., §§ 3064a-3064y), is not unconstitutional in not providing for the payment for the land condemned before it is taken; and said statute, as a whole, provides for such a finding by the jury as the constitution warrants.—City of Detroit v. Beecher, 75 Mich. 454.

§ 79. Number and qualifications of jurors.

Disqualification of juror as ground for setting aside award on appeal, see post ¶ 417.
Objection to qualifications of jurors raised first on appeal, see post ¶ 423.
Right to raise objection in supreme court for first time of stockholder in condemnor corporation acting as juror, see post ¶ 427.
Qualifications of jurors in proceedings by public corporation or state agency, see Comp. L. 1915, § 360.

¶ 268. The jurors must be freeholders.—Peninsular Ry. Co. v. Howard, 20 Mich. 18.

¶ 269. The constitution not having prescribed the number of the jury, it must be a common-law jury of twelve.—Campau v. City of Detroit, 14 Mich. 276.

¶ 270. An adjoining land-owner injuriously affected by the discontinuance by the board of supervisors of a state road is entitled to have the necessity and his compensation ascertained by a jury of twelve freeholders; and Pub. Acts 1887, No. 179, providing for a jury of six, is unconstitutional.—Pearsall v. Eaton County Sup'rs, 71 Mich. 438; Pearsall v. Eaton County Sup'rs, 74 Mich. 558.

¶ 271. Const., art. 18, § 2, provides for a jury of twelve freeholders where private property is taken for the use of the public, and it is violated by a provision of a city charter that the jury in such a case shall be composed of twelve inhabitants of the city qualified to serve as jurors in courts of record; such jurors not being required to be freeholders.—City of Owosso v. Richfield, 80 Mich. 328.

¶ 272. It is competent for the legislature to impose, in addition to the qualifications required by the constitution to be possessed by jurors in proceedings to take private property for public use, such qualifications as are found in the charter of the city of Saginaw, viz., that the jurors shall be electors of fair character and sound mind, capable of understanding and speaking intelligibly the English language.—City of Saginaw v. Campau, 102 Mich. 594.

¶ 273. The qualifications of jurors in condemnation proceedings are expressly fixed by Comp. L. 1897, § 3377, and the further provision that the practice and procedure in regard to the jury be governed by the practice of civil cases in circuit courts, does not refer to qualifications and hence does not impose the restrictions of Pub. Acts 1893, No. 204, providing that jurors of Wayne County shall not have served as jurors during the preceding 3 years.—City of Detroit v. Heineman, 128 Mich. 537.

¶ 274. A stockholder in the railroad company is not a competent juror, and if one is drawn he should disclose his interest, and the company at its peril should challenge him. An inquest by a jury, one of whose members was a stockholder in the company, is void.—Peninsular Ry. Co. v. Howard, 20 Mich. 18.

¶ 275. A subscriber to a railroad-aid fund, who takes no stock in the road, acquires no legal interest in another projected road from the fact merely that it is to be leased to the road which he has aided; and he is not therefore incompetent to act as a juror in condemnation proceedings by such other road.—Detroit, West. Trans. & J. R. Co. v. Crane, 50 Mich. 182.

¶ 276. One who has given his note to a railroad company to aid in the construction of its road is disqualified as a juror in proceedings to condemn land for its right of way; and the disqualification cannot be removed by stipulation between the parties.—Michigan Air Line R. Co. v. Barnes, 40 Mich. 383.

§ 80. Commissioners of appraisal.

Number requisite for decision by commissioners, see post § 110.
Questions triable before commissioners, see ante ¶ 246.
Order appointing commissioners as final order subject to review on certiorari, see post ¶ 451.
Power of commissioners to impeach award by their individual affidavits as to their proceedings, see post ¶ 389.
Special findings by commissioners, see post ¶ 367.
Continuance of proceedings before commissioner, see post ¶ 303.
Power and control of court or judge over commissioners after appointment, see post ¶¶ 301, 303.
Power of probate court to direct continuance in proceedings before commissioners, see ante ¶ 177.
Appointment and qualification of commissioners under proceedings instituted by the State, see Comp. L. 1915, § 351.
Duties of commissioners in proceedings instituted by the State, see Comp. L. 1915, § 351.
Appointment of commissioners of appraisal in railroad bridge or tunnel proceedings, see Comp. L. 1915, § 8254.
Powers and duties of commissioners in railroad bridge and tunnel company proceedings, see Comp. L. 1915, § 8255.

§ 81. Venire list, drawing and impaneling.

Procedure for selection of jury, in proceedings by public corporation or state agency, see Comp. L. 1915, § 360.
Impaneling of jury in fourth class city proceedings, see Comp. L. 1915, §§ 3142, 3153.
Method of impaneling jurors in railroad bridge and tunnel proceedings, see Comp. L. 1915, § 8254.
Practice in recorder's court of Detroit, see Comp. L. 1915, § 3393.

¶ 277. The order of the court in condemnation proceedings should direct freeholders to be summoned.—Mansfield, C. & L. M. R. Co. v. Clark, 23 Mich. 519.

¶ 278. The "vicinage" from which jurors are to be drawn is the whole county, and not the town or neighborhood in which the land is to be taken.—Convers v. Grand Rapids & I. R. Co., 18 Mich. 459.

¶ 279. The jury in condemnation proceedings brought by a municipality should be chosen from the body of the county and not merely from a township or village interested in the condemnation.—Houghton Village Common Council v. Huron Copper Min. Co., 57 Mich. 547.

¶ 280. The "vicinage" from which a jury of freeholders in a street-opening case must be drawn (Const., art. 18, § 2) may be limited by statute to the municipality instead of including the county at large; but in such case the whole municipality will be within it.—Grand Rapids v. Grand Rapids & I. R. Co., 58 Mich. 641.

¶ 281. The drawing of a jury must be in the presence of the court at the time of making the order therefor.—Convers v. Grand Rapids & I. R. Co., 18 Mich. 459.

¶ 282. In drawing jurors from the petit-jury box those not freeholders must be set aside, and the drawing is to continue until the requisite number of qualified jurors is obtained.—Peninsular Ry. Co. v. Howard, 20 Mich. 18.

¶ 283. On an inquest of the value of property required for a railroad, after a juror had been struck from the panel by one of the parties, and the jury completed, it was held that he could not be resummoned by the officer in the place of one who had been excused.—In re Detroit & P. R. Co., 2 D. 367.

§ 82. Challenges.

Necessity for railroad company challenging one of its stockholders as juror, see ante ¶ 274.

Peremptory challenges in proceedings instituted by the State, see Comp. L. 1915, § 351.

Right to peremptory challenges in general city and village proceedings, see Comp. L. 1915, § 3381.

¶ 284. Jurors may be challenged for cause in these proceedings, but not peremptorily.—Convers v. Grand Rapids & I. R. Co., 18 Mich. 459; Peninsular Ry. Co. v. Howard, 20 Mich. 18.

¶ 285. A challenge is properly overruled if the judge knows at the time of nothing which would give the juror a bias; and if the challenger knows of facts which would do so, it is not enough to present them for the first time as a reason for refusing to confirm proceedings which have been long in progress at considerable cost, and in which the juror has taken part without any showing of legal cause against his acting.—Detroit, West. Trans. & J. R. Co. v. Crane, 50 Mich. 182.

¶ 286. A statute providing for the taking of property by a city for public use is not fatally defective for not providing that challenges for cause may be allowed. The right exists in all cases where the jury is a common-law one, and cannot be taken away by statute.—Kundinger v. City of Saginaw, 59 Mich. 355.

§ 83. Waiver of jury or objections and challenges.

Loss of right by failure to assert cause for challenge at time of challenging, see ante ¶ 285.

¶ 287. It is competent for the owners of land sought to be condemned for street purposes under How. St., § 3064a et seq., to waive their constitutional right to have the questions of necessity and compensation determined by a jury of freeholders.—Borgman v. City of Detroit, 102 Mich. 261.

¶ 288. In a proceeding to appropriate one's property under the right of eminent domain, which he is opposing throughout, he cannot be held to have waived a constitutional objection to the number of jurors by not objecting specifically.—Campau v. City of Detroit, 14 Mich. 276.

¶ 289. Proceedings to lay out a township drain are not invalidated by the fact that a juror was not a freeholder, if no objection was made to his sitting, and the party afterwards objecting was present, aided in striking the panel, and declared himself satisfied with it.—Clark v. Drain Com'rs, 50 Mich. 618.

¶ 290. Where in condemnation proceedings the verdict by a jury of eleven men is filed, entered, and confirmed, no appeal is taken, and the award is paid and accepted by the parties interested, the parties are taken to have waived the provision of Act No. 176, Pub. Acts 1903, calling for a jury of twelve men.—Weber v. City of Detroit, 158 Mich. 149.

¶ 291. Where the claimant to lands, the title to which a railroad company had petitioned to acquire, was present at the impaneling of a jury of inquest, and no challenge was interposed, the objection to the confirmation of the jury's report, that the jurors were not affirmatively shown to be freeholders, is not well taken in the absence of any showing that any of them were disqualified.—Mansfield, C. & L. M. R. Co. v. Clark, 23 Mich. 519.

§ 84. Oath of jurors.

Oath as covering measure and limit of legal authority, see also ante ¶ 266.

Oath of jurors in street opening proceedings, see Highways, II, B.

Oath of jurors in proceedings instituted by the State, see Comp. L. 1915, § 351.

Oath of commissioners in proceedings instituted by the State, see Comp. L. 1915, § 351.

Oath of jurors in proceedings by public corporation or state agency, see Comp. L. 1915, § 361.

Oath of jurors in general city and village proceedings, see Comp. L. 1915, § 3382.

Oath of jury in fourth class city proceedings, see Comp. L. 1915, §§ 3143, 3154.

¶ 292. In these proceedings the oath of the jurors is not to be construed by itself, but as part of the proceedings in which it is taken; and if, when so construed, everything required by the statute is embraced in substance if not in form, it is sufficient.—East Saginaw & St. C. R. Co. v. Benham, 28 Mich. 459.

¶ 293. Proceedings to condemn private property will be quashed if the record does not show that the jurors impaneled to determine the necessity for taking the property and the compensation to be paid for it took, before acting, an oath covering these constitutional duties. They are not required to recite their oath in their report, and such recital is not sufficient proof of it.—Bowler v. Perrin, 47 Mich. 154.

¶ 294. It seems that it is not enough for jurors in condemnation proceedings to swear that they will "examine and determine the necessity of locating and constructing a ditch described as follows," etc., as the constitution requires them to determine the necessity of taking land therefor, and the compensation to be paid for it.—Bowler v. Perrin, 47 Mich. 154.

¶ 295. Where the oath administered to the jury in proceedings to lay out a ditch does not specify the line of the ditch or its dimensions, but refers to it merely as "Pine Creek Ditch No. 2," it is insufficient, as it does not apply to a ditch of any specific character and predetermined location.—Chapman v. Clark, 49 Mich. 305.

¶ 296. How. St., § 3466 (Laws 1881, Act No. 244, § 9, the Union-Depot Act), provides that the jury "shall take and subscribe an oath that they will justly and impartially ascertain and determine the necessity of taking and using any such real estate or property for the purposes proposed." How. St., § 3436 (section 7 of said act), provides that a petition filed for the purpose of acquiring land must state, among other things, that the property described in the petition is required for the purposes of its incorporation, and that the taking thereof is necessary for public use." Held, that these sections taken together require the oath to be that the jury will determine the necessity of taking the land for public use, and the statute is not unconstitutional.—Fort-Street Union Depot Co. v. Morton, 83 Mich. 265.

§ 85. Compensation of jurors.

Fees and compensation and sustenance of jurors in general, see Jury, VII.

Compensation of jurors in proceedings by public corporation or state agency, see Comp. L. 1915, § 369.

¶ 297. Where a condemnation proceeding is instituted by a city of the fourth class, a juror must seek his pay from the city in accordance with the provisions of Comp. Laws 1897, § 3408, and is not entitled to recover the same from the county under Act No. 236, Pub. Acts 1907.—Rorabacher v. Nichols, 165 Mich. 127.

§ 86. Venue and change of venue.

Place in which proceedings may be instituted, see also post ¶ 301.

¶ 298. Pub. Acts 1905, No. 309, providing for a change of venue in judicial proceedings does not apply to proceedings to condemn land.—Michigan, O. & I. R. Co. v. Monroe Circuit Judge, 144 Mich. 44.

¶ 299. Act No. 309, Pub. Acts 1905, provides that the court may on certain grounds grant a change of venue in any criminal or civil action. The amendment of 1907 provides that the court may change the venue in "any cause" pending therein. Held, that the amendment did not enlarge the scope of the original act so as to permit a change of venue in condemnation proceedings.—Grand Rapids & I. Ry. Co. v. Kalamazoo Circuit Judge, 154 Mich. 493.

§ 87. Consolidation and severance of proceedings.

Splitting causes of action and reserving demands for future litigation, see post ¶ 483.

Splitting, severance and joinder of verdicts, see post § 107.

Lands to be joined in one petition, see ante § 69.

¶ 300. In condemnation proceedings for a single purpose, all persons who must at any time be made respondents should be brought in so as to be heard before the same jury; the proceeding is indivisible.—Houghton Village Common Council v. Huron Copper Min. Co., 57 Mich. 547.

§ 88. Procedure on hearing.

Functions of judge, see post § 89.

Regulation of evidence and number of witnesses, see post § 90.

Record of proceedings and stenographic report, see post § 91.

Argument and assistance by counsel, see post § 92.

Propriety of instructions and requests, see post § 93.

Interference with and misconduct of jury, see post § 94.

Evidence, see post §§ 95-101.

Hearing on petition in proceedings instituted by the State, see Comp. L. 1915, § 351.

Use of exhibits and maps by jury, in proceedings by public corporation or state agency, see Comp. L. 1915, § 363.

Right of jury to petition, maps and blank form of verdict in fourth class city proceedings, see Comp. L. 1915, §§ 3145, 3156.

Right of jury to have petition, maps and exhibits in jury room in general city and village proceedings, see Comp. L. 1915, § 3384.

Visit to property by commissioners or jury in proceedings by the State, see Comp. L. 1915, § 351.

Visit to property by jury in proceedings by public corporation or state agency, see Comp. L. 1915, § 361.

View of premises in general city and village proceedings, see Comp. L. 1915, § 3382.

¶ 301. Condemnation proceedings do not proceed according to the course of the common law. They may be begun in any court of record in the county where the land lies. They may be heard before the judge at chambers. The commissioners, when appointed, are not under the power or control of the court or the judge. The judge appoints the time of their first meeting.—Michigan, O. & I. R. Co. v. Monroe Circuit Judge, 144 Mich. 44.

¶ 302. The question whether there is any sufficient cause for resorting to condemnation proceedings is preliminary in its character, and should be settled in some separate way in advance. It involves both fact and law. —Manistee & N. E. R. Co. v. Fowler, 73 Mich. 217.

§ 89. ——Functions of judge.

See also post ¶ 311.

Jurisdiction of court in general, see ante § 57.

Power or control of judge over commissioners after appointment, see ante ¶ 301.

Confirmation or rejection of award as function of court, see post § 111.

Waiver of right to have judge attend jury, see post ¶ 425.

Attendance and instruction by court in railroad, bridge and tunnel company proceedings, see Comp. L. 1915, § 8255.

¶ 303. The probate court cannot direct a continuance in condemnation proceedings pending before a commissioner appointed by it.—Michigan Cent. R. Co. v. Tuscola Probate Judge, 48 Mich. 638.

¶ 304. The functions of the judge in attendance upon a jury in condemnation proceedings are at most advisory; and where the proceedings of the jury are not based on false principles, the supreme court, on review, will not consider questions raised on merely technical objections to the admission or rejection of testimony though in accordance with the judge's rulings.—Toledo, A. A. & G. T. R. Co. v. Dunlap, 47 Mich. 456.

¶ 305. It is not error for the court to refuse to instruct the jury or commissioners on the condemnation of land for railway uses. The court may, but is not required to, instruct under the statute.—Flint & P. M. R. Co. v. Detroit & B. C. R. Co., 64 Mich. 350.

¶ 306. A jury appointed under Const. 1850, art. 18, § 2, providing that when private property is taken for public use, the necessity thereof and compensation therefor shall be determined by a jury of twelve freeholders, etc., is a special tribunal to determine the law and the facts, and hence instructions to them are not required of the probate judge in eminent domain proceedings to condemn a right of way for a drain. —McDuffee v. Fellows, 157 Mich. 664.

¶ 307. There is no constitutional inhibition against a statutory provision (How. St., § 3466) that in proceedings to condemn land for the purposes of a union railroad depot company the circuit judge may attend the jury "to decide questions of law and administer oaths to witnesses."—Fort St. Union Depot Co. v. Backus, 103 Mich. 556, affirmed in 169 U. S. 557, 42 L. ed. 853, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 445.

¶ 308. The award of the jury in condemnation proceedings, instituted in the circuit court, cannot be disturbed on account of the attendance of the circuit judge to decide questions of law and administer oaths to witnesses, as provided by How. St. § 3466, unless some ruling or instruction of the circuit judge is clearly erroneous, and leads to the plain conclusion that the jury were thereby prejudiced against the party complaining.— Fort St. Union Depot Co. v. Backus, 103 Mich. 556, affirmed in 169 U. S. 557, 42 L. ed. 853, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 445.

§ 90. ——Regulation of evidence and number of witnesses.

Requisites and sufficiency of proofs, see post § 99.

Fees of witnesses, see post § 116.

Discretion of court to limit number of witnesses on same matter, see Trial, V.

¶ 309. Proceedings to condemn land for railway uses are special and unlike ordinary trials at law; the inquest may be conducted by commissioners or a jury without the aid of counsel, so that the practice must be simple and a large discretion allowed in admitting or rejecting testimony.—Port Huron & S. W. R. Co. v. Voorheis, 50 Mich. 506.

¶ 310. An inquest of damages for land condemned for railway uses may be conducted by a jury without legal assistance, and liberal practice in the admission or rejection of testimony is allowable; and the conclusions of the jury thereon will not be disturbed except for rulings that were manifestly inaccurate and did substantial injustice.—Michigan Air Line R. Co. v. Barnes, 44 Mich. 222.

¶ 311. A probate judge has no power to act as a nisi prius judge, presiding over a common-law jury, in condemnation proceedings, nor to direct what testimony shall go to the jury, and on what theories of damage.—Grand Rapids, L. & D. R. Co. v. Chesebro, 74 Mich. 466.

¶ 312. In a proceeding under Comp. L. 1897, §§ 6361-6366 for the condemnation of land, it is a compliance with the statute to hear testimony as to several distinct parcels of land at the same time.—Benton Harbor Terminal Ry. Co. v. King, 131 Mich. 377.

¶ 313. Under the usual practice in courts, to prevent abuse, the judge may limit the number of witnesses produced to prove a single point in condemnation proceedings under How. Stat. § 3064q, granting fees, upon affidavit, to witnesses attending such proceedings in good faith.—Dorland v. Superior Judge, 78 Mich. 182.

¶ 314. Where prior to calling a jury in a railroad condemnation case, the judge, after hearing testimony as to values and as to an offer made to the owner in question, stated that there was such a wide difference as to values and that enough testimony had been put in, and that further testimony would not change his opinion and that he thought that it was his duty to order a jury, but that such owners might if they desired offer further testimony on the day for the assembling of the jury, it was not error for another judge who presided when the jury assembled, to exclude further preliminary testimony as to values, and the court did not lose jurisdiction where all such testimony was later offered, and the trial was fully entered upon.—Detroit & T. S. L. R. Co. v. Hall, 133 Mich. 302.

§ 91. ——Record of proceedings; stenographic report.

Use of stenographic record on certiorari, see post ¶ 459.
Record on appeal, see post § 130.
Necessity of recital of oath in report of jury, see ante ¶ 293.

¶ 315. In condemnation proceedings under Comp. L. 1897, §§ 6361-6366, the attorney for the landowners demanded that the testimony be taken in writing and that a stenographer be employed. The court instructed the jury that a stenographer was not necessary and the jury could take the testimony themselves if they wished and paper was furnished them to make such notations as they desired. Held, not error since the statute does not require that a stenographer be employed and the request as made was not proper.—Benton Harbor Terminal Ry. Co. v. King, 131 Mich. 377.

§ 92. ——Argument and assistance by counsel.

Necessity for assistance of counsel, see ante ¶ 309.
Improper argument of counsel as harmless error, see post ¶ 475.
Necessity of counsel presenting and arguing in brief any material point in petition for certiorari, see post ¶ 465.
Refusal of jury to hear counsel as harmless error where right to be heard not urged, see post ¶ 424.

¶ 316. In condemnation proceedings by a union depot company counsel were allowed to argue that there was no necessity for taking a street to the injury of respondents, because petitioner could take the property of a railroad company abutting on the other side of the street. The law was otherwise. Held, that this was erroneous, and that its effect was to influence the jury in awarding damages, even though they found a necessity for taking the street; hence the award should be set aside.—Fort-Street Union Depot Co. v. Backus, 92 Mich. 33.

¶ 317. A statement in the opening argument of counsel for the city in proceedings to condemn land for street purposes, that any testimony showing a benefit is to be considered by the jury in arriving at the amount of damages to be awarded, is not ground for a reversal, if no evidence as to benefits is given upon the trial, and the jury are clearly instructed to give respondent the value of his land, and all damages sustained by him.—City of Pontiac v. Lull, 111 Mich. 509.

¶ 318. In a proceeding for the assessment of damages for the condemnation of property under the Drain Law, the fact that counsel for the drain commissioner contended for a wrong rule of law in arguing before the jury, does not vitiate the proceeding, in the absence of any evidence of bad faith, or that the jury were misled by such contention.—McDuffee v. Fellows, 157 Mich. 664.

¶ 319. While a blank form for a verdict in condemnation proceedings which can be filled just as easily in one way as the other is not objectionable, it is error to allow the petitioner to practically draw up the desired verdict and deliver it to the jury under the sanction of the court.—Manistee & N. E. R. Co. v. Fowler, 73 Mich. 217.

¶ 320. In a condemnation proceeding a verdict was prepared by the railroad and submitted to the jury containing the formal language necessary for a finding either way, with blanks for the insertion by the jury of their findings as to necessity and as to the amount of the award. Held, the submission of this paper to the jury was not erroneous.—Michigan Cent. Ry. Co. v. Miller, 172 Mich. 201.

§ 93. ——Propriety of instructions and requests.

See also ante ¶¶ 305, 306, 311.
Instructions in action for damages, see post ¶ 497.
Erroneous instructions as harmless error, see post ¶ 469.
Instruction as to measure and elements of compensation, see also ante ¶ 104.
Propriety on instruction that jury might take notes of testimony, see ante ¶ 315.
Instructions to jury in general city and village proceedings, see Comp. L. 1915, § 3382.

¶ 321. Where, in a proceeding to ascertain the compensation to be paid to the owner of land and of a factory thereon for the appropriation to railroad uses of a street in front of the premises, the court in a colloquy with counsel suggested a doubt whether the profits of the business were not too speculative to be considered as an element of damage, and where the court charged the jury that respondent was entitled to full compensation, no instruction being asked and none being given as to the matter of profits, held, that in the absence of a request for a specific instruction, the judgment should not be reversed on the supposition that the jury was misled by the court's expression of doubt.—Backus v. Fort Street Union Depot Co., 169 U. S. 557, 42 L. ed. 853, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 445; affirming 103 Mich. 556.

¶ 322. The words in a charge in a railroad condemnation case to "pay Mr. H. what the land is worth, and pay Mr. B. what the land is worth, and no more than it is worth, that is all they are entitled to"; in view of the remainder of the charge, were not subject to the objection that they limited the jury in their award and gave them to understand that they were to give no damages for anything on or under the land, nor to give damages for any change in the manner of conducting the quarries in question.—Detroit & T. S. L. R. Co. v. Hall, 133 Mich. 302.

¶ 323. In an action by the owner of an apartment house for damages for the construction of a railroad in the street opposite his premises where it appeared that the house was rendered useless for residence purposes, but was of more value than before because the land could be used for factory purposes an instruction that the measure of damages was the depreciation in rental value for residence purposes only was approved.—Plantenga v. Grand Rapids Terminal Ry. Co., 190 Mich. 661. (Kuhn and Brooke, JJ., dissenting.)

¶ 324. Where, in proceedings to open a street, it appeared that after such opening a narrow strip of land thirteen feet wide would be left, an instruction that the jury was "at liberty" to give the whole value of the lots if they found such strip worthless, was not open to the objection that it debarred the jury from giving any compensation for damages to the strip unless they found such strip to be worthless.—City of Grand Rapids v. Luce, 92 Mich. 92.

§ 94. Interference with and misconduct of jury.

Propriety of jury striking average, see post ¶¶ 345, 387.

Presumption on appeal of injury where there is interference with or misconduct of jury, see post ¶ 433.

Timeliness of objection as to interference with and misconduct of jury, see post ¶ 420.

¶ 325. It was reversible error, in proceedings for the condemnation of land, for counsel, witnesses and jurors to mingle freely, and to receive unsworn opinions of bystanders, and for meals, drinks, and cigars to be furnished the jury and paid for by petitioner's representatives, on the occasion of the view of premises, though it may not appear that the jurors were influenced.—Detroit & T. S. L. R. Co. v. Campbell, 140 Mich. 384.

D. EVIDENCE.

General law of evidence, see Evidence.

§ 95. Burden of proof and presumptions.

Admissibility and competency, see post §§ 96-98.

Requisites and sufficiency of proofs, see post §§ 99-101.

Presumptions in collateral proceedings, see post § 147.

Presumptions on record on appeal, see post § 130.

¶ 326. Under Comp. Laws 1897, § 6245, the burden is on the petitioner seeking to condemn land, to show that the proposed use is a public use, where such use is denied by defendant, in his answer.—Pere Marquette R. Co. v. United States Gypsum Co., 154 Mich. 290.

¶ 327. To support eminent domain proceedings, there must be evidence of a prior attempt to purchase.—Michigan Cent. R. Co. v. Ferguson, 162 Mich. 220.

¶ 328. There is a strong presumption that abutting owners or their predecessors in title, had received compensation for damages occasioned by the construction of a steam railroad track in a public street, forty-two years before.—Felton v. Wedthoff, 185 Mich. 72.

§ 96. Admissibility and competency.

Opinions and conclusions as to value and award, see post § 97.

As to necessity of taking, see post § 98.

Effect of court rulings as to admission of evidence on proceedings before jury, see ante ¶ 304.

When errors in admission of evidence harmless, see post § 139, ¶¶ 467, 468, 470-474, 476.

Competency of testimony of juror impeaching award, see post ¶ 387.

Evidence admissible on motion for rejection or confirmation, see post ¶¶ 388, 389.

Admissibility of phonographic reproduction of sound made by adjacent railroad to show damage thereby, see Evidence, IX.

¶ 329. The owner of land condemned for a street is entitled to its full market value, and any testimony is objectionable that tends only to show its value for specific purposes, or to show that it was transferred by a former owner for the purpose of speculating upon the street opening.—Chaffee's Appeal, 56 Mich. 244.

¶ 330. In proceedings to condemn land for a street, testimony of what one of the parcels was offered to witness for about a year before the trial is competent.—City of Grand Rapids v. Luce, 92 Mich. 92.

¶ 331. In a proceeding to condemn land for railroad purposes testimony that other persons than respondents had given the right of way is inadmissible.—Bay City Belt-Line R. Co. v. Hitchcock, 90 Mich. 533.

¶ 332. An award of damages for land sought by a union depot company was set aside because the company had not been permitted to show that respondents who used their property for a planing-mill could, by using a certain kind of dust-arrester, make their building comparatively safe from ignition by sparks from a passing engine where respondent's witness had himself testified as to the best way of arresting dust and shavings.—Fort-Street Union Depot Co. v. Backus, 92 Mich. 33.

¶ 333. In condemnation proceedings for right of way by a railroad company where the owner expressly disclaimed any right to damages resulting from increased fire risk evidence offered by the petitioner showing insurance rates on his property and on other property is properly excluded.—Boyne City, G. & A. R. Co. v. Anderson, 146 Mich. 328.

§ 97. ——Opinions and conclusions as to value and award.

Valuation of property for measure of compensation, see ante §§ 43-45.

Exclusion of evidence of value as error reviewable on certiorari, see post ¶ 463.

Admissibility of evidence as to value and comparisons with other values, see also ante ¶¶ 119, 120.

¶ 334. The proper amount of compensation for land taken in condemnation proceedings cannot be sworn to by witnesses, but must be found by the jury from data.—Grand Rapids v. Grand Rapids & I. R. Co., 58 Mich. 641.

§ 98. ——As to necessity of taking.

Competency of evidence of public necessity in action for damages, see post ¶¶ 497-499.

Admission of conclusion as to necessity of street opening as harmless error, see Harmless Error.

¶ 335. On the question of damages it is improper to receive testimony that instead of condemning a street in front of claimant's property the condemnor might have taken other property in use by another railroad company.—Fort Street Union Depot Co. v. Backus, 92 Mich. 33.

¶ 336. In proceedings by a railroad company to condemn a gravel pit (How. St., § 3323) the fact that the company already owns large quantities of gravel, and that it has sold a number of car loads, is not conclusive against its right to condemn, but is proper to be considered by the jury, in connection with testimony tending to show that the land in question is necessary to enable the company to operate its existing beds with economy and safety.—Saginaw, T. & H. R. Co. v. Bordner, 108 Mich. 236.

¶ 337. In a petition by a school board to condemn a lot on a certain court for school purposes, evidence was admitted on the question of the public necessity of the proposed improvement, to show that adjoining residents of the court would be inconvenienced and damaged. Held, that even though such evidence is, in strictness, inadmissible, letting it in was not error where the jury, by viewing the premises, had a chance to observe for themselves, and where there was other proper testimony on the point.—Board of Education City of Grand Rapids v. Brown, 159 Mich. 148.

§ 99. Requisites and sufficiency of proofs.

Admissions on pleadings, see post § 100.

View as overcoming evidence, see post § 101.

Regulation of evidence and number of witnesses, see ante § 90.

What is prima facie evidence of ownership of property taken in general city and village proceedings, see Comp. L. 1915, § 3397.

¶ 338. In an action by the owner of a residence against a railroad for damages due to the construction of a railroad in the street in front of the premises, evidence held sufficient to sustain a verdict for $1,000 damages.—Plantenga v. Grand Rapids Terminal Ry. Co., 190 Mich. 661.

§ 100. ——Admissions on pleadings.

¶ 339. Where the petition in proceedings by one railroad company to condemn land of another company shows the property to be subject to condemnation, and no issue thereon is raised by the answer, the jurisdictional fact of the right to condemn is admitted. So held where the land sought to be taken abutted upon a street in which the tracks of both companies were located, and it was claimed by the respondent that the proceeding was an attempt to condemn its track and right of way not subject thereto.—Cincinnati, S. & M. R. Co. v. Bay City & B. C. R. Co., 106 Mich. 473.

¶ 340. Condemnation proceedings instituted by a railroad company are not invalidated by the failure to prove that the petitioner had filed a map and survey of its line, as required by How. St. § 3332, where the averment of that fact in the petition was not denied by the answer.—Cincinnati, S. & M. R. Co. v. Bay City & B. C. R. Co., 106 Mich. 473.

§ 101. ——View as overcoming evidence.

Procedure of the jury on taking the view, see ante § 88.

View as evidence to sustain award, see post ¶ 383.

Sufficiency of view without further proof of necessity of taking, see post ¶ 363.

Conclusiveness of findings and verdict after jury has had view of premises, see post ¶ 440.

Right of jury after view of premises to dispense with argument of counsel, see post ¶ 424.
View as overcoming erroneous evidence, see also ante ¶ 337.

¶ 341. The jury, in proceedings to condemn lands, are not bound by the testimony submitted to them, but are also expected to use their own judgment and knowledge from a view of the premises and from their own experience as freeholders.—Toledo, A. A. & G. T. R. Co. v. Dunlap, 47 Mich. 456.

¶ 342. The jury in condemnation proceedings, as in all cases where no certain measure of damages exists, must trust somewhat to its own judgment, that being one of the purposes for which juries of inquest are provided. Jurors are expected to view the premises and use their own senses, both to obtain such information as an eye-witness can gain, and to interpret and comprehend the testimony of others, the purpose throughout being to give all the damages which they reasonably discover, past or present and to result, but no more.—Grand Rapids, L. & D. R. Co. v. Chesebro, 74 Mich. 466.

¶ 343. A jury in condemnation proceedings cannot follow its judgment as to value in opposition to testimony.—Chaffee's Appeal, 56 Mich. 244.

¶ 344. A view of the premises does not alone justify the jury in denying to a railroad company, in a proceeding to open a street across its track, indemnification for the expense of keeping a gateman or flagman at the crossing, where the undisputed testimony, as well as the surroundings, conclusively shows that it will be necessary to keep such a gateman or watchman.—City of Detroit v. Detroit, G. H. & M. R. Co., 112 Mich. 304.

E. AWARD, FINDINGS AND JUDGMENT.

§ 102. Award or verdict.

Finding as to necessity, see post § 103.
Description of property, see post § 104.
Payment or enforcement of award and rights in same, see post §§ 117-121.
Specification of amounts or gross award, see post § 105.
Specification of shares of mortgagees, lienors or lessees, see post § 106.
Necessity of award by jury and its constitutional requisites, see ante § 78.
Conclusiveness of findings and verdict on appeal, see post § 131.
Specification of benefits in verdicts in street opening cases, see Highways, II, B.
Validity of award of arbitrators as to amount of damages, see Arbitration ¶ 98.
Matters determined in verdict in proceedings by public corporation or state agency, see Comp. L. 1915, § 362.
Matters covered in verdict in general city and village proceedings, see Comp. L. 1915, § 3383.
Blank form of verdict for use of jury in proceedings by public corporation or state agency, see Comp. L. 1915, § 363.
Blank verdict form in general city and village proceedings, see Comp. L. 1915, § 3384.
Necessity that verdict be in writing and signed by all jurors in proceedings by public corporation or state agency, see Comp. L. 1915, § 361.
Necessity that verdict be in writing and signed by jurors in general city and village proceedings, see Comp. L. 1915, § 3382.

¶ 345. An award of damages in proceedings to condemn land is not invalid for having been reached by averaging the amounts as marked by each commissioner, if the commissioners did not agree beforehand upon this mode of compromise, but merely resorted to it as a proper method of arriving at a just result, after stating to each other the amounts which they had individually fixed.—Marquette, H. & O. R. Co. v. Houghton Probate Judge, 53 Mich. 217.

¶ 346. An award of damages in condemnation proceedings is invalid if, without the consent of the parties, it gives compensation on any but a money basis.—Toledo, A. A. & N. M. R. Co. v. Munson, 57 Mich. 42.

§ 103. ——Finding as to necessity.

Public necessity for taking in general, see ante § 11.
Constitutional requirement for jury to make finding as to necessity, see ante ¶ 266.

¶ 347. A finding in the verdict that "it is necessary that said real estate and property should be taken for the purposes of said company" is not such a finding of the necessity for the taking of said property for the public use, either in form or substance, as is required by Const., art. 18, § 2. The report of the jury or commissioners must distinctly find that the taking is necessary for the public use and benefit; and to make such a report they must be satisfied, not only that the particular land is needed for the construction of the work, but also that the work itself is one of public importance.—Mansfield, C. & L. M. R. Co. v. Clark, 23 Mich. 519.

¶ 348. A finding by a jury that they "did ascertain and determine that it is necessary for said company to take said real estate for public use, to wit, for the purpose of said company's incorporation as and for right of way," is a sufficient finding that the land was required for the public use.—East Saginaw & St. C. R. Co. v. Benham, 28 Mich. 459.

¶ 349. The verdict of a jury "that it was and is necessary to take and use said land for the purpose of operating and constructing said railroad by said company" is not sufficient either in form or substance.—Grand Rapids, N. & L. S. R. Co. v. Van Driele, 24 Mich. 409.

¶ 350. Where commissioners were appointed to determine the necessity of taking land for a railroad company, their finding "that the taking of said strip or parcel of land was required and necessary for the constructing and operating of said railroad and a necessary public use thereof" was held sufficient.—In re Morgan's Appeal v. Chicago & N. E. R. Co., 39 Mich. 675.

¶ 351. In proceedings under Laws 1865, p. 651, as amended by Laws 1867, p. 193 (Comp. L. 1871, ch. 221) to obtain water-power to operate a manufactory, the necessity for the taking must be passed upon, and a finding that the taking is to be for the public use is not sufficient.—McClary v. Hartwell, 25 Mich. 139.

§ 104. ——Description of property.

Averment of description in petition, see ante § 64.

Validity of finding with indefinite description, no map and no designation of owners' names, see also ante ¶ 208.

Insufficiency of description in oath of jury as affecting award, see ante ¶ 295.

¶ 352. Where commissioners appointed to assess damages for taking land for railroad purposes assessed them in view of the tract taken altogether, but understated the quantity of the land by a fraction of an acre, it was held that it did not invalidate their action.—In re Morgan's Appeal v. Chicago & N. E. R. Co., 39 Mich. 675.

¶ 353. A description in an award condemning lands for railway purposes allowed a strip 30 feet wide on each side of a given line across the entire premises, except that in crossing a specified parcel a strip only 25 feet wide was allowed south of the line. It also described another parcel by making the boundary begin and end at the east end of the northerly outside line of the former, and by giving the courses and distances. Held sufficient.—Michigan Air Line R. Co. v. Barnes, 44 Mich. 222.

¶ 354. Under a petition to acquire title for railroad purposes, but failing to show for what purpose the lands specified are included in the petition, an award of a jury disclosing that they had assessed the damages which they thought the respondent entitled to on account of his "claiming" to own certain lands used and occupied as a street, without determining whether, in fact, he did own it, and from which it does not appear whether the damages awarded were the estimated value of the land, or only that of some doubtful claim they supposed him to be setting up, cannot be sustained.—Mansfield, C. & L. M. R. Co. v. Clark, 23 Mich. 519.

§ 105. ——Specification of amounts or gross award.

Payment into court for division, see post § 118.

Determination to whom award is to be paid in railroad bridge and tunnel proceedings, see Comp. L. 1915, § 8258.

¶ 355. In taking lands for a right of way for a railroad, each owner has a right to have a finding as to the value of his land and the necessity for taking it; and a general finding, giving a single sum for taking the land of several owners, is invalid.—Chicago & M. L. S. R. Co. v. Sanford, 23 Mich. 418.

¶ 356. Where a jury is required merely to determine the damages or compensation for taking property for a railroad company, a finding in general terms is sufficient, and it need not specify the amount allowed for each item of injury.—Michigan Air Line Ry. Co. v. Barnes, 44 Mich. 222; Flint & P. M. R. Co. v. Detroit & B. C. R. Co., 64 Mich. 350.

¶ 357. The jury need not itemize the damages awarded.—City of Grand Rapids v. Bennett, 106 Mich. 528, per McGrath, C. J.

¶ 358. Where three separate parcels of land are affected by proceedings to condemn a railroad right of way in a street, each parcel should be considered and damages awarded separately for each.—Bay City Belt Line R. Co. v. Hitchcock, 90 Mich. 533.

¶ 359. Where parts of two lots owned by the same person are taken by condemnation proceedings, the jury in giving a lump sum as compensation to the owner, is held to have compensated for both lots, an apportionment to each lot being unnecessary.—Weber v. City of Detroit, 158 Mich. 149.

¶ 360. Where the interest of two persons in lands is treated as joint by the petition asking that they be condemned for railroad purposes, and the persons appear jointly and jointly demand a jury, it is not improper for the jury to award an undivided sum to the two; their own action precludes them from insisting that their interests should have been separately regarded.—East Saginaw & St. C. R. Co. v. Benham, 28 Mich. 459.

§ 106. ——Specification of mortgagees', lienors' or lessees' shares.

Impairment of interests of mortgagees, lienors and others in secondary right as "taking" entitling to award, see ante § 21.

Right of mortgagee to appeal, see post ¶ 406.

Apportionment in verdict to cover mortgages, leases, agreements or other liens in proceedings by public corporation or state agency, see Comp. L. 1915, § 362.

¶ 361. An award of damages for land condemned for railway uses was sustained where it expressed the gross sum allowed to all joint claimants and specified how much of it was for each of those interested as mortgagees.—Michigan Air Line R. Co. v. Barnes, 44 Mich. 222.

¶ 362. In proceedings to open a street under Laws of 1877, Act No. 201, the jury should apportion damages between owners, mortgagees, lessees, etc., so that each can receive a warrant for the specific sum to which he is entitled. But acceptance of the sums awarded waives the error of neglecting to do this, and the persons interested are presumed to have agreed upon an apportionment among themselves.—Rentz v. City of Detroit, 48 Mich. 544.

§ 107. Splitting, severance and joinder of verdicts.

Consolidation and severance of proceedings in general, see ante § 87.

Splitting causes of action and reserving demands for future litigation, see post ¶ 483.

¶ 363. The provision of the charter of Detroit that the jury in a matter of opening an alley, after having visited the place of the intended improvement, and gone "as near as may be practicable" to the property to be taken, shall return at once to the court and first determine the necessity for the taking, and then, if they find in the affirmative, hear evidence, is clearly improper, in that it requires the jury to determine the most important question in the case without proof or argument, and upon such examination only of the property as they see fit to make, in the absence of any requirement to make any at all. The question of necessity, being the very foundation of the right to take private property, is one on which the parties have a full right to be heard, and have the jury remain open to conviction and uncommitted until full hearing. A jury can render but one verdict, and that only when the whole inquiry before them is ended, and they cannot therefore determine the necessity by itself; it depends on other facts as well as on the question of convenience.—Paul v. City of Detroit, 32 Mich. 108.

¶ 364. The statute providing for the condemnation of lands for public purposes contemplates that one jury in one proceeding shall determine the question of the necessity of the condemnation of lands of different persons in a locality; and a verdict so rendered was not void because rendered before hearing testimony as to the value of, or the prospective damages to the lands of a particular owner so condemned.—Detroit & T. S. L. R. Co. v. Campbell, 140 Mich. 384.

§ 108. Special questions and findings.

Questions for jury in general, see ante § 77.

¶ 365. There is no provision in the statutes relative to condemnation proceedings, whereby special questions are to be submitted to jury or commissioners.—Toledo, S. & M. R. Co. v. Campau, 83 Mich. 31; Toledo, S. & M. R. Co. v. Campau, 83 Mich. 33.

¶ 366. The jury's failure to answer special questions in condemnation proceedings cannot be assigned as error.—T., S. & M. R. Co. v. Campau, 83 Mich. 31.

¶ 367. A commissioner's special finding that map and survey are insufficient can have no effect inasmuch as it was not a proper question for him to determine, such question should have been raised before the court on the application to appoint commissioners, being a jurisdictional question.—T., S. & M. R. Co. v. Campau, 83 Mich. 33.

§ 109. Unanimity in verdict.

¶ 368. Where a "jury" is provided by the constitution, a jury in the common-law sense, deciding only by a unanimous verdict, is meant.—Chicago & M. L. S. R. Co. v. Sanford, 23 Mich. 418.

¶ 369. The verdict in proceedings to condemn land for railroad purposes must be unanimous, and a verdict signed by less than all the jurors is a nullity.—Chicago & M. L. S. R. Co. v. Sanford, 23 Mich. 418.

§ 110. Decision by commissioners; number requisite.

Commissioners of appraisal in general, see ante § 80.

¶ 370. The word "commissioners," as used in Const., art. 18, § 2, means commissioners clothed with such powers as prior to the adoption of the constitution they had been clothed with,—that is, the right to decide all questions by a majority vote; and where commissioners are appointed, a decision by a majority of them is binding.—Serrell v. Patterson, 107 Mich. 234.

§ 111. Confirmation or rejection of award and new trial.

Excessiveness or inadequacy of compensation, see post § 112.

Procedure to confirm or reject, see post § 113.

Affidavits to impeach or sustain award, see post § 114.

Cause for challenge of juror presented for first time as ground for rejection of award, see ante ¶ 285.

Objection to confirmation of verdict as amounting to motion for new trial, see post ¶ 420.

Necessity of presenting reasons for or against confirmation in lower court, see post ¶ 418.

Erroneous instruction as ground for rejection of award, see ante ¶¶ 321, 322.

Furnishing jury with desired form of verdict as ground for setting aside, see ante ¶¶ 319, 320.

Attendance of court to decide law questions and swear witnesses as ground for setting aside award, see ante ¶ 308.
New proceedings after defective ones, see ante § 75.
Power of court to set verdict aside and grant new trial in proceedings by public corporation or state agency, see Comp. L. 1915, § 364.
Power of court to set aside verdict in general city and village proceedings, see Comp. L. 1915, § 3385.
Motions for new trial in proceedings by public corporation or state agency, see Comp. L. 1915, § 365.
Motion for new trial in general city and village proceedings, see Comp. L. 1915, § 3386.
Amendments of verdict in general city and village proceedings, see Comp. L. 1915, § 3385.

¶ 371. The confirmation of a report in condemnation proceedings is not a matter of strict right even upon a regular record. If substantial reasons are shown against it by facts not in the record itself, the court has power to do justice and refuse confirmation, and on appeal the same power exists.—Port Huron & N. W. R. Co. v. Callanan, 61 Mich. 12.

¶ 372. Under How. St., chap. 93, § 10, providing that in condemnation proceedings on the incoming of the report the court shall "confirm the same * * * unless for good cause shown by either party" and that said court as to confirmation "shall have the powers usual in other cases," the court may set aside the award either for (1) fraud or misconduct of the jury, (2) gross errors or mistakes of the jury, (3) erroneous rejection or admission of evidence, (4) errors evincive of existence of undue influence, partiality, bias, and prejudice, or unfaithfulness in discharge of the duty imposed on the jury, (5) inadequacy or excessiveness of damages.—Fort Street Union Depot Co. v. Backus, 92 Mich. 33.

¶ 373. The provision in How. St., ch. 93, § 10, that the court shall have the power usual in other cases, as to the confirmation of the report of the commissioners or jury in condemnation proceedings instituted under the act, refers to the powers of the courts in the confirmation of reports made to them by bodies or persons authorized by law to make them in accordance with the practice of such courts.—Backus v. Wayne Circuit Judge, 89 Mich. 209.

¶ 374. A circuit court has no power to set aside the award and report of a jury in condemnation proceedings, and order a new trial or inquisition before a new jury, where the objections to the confirmation of the report are not based upon jurisdictional defects, under How. St., ch. 93, § 10, which provides that "on such report being made by the commissioners or jury, the court, on motion shall confirm the same on the next or any subsequent day, when in session, unless for good cause shown by either party" and further providing that "said court, as to the confirmation of such report shall have the powers usual in other cases."—Backus v. Wayne Circuit Judge, 89 Mich. 209.

¶ 375. The court before which proceedings are taken to acquire title to real estate for the use of a union railroad depot company has power to set aside a report or award and to order a new trial, even though the objections to confirmation are not based upon jurisdictional defects.—Fort-Street Union Depot Co. v. Backus, 92 Mich. 33. (Overruling Backus v. Wayne Circuit Judge, 89 Mich. 209.)

¶ 376. If, in proceedings to condemn land, a jury has been summoned under proper circumstances, has conducted its inquiries legally and with due regard to private rights, and has reached a legitimate conclusion as to the necessity for the condemnation and the compensation, the appropriation of the land on payment of such compensation will be lawful and will not be affected by collateral action by the judge or court.—Toledo, A. A. & G. T. R. Co. v. Dunlap, 47 Mich. 456.

¶ 377. Where the land condemned by the commissioners appointed by the probate court, for corporate uses, has been actually appropriated by the railroad company after paying the award therefor under protest, the company cannot claim that the award should be set aside, as that would deprive the owners of their property without the necessity or the compensation being first determined, which the constitution forbids (Const. Art. XV, § 9).—Marquette, H. & O. R. Co. v. Houghton Probate Judge, 53 Mich. 217.

¶ 378. Whether under the statute a second award of damages for the condemnation of land for a union railroad depot company is final, quære.—Fort Street Union Depot Co. v. Backus, 103 Mich. 556; affirmed in 169 U. S. 557, 42 L. ed. 853, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 445.

¶ 379. Under Pub. Acts 1883, No. 124 (H. St., § 3064k), providing that motions for a new trial in proceedings by cities and villages to condemn property for public use shall be made within two days after the rendition of the verdict, unless further time is allowed by the court, and that if no such motion is made, or, being made, is overruled, the court shall enter judgment confirming the verdict, and that such judgment, unless reversed by the supreme court, shall be final and conclusive, the power to grant a new trial is exhausted when a motion therefor has once been denied and the verdict confirmed.—Zoltowski v. Judge of Recorder's Court, 112 Mich. 349.

¶ 380. Where the trial court determines that the damages assessed by the jury in a condemnation suit are insufficient, it is error to refuse to grant a new trial to the property owner on condition that the condemning party pay a larger sum than that awarded.—City of Grand Rapids v. Coit, 149 Mich. 668.

§ 112. ——Excessiveness or inadequacy of compensation.

See also ante ¶ 372.

Inadequacy or excessiveness of compensation as matter reviewed on appeal, see post § 132.

Evidence as to value to support award, see ante § 97.

Damages in excess of true value of property taken as intendment of condemnation statute, see ante ¶ 102.

¶ 381. The probate court in condemnation cases has power to set aside the report of commissioners for good cause shown, if, for example, the amount awarded is unreasonable, and indicates prejudice or impartiality or action upon a wrong basis of estimation. —Marquette, H. & O. R. Co. v. Houghton Probate Judge, 53 Mich. 217.

¶ 382. An award of $96,000 for constructing a railroad in a street fronting on claimant's planing mill property worth with all improvements not over $159,450 is so excessive as to warrant setting aside the award.—Fort Street Union Depot Co. v. Backus, 92 Mich. 33.

¶ 383. A large discretion is left to the jury in relation to assessment of damages in condemnation proceedings and they are expected to use their own judgment and knowledge from a view of the premises and their experience as freeholders quite as much as from the testimony of witnesses to matters of opinion, hence the finding of the jury will not be disturbed where the question of damages is one about which different persons would greatly differ.—Marquette & S.-E. Ry. Co. v. Longyear, 133 Mich. 94.

§ 113. ——Procedure to confirm or reject.

Hearing on report of commissioners or jury in proceedings instituted by the State, see Comp. L. 1915, § 352.

¶ 384. The showing upon a motion to set aside an award is ordinarily made by affidavits and counter affidavits, but it is discretionary with the court to require oral testimony and cross-examination. — Marquette, H. & O. R. Co. v. Houghton Probate Judge, 53 Mich. 217.

¶ 385. The method of bringing to the court's attention the facts that warrant rejection of the award is largely in the discretion of the court, but such facts may be presented by affidavits or oral testimony upon which the court is bound to act.—Fort Street Union Depot Co. v. Backus, 92 Mich. 33.

¶ 386. A probate order confirming a report of commissioners on condemnation of a railroad crossing is invalid if made out of term without notice to the respondent.—Michigan Cent. R. Co. v. Tuscola Probate Judge, 48 Mich. 638.

§ 114. ——Affidavits to impeach or sustain award.

Use of affidavits and counter affidavits on motion for rejection or confirmation, see also ante ¶¶ 384, 385.

¶ 387. Under Const. art. 18, section 2, the jury provided for in eminent domain proceedings and in proceedings to fix the value of land taken under the drain law has so far the character of a common law jury, that it is incompetent to show by one juror that the value of the land was fixed in the jury room by striking an average of the estimates furnished by each of the jurors, as a reason for not confirming their report.—Wixom v. Bixby, 127 Mich. 479.

¶ 388. The official report of the commissioners appointed by the probate court in proceedings to condemn land for railroad purposes should not ordinarily be outweighed by affidavits as to the value of the land and the damage thereto. Such evidence is, however, admissible on a motion to set aside the report.—Marquette, H. & O. R. Co. v. Houghton Probate Judge, 53 Mich. 217.

¶ 389. Commissioners in proceedings to condemn land for railway purposes are not like a common-law jury, and their individual affidavits are admissible to impeach their finding or to show, like any other fact, the rule of damages on which they proceeded.—Marquette, H. & O. R. Co. v. Houghton Probate Judge, 53 Mich. 217.

§ 115. Judgment or decree.

Right to execution for collection of judgment, see post § 120.

Lesser award on second proceedings with judgment for difference, see post § 121.

Judgment in eminent domain proceeding as bar or estoppel, see Former Adjudication.

Order and judgment made on payment of award in proceedings instituted by the State, see Comp. L. 1915, § 352.

¶ 390. Where, pending an appeal by a union depot company from an award of damages in condemnation proceedings in the circuit court the amount of the award was paid to respondents, and where, upon a second trial below a less sum was awarded, judgment is, under How. St., § 3468 (Comp. L. 1897, § 6366), properly entered for the petitioner for the difference between the two awards, and execution thereon is authorized by How. St., § 7664 (Comp. L. 1897, § 10300). —Fort Street Union Depot Co. v. Backus, 103 Mich. 556; affirmed in Backus v. Fort Street Union Depot Co., 169 U. S. 557, 42 L. ed. 853, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 445.

§ 116. Costs and allowances.

See also post ¶ 481.

Allowance of attorney fees, see post ¶¶ 479, 480.

Right to execution for collection of costs, see post § 120.

Costs on appeal or certiorari, see post § 141.

Costs in other action or proceeding as element of damage, see ante § 42.

Proper items of costs in drain condemnations, see Drains § 47.

Allowance for attorney fee in general city and village proceedings, see Comp. L. 1915, § 3394.

Liability of railroad bridge or tunnel company to pay attorney fees to owners of lands condemned, see Comp. L. 1915, § 8249.

¶ 391. Where, upon a second trial in condemnation proceedings for a union railroad depot company, the award of damages is less than on the first, costs are properly awarded to the successful petitioner under H. S., § 3468.—Fort St. Union Depot Co. v. Backus, 103 Mich. 556; affirmed in 169 U. S. 557, 42 L. ed. 853, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 445.

¶ 392. Where condemnation proceedings were affirmed on appeal so far as they related to the findings of the jury, but were reversed as to certain collateral orders, costs of the supreme court and also of the proceedings below were awarded to appellant.—Toledo, A. A. & G. T. R. Co. v. Dunlap, 47 Mich. 456.

¶ 393. Disbursements for fees of witnesses and attorneys not allowed by any statute in condemnation proceedings under Detroit park and boulevard act.—Hester v. Commissioners of Parks of Detroit, 84 Mich. 450.

¶ 394. Fees of witnesses attending, in good faith, condemnation proceedings, may, under How. St., § 3064q, be taxed on proper affidavit.—Dorland v. Grand Rapids Superior Judge, 78 Mich. 182.

VI. PAYMENT OR ENFORCEMENT OF AWARD, AND RIGHTS IN SAME.

Award, finding and judgment in general, see ante §§ 102-116.

§ 117. In general; pendency of appeal or rehearing.

Payment into court for division, see post § 118.

Awards to estates or representatives, see post § 119.

Execution and enforcement of judgment, see post § 120.

Lesser award on second proceedings with judgment for difference, see post § 121.

Effect of payment of award on right to appeal, see post ¶¶ 407, 408.

Payment of award in general city and village proceedings, see Comp. L. 1915, § 3391.

When judgment to be paid in fourth class city proceedings, see Comp. L. 1915, § 3160.

Payment of award in village proceedings, see Comp. L. 1915, § 2815.

¶ 395. The owner of lands sought by a railroad company is not put in fault so as to be liable for the subsequent costs by refusing a tender; nor is he deprived of any rights by the mere deposit, pending appeal, of the sum awarded by the jury.—Toledo, A. A. & G. T. R. Co. v. Dunlap, 47 Mich. 456.

§ 118. Payment into court for division.

Deposit in court pending appeal, see ante ¶ 395.

¶ 396. Where the commissioners in condemnation are unable to apportion the damages among the several respondents, an award in gross, subject to apportionment by the court, is proper under How. St., § 3338, providing that, in case of doubt as to whom the money belongs, the court may direct the some to be paid into court, and may determine who is entitled thereto.—Cincinnati, S. & M. R. Co. v. Bay City & B. C. R. Co., 106 Mich. 473.

§ 119. Awards to estates or representatives.

Title and right of representative in property and assets of estate, see Estates of Decedents, IV.

Collection of assets and properties of estate in general, see Estates of Decedents, V, B.

¶ 397. In condemnation proceeding an award in favor of an estate should be paid to executor.—City of Detroit v. Schilling, 93 Mich. 429.

¶ 398. An award paid to an executrix under the condemnation of land belonging to the estate (Sess. L. 1834, pp. 40, 44; 3 Terr. L. 1289) would be sustained, under Rev. Stat. 1846, p. 288, § 7, as paid not only for her personal interest, but for those which she represented as executrix.—Barlage v. Detroit, G. H. & M. R. Co., 54 Mich. 564.

§ 120. Execution and enforcement of judgment.

Lesser award on second proceedings with judgment for difference, see post § 121.

¶ 399. Execution will not issue against a railroad company to enforce payment of either damages or costs allowed in condemnation proceedings; unless such payment is made in sixty days the title of the owner to the land is not divested.—Derby v. Gage, 60 Mich. 1.

¶ 400. No execution for costs in railroad condemnations since they are on the same footing as the damages.—Derby v. Gage, 60 Mich. 1.

§ 121. ——Lesser award on second proceedings with judgment for difference.

See also ante ¶ 390.

¶ 401. Under the express provisions of How. St., § 3468, judgment is to be entered against the landowner for the difference and costs of appeal, if on an appeal from an award he recovers a lesser sum on the second assessment of damages; and the statute clearly contemplates entry of such judgment and issuance of execution thereon, the general statute (How. St., § 7664) providing for execution on any judgment rendered in any court of record and such a proceeding being in the circuit court.—Fort St. Union Depot Co. v. Backus, 103 Mich. 556; affirmed in Backus v. Fort Street Union Depot Co., 169 U. S. 557, 42 L. ed. 853, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 445.

VII. RIGHT TO POSSESSION PENDING VESTING OF TITLE.

§ 122. In general.

Nature of title acquired in general, see post § 149.

Effect of taking possession before condemnation, see ante § 10.

Right to trespass or action for damages for illegal occupancy, see post § 145.

Denial of injunction against railroad taking possession pending vesting of title, see post ¶ 490.

Effect of taking possession under court order on right to appeal from award, see post ¶¶ 407, 408.

Jurisdiction of probate court to make interim order for possession, see Probate Courts, I.

When right to possession accrues to the State, see Comp. L. 1915, § 352.

When right to possession accrues to public corporation or state agency, see Comp. L. 1915, § 368.

Right to possession on the filing of treasurer's certificate in fourth class city proceedings, see Comp. L. 1915, § 3160.

Right to possession after award is in treasury but before payment in general city and village proceedings, see Comp. L. 1915, § 3391.

Right to possession of village when compensation awarded is in treasury, see Comp. L. 1915, § 2815.

Right to possession on payment of award by railroad, bridge or tunnel company, see Comp. L. 1915, § 8257.

Effect of appeal on possession of land in railroad, bridge or tunnel proceedings, see Comp. L. 1915, § 8257.

¶ 402. That a court has refused to enjoin a condemnor from taking possession of land for its road before condemnation and payment does not legalize possession taken by it before such acts.—Grand Rapids, L. & D. R. Co. v. Chesebro, 74 Mich. 466.

¶ 402a. An order under How. St., § 3340, allowing possession to be taken of lands sought to be condemned pending proceedings therefor, when, after failure of a first attempt to condemn them, by reason of defects in the proceedings, a second attempt is made, cannot, if it can be granted at all, be granted without full notice and an adequate hearing; and the probate court has never power to make such an order.—Detroit, L. & N. R. Co. v. Livingston County Probate Judge, 63 Mich. 676.

¶ 402b. How St., § 3340, allowing an order to be made permitting possession to be taken of lands sought to be condemned, pending a second attempt to condemn them after a first attempt has failed by reason of defective proceedings, does not apply where one railroad seeks to cross another.—Detroit, L. & N. R. Co. v. Livingston County Probate Judge, 63 Mich. 676.

VIII. APPEAL AND REVIEW OF JUDGMENT AND AWARD.

§ 123. Mode of review and jurisdiction to review.

Right to appeal and allowance of appeal, see post § 124.

Appellate procedure, notice and record, see post § 125.

Saving questions for review, see §§ 126-128.

Scope of appeal and matters reviewable, see post §§ 129-132.

Review on certiorari and grounds for writ, see post §§ 133-138.

Grounds for reversal and harmlessness of error, see post § 139.

Law of case in subsequent proceedings, see post § 140.

Costs on appeal or certiorari, see post § 141.

Propriety of certiorari as to questions which may be raised on appeal, see post ¶ 462.

Province of supreme court on appeal in reviewing findings of fact, see post § 131.

State decisions presenting Federal question reviewable by United States Supreme Court, see Courts § 91.

State decisions as rule in Federal courts, see Courts § 29.

Appeal or other review of highway opening proceedings, see Highways, II, B.

Remedy by mandamus, see Mandamus, II.

Appeal from judgment of court confirming verdict in proceedings by public corporation or state agency, see Comp. L. 1915, § 365.

Right of appeal from judgment of probate court to circuit court in fourth class city proceedings, see Comp. L. 1915, §§ 3150-3152.

Appeal in general city and village proceedings, see Comp. L. 1915, § 3387.

Appeals by railroad, bridge and tunnel companies, see Comp. L. 1915, § 8257.

¶ 403. An appeal to the circuit court from an order in condemnation proceedings in the probate court, is not authorized by section 699, Comp. Laws 1897.—United States Gypsum Co. v. Kent Circuit Judge, 150 Mich. 668.

¶ 404. Comp. L. 1897, § 669, being the general statute for appeals from an order, sentence, decree or denial by the probate judge, does not admit of an appeal from his decision in a condemnation case on cause shown against the appointment of commissioners or a jury that the proposed taking was for a private use and therefore beyond the jurisdiction, or of an appeal from any other order or determination of the probate court or the judge thereof in such a proceeding; since condemnation proceedings are not a part of the ordinary and general jurisdiction of that court, but are special and summary proceedings authorized by statute.—United States Gypsum Co. v. Kent Circuit Judge, 150 Mich. 668, overruling anything to the contrary in Defoe v. Bay Circuit Judge, 116 Mich. 567 and Pere Marquette R. Co. v. United States Gypsum Co., 148 Mich. 308.

¶ 405. In a condemnation proceeding by a railroad the appearance and showing of cause by a person affected as permitted by Comp. L. 1897, § 6245, presents a question for the probate court whether the commissioners should be appointed to appraise damages; and the settled practice is to review the decision, if favorable to the petitioner, by certiorari seasonably instituted or by the statutory appeal from the award or report, as provided in Comp. L. 1897, § 6248, if the case has gone to that stage.—United States Gypsum Co. v. Kent Circuit Judge, 150 Mich. 668.

§ 124. Right to appeal and allowance of appeal.

Right to ejectment where based on irregularities in condemnation proceedings reviewable on appeal, see post ¶ 506.

¶ 406. Any one—e. g., a mortgagee—whose rights are affected by the result of condemnation proceedings may appeal, even though there has been a discontinuance as to him.—Michigan Air Line R. Co. v. Barnes, 40 Mich. 383.

¶ 407. Under How. St., §§ 3467, 3468, in condemnation proceedings by a union railroad depot company, payment of damages by order of court and taking possession of the property do not constitute an abandonment of the company's right to appeal from the award.—Fort Street Union Depot Co. v. Backus, 92 Mich. 33.

¶ 408. Right to appeal from award of damages against it is not lost by depot company's paying award and occupying condemned land pending appeal.—Fort St. Union Depot Co. v. Peninsular Stove Co., 103 Mich. 637.

¶ 409. The general provisions of the laws regulating procedure in the probate courts do not apply to special proceedings for the condemnation of land; hence section 674, Comp. Laws 1897, authorizing the circuit court to allow appeals from the acts of the probate judge where the person aggrieved has omitted to claim an appeal, does not apply to a case where plaintiff failed to appeal within the time provided by statute in condemnation proceedings.—Stapleton v. Macomb Circuit Judge, 151 Mich. 210.

§ 125. Appellate procedure, notice, exceptions and record.

[Note. While in many particulars appellate procedure in eminent domain proceedings is the same as in ordinary writs or appeals, yet because such review is statutory it is treated separately. The general topic Appeal should be consulted in connection with this.]

New appraisal on appeal in railroad, bridge or tunnel proceedings, see Comp. L. 1915, § 8257.

¶ 410. Under How. St., § 3337, requiring a "specification" of objections, the notice of appeal from the jury's report in condemnation proceedings must point out the errors and defects complained of with such particularity that the attention of the appellee and the court will be at once precisely directed to them.—Flint & P. M. R. Co. v. Detroit & B. C. R. Co., 64 Mich. 350.

¶ 411. Under How. St., § 3337, requiring that a notice of appeal from an appraisal or report in proceedings to condemn lands for railroad uses "shall specify the objections to the proceedings," an objection in the notice of appeal that the court did not have jurisdiction to appoint the commissioners or to confirm their report is too general.—Flint & P. M. R. Co. v. Detroit & B. C. R. Co., 64 Mich. 350.

¶ 412. Objections in the notice of appeal to the petition and award must be clearly specified.—Michigan Air Line R. Co. v. Barnes, 44 Mich. 222.

¶ 413. An objection that the award of a jury in proceedings to take land "is against the law and evidence in the case" cannot show what objections are deemed waived, and is insufficient to raise any question.—Michigan Air Line R. Co. v. Barnes, 44 Mich. 222.

¶ 414. Whether a bill of exceptions is appropriate for bringing up questions on appeal in condemnation proceedings under the railroad law of 1873, quære.—Michigan Air Line R. Co. v. Barnes, 44 Mich. 222.

¶ 415. When a party seeks a ruling on which to base an appeal if it is wrong, he cannot rely on the judge's private knowledge of facts, but must bring them into the case in some authoritative and responsible form, so that they may become a part of the record for the purposes of the review.—Detroit, West. Trans. & J. R. Co. v. Crane, 50 Mich. 182.

¶ 416. The findings of a jury in proceedings for the condemnation of land will not be set aside unless upon objections raised in the record and unless the record shows that the proceedings were erroneous.—Toledo, A. A. & G. T. R. Co. v. Dunlap, 47 Mich. 456.

¶ 417. An award in a condemnation proceeding may be set aside on appeal for the disqualification of a juror.—Sandusky Grain Co. v. Sanilac Circuit Judge, 184 Mich. 126.

§ 126. Saving questions for review.

Acquiescence and waiver, see post § 127.
Jurisdictional defects, see post § 128.
Necessity of having objections raised in record for review, see ante ¶¶ 415, 416.
Necessity of urging cause for challenge at time of impaneling jury, see ante ¶ 285.
Mode and sufficiency of objections to save questions for review in ordinary actions and suits, see Saving Questions.

¶ 418. In reviewing proceedings for the condemnation of lands, the supreme court cannot consider any reasons against the confirmation of the report of the jury except those which were presented to the lower court.—Detroit, West. Trans. & J. R. Co. v. Crane, 50 Mich. 182.

¶ 418a. On appeal from a judgment against a tenant claiming damages to its leasehold by reason of destruction of access by separating grades at a railroad crossing material points affecting the right to damages and the amount allowable will not be considered where they were not made below.—City of Detroit v. C. H. Little Co., 141 Mich. 637.

¶ 419. The failure to except to a verdict in condemnation proceedings by a city against a railroad company on the ground that no allowance was made for keeping the crossing of the proposed street in repair will prevent consideration of the objection on appeal.—Village of Royal Oak v. Detroit, G. H. & M. R. Co., 138 Mich. 294.

¶ 420. The objection to witnesses and jurors mingling freely with bystanders and being served meals, cigars and drinks, etc., at the expense of petitioner's representatives, on the occasion of viewing the premises, in condemnation of land proceedings, was seasonably made upon objection to confirmation of the verdict; since that amounted to the same thing as a motion for a new trial.—Detroit & T. S. L. R. Co. v. Campbell, 140 Mich. 384.

¶ 421. Where in a proceeding by a street railway company to condemn land to build an embankment to carry its tracks over a railroad, the issue is whether the company's right is restricted by statute to building a trestle, if the company does not aver that it had secured the permission of a village to lay its track and operate its cars upon the land sought to be condemned and the failure to do so is not made the ground of objection, such point will not be considered on appeal.—Detroit United Ry. v. Barnes Paper Co., 172 Mich. 586.

§ 127. ——Acquiescence and waiver.

Appearance and waiver of notice of proceedings, see also ante ¶ 237.
Acceptance of gross award as waiver of right of apportionment, see ante ¶ 362.

¶ 422. An assignment of error upon the action of the court in permitting an adjournment in condemnation proceedings before the sheriff had returned his list of jurors cannot be considered, where the record shows that the parties consented to the adjournment.—Ann Arbor R. Co. v. Beach, 110 Mich. 209.

¶ 423. An objection that the record in a proceeding for the condemnation of land does not show that the jurors were residents of the county, will not be considered on appeal where not raised in the court below but the parties appeared and took part in the trial.—Benton Harbor Terminal Ry. Co. v. King, 131 Mich. 377.

¶ 424. Refusal of the jury to hear counsel after the testimony had been heard and the premises viewed, in a condemnation proceeding, is not reversible error where it does not appear that counsel insisted upon being heard.—Benton Harbor Terminal Ry. Co. v. King, 131 Mich. 377.

¶ 425. The objection on appeal in proceedings to condemn land under the union railroad depot act, that the jury was not attended by a circuit judge or circuit court commissioner, will be regarded as waived by petitioner where it proceeded without request that the jury be so attended.—Fort Street Union Depot Co. v. Backus, 92 Mich. 33.

§ 128. ——Jurisdictional defects.

¶ 426. Jurisdictional defects in proceedings to condemn land will defeat the proceedings at any stage, whether relied on or not.—Toledo, A. A. & N. M. R. Co. v. Munson, 57 Mich. 42.

¶ 427. The objection that a stockholder in the condemnor railroad corporation sat as a juror may be raised in the supreme court for the first time.—Peninsular Ry. Co. v. Howard, 20 Mich. 18.

§ 129. Scope of appeal and matters reviewable.

Construction and effect of the record and presumptions thereon, see post § 130.
Verdicts and findings on the evidence, see post § 131.
Inadequacy or excessiveness of award, see post § 132.
Mode and scope of review in ordinary appeals and writs of error, see Appeal, XII.

Hearing on appeal in proceedings by public corporation or state agency, see Comp. L. 1915, § 367.

¶ 428. An appeal from confirmation of an award or report brings before the supreme court the entire case as it stood before the confirmation.—Peninsular Ry. Co. v. Howard, 29 Mich. 18; Port Huron & S. W. R. Co. v. Voorheis, 50 Mich. 506; Toledo, A. A. & N. M. R. Co. v. Munson, 57 Mich. 42.

§ 130. ——Construction and effect of the record and presumptions thereon.

Presumptions on record in certiorari, see post ¶ 461.

¶ 429. Unless there are indications to the contrary the presumption is that all evident facts bearing on the amount of damages were taken into account.—Michigan Air Line Ry. Co. v. Barnes, 44 Mich. 222; Flint & P. M. R. Co. v. Detroit & B. C. R. Co., 64 Mich. 350.

¶ 430. It cannot be said in a street opening case that the jury made no award for damages to business of an abutter, where there was evidence that the land alone was worth only $3,000, and that there was space enough left for respondents to carry on their business, and where the award was about $4,500.—City of Detroit v. John Brennan & Co., 93 Mich. 338.

¶ 431. Where the record in a condemnation proceeding does not contain all the testimony it cannot be said that there was no evidence of public necessity for taking the lands.—Benton Harbor Terminal Ry. Co. v. King, 131 Mich. 377.

¶ 432. In a condemnation proceeding where the record does not contain all the evidence, it cannot be said on appeal that there is no evidence that the petitioner had been unable to acquire title to the land.—Benton Harbor Terminal Ry. Co. v. Hall, 131 Mich. 384.

¶ 433. The landowner appellant from a condemnation proceeding need not affirmatively show that he was injured by the interference of bystanders and the counsel for the condemnor with the jury on the occasion of a view of the premises to be taken.—Detroit & Toledo S. L. R. Co. v. Campbell, 140 Mich. 384.

¶ 434. Where the jury in proceedings to condemn land for a railroad take all measures that they would if they were personally concerned to acquire a knowledge of the value of the land and of the injury the road is likely to cause it, it is presumable on review that further evidence as to the public importance of the work and as to amounts of compensation to other owners would not have influenced their judgment.—Detroit, West. Trans. & J. R. Co. v. Crane, 50 Mich. 182.

§ 131. ——Verdicts and findings on the evidence.

¶ 435. The finding in proceedings to condemn land that the taking thereof is necessary is conclusive if there is evidence to support it.—Port Huron & S. W. R. Co. v. Voorheis, 50 Mich. 506.

¶ 436. The jury having determined the necessity, the supreme court will not review the question further than to ascertain that there was evidence to support the verdict.—Saginaw, T. & H. R. Co. v. Bordner, 108 Mich. 236.

¶ 437. It is not within the province of the court to review questions of fact, on appeal of condemnation proceedings brought by a railroad company, further than to see that the finding is supported by the evidence.—Detroit & T. S. L. R. Co. v. Campbell, 140 Mich. 384.

¶ 438. Inasmuch as the range of inquiry on the matter of damages is very wide, the object being to recompense the landowner for his entire loss, it is not within the province of the supreme court to review the inquiry further than to see that the finding is supported by the evidence.—Boyne City, G. & A. R. Co. v. Anderson, 146 Mich. 328.

¶ 439. The finding of the jury in condemnation proceedings as to the public necessity for the railroad in question was not disturbed, as the judge before he impaneled the jury, and the jury in making an award, must have been satisfied as to the point.—Detroit & T. S. L. R. Co. v. Hall, 133 Mich. 302.

¶ 440. In a railroad condemnation case where there was dispute as to whether the defendant had asked an unreasonable price and as to whether a bona fide attempt to agree had been made by the company, the finding of the jury on those questions was not disturbed, where a large number of witnesses had been called as to the value of the land in question and the testimony was as far apart as it well could be, and where the jury had viewed the land.—Detroit & T. S. L. R. Co. v. Hall, 133 Mich. 302.

§ 132. ——Inadequacy or excessiveness of award.

Evidence as to value to support award, see ante § 97.

Excessiveness or inadequacy as grounds for rejection of award, see ante § 112.

¶ 441. An award of damages and compensation for property taken for railway purposes will not be disturbed on review unless grossly inadequate, or so inadequate as to give rise to the inference that the jury or commissioners acted on a wrong basis.—Flint & P. M. R. Co. v. Detroit & B. C. R. Co., 64 Mich. 350.

¶ 442. On appeal from the report in condemnation for a railroad the finding of a jury is not conclusive as to the amount of damages; and such finding will be set aside where it appears that the award is in disregard of uncontradicted testimony and of proper elements of damage.—Grand Rapids & I. R. Co. v. Weiden, 70 Mich. 390.

¶ 443. The award of damages in proceedings to condemn land is conclusive on review unless the authorities making it have misconceived the law and have not fully considered all the essential elements of the injury done to the landholder.—Port Huron & S. W. R. Co. v. Voorheis, 50 Mich. 506.

¶ 444. An award of damages in condemnation proceedings will not be vacated unless clearly against evidence.—Fort-Street Union Depot Co. v. Jones, 83 Mich. 415.

¶ 445. Where an award in a railroad condemnation proceeding is within the range of testimony it will not be reversed on technical grounds, or because the damages are apparently excessive or inadequate.—Chicago, D. & C. G. T. Junction R. Co. v. Simons, 200 Mich. 76.

¶ 446. In condemnation proceedings for a railroad right of way, where the jury, having viewed the premises and heard proofs and argument of counsel, allowed the several owners substantial damages in each case, held that respondents could not be heard to complain as to the theory of the application of benefits to damages adopted by the jury.—Detroit, B. C. & W. R. Co. v. First Nat. Bank of Yale, 196 Mich. 660.

¶ 447. An award in a condemnation proceeding will not be disturbed on the ground of inadequacy, when within the maximum and minimum value of the property taken as fixed by the witnesses.—City of Detroit v. Gray, 183 Mich. 193.

¶ 448. An award of compensation in a proceeding to condemn suburban land for railroad purposes will be set aside on appeal to the supreme court where the jury's award is plainly based upon the value of the land for farming purposes and there is evidence that it has a much greater value for subdivision and platting purposes.—Chicago, D. & C. G. T. Junction R. Co. v. Simons, 200 Mich. 76.

§ 133. Review on certiorari; grounds and propriety of writ.

See also ante ¶ 405.

Judgments and proceedings reviewable, see post § 134.

Time for writ to issue, see post § 135.

Objections to writ and quashal or dismissal, see post § 136.

Return to writ and effect of return, see post § 137.

Scope and subjects of review, see post § 138.

Certiorari in general and procedure therein, see Certiorari.

¶ 449. Questions that do not go to the jurisdiction of the court to entertain proceedings to condemn land for railroad use, and which can as well be raised on appeal, should not be brought up on certiorari.—Grand Rapids, L. & D. R. Co. v. Weiden, 69 Mich. 572.

§ 134. ——Judgments and proceedings reviewable.

¶ 450. Certiorari will lie to review proceedings to condemn land when void for want of jurisdiction; though it should not be favored where any other remedy is adequate.—Dunlap v. Toledo, A. A. & G. T. R. Co., 46 Mich. 190.

¶ 451. In proceedings to condemn lands for the improvement of navigation, the order appointing commissioners to determine the necessity of the taking, and to ascertain the damages, etc., is not interlocutory merely, but is final so far as any action by the court is concerned, and may be reviewed at once on certiorari.—Clay v. Pennoyer Creek Improvement Co., 34 Mich. 204.

¶ 452. Where on an appeal to the supreme court from the confirmation of the report of a jury in condemnation proceedings a new appraisal is directed to be made before a new panel, a common-law certiorari lies, if taken in proper season, to correct grave errors committed by the jury in their proceedings, affecting injuriously the rights of the parties; but such correction will not extend to the final facts to be adjudicated upon by the jury, namely, the necessity for taking the property for the public use, and the just damages or compensation to be made therefor.—Backus v. Wayne Circuit Judge, 89 Mich. 209.

¶ 453. Certiorari is the proper remedy for review of the order of the circuit court, where it attempted to entertain an appeal from the probate court's dismissal of a condemnation proceeding by a railroad taken under Comp. L. 1897, § 669, and to retain such case for trial on the merits.—Pere Marquette R. Co. v. United States Gypsum Co., 148 Mich. 308, per McAlvay, C. J., Blair, and Ostrander, JJ., holding it was proper because the circuit court's order might be regarded as in effect the same as a reversal and remand and an attempt by the circuit to exercise jurisdiction thereafter; Carpenter, Montgomery and Moore, JJ., impliedly concurring with them, by voting for mandamus on the ground that the other modes of review were inadequate, though they expressed no opinion that certiorari was proper, if adequate. This was affirmed on the hearing of the order to show cause issued in the case, the ground of affirmance being that such a proceeding and the order therein could in no wise be appealed to the circuit court under Comp. L. 1897, § 669, not being an order of the probate court as such within its ordinary and general jurisdiction to which the statute applies; and accordingly that, the circuit being without jurisdiction because of the nullity of the appeal, certiorari would have been proper, if seasonably sought for.—United States Gypsum Co. v. Kent Circuit Judge, 150 Mich. 668.

¶ 454. The determination of the court, on the issue which may be raised under section 6245, Comp. Laws 1897, providing that on presentation of a petition for condemnation, all persons whose interests are to be affected by the proceedings may show cause against the prayer of the petition, and may disprove any of the facts alleged therein, may be reviewed by certiorari, whatever the form in which cause is shown of record: but it is not contemplated that cause shall be shown by a series of special pleadings, the decision upon each of which may be separately reviewed.—Chicago & K. Terminal R. Co. v. Grand Rapids & I. Ry. Co., 153 Mich. 686.

¶ 454a. Upon granting mandamus to compel a circuit judge to vacate an order setting aside condemnation proceedings upon the ground that an appeal did not lie to the circuit court from the probate court, the petitioner may be granted leave to have a writ of certiorari to review the action of the probate court, the time for a common-law writ of certiorari having expired.—United States Gypsum Co. v. Kent Circuit Judge, 150 Mich. 668.

§ 135. ——Time for writ to issue.

¶ 455. A writ of certiorari in cases involving interference with important works ought not to be allowed unless applied for as soon as practicable; and, if granted after the expiration of the twenty days allowed for an appeal in proceedings to condemn land, will not be sustained unless under circumstances clearly explaining and accounting for the delay.—Dunlap v. Toledo, A. A. & G. T. R. Co., 46 Mich. 190.

¶ 456. In proceedings to condemn land for railroad uses the point that the statute is unconstitutional because authorizing the taking of land before having made compensation for the same is prematurely raised at the early stage of an inquest, and cannot be brought up on certiorari.—Grand Rapids, L. & D. R. Co. v. Weiden, 69 Mich. 572.

¶ 457. The circuit court in condemnation proceedings overruled certain preliminary objections made by defendant, and ordered a jury to determine the necessity of taking the property, and to fix damages therefor. Held, the supreme court would not entertain before a verdict a writ of certiorari bought by defendant to review the lower court's rulings on the objections.—Michigan Cent. R. Co. v. Miller, 158 Mich. 88.

§ 136. ——Objections to writ; quashal or dismissal.

¶ 458. A certiorari removing condemnation proceedings to the supreme court was not retained where the questions raised were such as could be raised by certiorari or appeal after the inquest of damages, and the retention of the writ was likely to do injury by delaying the proceedings.—Detroit Western Transit & Junction R. Co. v. Backus, 48 Mich. 582.

§ 137. ——Return to writ and effect of return.

¶ 459. While a probate judge may adopt the stenographer's notes of testimony taken in a condemnation proceeding as his own, and certify the evidence as shown by such notes, he is not obliged to do so, nor can such notes be resorted to for the purpose of impeaching his return to a certiorari.—Traverse City, K. & G. R. Co. v. Seymour, 81 Mich. 378.

¶ 460. The return of a judge of probate to a certiorari sued out by respondents to review condemnation proceedings, if responsive and covering the points of error appearing in the affidavit, is conclusive upon the respondents and the court.—Traverse City, K. & G. R. Co. v. Seymour, 81 Mich. 378.

¶ 461. An award in condemnation proceedings will not be disturbed on certiorari upon the ground that one of the jurors was not a freeholder, even though the testimony in the record fails to show that he is such, where the trial judge states in his return that only a small part of the testimony is included therein.—Ann Arbor R. Co. v. Beach, 110 Mich. 209.

§ 138. ——Scope and subjects of review.

¶ 462. It is the policy of the supreme court, both in civil and criminal cases, to refuse to hear upon certiorari questions which may be raised upon a final hearing before it, after a full hearing in the trial court. This rule has been applied in condemnation proceedings, and will be adhered to when practicable.—Pere Marquette R. Co. v. United States Gypsum Co., 148 Mich. 308.

¶ 463. The exclusion of evidence of the value of the property and other land in the vicinity offered to support the answer on the issue as to a previous bona fide effort to purchase is such error as to be reviewable on certiorari.—Grand Rapids, L. & D. R. Co. v. Weiden, 69 Mich. 572.

¶ 464. The corporate existence of a company and its right to exercise corporate franchises cannot properly be passed upon by the inferior tribunals for assessing damages in condemning lands, and cannot therefore be considered on certiorari to review their action.—Schroeder v. Detroit, H. & M. R. Co., 44 Mich. 387.

¶ 465. Under a petition for certiorari to review condemnation proceedings, assignments of error not discussed in the petitioner's brief, but only argued in the petition itself, will not be considered by the supreme court.—Board of Education City of Holland v. Van Der Veen, 169 Mich. 470.

§ 139. Ground for reversal or harmlessness of error.

Erroneous evidence made harmless by view, see ante ¶ 337.

Doctrine of harmless error as generally applied, see Harmless Error.

Use of phonograph to show noise as harmless error because reproduced noise was less than original, see also Harmless Error.

¶ 466. Where the evidence showed that before the petition was sworn to no sufficient effort was made to settle with the owner, but that such effort was made before it was filed and the proceeding was moved in the probate court, the supreme court on appeal from the report reluctantly allowed the petition to stand without being resworn or presented anew.—Grand Rapids & I. R. Co. v. Welden, 70 Mich. 390.

¶ 467. Proceedings to condemn land will not be set aside for errors in admitting or excluding testimony, unless the errors controlled result.—Fort-Street Union Depot Co. v. Jones, 83 Mich. 415.

¶ 468. Rulings on the admission of testimony in proceedings by commissioners or a jury for the condemnation of lands for railroads will not be reviewed on appeal to the supreme court unless they have done substantial injustice.—Port Huron & S. W. R. Co. v. Voorheis, 50 Mich. 506.

¶ 469. Although a statement in the charge in a railroad condemnation case, that "it has been repeatedly held that railroads are public necessities," standing alone might have been open to the objection that it removed the question of necessity from the jury, there was no error, in view of the remainder of the charge which fully instructed the jury upon the necessity of the road and the taking of the land in question.—Detroit & T. S. L. R. Co. v. Hall, 133 Mich. 302.

¶ 470. Questions raised over the introduction of evidence on proceedings by a railroad for the condemnation of land, cannot ordinarily be considered on appeal, though evidence clearly improper might justify a reversal of confirmation, should it appear that it had caused a substantial error on the part of the jury. Detroit & T. S. L. R. Co. v. Campbell, 140 Mich. 384.

¶ 471. The award of the jury in proceedings to condemn lands for railroad uses will not be set aside merely because of the admission of testimony that would not have been admissible under strict legal rules, unless it appears to have caused substantial injustice. Detroit, West. Trans. & J. R. Co. v. Crane, 50 Mich. 182.

¶ 472. Questions raised over the introduction of evidence will not ordinarily be considered by the supreme court in condemnation proceedings, although it may be true where clearly improper evidence was received it might justify a reversal of confirmation should it appear that it had caused substantial error on the part of the jury.—Boyne City, G. & A. R. Co. v. Anderson, 146 Mich. 328.

¶ 473. In condemnation proceedings for the right of way for a railroad errors in the admission of evidence as to the feasibility of other lines are harmless where the jury had found it necessary for the petitioner to occupy the street named in his petition.—Boyne City, G. & A. R. Co. v. Anderson, 146 Mich. 328.

¶ 474. Even if it were held error (and it was held not to be) to allow the introduction of phonographic records of sounds and noises claimed to have been caused by the operation of trains in proximity to the landowner's hotel, its mild reproduction of sounds could not have so seriously prejudiced petitioner in a condemnation proceeding for a right of way for a railroad, as to require a reversal on that ground.—Boyne City, G. & A. R. Co. v. Anderson, 146 Mich. 328.

¶ 475. In condemnation proceedings verdicts for damages will not be set aside because of improper arguments of counsel as to damages where the court has carefully given the jury the proper rules for their guidance, and instructed them to disregard the argument complained of as improper, unless it seems probable that such argument actually affected the verdict.—City of Detroit v. C. H. Little Co., 146 Mich. 373.

¶ 476. As the rule of damages and benefits where property is taken for a public way in Detroit must be the same whether the land taken and that benefited are owned by the same or different persons, the city cannot be injured by the exclusion, in condemnation proceedings, of evidence that deeds severing the ownership were made collusively so as to avoid the erroneous rule allowed by the charter and followed in the recorder's court.—City of Detroit v. Chaffee, 68 Mich. 635.

§ 140. Law of case in subsequent proceedings.

Law of the case in second appeals or on retrials of ordinary actions and suits, see Appeal, XII, G, XV.

¶ 477. A condemnation petition was sustained in a former appeal against a demurrer but was dismissed for lack of proof that petitioner had taken the necessary preliminary steps. An amended petition was filed in the circuit court embodying everything contained in the former petition and making the same fuller and more complete. Held, the supreme court must necessarily overrule a demurrer to the amended petition.—Michigan Cent. Ry. Co. v. Miller, 172 Mich. 201.

§ 141. Costs on appeal or certiorari.

See also ante ¶ 392.

Costs on proceedings in general, see ante § 116.

Costs in other proceedings as element of damage, see ante § 42.

Award of costs on appeal in proceedings by public corporation or state agency, see Comp. L. 1915, § 367.

¶ 478. Under an eminent domain statute (How. St., § 3468), providing that on being awarded an increased compensation by the second report "all costs of the appeal shall be paid by the company; but if the amount is diminished, the difference shall be refunded to the company by the party to whom the same may have been paid, and judgments therefore and for all costs of appeal shall be rendered against the party so appealing," the last quoted word "appealing" means the unsuccessful party, and not an appellant which succeeds in having the award reduced.—Fort St. Union Depot Co. v. Backus, 103 Mich. 556, affirmed in 169 U. S. 557, 42 L. ed. 853, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 445.

¶ 479. Comp. L. 1897, § 6240, providing for costs and attorney fees in condemnation proceedings makes the circuit judge the final arbiter as to the amount of the attorney fees to be awarded and the supreme court cannot review his determination.—Boyne City, G. & A. R. Co. v. Anderson, 146 Mich. 328.

¶ 480. Under Comp. L. 1897, § 6240, providing for the allowance by the court of reasonable attorneys' fees in addition to the award by the jury in condemnation proceedings, the award for such fees was not reviewable, as the only provision for appeal in such proceedings is contained in section 6248, which provides only for appeal "from the appraisal or report of the commissioners or jury."—Detroit & T. S. L. R. Co. v. Hall, 133 Mich. 302.

¶ 481. Where proceedings to condemn lands were affirmed so far as the findings of the jury were concerned, but beyond that were reversed, costs of the supreme court and of the proceedings below were allowed to the appellants.—Toledo, A. A. & G. T. R. Co. v. Dunlap, 47 Mich. 456.

IX. INJUNCTION, ACTION FOR DAMAGES AND OTHER INDIRECT REMEDIES; COLLATERAL ATTACK.

§ 142. Indirect remedies in general.

Injunction and equitable relief in general, see post §§ 143, 144.

Trespass and actions for damages, see post § 145.

Ejectment, see post § 146.

Collateral attack, see post § 147.

Compulsion of condemnation proceedings by mandamus, see Mandamus, II.

¶ 482. Proceedings to condemn land for railroad uses are purely statutory; the remedies therein provided are exclusive, and cannot be extended beyond those contained in the statute.—Derby v. Gage, 60 Mich. 1.

¶ 483. Where the owner of land has allowed a railroad company to build and operate a road over it with the understanding that the rights of parties as to damages should be adjusted thereafter, and the company takes statutory proceedings to fix the damages, the owner should present all his claims for settlement in these proceedings, and cannot split his demand and reserve part of it for future litigation. But if such proceedings are not resorted to, he would have a suitable remedy for the enforcement of his rights otherwise.—Harlow v. Marquette, H. & O. R. Co., 41 Mich. 336.

§ 143. Equitable relief in general; injunction.

Right to damages where injunction is violated, see post ¶ 496.

Effect on right to possession of refusal of court to enjoin condemnor from taking possession before condemnation, see ante ¶ 402.

General law of injunctions, except the propriety of injunction as a remedy for illegal taking, see Injunctions.

Injunction against use pending appeal, see Appeal, ¶ 612.

Jurisdiction to restrain occupation of land pending review of condemnation proceedings in supreme court, see Courts § 51, ¶ 168.

Estoppel to seek injunction, see Estoppel, III.

Acceptance of compensation as working estoppel to ask injunction, see Estoppel, III.

Unfeasibility of complete relief in specific performance suit because of necessity of jury to condemn, see also Equity ¶ 873.

¶ 484. Equity jurisprudence does not include the exercise of eminent domain. The necessity of taking property and the ascertainment of damages are not cognizable by bill in equity brought to amend the proceedings of the proper tribunal.—Clark v. Drain Com'r, 50 Mich. 618.

¶ 485. Injunction is a proper remedy by an abutter against a railroad company which under color of authority from city authorities and under claim of a reserved right is proceeding to build a general railroad in a street without condemnation of the plaintiff's rights in the use of such street, which the railroad will destroy.—Riedinger v. Marquette & W. R. Co., 62 Mich. 29.

¶ 486. In an injunction suit against the construction of numerous tracks in a street under claim of authority from the city and also under a reservation in a plat of right to the plattor to occupy any street with its railroad, the validity of the reservation is not material, if it appears that the proposed use by the railroad company is an additional burden and use beyond that reserved.—Riedinger v. Marquette & W. R. Co., 62 Mich. 29.

¶ 487. An electric railway company which, without exercising the right of eminent domain, forcibly took possession of a strip of land on the side of a highway, cut down trees and laid its tracks upon such strip, although the owners attempted to prevent such acts, was required by a mandatory injunction to remove such tracks; and the taking of proofs to ascertain the damage was likewise ordered.—Freud v. Detroit & P. Ry. Co., 133 Mich. 413.

¶ 488. Under Comp. Laws 1897, § 6234, How. 2nd Ed., § 6587, providing that a railroad shall not be constructed on a street until damages and compensation be made to abutting property owners, an abutting property owner who has not been compensated may insist that construction work be enjoined until he receives compensation, even though the railroad is not to be constructed in front of his premises.—Horton v. Grand Rapids & I. Ry. Co., 199 Mich. 472.

¶ 489. Under a city franchise for the occupancy of a street for a railroad, providing that before the street shall be occupied by the tracks the claims and rights of abutting owners within the prescribed limits shall be adjusted either by agreement or by condemnation proceedings, an abutting property owner on such street within the prescribed limits is entitled to an injunction restraining construction work until compensation is given or settlement made, although the railroad company does not contemplate extending its line to or past such owner's premises.—Horton v. Grand Rapids & I. Ry. Co., 199 Mich. 472.

¶ 490. Where a railroad corporation had, in good faith, obtained an assessment of damages for land needed for their road long before they wanted the use of it, and afterwards, when any delay would have been injurious to them, and while the confirmation of the inquisition was pending in the supreme court, to which it had been reserved, had tendered the damages assessed and proceeded to use the land, an injunction to restrain the use was refused, notwithstanding the inquisition was not valid until confirmed; inasmuch as the corporation could only be delayed, and could not be prevented from finally obtaining the land.—Mercer v. Williams, W. 85.

§ 144. ——Relief on condition.

¶ 491. An injunction against the construction of a railroad in a street without condemnation of the property rights of plaintiff abutter was made to run for six months with a provision that, if within that time the defendant should not in some legal manner acquire the rights of plaintiff, the decree should be revived and made perpetual.—Riedinger v. Marquette & W. R. Co., 62 Mich. 29.

¶ 492. In dismissing a bill to enjoin interference with a crossing which complainant had made by violent and illegal methods over defendant's road, the court, in order to end the controversy, and as a condition of granting the affirmative relief asked by defendant, made a decree—conditioned on defendant's assenting thereto—appointing the members of the state board commissioners to adjust the crossing, and to estimate the compensation to be paid therefor.—Toledo, A. A. & N. M. R. Co. v. Detroit, L. & N. R. Co., 63 Mich. 645.

§ 145. Trespass and actions for damages.

Right to action for illegal occupancy before condemnation, see ante § 41.

Sufficiency of allegations in nuisance to admit of recovery of damages for taking the property, see also Damages ¶ 985.

General law of trespass, see Trespass.

Right of action for nuisance in general, see Nuisance.

Effect of condemnation proceedings on pending suit for damages, see also Abatement § 14, ¶ 52.

¶ 493. It is an actionable trespass to apply force in subjecting land for public street use when the necessity of the taking, as well as the measure of compensation, has not been determined in a legal way and no public easement exists.—Sheldon v. Village of Kalamazoo, 24 Mich. 383.

¶ 494. Where the land was actually occupied by a tenant, the landlord's right of action for trespass upon the premises under void condemnation proceedings goes with land and attaches only to his reversionary interest, and is condemned and appropriated therewith, and disappears when subsequent valid proceedings are taken as permitted by H. St., § 3340, and compensation made.—Dunlap v. Toledo, A. A. & G. T. R. Co., 50 Mich. 470.

¶ 495. Where a subscriber in aid of a railroad is injured by the road's being run across his lands instead of half a mile away, as contemplated by his promise, he has a remedy for such damages as he has suffered thereby, independent of his agreement.—Michigan, M. & C. R. Co. v. Bacon, 33 Mich. 466.

¶ 496. Abutters who have been granted an injunction against the laying of a car track until the right to lay it had been condemned by appropriate proceedings may sue for damages computed to the time when such proceedings are instituted, where the track continues thereafter to be used and the proceedings are not instituted by the railroad company.—Taylor v. Bay City St. R. Co., 101 Mich. 140.

¶ 497. In an action for damages for placing a car track fronting abutter's evidence that there was no public necessity for defendant's line in the street is competent; and, if it is admitted, refusal to instruct the jury that the determination of the mayor and the common council as to the propriety and public convenience of the line was conclusive on all parties, is error.—Taylor v. Bay City St. R. Co., 101 Mich. 140.

¶ 498. In an action for damages from placing car tracks in a street fronting plaintiff's property it is competent for defendant to show any statement made by any of the plaintiffs which tended to show that he regarded the railroad as a benefit rather than an injury.—Taylor v. Bay City St. R. Co., 101 Mich. 140.

¶ 499. In an action for damages for obstructing a street with car tracks abutters cannot show that drays and teams cannot stand in the street at right angles with the sidewalk and leave room for defendant's cars to pass. Plaintiffs would not be entitled to recover damages for that, since private parties have no absolute right to place drays and trucks across the street when public travel is thereby obstructed.—Taylor v. Bay City St. R. Co., 101 Mich. 140.

¶ 500. An action to recover damages for an illegal occupancy is not abated by subsequent proceedings to condemn the land for railway purposes.—Callanan v. Port Huron & N. W. R. Co., 61 Mich. 15.

¶ 501. Case for nuisance consisting in the manner of constructing a bridge over a stream on plaintiff's premises as a part of defendant's railroad will not lie, where there was a condemnation for the road according to plans which included the bridge, and where no substantial deviation from plan is alleged; since all such damages were presumptively included in the condemnation.—Barnes v. Michigan Air Line Ry., 65 Mich. 251.

¶ 502. The statute for the condemnation of lands to the use of a railroad company does not empower a party aggrieved by its unauthorized occupancy of land to resort to the statutory remedy of appraisal for compensation, but he has a right of action in the ordinary way. Until the proper body has passed upon the necessity for the railway the question of compensation by statutory appraisal cannot arise.—Grand Rapids & I. R. Co. v. Heisel, 47 Mich. 393.

¶ 503. The value of premises for dwelling purposes is a question of fact in an action for injury to the owner from the unauthorized use of an adjacent highway by a railroad company.—Grand Rapids & I. R. Co. v. Heisel, 47 Mich. 393.

§ 146. Ejectment.

Right to action for illegal occupancy before condemnation, see ante § 41.
General law of ejectment, see Ejectment.
Whether ejectment lies against use of sewer laid across lands without legal authority, see Ejectment ¶ 13.

¶ 504. Ejectment lies against a city for land condemned and in actual use as a public street.—Tuller v. City of Detroit, 97 Mich. 597.

¶ 505. Ejectment lies for land taken under a void condemnation proceeding.—Sandusky Grain Co. v. Sanilac Circuit Judge, 184 Mich. 126.

¶ 506. Where a court has jurisdiction of the subject-matter and the person in a condemnation proceeding, ejectment for the land taken will not lie for irregularities reviewable on writ of error.—Sandusky Grain Co. v. Sanilac Circuit Judge, 184 Mich. 126.

¶ 507. One is not estopped from maintaining ejectment by the fact that he has given defendant a parol license to proceed with its railroad and occupy his land.—Wood v. Michigan Air Line R. Co., 90 Mich. 334.

§ 147. Collateral attack.

¶ 508. Where property is condemned for public purposes it will be presumed, in collateral proceedings, that persons affected thereby have been properly compensated in damages, if found entitled thereto.—Henkel v. City of Detroit, 49 Mich. 249.

¶ 508a. Heirs who receive from an executrix money for their shares in an award, either directly or ultimately in distributing the estate, waive all errors in the condemnation proceeding by which she was made a party representing them and they were omitted.—Barlage v. Detroit, G. H. & M. R. Co., 54 Mich. 564.

§ 148. Right of action and effect of transfer of land.

See also ante ¶ 115.
Rights of grantees in general, see post § 150.
Propriety of making condemnor party defendant in suit for foreclosure of vendor's lien, Vendor and Purchaser, XII.

¶ 509. Damages to a lot abutting upon a street wherein a railroad company has laid its tracks under a mere license granted by the city subject to the rights of adjacent owners, do not belong as an entirety to the then owner; but are a continuing injury which accrues to a grantee from year to year by reason of such occupancy of the street, although he did not own the lot when the road was constructed, and although no rights of action have been assigned to him by the former owner.—Hoffman v. Flint & P. M. R. Co., 114 Mich. 316.

X. TITLE ACQUIRED AND LIABILITIES ENSUING.

§ 149. Nature of title acquired.

Transferability and rights of grantees, see post § 150.

Right to possession pending vesting of title, see ante § 122.

Nature of title before adjudication or payment of claims of owners of properties taken, see post ¶ 513.

Necessity of payment within sixty days to prevent title being divested, see ante ¶ 399.

Waiver or loss of right by failure to pay award within sixty days after confirmation in railroad, bridge or tunnel proceedings, see Comp. L. 1915, § 8257.

¶ 510. While the owners of lots have undoubtedly rights in the street in front of said lots, the condemnation of the lots themselves includes all rights in the ways appurtenant thereto.—Michigan Cent. Ry. Co. v. Miller, 172 Mich. 201.

¶ 511. The uses to which lands taken under the right of eminent domain for public purposes may lawfully be put cannot exceed the measure of the necessity that must be found as the basis of the right to take them at all; and lands thus taken for nonhighway purposes cannot properly be converted into a highway.—Paul v. City of Detroit, 32 Mich. 108.

§ 150. Transferability and rights of grantees.

Right of grantee to action for damages, see ante § 148.

¶ 512. Lands taken by the state for its railroads passed by the sale of the roads to the purchasers, notwithstanding the owners of the lands had failed to present their claims and obtain compensation.—People ex rel. Green v. Michigan Southern R. Co., 3 Mich. 496; Smith v. McAdam, 3 Mich. 506.

¶ 513. Certain lands lying east of the village of Hillsdale were, in the year 1838, taken and appropriated by the state for the use of the Michigan Southern Railroad, which was completed and brought into use over said lands in 1844; and in 1846 all the right, title and interest of the state in the railroad were transferred to the Michigan Southern Railroad Company. It was held that, under the law of 1838, providing for the acquisition of lands for the purposes of railroads, and the settlement of claims for the appropriation of property for such uses, the lands in question vested in the state, whether the claim for damages for their appropriation had been adjudicated upon and satisfied or not; that the transfer of the road by the state to the company imposed upon the latter no obligation to pay said damages, and that the company took such lands relieved of any claim or lien for such claim.—People ex rel. Green v. Michigan Southern R. Co., 3 Mich. 496; Smith v. McAdam, 3 Mich. 506.

EMOLUMENTS to EQUIPMENT.

Cross-References.

Emoluments—
- Of Office, see Officers, VIII.

Empaneling—
- Of jury, see Jury, V; Grand Jury.

Employees and Employers—
- See Master and Servant; Agency; Corporations, XVII.
- Independent Contractors distinguished, see Independent Contractors.
- Liability to servants for injuries in course of employment, see Master and Servant, III; Workmen's Compensation Law.
- Public employees, see Officers and Public Employees; Municipal Corporations, XV; Schools, V; and like topics.
- Responsibility of superior for acts of employees, see Master and Servant, IV; Agency, II.
- Rights of parent toward employer of child, see Parent and Child, III.
- Mutual relief funds, see Master and Servant; Insurance.

Employment Agencies—
- Police power to regulate, see Constitutional Law § 109.

Employment Contracts—
- See Master and Servant, II.
- Power of personal representatives, trustees or agents to employ others, see Estates of Decedents, IV, B; Receivers, IV; Trusts, VI; Agency, II.

Enabling Acts—
- See Statutes; and see also specific topics treating of right or capacity given by enabling act, e. g., Corporations § 3.

Enactment—
- Of statutes, including sufficiency of titles and time and manner of introducing bills, see Statutes.
- Of ordinances, see Municipal Corporations, V.

Encroachments—
- By adjoiners, see Adjoining Owners; Boundaries.
- On or by highways, see Highways, XI; Nuisances.
- As trespasses, see Trespass.
- Injunctive relief against encroachment, see Injunctions, II.
- As affecting marketability of title, see Vendors and Purchasers, III.
- As breach of covenant, see Covenants for Title, III; Buildings § 18 (building line restrictions).

Encumbrances—
- See references under Incumbrances.

Endorsements—
See References under Indorsements.
Endowments—
See Charities; Trusts; Schools, X; Religious Societies, V.
Endowment insurance, see Insurance; Fraternal Associations.
Enemies—
Status and rights during war, see War.
Enfranchisement—
By naturalization, see Aliens, §§ 3, 4.
Engineers—
Office and functions under terms of building or construction contracts, see Building Contracts.
Certificates of performance or adjustment, see Building Contracts §§ 10 et seq., 41, 43; Contracts §§ 184, 190, 228.
Admissibility of opinions as experts, see Evidence, VI.
Of steam engines as servants, and rights and liabilities incident to such employment, see Master and Servant, II, III, IV; Railroads, VIII.
In the sense of surveyors, see Surveyors.
Engines—
Liability for fires resulting from operation, see Fires; Railroads, VIII, G; Insurance.
Engine Houses—
As nuisances, see Nuisances, I.
England—
Common law in force, see Common Law.
English Decisions—
Weight and value as authority, see Courts § 26.
English Language—
Medium for process, records, notices, or publication, see Records; Notices; Process.
Taking testimony and translations, see Depositions § 12; Examination of Witnesses, I.
Reduction of writing by translation to English for construction, see Contracts, VI, A; Wills, VI, A; Libel, II.
Engrossing Bills—
See Statutes, I.
Enjoining Action—
See Injunctions.
Enlarging—
Liberation of prisoner on bail, see Arrest, VIII; Civil Arrest, IV.
Construction enlarging primary import of writings, see Contracts, VI, A; Statutes, V; Wills, VI; Evidence, V (parol evidence to vary or explain).
Enlistment—
In military or naval service, see Military Affairs.
Bounties for enlisting, see Bounties.
Enrollment—
Of decree or judgment, see Judgments, III.
Of statutes, see Statutes, I.
Of electors, see Elections, III.
Of deeds and the like on title records, see Notice and Record of Title, II.
Tax rolls, see Taxes, V, B.
Entertainments—
Public shows, see Exhibitions and Shows.
Enticement—
As crime, see Crimes, II; Indictment.
As defense to crime, see Crimes, § 17.
Civil liability to parent or spouse, see Parent and Child, I, III; Seduction; Husband and Wife, V, B.
Injunctive relief against enticement or corruption of servants, see Injunctions, II.
Entirety—
Of contracts, see Contracts § 167.
Tenancy by the entirety of husband and wife, see Husband and Wife, II, B.
Joint or several interests in properties, see Tenants in Common.
Construction of deed or will as to several or entire interests passed, see Deeds §§ 43, 44; Wills, VI.
Partition of estates, see Partition.
Entitling Papers—
See Affidavits § 4; Equity, VII, A; Pleading, I; Process, I; and the like.
Entrapment—
To commit crime as defense by person enticed, see Crimes § 17.
Into territory to serve process or make arrest, see Process, II; Arrest § 5; Civil Arrest § 2; and see references under Privilege.
Entries—
As evidence, see Evidence, VII, VIII.
Entry of Appearance—
See Appearance § 2.
Entry of Credit—
As payment, see Payment, I, III, V.
As acknowledgment reviving limitations, see Limitations, VI, A.
Entry of Judgment—
See Judgments, III; Justices of the Peace, IV, F; Indictment, XI.
Entry on Land—
See Trespass; Forcible Entry; Licenses to Enter; Adverse Possession; Ejectment; Landlord and Tenant; Life Estates and Reversions; etc.
Felonious entry of buildings, see Crimes, II; Indictment.
Epidemics—
Health regulations and powers of health officers, see Health.
Epileptics—
As incompetents, see Incompetents; Insane Persons, I; Wills, II; Crimes, I, B.
Equal Division—
Affirmance by operation of law, see Appeal § 530.

Equal Wrong—
Of parties as bar to divorce, see Divorce § 38.
As defense to contract, see Contracts, IV, D.
As bar to relief in equity, see Equity § 5.
Equality Before the Law—
See Constitutional Law § 213.
Rights under Civil Rights Act, see Civil Rights.
In school privileges, see Schools, VI.
In taxation, see Taxes, I.
Equality Is Equity—
See Equity, § 2.
Equalization—
Of drain assessments, see Drains § 67.
Of local assessments, see Local Improvements, VI, D.
Of taxes generally, see Taxes, VI.
Equipment—
Of railroads and street railways, see Railroads; Street Railways, III; Master and Servant, III (liability to servants from defective equipment); Carriers.
Of ships and vessels, see Shipping.
Of buildings and elevators therein, see Buildings.

EQUITY.

TREATS of the general law of equity and of the practice in the courts of chancery.

I. GENERAL PRINCIPLES AND MAXIMS (§§ 1-10).
II. EQUITABLE RIGHTS, TITLES AND REMEDIES (§§ 11-14).
III. JURISDICTION (§§ 15-44).
IV. LACHES AND ACQUIESCENCE (§§ 45-57).
V. PROCEDURE IN GENERAL (§§ 58-61).
VI. PARTIES (§§ 62-64).
VII. PLEADING (§§ 65-166a).
VIII. TRIAL AND HEARING (§§ 167-186).
IX. INTERLOCUTORY PROCEEDINGS AND DECREES (§ 187).
X. DETERMINATION AND DISPOSAL OF CAUSE (§§ 188-228).
XI. REHEARING, AND BILLS OF REVIVOR, SUPPLEMENT AND REVIEW (§§ 229-250).
XII. BILLS OF PEACE AND QUIA TIMET (§ 251).

Analysis.

I. General principles and maxims.

§ 1. In general.
§ 2. Equality and priority.
§ 3. Following the law.
§ 4. Doing or offering equity.
§ 5. Doing iniquity; mutual wrong.
§ 6. Clean hands.
§ 7. Substance and form.
§ 8. Treating acts as done.
§ 9. Two equally innocent parties.
§ 10. Policy towards penalties and forfeitures.

II. Equitable rights, titles and remedies.

§ 11. Rights, titles and defenses in general.
§ 12. Equitable conversion and reconversion.
§ 13. Right of volunteer to relief.
§ 14. Remedies in equity.

III. Jurisdiction.

A. IN GENERAL; GROUNDS FOR ASSUMPTION OR DECLINATION.
§ 15. Nature and scope in general.
§ 16. Amount in controversy.
§ 17. ——Criteria or measure of amount.

§ 18. ——Combining several claims to make amount.
§ 19. Doubtful and conflicting titles, rights or claims.
§ 20. Fraud and undue influence.
§ 21. Unconscionableness and oppression.
§ 22. Bad motive or intent.
§ 23. Mistake and accident.
§ 24. Particular subjects, objects and personal relations.
§ 24a. ——Trusts and assignments.
§ 24b. ——Liens and mortgages.
§ 24c. ——Decedents' estates and wills.
§ 24d. ——Dower, partition, homesteads, and exemptions.
§ 24e. ——Infants and persons under disability and their estates.
§ 24f. ——Partnerships and corporations.
§ 24g. ——Enforcement and protection of contracts.
§ 24h. ——Rescission and cancellation, restoration and reformation of instruments.
§ 24i. ——Penalties and forfeitures.
§ 24j. ——Contribution, exoneration and indemnity.
§ 24k. ——Accounting, marshalling and subrogation.
§ 24l. ——Injunction, ne exeat, sequestration, and receivers.
§ 25. Incidental or ancillary jurisdiction.
§ 26. Relative jurisdiction of chancery and probate courts.
§ 27. Pendency of action at law.
§ 28. ——Of other suit in equity.
§ 29. ——Of probate or statutory proceedings.
§ 30. Consent or submission to jurisdiction.
§ 31. Cessation or ouster of jurisdiction.
§ 32. Suits affecting foreign subject-matter.
§ 33. Declination for want of enforcing power.
§ 34. Declination for want of means to try issues.
§ 35. Declination of legal controversies.

B. Inadequacy or Nonexistence of Legal Remedy or Defense.

§ 36. In general.
§ 37. Legal remedy difficult or inconvenient.
§ 38. Exhaustion of legal remedy or recourse.
§ 39. Declination where legal remedy adequate.
§ 40. Equitable right or title involved.
§ 41. Concurrent or statutory jurisdiction and remedies.

C. Prevention of Multiplicity and Circuity.

§ 42. In general.
§ 43. Numerous actions threatened or pending at law.
§ 44. Taxpayers' suits.

IV. Laches and acquiescence.

§ 45. In general; maxim as to slothfulness.
§ 46. Delays regarded as laches.
§ 47. ——Mere delay without change.
§ 48. ——Delays by public.
§ 49. ——Delay less or more than period of limitations.
§ 50. Excuses for delay.
§ 51. ——Pending litigation or immaturity of right.
§ 52. Interruption or suspension pending claims.

§ 53. Persons imputed with laches; disabilities.
§ 54. ——Persons in possession.
§ 55. Notice of knowledge as basis.
§ 56. ——Concealment or breach of trust.
§ 57. Persons entitled to urge laches.

V. Procedure in general.

§ 58. In general.
§ 59. Notices, motions and orders.
§ 60. ——Entry of orders and further proceedings.
§ 61. Affidavits.

VI. Parties.

§ 62. In general; necessary and proper parties.
§ 63. Joinder and misjoinder and defects and substitutions.
§ 64. Who regarded as parties.

VII. Pleading.

A. FORMAL MATTERS; CAPTION, TITLE, SIGNATURE AND VERIFICATION, AND FILING.

§ 65. In general; form and entitling service and filing.
§ 66. Signatures.
§ 67. Verification of bill or petition.
§ 68. ——Of answer or cross-bill, or plea.
§ 69. ——Requisites and sufficiency.
§ 70. ——Waiver of sworn answer.

B. BILL, PETITION OR INFORMATION.

§ 71. Bill or petition as proper initial pleading.
§ 72. Bill or information as proper practice.
§ 73. Multifariousness; joinder and severance of causes.
§ 74. ——Joinder of parties distinct in interest.
§ 75. ——Distinct causes.
§ 76. ——Prayer for diverse kinds of relief.
§ 77. Necessity and sufficiency of averments in general.
§ 78. ——Doubleness, uncertainty and inconclusiveness.
§ 79. ——Descriptions of property, papers or rights.
§ 80. Relevancy and propriety of allegations.
§ 81. ——Matters of evidence.
§ 82. ——Conclusions of law.
§ 83. Jurisdictional averments.
§ 84. ——Amount in controversy.
§ 85. ——As to inadequacy or exhaustion of legal remedy.
§ 86. Averments as to and descriptions of parties and joinder or nonjoinder.
§ 87. Allegations as to doing or offering equity.
§ 88. Anticipating or rebutting matters of defense.
§ 89. ——Laches or limitations.
§ 90. Necessity and sufficiency of prayer.
§ 91. ——Relief or discovery.
§ 92. ——Specific relief or damages.
§ 92a. Prayer for process.

C. Objections and Defenses, Answers, Pleas, Demurrers, and Motions on Pleadings.

§ 93. Right and time to make answer or plea.
§ 94. Proper party to make objections or defenses.
§ 95. Joinder in answer or demurrer.
§ 96. Answer or demurrer by one inuring to all.
§ 97. Particular defenses and objections, how made.
§ 98. ——Answer or cross-bill.
§ 99. ——Objections to form or manner, uncertainty or indefiniteness.
§ 100. ——Failure to offer equity.
§ 101. ——Multifariousness.
§ 102. ——Misjoinder or defect of parties.
§ 103. ——Defense of remedy at law.
§ 104. ——Defense of limitations or laches.
§ 105. Office and scope of answer.
§ 106. ——Necessity and sufficiency of allegations.
§ 107. ——Mode of denial, traverse or admission.
§ 108. ——Completeness of answer.
§ 109. ——Excusing failure to answer.
§ 110. Answer to cross-bill.
§ 111. Disclaimers.
§ 111a. Office, singleness and scope of pleas.
§ 111b. ——Necessity and sufficiency of allegations.
§ 111c. ——Positiveness of plea.
§ 111d. Plea to part and answer to part.
§ 111e. Replications.
§ 112. Office and scope of motion to dismiss (or general demurrer).
§ 112a. ——Of general demurrer.
§ 113. ——Bill good in part or in any aspect.
§ 114. ——Matters reached and considered.
§ 115. ——Joint and separate motions or demurrers.
§ 116. ——Specification of grounds.
§ 116a. Special or general demurrers.
§ 116b. Answer serving as demurrer.
§ 117. Demurrer ore tenus.
§ 118. Striking out pleadings or allegations therein.
§ 119. Waiver of or delay in making objections.
§ 120. ——Objections to parties or for nonjoinder.
§ 121. ——Objections to jurisdiction.
§ 122. Effect of reserving objections until hearing.
§ 123. Technical or immaterial objections.

D. Cross-Bills.

§ 124. Occasion, propriety and germaneness of cross-bills.
§ 125. Contents, form and substance of cross-bill.
§ 125a. Answer in nature of cross-bill.

E. Amendments and Supplemental Pleadings.

§ 126. Grounds and matter of amendment of bill.
§ 127. Amended and supplemental answers, pleas and demurrers.
§ 128. Amendment of or affecting cross-bill.
§ 129. Amendments as to parties.

§ 130. Amendments to supply signatures and verifications.
§ 131. Time for amendments; amendments on hearing.
§ 132. ——To meet proofs and cure variance.
§ 133. ——To let in new and further proofs.
§ 134. ——Amendments making new case or issues.
§ 135. ——Of answer or plea on hearing.
§ 136. Amendment on or after appeal.
§ 137. Mode of pleading facts subsequent to bill.
§ 138. Right and propriety of supplemental pleadings.
§ 139. Motion and showing for leave to amend.
§ 140. ——Order of allowance, terms and conditions.
§ 141. Manner and form of amendments.
§ 142. ——Treating amendments as made.
§ 143. ——Reverification after amendment.
§ 144. New answer, plea or demurrer to meet amendments.
§ 145. Further answer after partial quashing or expunging.

F. CONSTRUCTION, CHARACTER AND EFFECT OF PLEADINGS; ISSUES, PROOFS AND VARIANCE.

§ 146. Character, theory and effect of bill.
§ 147. ——As tested by prayer.
§ 148. Construction and effect of allegations.
§ 149. ——Allegations implied from others.
§ 150. ——Amendments and original matter.
§ 151. ——Of motions and demurrers.
§ 152. Issues presented and admissions.
§ 153. ——On informal or defective pleading.
§ 154. Admission by failure to plead or answer.
§ 155. Admissions by failure to answer cross-bill.
§ 156. Admissions by demurring or moving to dismiss.
§ 157. Presumptions and inferences from admitted facts.
§ 158. Burden of proof.
§ 159. ——Matters of defense.
§ 160. ——Effect of admissions or denials.
§ 161. Variance of proofs from pleadings.
§ 162. ——Of defenses and rebuttals from allegations.
§ 163. Shifting theory of case.
§ 164. Effect of pleadings as evidence.
§ 164a. ——Of unsworn answer.
§ 164b. ——Attached documents or copies.
§ 165. Sworn answer as evidence.
§ 165a. ——Responsiveness and particularity.
§ 165b. ——Assumptions of truth.
§ 165c. ——Weight and conclusiveness.
§ 166. Answer of one affecting other defendants.
§ 166a. Exceptions to answer as evidence.

VIII. Trial and hearing.

A. IN GENERAL.

§ 167. In general; manner, time and notice.
§ 168. On issues of law and demurrers.
§ 169. On preliminary and dilatory issues of fact.
§ 170. On cross-bill.
§ 171. Right to offer proofs.

§ 172. Extension of time to take proofs.
§ 173. Reopening for further proofs.
§ 174. Admissions and confessions in open court.
§ 175. Introduction and reception of evidence.
§ 176. ——Examination or production in open court.
§ 177. ——Documents.
§ 178. ——Objections and exceptions to evidence.
§ 179. Admissibility and sufficiency of proofs.
§ 180. Necessary proofs; partial failure of proofs.
§ 181. Striking out or rejecting proofs.

B. Reference or Issues to Jury.

§ 182. Reference or commission in general.
§ 183. Trial of issues by jury.
§ 184. ——Offers, objections and reception of evidence.
§ 185. Operation and effect of verdict or report.
§ 186. Suppression of improper proofs or depositions.

IX. Interlocutory proceedings and decrees.

§ 187. In general.

X. Determination and disposal of cause.

A. Dismissals Without Decision or Prejudice.

§ 188. Voluntary discontinuance or dismissal.
§ 189. ——Pending cross-bill or interlocutory proceeding.
§ 190. Grounds for involuntary dismissal.
§ 191. ——Want or defect of jurisdiction.
§ 192. ——Informal or defective pleadings or proceedings.
§ 193. ——Of cross-bill.
§ 194. Dismissal without prejudice.
§ 195. Discontinuance or dismissal of one party.
§ 196. Stage or condition of issues and cause.
§ 197. Motion and showing to dismiss.
§ 198. Order and effect of dismissal.
§ 199. ——As to portion of parties.
§ 200. ——Of conditional dismissal.
§ 201. Reinstatement of cause or parties.

B. Findings and Decree; Proper Relief.

§ 202. Rendition, entry and record.
§ 203. ——Application and notice.
§ 204. Nature, form and finality.
§ 205. Requisites and sufficiency in general.
§ 206. Basis for decree.
§ 207. ——Matters subsequent to filing of bill.
§ 208. Conformity of decree to bill.
§ 209. ——General or alternative prayer.
§ 210. Decree on issue made by motion, plea or demurrer.
§ 211. ——Leave to amend or plead further.
§ 212. Affirmative relief to defendants; decree on cross-bill.
§ 213. Propriety and sufficiency of relief.
§ 214. Joint and several relief.
§ 215. Provisions for future or contingencies.

§ 216. Provisions as to further inquiry and procedure.
§ 217. Compensation as relief.
§ 218. Completeness of relief.
§ 219. Retention of bill to complete the relief.
§ 220. ——Feasibility of complete relief.
§ 221. ——Sufficiency of bill or cross-bill.
§ 222. ——Matters outside of equity jurisdiction; remedy at law.

C. Defaults and Confessions.
§ 223. In general.
§ 224. Scope and terms of decree.

D. Correction, Amendment and Vacation of Decrees.
§ 225. In general; mode and propriety.
§ 226. Supplementary and ancillary decrees.

E. Conclusiveness, Operation and Effect of Decrees.
§ 227. In general.

F. Satisfaction, Performance and Enforcement of Decrees.
§ 228. In general.

XI. Rehearing, and bills of revivor, supplement and review.

§ 229. Rehearings in general.
§ 230. ——On consent or pro confesso decrees.
§ 231. ——Stipulation for rehearing.
§ 232. ——Application and procedure for allowance.
§ 233. Bills of revivor.
§ 234. ——Cross-bill to bill of revivor.
§ 235. ——Order or decree of revivor.
§ 236. ——Amendments and new pleadings.
§ 237. Supplemental bills.
§ 238. ——Application and leave to file.
§ 239. ——Parties and procedure.
§ 240. Bills of review or in the nature of bills of review.
§ 241. ——Grounds and propriety of leave.
§ 242. ——Laches and other objection or defense.
§ 243. ——Discretion to allow or deny.
§ 244. ——Application and leave to file.
§ 245. ——Counterproof or showing.
§ 246. ——Denial on condition or alternative.
§ 247. ——Averments and sufficiency of bill and answers.
§ 248. ——Parties to the review.
§ 249. ——Scope of the review and relief thereon.
§ 250. ——Dismissal of the bill.

XII. Bills of peace and quia timet.

§ 251. In general.

[Note. Inasmuch as the Judicature Act has directed that rules of practice be adopted "abolishing distinctions between law and equity proceedings as far as practicable" and has embodied various statutory provisions likening the practice in equity to that at law, the editorial treatment of this topic has been to retain here only the general rules of equity which are fundamental; and, as far as is practicable to treat in the specific topics the specific law of equity; hence to exclude to topics such as Creditors' Suits; Injunctions; Specific Performance, the equities and the equity practice applied in such suits. In such topics as Fraud; Drains; Taxes; Indemnity and Contribution, this treatment facilitates collation of the legal and equitable aspects of the topic in one place and in connection with each other. For references to matters thus sent for treatment to the specific topics, see cross-references throughout this topic.

Some of the section lines in the following analysis describe matters which are obsolete by reason of the new procedure. As the digest aims at completeness, however, it is necessary to forbear any attempt at identifying or segregating that which is obsolete. To some extent it has been indicated by giving numbers followed by a letter (e. g., §§ 111a-111e). Nothing has been omitted and the sections are worded as far as possible so as to describe the new features of practice and also to contain the older decisions, e. g., post § 112.]

I. GENERAL PRINCIPLES AND MAXIMS.

§ 1. In general.

Rights recognizable in equity, see post § 11.
Instances when equity will decree compensation in money, see post § 217.
Maxims of law are collected under a separate head entitled "Maxims," which see. The maxims retained here are only such as are generally regarded as the "maxims of equity."
Various maxims, see post §§ 2-8.
Applications of maxim that equity will grant complete relief, see post §§ 218-222.
Maxim, "Once a mortgage, always a mortgage," see Mortgages, II.
Maxim as to diligence and slothfulness, see post, IV.

§ 2. Equality and priority.

Equities between wrongdoers, see post § 5.
Loss as between two equally innocent and blameless persons, see post § 9.
Tacking legal title of another to one's own inferior equity, see post ¶ 36.
Equality is equity, applied to insolvent corporations, see Corporations § 219.

¶ 1. Equality is equity.—Hollister v. Loud, 2 Mich. 309; Turnbull v. Prentiss Lumber Co., 55 Mich. 387; Comstock v. Potter, 191 Mich. 629.

¶ 2. Where the equities of both parties are equal, and neither has the legal title, the prior equity prevails.—Wing v. McDowell, W. 175; Norris v. Showerman, W. 396.

§ 3. Following the law.

In matters of chancery jurisdiction, see also post § 15.
Declination of jurisdiction where legal remedy or defense sufficient, see post § 39.
Conformity to precedents rather than to supposed justice of the case, see Courts § 18 et seq.
Following legal rules in applying statute of frauds, see Frauds, Statute of, III.
Following legal rules of liability on negotiable instruments, see Negotiable Instruments.

¶ 3. Equity follows the law.—Abbott v. Godfroy's Heirs, 1 Mich. 178; Thurston v. Prentiss, 1 Mich. 193; Lockwood v. Beckwith, 6 Mich. 168; Michigan Ins. Co. of Detroit v. Brown, 11 Mich. 265; Beaubien v. Beaubien, 23 How. (64 U. S.) 190, 16 L. ed. 484; Grand Lodge A. O. U. W. v. Child, 70 Mich. 163; Casterton v. Plotkin, 188 Mich. 333.

§ 4. Doing or offering equity.

Averments in the bill as to doing or offering, see post § 87.
Doing iniquity or being in mutual wrong, see post § 5.
Using laches as a sword, see also post ¶ 206.
Necessity of paying debt to obtain relief against mortgage lien, see Mortgages, VIII.
Offer to do equity as barring other party's right to costs, see Costs § 33.

¶ 4. He who seeks equity must do equity.—Schwarz v. Sears, H. 440; Michigan State Bank v. Hammond, 1 D. 527; Morris v. Hoyt, 11 Mich. 9; Fraser v. Little, 13 Mich. 195; Palmer v. Township of Napoleon, 16 Mich. 176; Smith v. Humphrey, 20 Mich. 398; Merrill v. Humphrey, 24 Mich. 170; Prout v. Wiley, 28 Mich. 164; McCredie v. Buxton, 31 Mich. 383; Goodenow v. Curtis, 33 Mich. 505; Connors v. City of Detroit, 41 Mich. 128; Terry v. McClintock, 41 Mich. 492; Bumpus v. Bumpus, 59 Mich. 95; Toms v. Boyes, 59 Mich. 386; Wallace v. McBride, 70 Mich. 596; Gates v. Cornett, 72 Mich. 420; Young v. Toledo & S. H. R. Co., 76 Mich. 485; Long v. Kaiser, 81 Mich. 518; Dwight v. Scranton & Watson Lumber Co., 82 Mich. 624; McKisson v. Davenport, 83 Mich. 211; Ayres v. Dutton, 87 Mich. 531; Hawes v. Detroit Fire & Marine Ins. Co., 109 Mich. 324; Auditor-General v. Hutchinson, 113 Mich. 245, 248; Wheeler v. Dime Savings Bank, 116 Mich. 271; Croskery v. Busch, 116 Mich. 288, 290; Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Freedman, 159 Mich. 114; McQuillan v. Ayer, 189 Mich. 566; Northern Michigan Building & Loan Ass'n v. Fors, 190 Mich. 69.

¶ 5. The maxim that "he who seeks equity must do equity" has no application in favor of a son to give him a lien for services upon the setting aside of a deed from the parents to such son because of proof that it was never delivered effectively, and where the son's testimony was conflicting with his claim.—Roup v. Roup, 136 Mich. 385.

¶ 6. A receiver of a copartnership cannot maintain a bill to recover as partnership assets the equity or surplus value of property conveyed by it to the defendant and by him mortgaged to obtain money for the partnership, where no offer is made to pay such indebtedness for which defendant stands personally liable or to save the defendant harmless with respect thereto.—Security Trust Co. v. Dinsmore, 186 Mich. 273.

¶ 7. In March, 1907, complainant became the assignee of the vendee of a land contract made with defendant brewing company as vendor, and in order to meet the payments borrowed money of defendant D. Co. and assigned the contract to it as security. In September, 1901, notice of forfeiture was served on complainant for failure to comply with the contract in buying liquor exclusively from defendant brewing company and in making the stipulated payments. On November 15, 1909, complainant was ousted by suit brought by defendant brewing company. He took no appeal from this judgment but turned over possession to defendant brewing company. Not until December 3, 1910, did complainant file his bill to redeem on the ground that defendants had conspired to defraud him. Held, the complainant, having failed to perform any of the essential parts of the contract, had not done equity and could not appeal to equity for relief.—Mills v. William Drueke Co., 172 Mich. 394.

§ 5. Doing iniquity; mutual wrong.

Clean hands maxim, see post § 6.

Right of party to illegal contract to have relief, see Contracts §§ 89, 90.

Denial of accounting or contribution to partners in illegal business, see Partnership, VII, E.

Denial of discovery in aid of law action where transaction is illegal, see Discovery ¶ 11.

¶ 8. He who has committed iniquity shall not have equity.—McCredie v. Buxton, 31 Mich. 383; Common Council of Village of Cedar Springs v. Schlich, 81 Mich. 405.

¶ 9. A court of equity is not to be made an instrument of wrong.—Miller v. Cornwell, 71 Mich. 270.

¶ 10. A tortious act can never be the foundation of an equitable right.—Campau v. Campau, 19 Mich. 116; McCredie v. Buxton, 31 Mich. 383; Putnam v. Reynolds, 44 Mich. 113.

¶ 11. Where parties are concerned in illegal agreements or others transactions, whether they are mala prohibita or mala in se, equity will not interpose to grant relief.—Thurston v. Prentiss, 1 Mich. 193.

¶ 12. Equity will not lend its assistance to one who participates in a supposed fraud upon another for his own gain when it afterwards appears that he himself was the defrauded party.—Dakin v. Rumsey, 104 Mich. 636.

¶ 13. Equity will not deny relief to one party as against another who has led him, by a violation of confidence, into a wrong act, when the former is least in fault. They are not in equal wrong.—Barnes v. Brown, 32 Mich. 146.

¶ 14. Equity interferes in cases where extortion is practiced under color of law, to protect, in the interest of justice, even those who are not wholly blameless, and to prevent the process of law from being perverted to fraud and oppression.—Briggs v. Withey, 24 Mich. 136.

¶ 15. A court of equity will not balance the equities between the parties when both are in the wrong, nor give the complainant relief against his own vice and folly.—Rozell v. Redding, 59 Mich. 331.

¶ 16. A complainant who was to become the owner of land and the growing crops thereon, on a certain day, and who, by an abuse of injunctional process, prevented a tenant who was entitled to the possession and full use of the premises and crops up to such day, from cutting the crops during the closing days of his term, was not entitled to the aid of equity, to recover the value of the crops, even though the crops were immature and if left would have ripened for his benefit.—Piper v. Piper, 122 Mich. 662.

¶ 17. A court of equity will not interfere to aid a husband to obtain rights in a corporation organized by his wife with property which he had previously transferred to her, to place it beyond the reach of his creditors, although there was an understanding that he should continue to have an interest in such property and participate in the profits of the corporation; since equity will not compel a confederate in an illegal scheme to carry out her contract.—Wipfler v. Detroit Pattern Works, 140 Mich. 677.

§ 6. Clean hands.

Maxim as to wrongdoers, see ante § 5.

Unclean hands as ground for denying leave to file bill of review, see post ¶ 966.

Unclean hands as bar to specific relief, see also specific topics, e. g., Accounting Suits § 2; Creditors' Suits § 16; Fraudulent Conveyances, II-IV; Foreclosure, I; Quieting Title, I; Reformation, I; Rescission, I, III; Specific Performance, III.

Necessity of clean hands by complainant in accounting suit against trust mortgagee, see Chattel Mortgages ¶ 450.

Right to plead clean hands maxim against corporation suing defendants as promoters, see also Corporations ¶ 138.

Clean hands maxim applied in divorce, see Divorce ¶ 118.

¶ 18. He who comes into equity must come with clean hands.—Hoff v. Hoff, 48 Mich. 281; Lowes v. Lowes, 127 Mich. 307; Massi v. Lavine, 139 Mich. 140; Cochrane Timber Co. v. Fisher, 190 Mich. 478; Brown v. Brown, How. N. P. 94.

¶ 19. The maxim, "he who comes into equity must come with clean hands," has no application where the wrong is done to one not a party to the suit.—Cochran Timber Co. v. Fisher, 190 Mich. 478.

¶ 20. Rescission of a sale of land for misrepresentations by vendors' agent cannot be obtained by one who combined with the agent in breach of trust to obtain the land at a reduced price.—Pearce v. Ware, 94 Mich. 321.

¶ 21. Where a village, in order to evade the constitution, has obtained the passage of an act authorizing it to borrow money for public improvements and to issue bonds therefor, which bonds it has turned over to a railroad company for constructing a road through the village, it cannot have the aid of a court of equity to have such bonds declared void and their negotiation enjoined, but will be left to make such defense as it can at law.—Common Council of Village of Cedar Springs v. Schlich, 81 Mich. 405.

¶ 22. In a suit against a debenture company for a receivership and accounting and other relief on the ground that the scheme is a lottery and fraudulent, and impossible of performance, the debenture holders are not precluded from equitable relief where the scheme appeared plausible, the company's advertisements were grossly fraudulent, and there was nothing to indicate moral turpitude on the part of the purchasers.—Christian v. Michigan Debenture Co., 134 Mich. 171.

¶ 23. In an action by a resident to restrain the maintenance by a city of a municipal coal yard, the unlawful conduct of complainant in having entered into a combination with other coal dealers in violation of Comp. L. 1897, §§ 11377-11379, a statute regulating and controlling the price of coal in the market, while it will not excuse unauthorized action by the city in engaging in the coal business, does bear upon the question as to whether complainant came into a court of equity with clean hands.—Baker v. City of Grand Rapids, 142 Mich. 687.

¶ 24. A purchaser of practically the entire stock in trade of a merchant in bulk in violation of the "Sales-in-Bulk Act" (Pub. Acts 1905, Act No. 223), does not come with clean hands into a court of equity as an intervener to establish his title to the property as against the receiver of the seller.—Farrar v. Lonsby Lumber & Coal Co., 149 Mich. 118.

§ 7. Substance and form.

Treating land as money and the reverse, see post § 12.

Treating amendments as made, see post § 141.

¶ 25. Equity regards substance rather than form, and enforces the actual intent if lawful and just.—Stuart v. Worden, 42 Mich. 154.

¶ 26. In a bill of the nature of a bill for specific performance or for an equitable garnishment, the court may inquire where is the substantial equity in the case—Young v. Clarendon Tp., 132 U. S. 340, 33 L. ed. 356, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 107; affirming 26 Fed. 805.

§ 8. Treating acts as done.

Doctrine of equitable conversion of land into money and vice versa, see post § 12.

¶ 27. Equity considers that as done which ought to have been done.—Grand Lodge A. O. U. W. v. Child, 70 Mich. 163; Ripley v. Seligman, 88 Mich. 177.

¶ 28. Equity will look upon that as done which the parties intended should have been done.—Near v. Donnelly, 80 Mich. 130.

§ 9. Two equally innocent parties.

"Two innocent parties rule" as applied in agency, see also Agency §§ 44, 49.

"Two innocent parties rule" as applied in case of agent's positive dishonesty, see Agency ¶ 314.

¶ 29. Where one of two innocent parties must suffer a loss occasioned by the negligence of one of them, it must rest on the one who caused it, however honest his intentions may have been.—Wilson v. Arnold, 5 Mich. 98; Moran v. Palmer, 13 Mich. 367; Stebbins v. Walker, 46 Mich. 5.

¶ 30. The reposing of a trust or confidence in the wrongdoer by the person who is allowed to suffer ordinarily marks the limitation on the principle that where one of two innocent persons must suffer by the fault of a third, he shall sustain the loss whose negligence put it into the power of the third to occasion it. It supposes some kind of action by a responsible person which may involve injury to another by the misbehavior of the third.—Burson v. Huntington, 21 Mich. 415; Holmes v. Trumper, 22 Mich. 427; Gibbs v. Linabury, 22 Mich. 479.

¶ 30a. As between two innocent persons the rule, that injury must fall on the one whose act or omission made the loss possible, has no application, if one of them is not in any worse position and is not injured by the act.—Smith v. Osborn, 33 Mich. 410.

¶ 31. When one of two parties equally innocent must suffer, the law leaves the loss where it has chanced to fall.—First Nat. Bank of Detroit v. Burkham, 32 Mich. 328.

¶ 31a. Whenever one of two innocent persons must suffer by the act of a third, the loss shall be borne by that one whose behavior in the matter denoted to the other that such third person's doings therein were worthy of trust according to their outward seeming.—Peake v. Thomas, 39 Mich. 584.

¶ 32. Where one of two innocent parties must suffer wrong by the act or default of another, that one must suffer the loss through whose act or neglect such third person was enabled to commit the wrong; but the doctrine is an equitable one and extends no further than is necessary to protect the innocent party in whose favor it is invoked.—Zucker v. Karpeles, 88 Mich. 413.

§ 10. Policy towards penalties and forfeitures.

The subject of penalties (other than for crime) and forfeitures is fully treated in Penalties and Forfeitures, which see.

II. EQUITABLE RIGHTS, TITLES AND REMEDIES.

§ 11. Rights, titles and defenses in general.

Lands regarded as personalty and the reverse, see post § 12.
Equitable remedies, see post § 14.
Necessity of clear legal right to sustain bill, see post § 19.
Unjust assertion of legal rights in oppression of complainant, see post § 21.
Existence of equitable right or title as reason for assuming jurisdiction although remedy exists at law, see post § 40.
Wrongdoing as destroying equitable rights, see ante § 5.
Equitable assignments, see Assignments § 13.
Nonrecognition of assignment of tort causes of action, see Assignments § 9, ¶ 36.
Power to relieve from expulsion from association, see Associations, § 6.
Equities good against trustee in bankruptcy, see Bankruptcy § 3.
Equitable assets subject to creditors' bills, see Creditors' Suits §§ 5-7.
Dower interest in equitable rights and titles, see Dower § 12.
Effect in equity of promises invalid under the statute of frauds, see Frauds, Statute of, III.
Liens in general, see Liens.
Particular kinds of liens, see Chattel Mortgages; Mortgages; Pledges; Mechanics' Liens; Vendors and Purchasers, XI; Forestry, III (log and labor liens); etc.
Equitable liens, see Liens.
Equitable mortgages, see Mortgages, II, C.
Equitable right to contribution or exoneration, see Indemnity and Contribution, II; Suretyship; Guaranty.
Subrogation doctrine, see Subrogation; Mortgages, VIII; Liens; Taxes; Insurance.
Rights and equities arising out of fraud, see Fraud; Rescission.
Mistake and accident and equities arising from them, see Mistake.
Rights and equities respecting penalties and forfeitures, see Penalties and Forfeitures.
Clouds on title to land and equity to have them removed, see Quieting Title.
Rights and equities of infants or respecting them, see Infants; Guardianship.
Rights and equities arising out of coverture, see Husband and Wife.
Rights and equities arising out of insanity of persons, see Insane Persons.
Maturity of right to injunction against threatened act, see Injunctions, I, II.
Equity of occupant of land in possession to injunction against execution sale against legal owner, see Injunctions, II, B.
Injunction against use of name or portrait, see Injunctions, II.
Equitable title as defense in ejectment where tax certificate but no deed issued at commencement of action, see Ejectment ¶ 73.
Former adjudication as bar to relief, see Former Adjudication, IV.

¶ 33. Rights known as "equitable rights" differ from other rights in their essential nature, and not in form only, and can be efficiently protected and made available only by the means known as "equitable."—Brown v. Kalamazoo Circuit Judge, 75 Mich. 274, 285.

¶ 34. Courts of equity have no power to enforce any vague equities which involve no rights or interests protected by the recognized rules of justice.—Hendricks v. Toole, 29 Mich. 340.

¶ 35. Equity will not take jurisdiction of a matter that does not come within the principles of any adjudged case, nor any of the established principles upon which equity jurisdiction is based.—Norris v. Hill, 1 Mich. 202.

¶ 36. Subsequently obtaining the legal title in right of another, and not in one's own right or obtaining it with notice of the prior equity, will not aid the holder of the postponed equity.—Norris v. Showerman, W. 206.

¶ 37. It is equitable rights alone which courts of equity can recognize, and that which has been obtained by fraud, and which can only be used for fraudulent purposes, is not an equitable right.—Hanold v. Bacon, 36 Mich. 1.

¶ 38. Equity has no power to create new contracts between parties, or, in the absence of fraud, accident or mistake, to supply omissions in contracts deliberately made.—Nash v. Burchard, 87 Mich. 85.

¶ 38a. An equitable defense pro tanto to a contract for the payment of a sum certain after making specified deductions does not arise from the fact that there are other deductions which equitably should have been made and that the claim is an equitable one for money had and received; since the equity which could prevail must be one known to the law and none arises against an express contract.—Fraser v. Fraser's Estate, 42 Mich. 275.

¶ 39. It is equitable that one should reap what he has sown.—Lucas v. Parks, 84 Mich. 92.

¶ 40. Equity never interferes to deprive one of a substantial legal right, although it will sometimes require one so to exercise his right as not unnecessarily to injure another.—Third National Bank v. Haug, 82 Mich. 607.

¶ 41. Courts should not discourage the recognition of merely moral obligations by proceeding as if they could have been enforced at law.—Eccard v. Brush, 48 Mich. 3.

¶ 42. Courts of equity cannot create contracts any more than courts of law.—Wood v. Truax, 39 Mich. 628.

¶ 43. In case it appears that, before a suit to correct and reform a conveyance was instituted, the defendant had conveyed away the land in question, so that correcting the deed will only give occasion for litigation, this fact may be allowed weight if the cause is not clear on its equities.—Backus v. Jeffrey, 47 Mich. 127.

§ 12. Equitable conversion and reconversion.

Interest or title of husband regarded as land in which dower right exists, see Dower, II.

Partnership lands as subject to dower of partner's wife, see Dower § 11.

Propriety of ejectment against lands impressed with character of personalty, see Ejectment ¶ 14.

¶ 44. Equity will treat real property as converted into personalty where a will by which it is devised absolutely and without conditions directs that it shall be exchanged for money and interest-bearing securities; and it will so regard it for all the purposes of the will and of the settlement of the estate, even though the exchange was never actually made and though the beneficiaries may have died. And so far as it is not disposed of by the will it would pass under the statute of distributions, and not under that of descents. But it would not be personalty for the purpose of any remedies unconnected with the conversion, nor in the hands of those to whom it was transmitted afterwards.—Shaw v. Chambers, 48 Mich. 355.

¶ 45. In equity partnership lands are converted for purposes of accounting and settlement.—Godfrey v. White, 43 Mich. 171; Merritt v. Dickey, 38 Mich. 41.

¶ 45a. Proceeds of land of a decedent, sold by the guardian of one of the heirs he having had a license to sell the ward's share and selling the other shares by agreement with the adult coheirs, do not assume the character of personal assets of the decedent's estate, so as to support an accounting by the guardian against the widow who holds the proceeds of decedent's personalty subject to distribution to the ward and the other distributees.—Cole v. McFall, 48 Mich. 227.

¶ 46. The doctrine of equitable conversion applies to a provision in a will which directs a double conversion first of land into money and then of money into land.—Ford v. Ford, 80 Mich. 42.

¶ 47. Where a will directs the executors to convert certain lands in one state into rentable "inside" property in a specified city in another state as soon as practicable after the testator's death, irrespective of all contingencies, an equitable conversion of such lands is effected by the terms of the will. —Ford v. Ford, 80 Mich. 42.

¶ 48. Property in land in Michigan bought with the proceeds of a sale of land in Ohio by a resident thereof who had procured his wife to join him in the deed by falsely representing that he intended to devote the money to the purchase of other land in that state, is not controlled by the law of Michigan denying the right of dower to nonresidents.—Bear v. Stahl, 61 Mich. 203.

§ 13. Right of volunteer to relief.

Persons claiming under forged deed, see post ¶ 208.

Validity of voluntary conveyances between parties, see also Fraudulent Conveyances, III.

Right of volunteer to enforce executory gift or trust, see Gifts; Trusts, XII.

¶ 49. A court of equity will not relieve a party from the consequences of a risk which he voluntarily assumes.—McCredie v. Buxton, 31 Mich. 383.

¶ 50. A voluntary conveyance cannot be corrected without the consent of all the parties to it.—Redding v. Rozell, 59 Mich. 476.

¶ 51. An error in the description of land in a voluntary conveyance will not be corrected in equity unless all of the parties consent.—Shears v. Westover, 110 Mich. 505.

¶ 52. A court of equity does not correct a mistake in a conveyance that is voluntary and without consideration unless all the parties consent.—Tuthill v. Katz, 174 Mich. 217.

¶ 53. A grantor may have relief in a court of equity against a voluntary conveyance of land, where it appears that the deed was made by him while in a condition of partial intoxication, induced by the grantee, who stood to him at the time in a fiduciary relationship.—Tiffany v. Tiffany, 110 Mich. 219.

¶ 54. A conveyance and agreement by which the interests of the several heirs in an estate are conveyed to a trustee in order that he may make conveyances for the partition of the estate among the heirs according to allotments agreed upon, the effect of which is to cut off the interest of one of the heirs, will be set aside, where it appears that the latter, when the papers were executed, was so nearly blind as to be unable to read them, that he was misinformed as to their effect, and that he notified the trustee, before the latter had acted in the matter, that he should insist upon the same interest to which he would have been entitled had the alleged agreement not been made.—Shurte v. Fletcher, 111 Mich. 84.

¶ 55. Where a deed, given by a father to his son in consideration of love and affection, errs in the description of the premises, and the grantee, without knowing this, goes into possession of the lands he supposes to be deeded, and improves and expends money on them, his mortgagee in good faith may maintain against such grantee or his heirs, or purchasers from them without consideration, a bill for the correction of the description in the original deed. Such a bill is not demurrable for want of equity in that the original agreement to convey was without sufficient consideration. This agreement is not necessary to support the conveyance, and if it were, it might be inferred from the deed and the circumstances stated in the bill and proved. If such grantor had conveyed to his four sons the whole of his lands in separate parcels, and erred in the description of the premises conveyed to one of them, it would be unimportant whether any consideration was paid to the father or not, and the case here is as it would be if the sons had inherited the whole of the lands in common, and had undertaken to make an amicable partition of them by a conveyance to each of his respective portion, and the same mistake had been made. The portion received by each would be a consideration for his conveyance to the other.—Cummings v. Freer, 26 Mich. 128.

§ 14. Remedies in equity.

[Note. Each of the ordinary equitable suits is treated specifically in a topic devoted to it or in part to it. The topic treating of the specific remedy or of the subject to which it applies should be consulted.—See cross-references following.]

Accounting suits, see Accounting Suits.

Remedy against depositary of instrument in escrow for misdoing, see Escrows.

Accounting, settlement and distribution of estates, see Estates of Decedents, XII, XIII.

Accounting between mortgagee and mortgagor, see Mortgages, IV, VIII, IX.

Remedies available against corporate officers at law or in equity, see also Corporations, XVII, H.

Bills to foreclose liens of corporations on members' stock, see Corporations § 315.

General law of creditors' suits, see Creditors' Suits.

Equitable remedy to recover dower, see Dower § 42.

Remedies for protection of easements, see Easements § 40.

Remedies to enforce claims against estates, see Estates of Decedents, VI, C.

Remedies to subject land to payment of decedent's debts, see Estates of Decedents, VII.

Collection and reduction of assets of decedent to possession of representative, see Estates of Decedents, V, B.

Remedies for fraud, see Fraud, III; Rescission; Trusts; etc.

Equitable remedies for contribution, see Indemnity and Contribution, III.

Remedy by injunction and occasion or propriety for injunctions, see Injunctions.

Impropriety of injunction divesting legal rights summarily, see Injunctions, I, II, V.

Remedy by interpleader of adverse claimants, see Interpleader.

Reformation of instruments for mistake or other ground, see Reformation.

Restoration of lost or destroyed papers and documents, see Restoration of Papers.

Bills to redeem from mortgages, see Mortgages, IX.

Bill to redeem from chattel mortgage, see Chattel Mortgages § 116.

Remedies in equity to collect taxes, see Taxes, X, A.

Remedies for enforcement or protection of trusts, see Trusts, IX et seq.

Equitable set-off, see Set off.

Grounds for discovery, see Discovery, I.

Obsoleteness of pure bills for discovery, see Discovery § 1.

III. JURISDICTION.

A. IN GENERAL; GROUNDS FOR ASSUMPTION OR DECLINATION.

Necessity of jurisdiction of parties to make decree, see post § 202; and see Courts, V, A.

Pleading jurisdiction in equity, see post § 83 et seq.

§ 15. Nature and scope in general.

Personal nature of the jurisdiction exercised, see post ¶¶ 107, 108.

Jurisdiction dependent on amount, see post §§ 16-18.

Necessity of clear right and legal title, see post § 19.

Fraud and injustice or oppression as grounds, see post §§ 20-22.

Mistake and accident as grounds, see post § 23.

Particular subjects and grounds, see post § 24 et seq.
Incidental and relative jurisdiction, see post §§ 25-29.
Consent to equity jurisdiction, see post § 30.
Ouster and loss of jurisdiction, see post § 31.
Declination of jurisdiction because of foreign subject, want of power or means, or legal nature of cause, see post §§ 32-35.
Inadequacy or nonexistence of legal remedy as ground of jurisdiction and adequacy of legal remedy as ground for declining, see post, III, B.
Prevention of multiplicity and circuity as ground for assumption, see post, III, C.
Mode of objecting to jurisdiction in equity, see post § 97.
Constitutional jurisdiction of chancery, see Constitutional Law § 57.
Nature of jurisdiction of supreme court in chancery, original or appellate, see Courts § 51.
Jurisdiction of courts in general, see Courts, V.
Jurisdiction as concluded by law of the case on former appeal, see Appeal § 469.
Statutory grant of jurisdiction as in English chancery courts in 1847, see Jud. Act, chap. VI, § 4; Comp. L. 1915, § 12302.
Enumeration of subjects and scope of jurisdiction, see Jud. Act, chap. VI, § 4; Comp. L. 1915, § 12302.

¶ 56. While equity courts are given special jurisdiction to deal with and correct that wherein the law is deficient because of its universality, they do not rise above, or have power to change, the law, either common or statute.—J. W. McCausey & Co. v. Gittleman, 201 Mich. 8.

§ 16. Amount in controversy.

How measured or estimated, value of subject-matter or amount of claim or damage, see post § 17.
Aggregating several claims to make up amount, see post § 18.
Bill against local assessment by person assessed less than $100, see post ¶ 78.
Land value as criterion where land is involved, see post § 17.
Reformation suit as suit affecting land, see post ¶ 70.
Necessity and sufficiency of allegations as to jurisdictional amount, see post § 84.
Mode of objecting for insufficiency of amount, see post § 98.
Amount less than $100 as reason for not retaining bill to complete relief by compensation as at law, see post § 222.
Statutory rule for dismissal of suits below $100 in controversy, see Jud. Act, chap. VI, § 3; Comp. L. 1915, § 12301.

¶ 57. Jurisdiction of a bill, under Comp. L. 1871, § 4246; How. St. § 5704, for discharge of a mortgage, does not depend upon the amount secured by the mortgage, and it obtains though the amount secured or unpaid is less than $100. Even without the statute the bill, it seems, would lie where the original mortgage was for more than $200.—Collar v. Harrison, 28 Mich. 518.

¶ 58. Under Comp. L. 1871, chap. 215, the circuit court in chancery had no jurisdiction to enforce mechanics' liens for amounts less than $100.—Dewey v. Duyer, 39 Mich. 509.

¶ 59. A bill in equity to obtain an offset of a judgment will not lie, if at all, unless it shows that the amount involved, after satisfying any proper claim of the attorneys, exceeds $100.—Wells v. Elsam, 40 Mich. 218.

¶ 60. Whether a bill would lie to restrain the unlawful interference with the owner's enjoyment of property worth less than $100, quære.—Wight v. Roethlisberger, 116 Mich. 241.

¶ 61. A bill to foreclose a land contract is a suit concerning property within the meaning of Comp. L. 1897, § 435, providing for the dismissal of suit concerning property where the matter in dispute shall not exceed $100 with certain exceptions.—Sands & Maxwell Lumber Co. v. Gay, 138 Mich. 82.

¶ 62. A bill to foreclose a land contract is not a suit to foreclose a mortgage within the meaning of Comp. L. 1897, § 435, providing for the dismissal of suits concerning property where the matter in dispute shall not exceed $100 excepting foreclosure of mechanics' liens and foreclosure of mortgages.—Sands & Maxwell Lumber Co. v. Gay, 138 Mich. 82.

¶ 63. A bill to set aside a contract for the purchase of a road scraper is a suit to restrain the levying of a tax on land under Pub. Acts 1903, No. 183, and must be dismissed unless the tax levied on plaintiff amounts to more than $100. If it is not an attempt to get a decree which will have the effect of restraining the proceedings begun by the making of the contract and the levy of one instalment of the tax there is no jurisdiction under Comp. L. 1897, § 435, which fixes the same jurisdictional amount in chancery suits concerning property.—Bartlett v. Austin & Western Co., 147 Mich. 58.

¶ 64. Under Pub. Acts 1903, No. 183, § 1, providing that no decree shall be made in any suit pending or hereafter commenced in any circuit court of chancery, brought to restrain the proceedings taken or about to be taken by any officer, etc., "which may or shall result in a tax being levied upon property" unless that tax which may or shall be levied upon complainant's property shall amount to more than $100, "and all such suits brought shall be dismissed by the court, one who is assessed for $6.50 for the year cannot enjoin the making of a contract for the purchase of a road machine to be paid for in five years out of tax levies.—Bartlett v. Austin & Western Co., 147 Mich. 58.

¶ 65. A bill by a receiver of an insolvent mutual fire insurance company, claiming a lien upon property of two members of the company, under How. St. § 4258, because of an unpaid assessment, is properly dismissed under How. St. § 6613, which provides for the dismissal of every suit concerning property, except suits between copartners, suits for the enforcement or foreclosure of mechanics' liens, and suits for the foreclosure of mortgages, where the matter in dispute does not exceed one hundred dollars. How. St. § 4263, authorizing receivers to sue for assessments in actions of assumpsit or debt, does not authorize a bill to enforce liens in violation of § 6613.—Peake v. Bradley, 121 Mich. 182.

§ 17. ——Criteria or measure of amount.

Sufficiency of allegation as to value of land involved in tax of less than $100, see also post ¶ 332.

¶ 66. Where the aid of equity is sought to protect the enjoyment of property, it will not be governed by the mere value of property, but will interfere if the injury will materially lessen the enjoyment of it by the owner. —White v. Forbes, W. 112.

¶ 67. The jurisdiction of equity, where the title or enjoyment of real estate is involved, depends on the value of the land and not merely the amount of the claim asserted against it.—Fuller v. City of Grand Rapids, 40 Mich. 395.

¶ 68. Where a bill is filed to prevent a threatened injury to the freehold, it is the value of the land which fixes the jurisdiction.—Huyck v. Bailey, 100 Mich. 223.

¶ 69. Equity will take jurisdiction of a suit involving land worth in itself less than $100 if it furnishes advantages—such as a riparian right—making it worth more.—Blodgett v. Dwight, 38 Mich. 596.

¶ 70. A suit to reform and correct a conveyance is not a suit concerning property in the sense intended by the statute, which requires suits concerning property to be dismissed when the matter in dispute shall not exceed $100; but if the correcting is merely to bring within the grant a strip of land insignificant in value, the court may well dismiss it on that ground.—Backus v. Jeffrey, 47 Mich. 127.

¶ 71. In a suit for subrogation to the lien of a chattel mortgage the test of the jurisdiction is the amount of the lien.—Lucking v. Wesson, 25 Mich. 443.

¶ 72. In a suit in chancery, involving the amount of taxes due on land, which is claimed to be too small for contest in a court of equity, jurisdiction is determined by the value of the land affected by the lien, and not by the amount in dispute.—Soule v. City of Grand Haven, 174 Mich. 276.

¶ 73. The jurisdiction of equity over a suit to enjoin the sale of land on execution depends upon the value of the land, rather than upon the amount of the judgment.—Wight v. Roethlisberger, 116 Mich. 241.

¶ 74. A court of equity has jurisdiction to set aside a judgment and execution for a less sum than $100 where the property levied upon was of the value of $2,000 or more and the judgment was void for want of jurisdiction.—Wilcke v. Duross, 144 Mich. 243.

¶ 75. The amount of the judgment and not the value of the land determines the jurisdiction where a creditor files a bill in aid of execution and prays that a conveyance be set aside.—Matteson v. Matteson, 132 Mich. 516.

¶ 76. The value of the land and not the amount of the asserted claim determines the jurisdiction where a complainant institutes a suit for the purpose of protecting his land from a lien asserted against it.—Matteson v. Matteson, 132 Mich. 516.

¶ 77. The mere fact that a foreclosure decree is for $50 too much does not involve an amount sufficient to give chancery jurisdiction of a bill in the nature of a bill of review attacking such decree.—Sanford v. Haines, 71 Mich. 116.

¶ 78. A taxpayer whose liability for a proposed local improvement does not exceed $100, the amount necessary to confer jurisdiction in chancery cases, cannot maintain a bill to enjoin such improvement.—City of Detroit v. Wayne Circuit Judge, 128 Mich. 438.

§ 18. ——Combining several claims to make amount.

¶ 79. A bill in chancery will not lie where the amount in controversy is less than $100; nor will it where the entire amount is more than that, but has to be disposed of under separate issues, no one of which involves so much.—Wallace v. Sortor, 52 Mich. 159.

§ 19. Doubtful and conflicting titles, rights or claims.

Necessity of clear legal right to maintain injunction suit, see Injunctions, I.

Jurisdiction to quiet title and remove clouds, see Quieting Title, I, III.

Jurisdiction of interpleader bills, see Interpleader.

¶ 80. Strict legal right, as distinguished from equity, is not a necessary criterion of equitable redress; but in granting relief a court of equity seeks to avoid oppression, or consequences of unnecessary rigor.—Fox v. Holcomb, 32 Mich. 494.

¶ 81. Courts of equity will not aid one man to restrict another in the use to which he may put his property unless the right to such aid is clear.—Casterton v. Plotkin, 188 Mich. 333.

¶ 82. In a proceeding to enjoin repeated trespasses on the waters of an inland lake a court of equity will not determine the title to the submerged land where the contending parties have both had intermittent partial possession for many years.—Beach v. Rice, 186 Mich. 95.

§ 20. Fraud and undue influence.

In cases of unconscionableness and oppression, see post § 21.

Bad intent without action or injury, see post § 22.

The doctrine that equity has jurisdiction in cases of fraud and undue influence to administer the appropriate relief, and may exercise it concurrently with courts of law, is fully treated in Fraud, III.

§ 21. Unconscionableness and oppression.

¶ 83. Equity will relieve where a party has so enforced his legal rights as to work injustice to another.—Gilbert v. Haire, 43 Mich. 283.

¶ 84. Chancery grants relief in many cases where there is no legal duress in the strict acceptation of the term, and where the wronged party would perhaps be remediless at the common law.—Meech v. Lee, 82 Mich. 274.

¶ 85. Equity will not aid an unconscientious technical defense beyond the precise limit of defendant's right.—Waldron v. Murphy, 40 Mich. 668.

§ 22. Bad motive or intent.

¶ 86. Intent does not bring a case within equitable jurisdiction if the act to which it attaches does not supply an equitable cause of action.—Winegar v. Newland, 44 Mich. 367.

§ 23. Mistake and accident.

Relief from mistake and accident, see generally Mistake; Reformation; Restoration of Papers; Rescission.

§ 24. Particular subjects, objects and personal relations.

[Note. For convenience in grouping cross-references and listing the subjects of jurisdiction the following sections 24a-24l have been inserted. The matter relevant to each will be found in the topics referred to.]

Jurisdiction to relieve from awards or to enforce them, see Arbitration § 16.

Statutory origin of divorce jurisdiction, see Divorce § 1.

§ 24a. ——Trusts and assignments.

Enforcement, establishment and accounting of trusts, see Trusts.

Bills for instructions to trustees and fiduciaries, see Trusts, VI, B; Guardianship, IV.

Supervisory jurisdiction of chancery in assignments, see Assignments for Creditors § 38.

§ 24b. ——Liens and mortgages.

Foreclosure of mortgages, see Foreclosure, III, V; Chattel Mortgages, VII.

Bills to redeem and for accounting, see Mortgages, IX.

Enforcement of liens, see Liens; Mechanics' Liens; Vendors and Purchasers, XI, XII.

Subjection of lands to payment of decedent's debts, see Estates of Decedents, VII.

¶ 87. While a court of equity, having once acquired jurisdiction for other purposes, may, as an incident to general relief granted, order property sold to satisfy a lien, it has no jurisdiction to enforce a lien, either common-law or statutory, but not equitable, upon a bill filed solely for that purpose.—Marshall v. Wabash Ry. Co., 201 Mich. 167; Aldine Mfg. Co. v. Phillips, 118 Mich. 162.

§ 24c. ——Decedents' estates and wills.

Relative chancery and probate jurisdiction over decedents' estates and administration, see Estates of Decedents, II.

Actions and suits to enforce claims against decedents' estates, see Estates of Decedents, VI, C.

Suits to subject lands to payment of debts, see Estates of Decedents, VII.

Suits for accounting by representative, see Estates of Decedents, XII.

Jurisdiction of probate or of bills to establish or annul propounded wills, see Wills, V.

Suits for partition, see Partition; Estates of Decedents, XIII, XV.

§ 24d. ——Dower, partition, homesteads, and exemptions.

Procedure to set out dower, see Dower, VI, B.

Suits to assert or protect exemption rights, see Exemptions, III.

Suits to assert or to protect homestead, see Homesteads, VIII, IX.

Partition suits, see Partition.

§ 24e. ——Infants and persons under disability and their estates.

Rights and equities of or affected by infancy or parties, see Infants.

Actions and suits by or against infants, see Infants, VII.

Guardianship of infants, see Guardianship.

Insane persons and their rights and protection, see Insane Persons.

Incompetents and delinquents other than insane persons, see Incompetents.

Jurisdiction dependent on coverture, see Husband and Wife.

¶ 88. Equity has supervisory power over the persons and estates of infants, and when any part of an infant's estate is in litigation there it is under the court's immediate protection.—Westbrook v. Comstock, W. 314.

§ 24f. ——Partnerships and corporations.

Nature, source and extent of chancery powers over insolvent or dissolving corporations, see Corporations §§ 246, 247.

Jurisdiction over sequestration of corporations, see Corporations § 234.

Jurisdiction to compel transfer of stock on corporate books, see Corporations § 290.

Jurisdiction over partnership associations, see Joint Stock Companies.

Accounting and settlement of partnerships, see Partnership, VII.

Accounting and settlement of joint adventures, see Joint Adventures.

¶ 89. Chancery has no inherent jurisdiction to act upon corporate defaults and violations of charter.—Tripp v. Pontiac & Lapeer Plank Road Co., 66 Mich. 1.

¶ 90. The jurisdiction of chancery over corporate bodies for the purpose of restraining their operations or of winding up their concerns is purely statutory, and is not a part of the general powers of equity.—Attorney-General v. Bank of Michigan, H. 315.

§ 24g. ——Enforcement and protection of contracts.

Specific enforcement of contracts, see Specific Performance.

Injunctions against breach of contract, see Injunctions.

See also topics treating of the particular contracts, e. g., Negotiable Instruments; Pledges; Mortgages; Sales; Vendors and Purchasers.

§ 24h. ——Rescission and cancellation, restoration and reformation of instruments.

The jurisdiction of these remedies is fully treated in Rescission; Reformation; Restoration of Papers.

Relief to creditors against fraudulent conveyance of concealment, see Fraudulent Conveyances; Creditors' Suits.

§ 24i. ——Penalties and forfeitures.

Relief against forfeitures and rule of non-enforceability of penalties and forfeitures, see Penalties and Forfeitures; Injunctions, II; Specific Performance, III; Vendors and Purchasers, XII; Foreclosure, III, V.

¶ 91. A court of equity may always inquire whether or not a forfeiture has occurred and declare the fact. Thereafter in the particular case it proceeds according as the fact is found.—Miller v. Steele, 146 Mich. 123.

§ 24j. ——Contribution, exoneration and indemnity.

Suits for contribution or exoneration and right of equitable contribution, see Indemnity and Contribution.

Rights and remedies of sureties, see Suretyship.

§ 24k. ——Accounting, marshalling and subrogation.

Necessity for accounting to correct fraud as sustaining jurisdiction where legal remedy also exists, see post ¶ 131.

Accounting suits and right to accountings, see Accounting Suits; Estates of Decedents, XII; Trusts, XI; Guardianship, V; Partnership, VII; Agency, IV.

Marshalling assets and securities, see Marshalling Assets.

Subrogation, see Subrogation; and see also Mortgages, VIII; Taxes, VIII, IX; Insurance, XIX.

§ 24l. ——Injunction, ne exeat, sequestration, and receivers.

See generally Injunctions; Ne Exeat; Receivers; Sequestration.

Corporate receivership and sequestration, see Corporations, XXIII.

§ 25. Incidental or ancillary jurisdiction.

For the nature and scope of the relief which equity will grant in aid of its assumed jurisdiction, see specific topics, e. g., Specific Performance, IV; Quieting Title, III; Rescission, VI; and the like.

Jurisdiction to grant ancillary injunctions, see Injunctions, I, II.

Jurisdiction to settle disputed boundary incident to proper equitable suit, see Boundaries § 25.

Interlocutory procedure and decrees, see generally post, IX and cross-references there collected.

¶ 92. The circuit court in chancery of the county where an infant resides having authorized the sale of his land has jurisdiction of supplemental proceedings to enforce payment pursuant to the sale, though the land lies in another county.—In re Axtell's Petition, 95 Mich. 244.

§ 26. Relative jurisdiction of chancery and probate courts.

Jurisdiction in guardianship matters, see Guardianship, II, IV.

Jurisdiction over insane or incompetent persons, see Incompetents; Insane Persons, II, V.

Jurisdiction and relief in condemnation proceedings or in cases of invalid takings, see Eminent Domain, V, IX.

Jurisdiction over decedents' estates, see generally Estates of Decedents, II.

¶ 93. A very large proportion of the old equity jurisdiction has been vested in the probate courts; and it seems that chancery has jurisdiction in those cases only where an adequate remedy does not exist in the probate court.—People ex rel. Campau v. Wayne Circuit Court, 11 Mich. 393.

¶ 94. Act No. 253, Pub. Acts 1899, giving to the probate court jurisdiction over testamentary trusts and trustees, applies only to provisions actually made by will, and has no application to a case where an equitable trust is sought to be established, but even if it did apply to such a case, the courts of chancery would still have jurisdiction according to the provision of section 46 of the act.—Kundinger v. Kundinger, 150 Mich. 630.

§ 27. Pendency of action at law.

Proper mode of objection, see post § 97.
Pendency of litigation as excuse for not suing sooner, see post § 51.
Pendency of another action as ground for abatement, see Abatement § 12.

¶ 95. Pendency of an undetermined lawsuit does not bar a suit in equity on the same subject, but at a proper stage, if justice requires it, the court of equity will compel an election of remedies; even then the election of the equitable remedy is always admissible.—McGunn v. Hanlin, 29 Mich. 476.

¶ 96. Chancery cannot be ousted of its jurisdiction in a foreclosure suit by a subsequent replevin suit at law seeking to try the same question.—Austin v. French, 36 Mich. 199.

¶ 97. It is not a matter of course to deny relief in equity when a suit at law is pending, if the decision at law cannot cover the whole controversy.—Eaton v. Trowbridge, 38 Mich. 454.

¶ 98. A suit in equity to restrain the enforcement of an assessment for a drain may go on collaterally with certiorari proceedings to review the drain commissioner's action.—Drain Commissioner v. Baxter, 57 Mich. 127.

¶ 99. Where one has obtained an executory writing by fraud, equity has jurisdiction to cancel it, and such jurisdiction is not affected by any legal redress that might be obtained in an action at law whether it has already been commenced or not.—Fred Macey Co. v. Macey, 143 Mich. 138, per Hooker, McAlvay, and Montgomery, JJ.

§ 28. ——Of other suit in equity.

As ground for abatement, see Abatement § 10 et seq.

¶ 100. A pending foreclosure suit is not to be set up in bar of a bill to clear title to the land in controversy by discharging of record as invalid the mortgage, since the purposes and parties in the two suits are different.—Eaton v. Eaton, 68 Mich. 158.

§ 29. ——Of probate or statutory proceedings.

¶ 101. Probate proceedings for discovery do not bar an otherwise proper suit in equity for winding up the affairs of a partnership; delays caused by them can be allowed for in the progress of the chancery suit.—Perrin v. Lepper, 49 Mich. 347.

§ 30. Consent or submission to jurisdiction.

Rule against jurisdiction by consent and exceptions to rule, see Courts § 63.
Submission to equity jurisdiction, see also post ¶¶ 475, 847.
Waiver by delay or failure to object in proper manner, see post § 121.
Demurrer as admission of inadequacy of legal remedy, see post § 156, ¶ 634.
Admission of jurisdiction by pleading to merits, see Appearance § 7.

¶ 102. Where the subject of litigation is not one of equitable cognizance relief cannot be given in equity, notwithstanding the defendant has answered and gone to a hearing on the merits.—Bennett v. Nichols, 12 Mich. 22; Gamber v. Holben, 5 Mich. 331.

¶ 103. Chancery may dispose of claims of third persons in assigned estates, where the parties are willing and voluntarily submit themselves to its jurisdiction although its statutory supervision over assigned estates does not go to that extent.—Edwards v. Symons, 65 Mich. 348; Sawyer v. McAdie, 70 Mich. 386.

¶ 104. Where one of two persons engaged in a joint enterprise in the nature of a partnership files his bill for a mutual accounting and the other answers and submits himself to the doctrine applicable to the class of cases in which he is impleaded, the parties have become litigants under the particular head of jurisdiction appealed to.—Wyatt v. Sweet, 48 Mich. 539.

§ 31. Cessation or ouster of jurisdiction.

Dismissal for want of jurisdiction, see post § 191.
Dismissal for insufficient amount involved, see post § 191.
Cessation by transfer to supreme court, see Appeal, IX.
Power to make amendatory, ancillary or supplementary decrees after term or enrollment, see post §§ 225, 226; and see Judgments, VI.

¶ 105. It cannot be objected on appeal that equity has lost jurisdiction by reducing the issues to that of the construction of contracts, where the bill by one railroad lessee of a union depot company against another lessee railroad company set forth the several leases and alleged a contract between plaintiff and defendant besides and prayed an injunction against threatened obstruction of plaintiff's rights to use tracks and terminals, and where before the issuance of the injunction and pending the suit they agréed on a temporary joint use of the property, thus avoiding need for the injunction, and then went to hearing on the merits without raising the want of jurisdiction by demurrer.—Pere Marquette R. Co. v. Wabash R. Co., 141 Mich. 215.

¶ 106. A court of equity having obtained jurisdiction of a suit to restrain the removal of timber from land until the taxes have been paid as provided in the contract is not ousted of that jurisdiction by the fact that before the case was brought to a hearing all the property to which a lien might attach had been removed by the defendants.—Michigan Iron & Land Co. v. Nester, 147 Mich. 599.

§ 32. Suits affecting foreign subject-matter.

General rules as to jurisdiction of courts over foreign subjects, see Courts §§ 43-46.

Declination of supplemental proceedings to suit from another state, see Courts ¶ 231.

Real actions and venue thereof, see Venue, I.

Foreign and domestic administration of estates and assets, see Estates of Decedents, II.

Recognition of foreign receivers to sue or defend, see Receivers, VIII.

¶ 107. The primary operation of chancery jurisdiction is in personam; it acts upon the conscience of the party, and by its coercive power over defendant's person it will in many cases compel him to perform such acts and to execute such instruments as may be necessary to do justice to the opposite party; and this though such acts and instruments are to operate upon property beyond the jurisdiction of the court.—Graydon v. Church, 7 Mich. 36.

¶ 108. Though a court of chancery, having jurisdiction in personam, may exercise its jurisdiction in a case of contract, fraud or trust, concerning land out of its jurisdiction, it cannot make a decree to restrain or give compensation for a nuisance or tort to real property lying in another jurisdiction; so held where one railroad company filed a bill to restrain another from doing acts continually injurious to complainant's estate and franchise, by crossing its railroad and intruding within its exclusive limits.—Northern Indiana R. Co. v. Michigan Cent. R. Co., 15 How. (56 U. S.) 233, 14 L. ed. 674.

§ 33. Declination for want of enforcing power.

Feasibility of relief as affecting completeness allowable, see post § 220.

¶ 109. Courts of equity must have complete jurisdiction over all matters in controversy, directly, or by power to coerce the parties, and where this does not exist, as in the case of an assignee in bankruptcy, jurisdiction will be denied.—Voorhies v. Frisbie, 25 Mich. 476.

¶ 110. Equity will not entertain a bill where it could not obtain the means of enforcing a cross-bill, if one should become proper, so as to compel both parties to do equity.—Voorhies v. Frisbie, 25 Mich. 476.

§ 34. Declination for want of means to try issues.

¶ 111. Where a bill is brought by an administrator to impress a trust on certain property held by a defendant, and claimed by her under an alleged gift inter vivos by the deceased, equity should not be denied jurisdiction on the ground that a jury is needed to try the issues of fact, since the chancellor is competent to decide them.—Chamberlain v. Eddy, 154 Mich. 593.

§ 35. Declination of legal controversies.

Declination because legal remedy is adequate, see post § 39.

Declination of jurisdiction because jury will be needed, see ante ¶ 111.

Effect of reduction of controversy to legal one, see ante ¶ 105.

Attempted consent to jurisdiction, see ante § 30.

Statutory provision for transfer from equity to law side or vice versa, see Jud. Act, chap. XI, § 2; Comp. L. 1915, § 12351.

¶ 112. The question of forgery of an instrument of title back of the mortgage being foreclosed is unfit for a court of equity to pass upon defensively unless the case is found to be a plain one; the question should be tried by ejectment.—Summers v. Bromley, 28 Mich. 125.

B. INADEQUACY OR NONEXISTENCE OF LEGAL REMEDY OR DEFENSE.

§ 36. In general.

[Note. The question whether there is such an inadequacy of legal remedy as to make a case for equity is involved in many cases which it would be impossible to collect here without encroaching on the specific topics, such as Injunctions, I, II; Quieting Title, I; Rescission; Reformation; Specific Performance. See those and other equity topics, and see cross-references post § 39.]

Rule where existing legal remedy is not plain, convenient or prompt, see post § 37.

Allegations as to lack of legal remedy, see post § 85.

¶ 113. In general, where a bill prays relief which cannot be had by law, and to which the complainant is entitled, equity takes jurisdiction.—Rowland v. Doty, H. 3; Wales v. Newbould, 9 Mich. 45.

¶ 114. The "irreparable injury" alleged as a ground of equitable jurisdiction is not necessarily such injury as cannot be measured by a pecuniary standard.—Wilmarth v. Woodcock, 58 Mich. 482.

¶ 115. Where the objection of adequate legal remedy is one that must be passed upon at the final hearing after all the evidence is in, it is not to be favored.—Wyckoff v. Victor Sewing Mach. Co., 43 Mich. 309.

¶ 116. A party will not be compelled to give up a legal remedy for an equitable one, and equitable jurisdiction can never supplant legal jurisdiction.—People ex rel. La Grange Township v. State Treasurer, 24 Mich. 468.

§ 37. Legal remedy difficult or inconvenient.

Complexity of accounts as basis of jurisdiction, see Accounting Suits § 4.

Adequacy of legal remedies to settle boundaries, see Boundaries §§ 24, 25.

¶ 117. If the remedy at law is not plain, adequate and complete, but is difficult or doubtful, equity will entertain jurisdiction.—Wheeler v. Clinton Canal Bank, H. 449; Edsell v. Briggs, 20 Mich. 429; Gott v. Hoschna, 57 Mich. 413; McKinney v. Curtiss, 60 Mich. 611.

¶ 118. Where the case presents such complications, such obstacles to a disposition at law, and such questions peculiar to equity as to make it manifest that a court of law could not so deal with it as to effect a proper adjustment and bring about a complete termination of the contention, equity will hold jurisdiction.—Wallace v. Harris, 32 Mich. 380.

¶ 119. Equity may afford relief where the legal remedy would be inadequate or not immediately available.—Maclean v. Fitzsimons, 80 Mich. 336.

¶ 120. The fact that there was a remedy at law upon a contract held not to preclude an election of an equitable remedy which was much more complete, embracing what would otherwise have been numerous suits at law, with a possible necessity for equitable relief finally.—Olson v. Morrison, 29 Mich. 395; Carroll v. Rice, W. 373.

§ 38. Exhaustion of legal remedy or recourse.

Allegations to sustain equity jurisdiction, see post § 85.

Exhaustion of legal remedies or futility of resort to them as basis for creditors' suits, see Creditors' Suits, I, C.

Exhaustion of legal recourse before resort to bill to annul fraudulent conveyance, see also Fraudulent Conveyances, V.

Prerequisites to bills against corporations by creditors, see Corporations § 200.

Prerequisites to bills by creditors to enforce stockholders' liability, see Corporations §§ 327, 336.

Failure to appeal or bring error when available as making judgment conclusive, see Former Adjudication.

¶ 121. Except where one has an actual lien or security giving him an original right to file a bill, he must exhaust his remedy at law before resorting to equity.—Vanderpool v. Notley, 71 Mich. 422.

§ 39. Declination where legal remedy adequate.

See also ante ¶ 116.

Declination of purely legal controversies, see ante § 35.

Bill for damages for fraud as demurrable, see post ¶ 348.

Amendment to transform law case into one in equity, see also post ¶¶ 548, 549.

Administration of legal relief to make it complete, see post § 222.

Adequate means for discovery at law as grounds for denial of discovery in equity in aid of law action, see Discovery ¶ 12.

Ejectment as primary remedy to determine title to real property, see Ejectment § 1.

Existence of legal remedy for suppression of conveyance by depositary of deed in escrow, see Escrows.

Legal and other remedies for collection of or surrender of assets to personal representatives, see Estates of Decedents, V, B.

Remedy for correction of irregularity in execution or sale under it, see Executions, X; Conversion; Trespass; Replevin.

Remedies for relief from defective or irregular foreclosures, see Foreclosure, V.

Remedy at law for fraud, see Fraud, III.

Remedies for assertion or protection of homesteads, see Homesteads, IX.

Adequacy of legal remedy as defense or reason against injunction, see Injunctions, I, II.

Remedies at law to obtain possession from lessee, see Landlord and Tenant, V; Forcible Entry.

Remedies at law and proper parties to redress injuries to municipal corporations, see Municipal Corporations, XVI, A.

Remedies to try title to and rights in office, see Offices, III.

Remedy at law for nuisance, see Nuisances, III.

Remedy at law for removal of highway obstructions, see Highways, XI.

Legal remedy as bar to suit for quieting title, see Quieting Title, I, III.

Adequacy of legal remedy as ground for refusing specific enforcement, see Specific Performance, I, IV.

Adequacy of legal remedy as defense to bill for construction of will, see Wills, VI, J.

¶ 122. Equity will not take jurisdiction of a case where there is a plain and adequate remedy at law.—Barrows v. Doty, H. 1; Bennett v. Nichols, 12 Mich. 22; Torrent v. Muskegon Booming Co., 22 Mich. 354; Hagenbuch v. Howard, 34 Mich. 1; Mears v. Howarth, 34 Mich. 19; Bay City Bridge Co. v. Van Etten, 36 Mich. 210; Torrent v. Rodgers, 39 Mich. 85.

¶ 123. Courts of equity will not take cognizance of cases where their jurisdiction is concurrent, if there is a plain, adequate and complete remedy at law.—Chapel v. Hull, 60 Mich. 167.

¶ 124. A bill in equity will not lie where there is an adequate remedy at law.—Petrie v. Torrent, 88 Mich. 43.

¶ 125. Equity is without jurisdiction to determine the title of one who is in the actual possession of real estate under a claim of ownership.—Beach v. Rice, 186 Mich. 95.

¶ 126. The proper remedy to obtain possession of lands held by a person in possession claiming title under an invalid title, by a party holding a legal title, is ejectment, as a court of chancery is not the proper forum to try titles to lands.—Seymour v. Rood, 121 Mich. 173.

¶ 127. Where a bill has for its object the preservation of an estate until such time as it could be administered under the Bankruptcy Law, it is subject to demurrer as the rights of the creditors are protected by legal remedies under the state laws and no reason for equity jurisdiction is disclosed.—Ideal Clothing Co. v. Hazle, 126 Mich. 262.

¶ 128. A bill will not lie in equity to require an accounting, to restrain the defendant from proceeding with a replevin suit begun by the complainant, to declare such action to have been settled by the parties, and to cancel the replevin bond; since there was an adequate legal remedy for determining such questions in the replevin suit on an issue framed under a suggestion pursuant to § 10402 et seq., Comp. Laws 1897; § 13116 et seq., How. St.—Huebel Co. v. MacKinnon, 186 Mich. 617.

§ 40. Equitable right or title involved.

Existence of lien as ground though legal remedy adequate, see ante ¶ 121.

¶ 129. In this state equity has not taken jurisdiction of cases where a suitor has a full, complete, and adequate remedy at law, unless it is shown that there is some feature of the case peculiarly within the province of a court of equity.—Detroit Trust Co. v. Old Nat. Bank of Grand Rapids, 155 Mich. 61.

¶ 130. It is only when the rights of parties spring from legal duties and obligations that the law furnishes the remedy for their enforcement to the exclusion of proceedings in equity.—Godfrey v. White, 60 Mich. 443.

¶ 131. A bill to set aside a conveyance of real property and to avoid a transfer of personalty will not be dismissed though it is alleged that the question as to the realty has been passed upon in a former decision and the matter relating to the personalty could be determined in an action of trover, where it alleges that the property was obtained by fraud, through a conspiracy, and that an accounting is necessary.—Lyon v. Clark, 137 Mich. 438.

§ 41. Concurrent or statutory jurisdiction and remedies.

Declination of jurisdiction because concurrent legal remedy is adequate, see ante § 39.

Concurrent jurisdiction with law, see also Courts § 69.

What remedies are concurrent for particular rights and wrongs, see specific topics treating of such rights and wrongs, e. g., Nuisances, III; Highways, XI (encroachments); Drains, II, G; Local Improvements, VII; Taxes, VI, X, XII.

Jurisdiction over actions affecting trusts, see Trusts, IX et seq.

Statutory jurisdiction to make allowance to wife living separate from husband, see Husband and Wife, VII.

¶ 132. Where there is apparently as good ground for assigning a case to the jurisdiction of a court of equity as to that of a court of law, it is not a matter of great consequence in which branch it falls, since the same judge sits in both law and equity.—Wallace v. Harris, 32 Mich. 380.

C. PREVENTION OF MULTIPLICITY AND CIRCUITY.

§ 42. In general.

Inadequacy of legal remedy requiring multiplied litigation, see ante § 37.

¶ 133. Equity may entertain an original bill on the ground of saving multiplicity of suits.—Village of Frankfort v. Schmid, 151 Mich. 85.

¶ 134. Where, instead of a complexity of controversies between the parties with respect to the same subject-matter, the complexity arises from there being involved the several rights of more than two, each attempting adjustment and each requiring at law a separate action, equity will take jurisdiction of a suit to which all are parties and therein adjust all rights and determine the whole controversy.—Buck v. Lockwood, 193 Mich. 242.

¶ 135. Suits do not become of equitable cognizance because of their number merely.—Youngblood v. Sexton, 32 Mich. 406.

¶ 136. A bill by a corporation against its former officers to recover moneys they are alleged to have wrongfully and fraudulently voted to themselves for services performed as such officers, and a further sum they are alleged to have wrongfully made by the use of the company's moneys, cannot be said to save a multiplicity of suits, and jurisdiction cannot be entertained on that ground.—Bay City Bridge Co. v. Van Etten, 36 Mich. 210.

§ 43. Numerous actions threatened or pending at law.

Avoidance of multiplicity and circuity as basis for cross-bill asserting legal rights which could not have been asserted by original bill, see post ¶ 487.

Bills of peace to prevent multiplicity, see post, XII.
Interpleader bills and grounds for them, see Interpleader.

¶ 137. Where sixty-seven suits were brought upon county orders by different plaintiffs before justices of the peace, some of which were tried and judgments rendered for the plaintiffs, and five of them appealed to the circuit court, and the county commissioners claimed to have a valid defense to them all, and filed a bill in equity to enjoin them until the appealed suits could be tried, it was held that no case of equitable jurisdiction was made out, and a preliminary injunction was dissolved.—Lapeer County Com'rs v. Hart, H. 157.

¶ 138. The fact that after appealing five out of sixty-seven actions there were no funds remaining in the county treasury with which to pay the costs and appeal the remaining suits constitutes no reason for equitable interference.—Lapeer County Com'rs v. Hart, H. 157.

¶ 139. Equity will not take jurisdiction of a suit to enforce the collection of the costs in a large number of discontinued suits at law, the court of law having had ample power to deal with each individual case.—Beecher v. Mead, 49 Mich. 162.

¶ 140. Where a succession of trespasses is threatened for which no adequate remedy lies at law, and likely to cause damage, the amount of which cannot well be ascertained, equity will interpose at any stage of the injuries, and thus the multiplicity of suits will be avoided which might be necessary if resort were had to actions of trespass.—Stone v. Roscommon Lumber Co., 59 Mich. 24.

¶ 141. Where a party is in possession, and suits at law are brought against him for portions of the land, he may file a bill to quiet title against all the claimants—the questions being the same as to all—and the suits at law will be enjoined, that the whole controversy may be settled in one proceeding.—Woods v. Monroe, 17 Mich. 238.

¶ 142. In order to prevent a multiplicity of suits equity may enjoin an encroachment on land which, if allowed to continue, would ripen into a title.—Newaygo Mfg. Co. v. Chicago & W. M. R. Co., 64 Mich. 114.

¶ 143. The jurisdiction of chancery to avoid a multiplicity of suits could not be invoked where the complainant was not threatened with such suits and where the number of suits complainant might bring would be of its own choosing.—Attorney General ex rel. Marr v. Board of Education of Detroit, 133 Mich. 681.

¶ 144. The fact that an equitable estoppel may be urged in an action at law is not a reason for denying jurisdiction in equity, where multiplicity may be avoided, although the estoppel would prevail in the law actions.—Roth v. Rubert, 176 Mich. 484.

§ 44. Taxpayers' suits.

For practice in taxpayers' suits and circumstances in which they are proper, see Injunctions, II, D; Municipal Corporations, XVI, A; Counties § 55; Townships, VIII; Taxes, X, C.

¶ 145. Several persons cannot unite to file a bill in a local court of limited jurisdiction to restrain the collection of a tax on the ground of preventing a multiplicity of suits, the tax being levied throughout the state. Such a suit could only diminish the number of suits, but it could not prevent a multiplicity of them.—Youngblood v. Sexton, 32 Mich. 406.

IV. LACHES AND ACQUIESCENCE.

§ 45. In general; maxim as to slothfulness.

[Note. Specific applications of the doctrine of laches to the various equities and equitable remedies are found in topics treating thereof. (See topics referred to under § 46 post.) None but cases seeming to have a general application and significance were retained here.]

What regarded as laches, see post §§ 46-49.
Knowledge, notice and concealment as factors, see post §§ 55, 56.
Excuses for delay, see post §§ 50, 51.
Interruption or suspension of running of laches, see post § 52.
Persons chargeable with or responsible for laches, see post §§ 53, 54.
Persons entitled to urge laches, see post § 57.
Pleading in anticipation of defense of laches, see post § 89.
General law of limitations of actions, see Limitations.
Presumptions as to payment from lapse of time, see Evidence, II; Payment, V.
Lapse of time, inaction and acquiescence as waiver of fraud, see Fraud, I, III.
Estoppel by acquiescence and silence, see Estoppel, III.
Want of diligence as destroying right to rely on another's representations, see Estoppel, III; Fraud, I; Mistake.
Bar of all claims by laches or limitations as terminating receivership, see Receivers, II, B, V.
Acquiescence as defense in ejectment, see Ejectment § 20.

¶ 146. The term "laches" involves the idea of negligence,—a neglect or failure to do what ought to be done under the circumstances to protect the rights of the parties to whom it is imputed, or involving injury to the opposite party through such neglect to assert rights within a reasonable time.—Ripley v. Seligman, 88 Mich. 177.

¶ 147. Laches implies a neglect or failure to do what ought to have been done under the circumstances to protect the rights of the one to whom it is imputed, or involving the injury to the opposite party through neglect to assert rights within a reasonable time.—Holmes v. Soule, 180 Mich. 526.

¶ 148. Laches rests chiefly on the inequity of permitting a claim to be enforced by reason of changed conditions or relations of the property or parties resulting from delay.—Parks v. Brooks, 188 Mich. 645.

¶ 149. Peace and good order require that equity shall not aid those who grossly neglect to take care of their own rights.—Zoellner v. Zoellner, 46 Mich. 511.

¶ 150. Equity will not entertain a bill to recover a stale demand where there has never been any obstacle in the way of complainant's asserting his right.—Campau v. Chene, 1 Mich. 400.

¶ 151. Equity refuses to aid stale demands where the party has slept on his rights and acquiesced for a great length of time.—Douglas v. Douglas, 72 Mich. 86.

¶ 152. Equity does not favor the purchase of litigious titles or of stale demands revived after they were naturally regarded as abandoned.—Porter v. Noyes, 47 Mich. 55.

¶ 153. A court of equity looks with disfavor on any needless delay in complaining of a grievance when the party complained of is expending money or exercising important corporate functions under claim of right.—Hathaway v. Village of New Baltimore, 48 Mich. 251.

¶ 154. Equity requires vigilance, some degree of promptness on the part of those claiming to be defrauded; and especially is this true where innocent parties are dealing and assuming positions in reliance upon the validity of contracts.—Barker v. Finley, 200 Mich. 166.

¶ 155. Negligence of a complainant in signing a party wall agreement which mistakenly granted away the wall already constructed pursuant to a parol agreement, will not bar his right of recovery, where no action by the defendant with reference to the possession of the land has been induced by such negligence.—Eberle v. Heaton, 124 Mich. 205.

§ 46. Delays regarded as laches.

Laches as reason for denying reopening of case for further proofs, see post § 173.
Laches or delay as reason for denying rehearing, see post § 229.
Delay as reason for denying leave to file supplemental bill, see post ¶ 935.
Laches as bar to bill of review, see post § 242.
Laches in seeking accounting with agent, see Agency ¶ 537.
Delay barring right to relief from expulsion from membership association, see Associations ¶ 20.
Laches in seeking enforcement of building restriction, see Buildings § 23.
Laches in enforcing charity, see Charities § 5.
Laches in filing mortgage or changing possession of chattels covered, see Chattel Mortgages § 48.
Laches defeating forfeiture of corporation by state, see Corporations § 254.
Laches defeating execution purchaser failing to register stock purchased on books, see Corporations ¶ 1066.
Laches barring stockholders' suits, see Corporations § 345.
Laches as affecting right to costs, see Costs, II, B.
Laches in creditors' bills and bills in aid, see Creditors' Suits § 18.
Delay excused by resort to cross-bill in other suit and defeat therein, see also Creditors' Suits ¶ 67.
Delay as bar to divorce, see Divorce § 30.
Laches in appealing from divorce decree to subject estate to inheritance, see Divorce ¶ 391.
Laches to claim alimony award, see Divorce § 147.
Laches barring relief from drain proceedings, see Drains §§ 109, 110.
Laches affecting right to opening of default, see Defaults §§ 28-31.
Laches to claim assets of estate for administration, see Estates of Decedents, V, B.
Laches as bar to accounting by representative, guardian, or trustee, see Estates of Decedents, XII; Guardianship, V; Trusts, XI.
Laches as bar to suits to annul fraudulent conveyances, see Fraudulent Conveyances, II, B.
Laches and estoppel to have taxpayer's injunction or other suit, see Injunctions, I, II; Municipal Corporations, XVI, A; Taxes, X, C.
Laches and estoppel to complain of local assessments, see Local Improvements, VII; Drains, II, G.
Laches as bar to bill to redeem from mortgage, see Mortgages, IX.
Laches and estoppel to object to nuisance, see Nuisances, I, III.
Laches defeating pledgor or pledgee, see Pledges, II, III.
Laches as bar to suit to quiet title, see Quieting Title, I, III.
Laches as bar to reformation suits, see Reformation, I, III.
Laches as bar to suits for annulment or cancellation or rescission, see Rescission, II, III.
Laches as bar to specific enforcement, see Specific Performance, I, IV.
Laches as bar to relief from taxes or tax sales, see Taxes, VI, VIII, X, C, XII, C.

Laches as bar to establishment or enforcement of trust, see Trusts, IX et seq.
Laches as bar to bill to set aside will or probate, see Wills, V, D.
Laches barring right to make constitutional question, see Constitutional Law § 29.

¶ 156. A bill was filed to establish a right to profits from a mine and a division of the property, complainant claiming under a lease of an undivided interest in the mining grant, the remaining interest, including the reversionary right, having long before passed to defendant. It was held properly dismissed for unconscionable delay, on proof that complainant, with full knowledge of what was being done, had allowed defendant to expend money and erect costly works in order to develop the mineral resources of the land, without asserting his claim in court for more than twenty years after defendant had acquired its original interest in the property.—Harlow v. Lake Superior Iron Co., 41 Mich. 583.

¶ 157. Where a bill asking, among other things, relief against a note, was filed within three years and a half after the note was given, and within six months after it fell due, the delay was held no ground for refusing relief.—Schwarz v. Wendell, W. 267.

¶ 158. Six years' lapse before bringing suit to cancel a conveyance of land on the ground that it was obtained from the grantor under circumstances of undue influence, and for an inadequate consideration, cannot avail a defendant where the property remains in his hands, and there has been during that time no loss of evidence preventing a full presentation of the case, and the cost of the improvements made by defendant does not exceed the amount which a reasonable rent of the premises would have produced.—Allore v. Jewell, 94 U. S. 506, 24 L. ed. 260.

¶ 159. Where the delay in presenting a claim to the assignee was due entirely to a matter of legal form in describing the nature of the debt, and to the disallowance in the shape first presented, it may be allowed afterwards, although the delay may have left less money in the assignee's hands than will place the claimant on as good a footing as those who have already received dividends.—Farwell v. Myers, 64 Mich. 234.

¶ 160. Twenty months' delay in filing a bill for review after rendition of a later decision which settled the law is laches, where the decree entered by consent had been standing a year when the later decision was rendered, and where there was no fraud or any excuse shown for the delay.—Ingles v. Bryant, 117 Mich. 113.

¶ 161. There is laches barring relief, where a party to a contract made on the strength of a decision waited two and a half years after such decision was overruled, and nine months after its attorney advised that the decision relied on was no longer the law, before any assertion of its claim for relief.—Pittsburgh & L. A. Iron Co. v. Lake Superior Iron Co., 118 Mich. 109; writ of error dismissed in 178 U. S. 270, 44 L. ed. 1065, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 931.

¶ 162. A landowner on the shore of a meandered lake which lies by until a hazardous and costly venture of another has proved existence of valuable ore under the lake bed, bearing no obligation to contribute to loss in case of failure, has no equity against the owner whose enterprise produces the value.—Pittsburgh & L. A. Iron Co. v. Lake Superior Iron Co., 118 Mich. 109; writ of error dismissed in 178 U. S. 270, 44 L. ed. 1065, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 931.

§ 47. ——Mere delay without change.

Mere lapse of time as adverse possession, see Adverse Possession ¶ 23.

¶ 163. Lapse of time alone is not sufficient to bar equitable relief.—Ripley v. Seligman, 88 Mich. 177.

¶ 164. In the absence of any conduct designed to mislead, mere delay will not deprive an owner of his estate, legal or equitable, until barred by some clear rule of equity.—Palmer v. Williams, 24 Mich. 328.

¶ 165. Laches alone is not necessarily conclusive against a complainant's equities when he is not of a suspicious nature nor prompt to assert his rights.—Wyckoff v. Victor Sew. Mach. Co., 43 Mich. 309.

¶ 166. Mere lapse of time, where defendant has not relied upon plaintiff's silence and acted upon it, so as to change his position for the worse and so that he would suffer a loss if he were compelled to surrender or alter what he had done by reason of plaintiff's being permitted to assert his rights, does not constitute laches.—Quinn v. Tully, 174 Mich. 30.

¶ 167. Laches, as interpreted by courts of equity, is not tested by mere delay for a certain period, but is such unreasonable neglect to assert and seek to enforce a right as will constitute in equity and good conscience a bar to recognition.—Walker v. Schultz, 175 Mich. 280.

¶ 168. Mere delay and acquiescence will not defeat the enforcement of a strict legal right by injunction, unless continued long enough to defeat the right itself.—Longton v. Stedman, 182 Mich. 405.

§ 48. ——Delays by public.

¶ 169. Thirty years' adverse possession by a city, under claim of right, of land formerly occupied as a county seat, would bar the county from reclaiming the land in equity.—

Kent County Sup'rs v. City of Grand Rapids, 61 Mich. 144.

§ 49. ——Delay less or more than period of limitations.

Application of limitations in equity, see Limitations; and see also Adverse Possession; Easements §§ 11-13.

¶ 170. Equity follows the analogies of the statute of limitations in all cases where an analogous relief is sought upon a similar claim. But where the relief sought is in its nature one of equitable and not of legal cognizance, and the remedy is of a purely equitable nature, equity follows its own rules.—Michigan Ins. Co. of Detroit v. Brown, 11 Mich. 265.

¶ 171. In the case of presumptive bar from lapse of time, the rule as to subsequent disabilities is different from that of the statute of limitations. Under the statute the party must bring himself within the exceptions of the statute, whereas in cases of presumptive bar he may show any circumstance that outweighs the presumption.—Abbott v. Godfroy's Heirs, 1 Mich. 178.

¶ 172. A lapse of time less than that allowed in corresponding cases at law might not be overlooked in some cases in equity, but where a holding has been clearly adverse the excuse for a longer delay in attacking it should, if any excuse is admissible, be very clear, or relief against it should be denied.—McVickar v. Filer, 31 Mich. 304.

¶ 173. The bar to a remedy in equity has reference rather to the nature of the property to be affected than to the character of the instrument which may affect it. So held where a foreclosure bill was filed twelve years after a series of notes secured by an unsealed mortgage had become due.—McKinney v. Miller, 19 Mich. 142.

¶ 174. The omission to do what one is by law required to do to protect his rights, and which justifies a fair presumption that he has abandoned the same under circumstances which mislead or prejudice an adverse party, may in equity operate as laches which will bar the assertion of such rights later under changed conditions, even though the statute of limitations has not run.—Olson v. Williams, 185 Mich. 294.

¶ 175. Any delay to make complaint as to fraud in the sale of land within the statute of limitations is insufficient to constitute laches.—Hutchinson v. Westbrook, 191 Mich. 484.

§ 50. Excuses for delay.

Anticipating the defense, see post § 89.

Where delay exceeds time of limitations, see also ante ¶ 172.

¶ 176. Pecuniary inability can never be admitted as a reason for extending the time for the assertion of an equity not springing from any fraud or fault of the other party.—McVickar v. Filer, 31 Mich. 304.

¶ 177. Relationship may be an excuse for laches in the enforcement of rights.—Wright v. Wright, 37 Mich. 55.

¶ 178. A desire to avoid family litigation is not to be disfavored; and where forbearance to file a bill in equity has not misled the defendant to his prejudice, the delay has been excused by the peculiar relationship and mutual conduct of the parties, the action of the defendant not having been such as to impress on the complainant the necessity of urgency in prosecuting.—Case v. Case, 26 Mich. 484.

¶ 179. A probate court, upon proper petition has authority to require the discovery of any and all books and papers belonging to an estate (How. St. § 5876); hence laches is not excused by want of possession of or access to such books necessary to prepare for suit.—Eames v. Manley, 121 Mich. 300.

¶ 180. On a bill in aid of execution the holder of a promissory note who relies on representations made by an indorser thereon to whom the money was first intrusted for investment, and upon whose representations that payment would be made reliance was placed, held not guilty of laches in failing to bring suit and apply securities then available for several years after maturity.—Johnson v. Cook, 179 Mich. 117.

§ 51. ——Pending litigation or immaturity of right.

Pendency of other litigation as affecting jurisdiction of equity, see ante §§ 27-29.

Knowledge or notice of right as essential basis for laches, see post §§ 55, 56.

Nonimputation to person under disability or in suspense, see post § 53.

¶ 181. A complainant seeking in equity to establish his right to remove timber from lands cannot forfeit such right by abstaining from its exercise while defendants are litigating it.—Holcomb v. Mosher, 50 Mich. 252.

¶ 182. One whose right of action to cancel a deed did not arise until a failure to probate another's will is not chargeable with laches if he moves within a reasonable time after such failure.—Barker v. Smith, 92 Mich. 336.

¶ 183. Delay by children until after their father's death in seeking to set aside, on the ground of his mental incapacity, a deed executed by him, is not such laches as bars their remedy.—Hemphill v. Holford, 88 Mich. 293.

¶ 184. Proceedings to enjoin the dissipation of an estate based upon the fraudulent suppression of a will, whereby the heirs had obtained an order of distribution of the property, which were commenced by the legatees four years after they had discovered the will but which they had proceeded to have probated immediately on its discovery and while the original probate proceedings were still pending are not barred by laches.—Ewing v. Lamphere, 147 Mich. 659.

¶ 185. On a landowner's bill filed in April, 1905, to restrain defendant from flooding lands by a dam, it would be an extreme application of the doctrine of estoppel by nonaction to deny relief on the ground of laches where it appears that the township had begun an action against the defendant in 1902 and the suit had been dismissed on defendant's agreement to satisfy the landowners and to remedy the very conditions which were alleged to be the causes of the damage, and giving until July, 1904, to do so.—Miller v. Bank of Belleville, 148 Mich. 339.

§ 52. Interruption or suspension pending claims.

Interruption or suspension of running of limitations, see Limitations, III.
Possession as absolving possessor from duty to sue, see post § 54.

¶ 186. The mere assertion of a claim, unaccompanied by any act to give it effect, cannot avail to keep alive a right which would otherwise be precluded.—Van Buren v. Stocking, 86 Mich. 246.

¶ 187. Where the claim that a mistake had been made in omitting the descriptions of certain lands from a contract for the sale of standing timber was asserted as soon as the mistake was discovered, and was asserted at all times thereafter, although suit was not begun immediately, and where complainant never gave defendants reason to suppose the claim was abandoned or intended to be waived, and where, further, no injury had resulted to defendants from the delay, it was held that complainant was justified in exhausting persuasion before resorting to litigation, especially in view of the repeated admissions of the president of the vendor corporation, who negotiated the sale of the timber in its behalf, that he understood that the omitted lands were a part of the contract.—Metropolitan Lumber Co. v. Lake Superior Ship Canal, Railway & Iron Co., 101 Mich. 577.

¶ 188. A bill by a corporation to cancel a secret and burdensome contract to pay royalties alleged to have been procured by fraud is not barred by laches where the corporation protested promptly after discovering the fraud and entered into negotiations for a peaceable settlement which failed and began its suit a reasonable time thereafter.—Fred Macey Co. v. Macey, 143 Mich. 138.

§ 53. Persons imputed with laches; disabilities.

Who entitled to urge laches, see post § 57.
Possession as absolving possessor from suing, see post § 54.
Disability of infancy to sue, see Infants, VII.
Disabilities of insane persons, see Insane Persons, V.
Laches by infant seeking for relief from judgment, see Infants, VII.
Immunity of county from plea of laches in suit on county officer's bond, see Officers, VII.

¶ 189. Laches cannot be imputed to one who brings proceedings as soon as he is in legal condition to do so, as where one awaits a discharge in bankruptcy.—Gamble v. Folsom, 49 Mich. 141.

¶ 190. Laches in filing a bill to establish his rights is not imputable to a minor or to any person incompetent to act on his own behalf.—Dragoo v. Dragoo, 50 Mich. 573.

¶ 191. Laches is not attributable to an infant.—Putnam v. Tinkler, 83 Mich. 628.

¶ 192. The incompetency that will exonerate a complainant from the consequences of his own laches must be an incapacity of mind preventing him from realizing the nature and consequences of the fraud upon him, or an incapacity of action precluding him from taking the necessary steps to right the wrong inflicted upon him.—Wright v. Fisher, 65 Mich. 275.

§ 54. ——Persons in possession.

¶ 193. Neither the statute of limitations nor laches bars the claim of one who takes possession of and continues to occupy and improve land under his father's agreement that he should have it as an advancement, the father executing a deed which was accidentally lost before being delivered or recorded.—Michie v. Ellair, 54 Mich. 518.

¶ 194. A delay of five years by a party in possession in filing a bill to obtain the legal title will not bar his equity where nothing has been lost by the other party in consequence.—Boyce v. Danz, 29 Mich. 146.

¶ 195. A vendee of a contract for the purchase of land is not guilty of such laches as will prevent him from specifically enforcing the contract against the heirs and legatees of the vendor where during all the time between the execution of the contract and the filing of suit he had been in possession of the land, and such possession was known to all interested parties, and he had never made any demand for a deed nor made tender of the price until the suit was filed, when it appears that such demand would have been unavailing.—Detroit United Ry. v. Smith, 144 Mich. 235.

¶ 196. Where land was conveyed to a township for a road in consideration of the closing of another highway, without the deed being recorded, and subsequently the new road was abandoned and the old one reopened, held, on the recording of the deed many years later by the township, that the grantor suing to quiet title could not be charged with laches, where he took possession of the land described in the deed on the abandonment of the road and had been in practically undisputed possession for more than sixteen years.—Hodges v. Township of West Bloomfield, 186 Mich. 259.

§ 55. Notice of knowledge as basis.

¶ 197. Laches in moving to set aside proceedings of which notice should be given cannot be imputed to the moving party if he has not been notified.—McCrickett v. Wilson, 50 Mich. 513.

¶ 198. The lapse of time which will make a claim in equity stale cannot begin until something has happened on which to base the claim; as in case of a breach of trust, no matter how long the trust has been in operation.—Chadwick v. Chadwick, 59 Mich. 87.

¶ 199. Laches is not chargeable for failure to institute proceedings in equity to satisfy a decree from the proceeds of property fraudulently transferred and sold, so long as the proceedings of the transferees are kept secret.—Reeg v. Burnham, 55 Mich. 39.

¶ 200. The fact that a ward did not begin suit to enforce a mortgage released by his alleged guardian until four years after becoming of age is not laches where he did not learn of the mortgage until shortly before the bill was filed.—Olmstead v. Taylor, 126 Mich. 316.

¶ 201. The failure of a woman and her minor children to assert ownership to the extent of their interest as legatees of a deceased shareholder in the property of a corporation that had sold all its assets by a sale void as to them, does not amount to laches, where suit was brought soon after the discovery of the true condition of the testator's estate, and the invalidity of such sale.—Marsh v. Breen Iron Co., 181 Mich. 204.

§ 56. ——Concealment or breach of trust.

Concealment of fraud or trust as suspending limitations, see Limitations, III.

¶ 202. Where the delay on the part of a cestui que trust in asserting his equitable title to lands arose from the trustee's fault, he was held not barred by laches.—Loring v. Palmer, 118 U. S. 321, 30 L. ed. 211, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1073.

¶ 203. Delay in commencing proceedings to avoid a fraudulent sale by an assignee for creditors is excused by the conduct of the assignor and assignee colluding by fictions and transfers to hide the facts.—Morrison v. Mayer, 63 Mich. 238.

¶ 204. Under the particular circumstances of the case it was held that laches was not imputable to a deceased partner's representatives in pressing their claims for an accounting against the surviving partner who was a trustee and had fraudulently administered the trust for his own benefit.—Perrin v. Lepper, 72 Mich. 454.

¶ 205. A bill to rescind a contract for an exchange of property, whereby a plaintiff acquired stock in a bank which subsequently became insolvent, based upon the ground of fraud, is barred by laches, where the complainant does not act until more than two and one-half years have elapsed since he became a director in the bank and nearly a year after the bank has become insolvent, there being no excuse for the laches except reliance upon untruthful statements of other officers of the bank, as a director is bound under the law to acquaint himself with the affairs of the bank and its condition, especially where it appears that the rescission was not sought until an assessment was ordered against the stock.—Earle v. Humphrey, 121 Mich. 518.

§ 57. Persons entitled to urge laches.

Against whom laches may be urged, see ante §§ 53, 54.

¶ 206. "The law of laches should be used as a shield and not a sword."—Barron v. Myers, 146 Mich. 510.

¶ 207. Lapse of time is not ground for demurring to a bill, the object of which is to obtain payment on a land contract; it tells against the purchaser who has failed to demand a conveyance, rather than the seller. —Day v. Cole, 56 Mich. 294.

¶ 208. Rights are not lost by laches of the owner as against persons claiming only under a forged deed.—Crawford v. Hoeft, 58 Mich. 1.

¶ 209. Not commencing proceedings to enforce the priority of a mortgage over a deed made later, but recorded earlier, is not laches as against a grantee with notice where the mortgagee has always asserted such priority, where he has been guilty of no misconduct, and where he has appeared in a suit brought by the purchaser from the grantee to cancel the mortgage; especially where the grantee threatened suit but never commenced it.—Cook v. French, 96 Mich. 525.

¶ 210. An administrator cannot set up the defense of laches to an action by heirs for an accounting and to set aside a deed to a contingent interest in land wrongfully secured from them by the administrator for his son, and from which he benefited, the deed being made without consideration and without knowledge of the true significance thereof, where the delay worked no wrong nor changes prejudicial to him.—Parks v. Brooks, 188 Mich. 645.

V. PROCEDURE IN GENERAL.

§ 58. In general.

[Note. The treatment followed in this digest is to divide the procedure of courts into specific topics, such as those hereinafter referred to. Under the Judicature Act, as the procedure in equity assimilates to that at law, it is very important to treat both together as far as possible, and that has been done.]

Parties, pleadings, hearing, and decisions, see post, VI-X.

Interlocutory proceedings, see post, IX (cross-references).

Rehearing and bills of revivor, supplement and review, see post, XI.

Prayer for process under old practice, see post § 92a.

Dismissal of cause without decision or prejudice, either voluntary or involuntary, see post, X, A.

Leave to file petition or bill after decree, see post, XI.

Rules of court regulating practice, power of courts to make, see Courts, III.

Filing bill as commencement of suit, see also Actions § 6.

Appearance and process, see Appearance; Process.

Appearance in law action, effect on related chancery suit, see Appearance § 12, ¶ 55.

Abatement of actions and suits and revival of them, see generally Abatement.

Effect of death of party, see Abatement §§ 2, 3, 17.

Doctrine that pending suit will not abate action at law, and vice versa, see also Abatement § 12.

Failure of bill for ancillary relief by abatement in respect of principal matter of relief, see also Abatement ¶ 24.

Transfer of cause to law calendar, see Calendar § 7.

Transfer on appeal from equity to law or law to equity, see Appeal § 498.

Chancery procedure in contempts, see Contempt, III.

Denial of relief or recognition to party in contempt, see Contempt § 43.

Continuances and practice thereon, see Continuances.

Proceedings for discovery or for production and submission of books and papers to inspection, see Discovery.

Notice of lis pendens and filing of same, see Lis Pendens.

Procedure on paying money into court, see Payment, I, B.

Stipulations in general, see Stipulations.

Procedure to appoint guardians ad litem, see Guardians ad Litem.

Practice in making case for appeal and in taking appeal, see Appeal, VI et seq.

Errors regarded as harmless or as cured and therefore not ground for reversal of decree, see Harmless Error.

Powers of judges and court commissioners, see Courts, V; Judges, II.

Constitutional direction to abolish distinctions between law and equity proceedings "as far as practicable," see Const. art. VII, § 5.

Legislative direction to supreme court to make rules for abolishment of distinctions and simplification of proceedings, see Jud. Act, chap. I, § 14; Comp. L. 1915, § 12019.

Mode of commencing suits in equity, see Jud. Act, chap. XIII, § 5; Comp. L. 1915, § 12408.

Form and contents of chancery summons, see 1916 C. C. Rule 19.

Statutory provision for transfer from equity to law side, see Jud. Act, chap. XI, § 2; Comp. L. 1915, § 12351.

¶ 211. A complainant seeking to set aside the rules of the court will be required to make as strong a case as a defendant to set aside a default.—Thayer v. Swift, W. 384.

§ 59. Notices, motions and orders.

Motion to dismiss as a substitute for demurrer, see post § 112.

Motion and showing for leave to amend and order on motion, see post §§ 139, 140.

Practice on motions to dismiss without decision, see post § 197.

Proper practice by motion and showing to reopen cause for further proofs, see post § 173.

Application and notice to enter final decree, see post § 203.

Right of appearing defendant to have notice of application for entry of decree, see post § 203.

Necessity of notice of petition for leave to file bill of review, see post § 244.

Services of notices other than process, see Notices; Motions and Orders.

Motions and orders in general, and notices of motion, see Motions and Orders.

Notice of motion in foreclosure for deficiency judgment, see Foreclosure, VI.

Publication of orders and notices to creditors to present claims, see Jud. Act, chap. XIX, § 1; Comp. L. 1915, § 12655.

Signature of attorney to special motions, see 1916 C. C. Rule 15.

¶ 212. Notice of a proceeding in a chancery suit, if not signed by the solicitor nor by his authority, and not emanating from his office, may be disregarded; and testimony taken under such a notice may properly be suppressed.—McClintock v. Laing, 22 Mich. 212.

¶ 213. A defendant who has appeared in the cause is entitled by statute (Comp. L. 1857, § 3500) to notice of all subsequent proceedings. And where the rules fix the period of notice, such notice should in all cases be given.—Jenny v. O'Flynn, 5 Mich. 215.

§ 60. ——Entry of orders and further proceedings.

¶ 214. After the overruling of the plea in a case, it is irregular to proceed with the cause until an order overruling the plea has been entered.—Connor v. Jochen, 171 Mich. 69.

¶ 215. Irregularities in proceeding with a cause after overruling of plea and before the entering of an order overruling the plea has been entered, and in entering an order pro confesso without giving notice thereof, are waived when the defendant for other reasons moves to vacate the order pro confesso and for leave to answer.—Connor v. Jochen, 171 Mich. 69.

§ 61. Affidavits.

Affidavits on application for leave to file bill of review, see post §§ 244, 245.

Affidavits as extraneous to bill in testing same on demurrer, see post § 114.

Answer to bill as affidavit on motion, see post ¶ 665.

General law of affidavits, see Affidavits; Oaths.

Affidavit for appearance, see Process, II, C.

Entitling affidavits in name of suit, see Affidavits § 4.

Rule as to entitling affidavits in the cause, see 1916 C. C. Rule 3.

¶ 216. Affidavit in a chancery cause is not void because the jurat is signed by the "deputy register" as the officer who administered the oath. Where he holds his position by virtue of being deputy clerk, who is an officer known to the law and authorized as such to administer oaths, the subscription "deputy register" instead of "deputy clerk" may be regarded as a mere mistake in legal designation. Whether the deputy register is not, as such, a legal official, quære.—Torrans v. Hicks, 32 Mich. 307.

VI. PARTIES.

§ 62. In general; necessary and proper parties.

[Note. Under the present statutes the selection and alignment of parties is primarily based on an inquiry "To whom does the right of action or defense pertain?" The answer to this is in the substantive law, and the specific topics should always be consulted in the portions dealing with the right to sue or the persons liable.]

Persons regarded as parties, see post § 64.

Party required to verify bill by several, see post ¶ 238.

Bills of revivor and supplement to bring in other parties, see post §§ 233-239.

Parties to bill of review, see post § 248.

General law of parties, see Parties.

Capacity to sue or to defend, see Infants, VII; Insane Persons, V; Husband and Wife, VI; Corporations, XIX.

Necessity for guardian ad litem or next friend, see Guardians ad Litem, I; Infants, VII; Insane Persons, V; Husband and Wife, VI.

Trustee as representative of cestui que trust, see Trusts, IX; and see Former Adjudication, V.

Right of taxpayer or taxpayers to sue on behalf of public or in own right to restrain illegal action, see Injunctions, II, D, V; Municipal Corporations, XVI, A; Townships, VIII; Taxes, X.

Statutory intervention, see Parties.

Leave to sue or intervene in receivership suits or proceedings, see Receivers, IV, C.

Necessary and proper parties in the various chancery proceedings, see specific topics treating of equitable remedies and rights, e. g., Accounting Suits § 8; Appeal, IV; Assignments, IV; Assignments for Creditors § 36; Chattel Mortgages § 123; Combinations and Monopolies § 9; Corporations, XIX (and references there found); Creditors' Suits, II; Divorce, VI; Dower, VI, B; Drains, II, G; Easements, V; Eminent Domain, IX; Estates of Decedents, V, B, XI, XII, XIII; Executions, X; Foreclosure, III, V, VI; Forestry, III (lien proceedings); Fraud, III; Fraudulent Conveyances, V; Garnishment, XI (interpleader proceedings); Guaranty, IV; Guardianship, IV; Highways, II, B, XI; Homesteads, VIII, IX; Husband and Wife, VI; Infants, VII; Injunctions, V; Insane Persons, V; Indemnity and Contribution, III; Insurance, XX; Interpleader; Judgments, VI, XII; Liens; Local Improvements, VII; Marriage, IV (annulment suits); Mechanics' Liens, VIII, B; Mortgages, IX (accounting and redemption); Municipal Corporations, XVI, A; Negotiable Instruments, XIV; Nuisances, III; Partition, II; Partnership, VI, VII, E; Pledges, III; Quieting Title, III; Railroads, VI (foreclosures); Receivers; Reformation, III; Rescission, VI; Specific Performance, IV; State of Michigan, V; Taxes, X-XII; Townships, VIII; Trusts, IX et seq.; Vendors and Purchasers, XI, XII; Wills, V, D, VI, J.

Statutory provisions as to suits against "unknown defendants," etc., see Jud. Act, chap. XII, § 20 et seq.; Comp. L. 1915, § 12371 et seq.

§ 63. Joinder and misjoinder and defects and substitutions.

Multifariousness of bills for misjoinder, see post § 73 et seq.

Averments as to reasons, see post § 86.

Sufficiency of excuse for nonjoinder, see also post ¶ 337.

Who may demur or object, see post § 94.

Mode of objection for misjoinder or nonjoinder, see post §§ 101, 102.

Time for objection to defects in parties, see post § 120.

Amendments of parties, see post § 129.

Dismissal for want of parties, see post § 190.

Dismissal of unnecessary or improper parties, see post § 195.

Necessity of bringing all parties to bill or in interest before court to make decree, see post § 202.
Leave to add necessary party on sustaining demurrer for defect in parties, see post § 211.
Omission of party as ground for rehearing, see post § 229.
Bills of supplement and revivor to bring in new parties or successors of original parties, see post, XI.
Cross-bills between codefendants, see post § 124.
Distinct and separate relief to different parties, see post § 214.
For proper joinders in particular suits, see Injunctions; Rescission; Specific Performance; and the like.
Statutory provisions for joining parties in equity and for impleading nonconsenting persons in joint interest as defendants, see Jud. Act, chap. XII, § 10; Comp. L. 1915, § 12361.
Statutory provision that suits shall not be defeated by nonjoinder or misjoinder, see Jud. Act, chap. XII, § 13; Comp. L. 1915, § 12364.
Effect of assignment of subject-matter of suit, substitution of assignee, see 1916 C. C. Rule 57.

§ 64. Who regarded as parties.

Identification of parties otherwise than by prayer for process, see post ¶ 350.

¶ 217. The parties defendant in a bill of complaint are those against whom process of subpoena is prayed. Where such process is not prayed against a defendant in his representative character he cannot be regarded as sued in that character.—Pardridge v. Brennan, 64 Mich. 575.

¶ 218. A person cannot be regarded as a party to a suit who is not made one by the proceedings in the case, and does not appear in that character upon the record.—Michigan State Bank v. Hastings, 1 D. 225; Michigan State Bank v. Hammond, 1 D. 527.

VII. PLEADING.

[Note. Many of the older decisions on equity pleading have been rendered partly obsolete by the Judicature Act and the 1916 Circuit Court Rules. All such decisions have nevertheless been carefully retained because many of them have value as explaining the origin of the present practice. The section lines in this division have been worded, as far as possible, so as to conform to the present features of the practice with such further sections as were needed to care for the old matter.]

General law of pleading, see Pleading.
Divorce bills, cross-bills and answers, see Divorce, IV.

A. FORMAL MATTERS; CAPTION, TITLE, SIGNATURE AND VERIFICATION, AND FILING.

§ 65. In general; form and entitling service and filing.

Necessity, sufficiency, propriety and relevancy of substantial allegations, see post § 77 et seq.
Provisions as to entitling pleadings and stating venue, see Jud. Act, chap. XIV, § 3; Comp. L. 1915, § 12455.
Form and entitling of papers and pleadings to be filed, see 1916 C. C. Rule 3.
Indorsements on pleadings filed, see 1916 C. C. Rule 3.
Business address of attorney on papers served, see 1916 C. C. Rule 3.
Provisions for service of copies on appearing defendants, see Jud. Act, chap. XIV, § 5; Comp. L. 1915, § 12457.
Provisions as to service of copy of bill with process or thereafter, see Jud. Act, chap. XIII, § 6; Comp. L. 1915, § 12409.
Time for service of copy of bill, if not served with summons, see 1916 C. C. Rule 31, § 2.
Time and place for filings, see Jud. Act, chap. XIV, § 1; Comp. L. 1915, § 12453.

¶ 218a. The objection that after a discontinuance papers were wrongly entitled in the names of both defendants was held to be a mere technicality.—Howe v. Lemon, 47 Mich. 544.

§ 66. Signatures.

Signature to notices, see ante § 59.
Pleading signed by solicitor not in the case as nullity permitting default, see also Defaults ¶ 7.
Opening default taken notwithstanding improperly signed answer, see Defaults ¶ 86.
Answers in chancery by corporations, seal, signature and verification, see Corporations § 192.
Every pleading to be signed by party or attorney, see 1916 C. C. Rule 21, § 9.
Signature of attorney to petitions and special motions, see 1916 C. C. Rule 15.

¶ 219. A bill in equity, if not signed in person or with the responsible signature of counsel, appended by himself or by some authorized representative, may be stricken from the files. A printed signature is not good.—Eveland v. Stephenson, 45 Mich. 394.

¶ 220. The requirement that a bill in equity must be signed by counsel is obsolete in Michigan, where all solicitors are counsellors, and a bill signed by solicitor is not demurrable for want of counsel's signature.—Henry v. Gregory, 29 Mich. 68.

¶ 221. A petition was not signed by the petitioner, but was verified by an affidavit signed by her, which stated that she had read it, and knew its contents, and that it was true. Held sufficient.—Johnson v. Johnson, W. 309.

¶ 222. An answer must be signed, notwithstanding complainant has, by his bill, waived an answer under oath.—Kimball v. Ward, W. 439.

¶ 223. The lack of defendant's signature to his answer is a fatal defect on motion to strike from the files, if not waived by replication.—Bernier v. Bernier, 72 Mich. 43; reversed in 147 U. S. 242, 37 L. ed. 152, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 244.

¶ 224. The signature of the defendant to an answer, permitted to be filed at the hearing of a bill to foreclose a mortgage, containing no admission available to the complainant as evidence and not being evidence in the defendant's behalf, may be regarded as a mere formality which can be dispensed with.—Balen v. Mercier, 75 Mich. 42.

¶ 225. An answer to a bill of complaint need not be signed by the defendant personally where answer upon oath is waived in the bill, but may be signed by his solicitor, and a similar practice prevails even though the answer is one in the nature of a cross-bill. (1897 Chancery Rule 10, subd. e and Rule 1, subd. a.)—O'Donnell v. St. Clair Circuit Judge, 146 Mich. 442.

§ 67. Verification of bill or petition.

Signature to verifying affidavit as sufficient signature to bill, see ante ¶ 221.
Amendments to supply signatures and verifications, see post § 130.
Reverification of pleadings after amendment, see post § 143.
Verification of divorce bills, see Divorce § 48.
Noncollusion affidavit for interpleader bill, see Interpleader.
Necessity of verification of mechanics' liens bill, see Mechanics' Liens, VIII, B.
False verification of bill or answer as perjury, see Crimes §§ 115, 116.
Rules as to verifying chancery pleadings, see 1916 C. C. Rule 27.
Form of oath to verify pleading, see 1916 C. C. Rule 27, § 2.
Oath to bill against "unknown defendants," see Jud. Act, chap. XII, § 24, Comp. L. 1915, § 12375.

¶ 226. Bills in equity need not be verified in the absence of any statute or rule requiring it, except when preliminary relief is sought, or when it is sought to transfer into equity matters usually cognizable at law.—Moore v. Cheeseman, 23 Mich. 332.

¶ 227. In the absence of any statute or rule requiring it, a bill in chancery need not be verified except when preliminary relief is sought.—Wardle v. Cummings, 86 Mich. 395.

¶ 228. A bill need not be under oath, when no preliminary order is required, notwithstanding an answer on oath is not waived.—Atwater v. Kinman, H. 243.

¶ 229. Where an injunction bill is framed as a mere pleading to obtain relief only on a final hearing, and not to be used as the basis of an application for preliminary relief, and where the case exhibited is within the ordinary jurisdiction in equity, and stands on no peculiar ground which might call for a verification of the bill, the objection that it should be sworn to is unwarranted.—Robinson v. Baugh, 31 Mich. 290.

¶ 230. The failure to verify an injunction bill is of no importance except for the purposes of a motion for injunction.—Glidden v. Norvell, 44 Mich. 202.

¶ 231. A trustee of a religious corporation cannot get an immediate injunction against his cotrustees on an unsworn bill.—Cicott v. Anciaux, 53 Mich. 227.

¶ 232. The petition and answer thereto in a proceeding for execution for deficiency on foreclosure must be sworn to.—Ransom v. Sutherland, 46 Mich. 489; Wallace v. Field, 56 Mich. 3.

¶ 233. A bill cannot be filed to take into a court of chancery jurisdiction over a controversy of a legal nature without a verification of such facts as show its propriety.—Township of Lebanon v. Burch, 78 Mich. 641.

¶ 234. A bill seeking to restore a mortgage, a discharge of which is alleged to have been procured by fraud, should, in strictness, be verified.—Beal v. Congdon, 75 Mich. 77.

¶ 235. A bill to enforce a vendor's lien need not be verified.—Shaw v. Taylor, 146 Mich. 544.

§ 68. ——Of answer, cross-bill or plea.

Supplying by amendment, see post § 130.
Necessity of sworn answer to obtain opening of default, see Defaults § 38.

¶ 236. A bill seeking to have settled in equity matters capable of enforcement at law should be verified, and verification is required of an answer which asks such relief as if by cross-bill, under rule 123.—Bernier v. Bernier, 72 Mich. 43; reversed in 147 U. S. 242, 37 L. ed. 152, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 235.

¶ 237. A plea to a bill need not be verified where it sets up a public record of the same court in which the suit is pending.—Detroit, L. & N. R. Co. v. McCammon, 108 Mich. 368.

§ 69. ——Requisites and sufficiency.

¶ 238. The verification of a bill to enjoin the dissipation of an estate may be made by one or more of the complainants and need not be made by all of them.—Ewing v. Lamphere, 147 Mich. 659.

¶ 239. When a creditor's bill is verified by complainant's agent, who is not also solicitor of the complainant, the jurat should state the person to be the complainant's agent; but where it is verified by the oath of the solicitor the court will take notice of that fact from the records and proceedings in the cause.—Bergh v. Poupard, W. 5.

¶ 240. A bill asking for a preliminary injunction must be sworn to on personal knowledge of facts that will justify its issue, or reason must be shown for the absence of such verification.—Manistique Lumbering Co. v. Lovejoy, 55 Mich. 89; Toledo, A. A. & N. M. R. Co. v. Detroit, L. & N. R. Co., 61 Mich. 9.

§ 70. ——Waiver of sworn answer.

Effect of answer not under oath, see also post § 164a.

Waiver of sworn answer as preventing discovery, see Discovery § 4.

Waiver of sworn answer as affecting right to accounting, see Accounting Suits ¶ 9.

Statutory provision for waiver of answer on oath and effect of answer so waived, see Jud. Act, chap. XIV, § 6; Comp. L. 1915, § 12458.

Rule requiring sworn answer if demanded by sworn bill, and effect of bill and answer as evidence, see 1916 C. C. Rule 25.

¶ 241. Under 1897 Chancery Rule 10, subd. a, providing that "whenever in a cause a sworn bill of complaint is filed, and a sworn answer demanded, the defendant shall be required to file such sworn answer," an answer under oath must be deemed to be waived in all cases except where a sworn bill is filed and a sworn answer demanded.—World Mfg. Co. v. Kent Circuit Judge, 115 Mich. 652.

¶ 242. 1897 Chancery Rule 10, providing that answer must be sworn when demanded by a sworn bill is not in conflict with How. St., § 6621 (Comp. L. 1897, § 443), which provides that "when a bill shall be filed in chancery, other than for discovery only, the complainant may waive the answer's being made on the oath of the defendant, and in such cases the answer may be made without oath, and shall have no other or greater force as evidence than the bill," since the statute does not in terms prescribe the manner in which waiver of an oath may be made.—World Mfg. Co. v. Kent Circuit Judge, 115 Mich. 652.

B. BILL, PETITION OR INFORMATION.

§ 71. Bill or petition as proper initial pleading.

Petition for relief or bill of review as proper practice to open decree, see also post ¶ 891.

Supplemental petition to make supplemental decree on matters reserved by original decree, see also post ¶ 895.

Petition for rehearing or bill, see post ¶ 918.

When information by attorney general is requisite or proper, see post § 72.

Petition or bill in suit to enforce rights in assignments, see Assignments for Creditors §§ 36-40.

¶ 243. A petition may be presented either in a case, or in a matter over which the court has jurisdiction under some act of the legislature or some other special authority.—Southern Michigan Nat. Bank v. Byles, 67 Mich. 296.

¶ 244. Proceedings in regard to the administration of a trust must be begun by bill of complaint, not by petition.—Ledyard's Appeal, 51 Mich. 623.

¶ 245. A judgment creditor of a cestui que trust who seeks to enforce payment out of the surplus income of the fund held in trust for the latter may present his case as well by petition as by original bill.—Spring v. Randall, 107 Mich. 103.

§ 72. Bill or information as proper practice.

Information or bill as better procedure to restrain county action at suit of attorney general, see Counties ¶ 217.

¶ 246. Where the attorney general has a right to intervene to restrain unauthorized corporate action the regular course for him is to proceed by information rather than by a bill in equity.—Attorney General ex rel. Lockwood v. Moliter, 26 Mich. 444.

¶ 247. A pleading filed as an information, though having many of the features of a bill, cannot be sustained as a bill when dismissed as an information; the attorney general failing by his information to make out a case on behalf of the public cannot bring the relator forward as orator at the hearing; and there can be no bill of complaint without a complainant.—Attorney General ex rel. Muskegon Booming Co. v. Evart Booming Co., 34 Mich. 462.

§ 73. Multifariousness; joinder and severance of causes.

Distinct parties improperly joined, see post § 74.

Distinct causes improperly joined, see post § 75.

Prayer for diverse kinds of relief, see post § 76.

Necessity that bill be consistent with itself, see also post § 78.

Inconsistency introduced by amendment, see post § 150.

Proper mode of taking objection for multifariousness, see post § 101.

Waiver of objection by delay in making it, see post §§ 119, 120.

Multifariousness of bills for specific relief praying other relief or impleading other parties, see also specific topics.

Multifariousness of bill in aid of execution and creditor's bill, see also Creditors' Suits § 2.

Multifariousness of bill for partition of dower and accountings of personalty, see also Dower ¶ 113.
Joining in injunction and nuisance bills, see Injunctions, III; Nuisances, III.
Joining in bills for relief from taxes, see Taxes, VI, X.
Statutory rule for joinder of all causes in one action except legal and equitable in same cause, see Jud. Act, chap. VIII, § 1; Comp. L. 1915, § 12309.

¶ 248. Under Pub. Acts 1915, No. 314, chap. VIII, § 1, providing that the plaintiff may join in one action, at law or in equity, as many causes of action as he may have against the defendant, a court of equity has power in divorce proceedings to adjust the property rights of the parties and to compel an accounting by the husband of money of the wife in his hands.—Stanton v. Stanton, 197 Mich. 161.

¶ 249. The general question of multifariousness discussed at length.—Wales v. Newbould, 9 Mich. 45.

¶ 250. While multifariousness cannot be well defined, yet to hold a bill multifarious the court must be able to see that disconnected and independent causes of action are brought upon the record, requiring different and independent decrees, or that defendant is brought upon the record with a portion of which he has no connection, or in which different complainants have no common interest. It sometimes, therefore, means misjoinder of causes of action and sometimes misjoinder of parties.—Wales v. Newbould, 9 Mich. 45, per Martin, C. J.

¶ 251. A bill in equity that seeks adjudication upon distinct and discordant interests is demurrable for multifariousness.—Taylor v. King, 32 Mich. 42.

¶ 252. To determine whether a bill is multifarious, we must look to the starting point rather than to the prayer; for if the complainant asks for several things, to some of which his case would entitle him and others not, he may have at the hearing that relief which is consistent with the case stated.—Hammond v. Michigan State Bank, W. 214.

¶ 253. A bill is multifarious which seeks to join causes of action that do not arise out of the same wrong, affecting all the complainants at once as well as similarly.—Winslow v. Jenness, 64 Mich. 84; Jenness v. Smith, 64 Mich. 91.

¶ 254. Different causes of complaint of the same nature, and between the same parties, may be united in one suit where the same relief is asked.—Hart v. McKeen, W. 417.

¶ 255. What constitutes multifariousness is largely left to discretion guided by the circumstances of the suit; so considered with reference to a bill seeking to foreclose four different mortgages.—Torrent v. Hamilton, 95 Mich. 159.

¶ 256. Courts of equity will not encourage the splitting of causes of action and needless litigation.—German American Seminary v. Kiefer, 43 Mich. 105; Vincent v. Moore, 51 Mich. 618.

¶ 257. A complainant may, if he chooses, make distinct controversies on the same matter the subjects of separate suits.—Bonker v. Charlesworth, 33 Mich. 81.

¶ 258. The validity of a mortgage and the regularity of a statutory foreclosure of it may be made the subjects of distinct suits.—Bonker v. Charlesworth, 33 Mich. 81.

§ 74. ——Joinder of parties distinct in interest.

Joining distinct causes, see post § 75.
Praying diverse relief, see post § 76.
Proper mode of objecting for misjoinder, see post § 102.

¶ 259. A bill is not multifarious where it is single as to its subject-matter and object and relief sought, and all the defendants are connected, though differently, with the whole subject-matter in dispute, and, when the object is to establish and obtain relief for one claim in which all of the defendants may be interested, although the defendants may have different and separate interests.—Buck v. Lockwood, 193 Mich. 242.

¶ 260. A bill by a trustee in bankruptcy against the officers and directors of bankrupt and a creditor to reach property fraudulently conveyed under a conspiracy with the creditor, a bank, to have notes of the bankrupt due the bank on which such officers were accommodation makers, sureties or indorsers, canceled and paid in preference to the claims of other creditors held not to be multifarious, as the grounds of liability all reach the same subject-matter, and are in no way distinct from each other, and the defendants are all connected in interest and liable in the one subject.—Johnson v. Harrison, 199 Mich. 221.

¶ 261. Several different things, having no connection with each other, and requiring different decrees, cannot be demanded of several defendants by one bill.—Ingersoll v. Kirby, W. 65; Cart v. McKeen, W. 417.

¶ 262. A bill filed to quiet complainant's title to lands, which makes persons defendants whose claims to the land are in no way connected, is multifarious.—Hunton v. Platt, 11 Mich. 264.

¶ 263. Where the interests of complainants are several and not joint they must be severally enforced.—Walsh v. Varney, 38 Mich. 73.

¶ 264. Matters in which there is no common interest on the one side or the other cannot be litigated jointly.—Bruner v. Bay City, 46 Mich. 236.

¶ 265. A bill to enjoin the collection of a tax is multifarious if a portion of the errors complained of affect a part only of the complainants.—Kerr v. Lansing, 17 Mich. 34.

¶ 266. Where the matter in litigation is entire in itself, it is not necessary that each defendant should have an interest in the suit coextensive with the claim set up by the bill: he may have an interest in a part of the matter in litigation instead of the whole. —Ingersoll v. Kirby, W. 65.

¶ 267. Plaintiffs in separate actions, in which executions against the same defendant were simultaneously levied, are collectively and ratably interested in the levy, and are proper cocomplainants in a bill in aid of such execution.—First Nat. Bank of St. Johns v. Tyler, 55 Mich. 297.

¶ 268. A bill against a county drain commissioner and the highway commissioners of two townships to restrain the flooding of complainant township's highways, is not open to the objection of multifariousness if the defendants in their several capacities are concerned in maintaining a watercourse which endangers plaintiff's highways and bridges.—Township of Merritt v. Harp, 131 Mich. 174.

¶ 269. Where several parties are joined as complainants the bill must make a common cause for complainants throughout, or it will be multifarious.—Kerr v. City of Lansing, 17 Mich. 34; Brunner v. Bay City, 46 Mich. 236; Winslow v. Jenness, 64 Mich. 84; Jenness v. Smith, 64 Mich. 91.

¶ 270. A bill for the foreclosure of mortgage securities is not bad for multifariousness because it includes with the mortgagors, subsequent mortgagees, grantees and guarantors, and others who have given additional security where all the parties included are interested in the subject-matter and all the agreements secure the debt.—Miller v. McLaughlin, 132 Mich. 234.

¶ 271. A bill of complaint alleging that a deed was given the complainant as security for a debt due a copartnership, which had not been paid nor any proceeding at law taken to collect it, and making the members of such copartnership defendants, does not state two distinct causes of action, and therefore is not multifarious.—Bennett v. Clark, 181 Mich. 690.

¶ 272. A bill averring that the defendants as individuals owed the complainant money on the purchase price of certain lands sold by the complainant to the defendants, that the complainant owed the defendants as partners certain commissions for the sale of the complainant's land, and praying that their accounts be settled and that the defendants be enjoined from prosecuting a suit against the complainant for such commissions, and that certain debtors of the complainant who were garnished therein, be ordered to pay to the complainant the amount they owed it, and for injunctive relief in a suit brought by a third party against the defendants, in which the complainant was garnished, by ordering that the money so garnished be released from garnishment and applied to the settlement of complainant's account with the defendants as individuals and as partners, held not multifarious, since the complainant did not seek to compel such third party and the defendants to litigate their claims in the suit in which the bill was filed and no interference in the suit between such parties was sought.—Long Point Development Ass'n v. McIntosh, 193 Mich. 567.

§ 75. ——Distinct causes.

Bill by distinct parties, see ante § 74.

¶ 273. Where several liens are asserted, and each rests on its own facts, and none is complicated with the rights of third persons, and the only question in common is the validity of the law under which they are made, they cannot properly be disposed of in one litigation upon a bill in equity that is not a bill of peace or a bill to prevent multiplicity of actions.—Southern Michigan Cedar & Lumber Co. v. McDonald, 57 Mich. 292.

¶ 274. A bill seeking to hold several defendants for separate individual frauds is demurrable for misjoinder.—Woodruff v. Young, 43 Mich. 548.

¶ 275. A bill by distinct mill owners to restrain the operation of an upper dam which obstructs their right of flowage below is not multifarious.—Cornwell Mfg. Co. v. Swift, 89 Mich. 503.

¶ 276. A bill may be so framed as to unite a cause to aid an execution with one to reach property not open to execution.—Vanderpool v. Notley, 71 Mich. 422.

¶ 277. Where one of the complainants as pastor, and another as presiding elder, are entitled to the use of a church building for the purpose of conducting divine worship, the pastor being, moreover, entitled to the use of the parsonage in connection with the church, while the rest of the complainants are entitled to the use of the church for the purpose of worship according to its discipline and usages, it cannot be said that a bill is multifarious which seeks as common relief to restrain defendants (all of whom, except one who assumes to be pastor of the church, are trustees thereof) from interfering with the rights and duties of the pastor and presiding elder, from withholding funds, taking collections, paying salary to defendant pastor, or him from acting as minister. —Fuchs v. Meisel, 102 Mich. 357.

¶ 278. A bill by the owners of numerous separate lots, who derive their titles from the same source, to enjoin one claiming a dower interest therein from instituting separate ejectment suits against them to recover such interest, and from prosecuting suits already instituted, is multifarious.—Douglass v. Boardman, 113 Mich. 618.

¶ 279. A bill to set aside a conveyance made by an insane person and to vacate various mortgages given by the grantee is not multifarious in impleading mortgagees who have diverse interests, if the question of sanity is decisive in all cases.—Rogers v. Blackwell, 49 Mich. 192.

¶ 280. A bill is multifarious that seeks to compel an accounting as to the management of an estate, and to enforce complainant's right as devisee, and which charges the executrix with fraud in obtaining from complainant a deed of property, and a codefendant with individual frauds.—Woodruff v. Young, 43 Mich. 548.

¶ 281. Where a creditor seeks to set aside numerous conveyances made by the debtor, in order to accomplish a single object, viz., the satisfaction of his judgment out of the property so conveyed, the bill is not multifarious.—Hulbert v. Detroit Cycle Co., 107 Mich. 81.

§ 76. ——Prayer for diverse kinds of relief.

Bills with double aspect, see post § 78.

¶ 282. A bill is not rendered multifarious by the fact that different kinds of specific relief are asked in relation to the same subject-matter, against the same parties, and in favor of the same persons.—Densmore v. Savage, 110 Mich. 27.

¶ 283. A bill is not rendered multifarious by the introduction of averments and prayer for relief based thereon, to which complainants are not entitled.—Stone v. Pontiac, O. & N. R. Co., 139 Mich. 265.

¶ 284. Though the prayer in a bill is not controlling in determining the question of multifariousness, it is to be considered.—Stone v. Pontiac, O. & N. R. Co., 139 Mich. 265.

¶ 285. A bill is not rendered multifarious if, in addition to stating a case for equitable relief, it contains allegations with reference to another matter, but insufficient to entitle complainant to relief with reference thereto.—Wheeler v. Ocker & Ford Mfg. Co., 162 Mich. 204.

¶ 286. An amendment to a bill of complaint and the prayer thereof held not to render the bill multifarious.—Antoszewski v. City Plumbing Co., 185 Mich. 215.

¶ 287. Where a mortgagee had filed his bill not only for the foreclosure of the mortgage, but also for the correction of the description in the deed by which the land was conveyed to his mortgagor, and sought also to litigate thereby the rights of other parties who claimed adversely to the mortgage, it was held that the bill was not demurrable for multifariousness.—Cummings v. Freer, 26 Mich. 128.

¶ 288. A prayer for declaring a deed to be a mortgage and for foreclosure and sale as an independent remedy is inconsistent with a bill framed to aid proceedings in ejectment by asserting an equitable estoppel against the paper title of defendant and enjoining the making of defense on his paper title; and makes the bill multifarious and demurrable; and if it contains no other requisites of a foreclosure bill it will not support a foreclosure decree.—Livingston v. Hayes, 43 Mich. 129.

¶ 289. A bill is multifarious if filed by complainant as sole attaching creditor to avoid a transaction which, as a general creditor, he seeks to treat as a statutory assignment.—Rollins v. Van Baalen, 56 Mich. 610.

¶ 290. A bill filed to set aside a partition for the fraud of the commissioners appointed to make it may properly ask that the relief be extended to the abrogation of the order by which the commissioners were appointed. —Adair v. Cummin, 48 Mich. 375.

¶ 291. A bill in chancery for partition of lands held in common set forth that defendant had purchased the lands at sales for taxes, which purchases were claimed to be void; and discovery was prayed with respect thereto, and that the same be declared void. Held, that the bill was not multifarious.—Page v. Webster, 8 Mich. 263.

¶ 292. Where a bill is filed to restrain prosecution of an ejectment suit and to declare a boundary line and to correct a mistake in a party wall agreement, an amendment, praying for the same relief as asked in the original bill excepting that the setting aside of the deed instead of the reformation is asked, is not multifarious where in either case it is asked that the legal rights of the parties be declared in the same terms. —Eberle v. Heaton, 124 Mich. 205.

¶ 293. A bill is not multifarious in asking to have testimony in regard to a title perpetuated, and to have cloud upon such title removed.—Cleland v. Casgrain, 92 Mich. 139.

¶ 294. The fact that the statute providing for the maintenance of bills to remove clouds from title does not authorize the assessment of damages in such a suit does not render such a bill multifarious because it embodies a claim for damages, since complainant would be entitled to such relief only as is consistent with the case stated in the bill.—Wight v. Roethlisberger, 116 Mich. 241.

¶ 295. A bill by the owners of land alleging that they delivered an abstract to one of the defendants, an attorney, for examination: that such attorney advised them that the title was defective and that a bill to quiet title should be filed; that he filed suit against a person who had no title and set out a former chancery proceeding by another person against the defendant in the suit to quiet title and set up that such defendant had ceased to have title because she made no tender; that, as a result of a conspiracy between the attorneys for both parties a decree was rendered in favor of the defendant in the suit to quiet title; that complainant's attorney without authority satisfied the decree and fixed title in the defendant; that complainant's attorney secured a deed to the premises in the name of his mother-in-law, another defendant, and acted as agent in the sale of lots to other defendants; that such attorney in furtherance of the conspiracy refused to allow an appeal from the decree and advised complainant that she had an adequate remedy on her warranty deed; that in pursuance of such conspiracy à suit was brought against the grantor and discontinued after considerable expense to complainant, and praying that title be declared to be in her; that the decree in the suit to quiet title and the subsequent deeds be set aside; that complainant's former attorney be compelled to deliver an abstract of title, repay money paid for services, and that the attorneys for defendant in the suit to quiet title be required to pay the expenses of complainant in the latter suit, in the proceedings against the grantor and in the instant suit, including an attorney's fees, held not to be multifarious, and to set out a case of flagrant fraud.—Kaniak v. Pokorney, 198 Mich. 567. (Ostrander, J., dissenting.)

§ 77. Necessity and sufficiency of averments in general.

Occasion, propriety, contents, and sufficiency of cross-bills, see post, VII, D.

Of averments in answer, see post § 106 et seq.

Propriety of and manner of amendments, see post, VII, E.

Formal matters, caption, signature, verification, etc., see ante, VII, A.

Necessity and sufficiency of verification, see ante §§ 67-69.

Necessity of positive allegations, see post § 78.

Impropriety of hypothetical allegations, see post ¶ 305.

Irrelevancy and impertinency of matter, see post §§ 80-82.

Sufficiency of bill on objection for variance, see post § 161.

Necessity that decree conform to bill, see post § 208.

Sufficiency of bill to sustain granting of complete relief, see post § 221.

Dismissal for informality or defect in pleading, see post § 192.

Disregarding technical and clerical errors, see post § 123; and see Harmless Error.

Amendment of bills, see post § 126 et seq.

Averments and sufficiency of bills of review, see post § 247.

Matters common to pleadings whether at law or in equity, see Pleading.

Pleading adverse possession, see Adverse Possession, V.

Pleading limitations, see Limitations, VII.

Pleading duress, see Duress § 6.

Pleading fraud, see Fraud, III.

Pleading mistake and accident, see Mistake.

Pleading and urging estoppel in pais, see Estoppel, III.

Pleading statute of frauds, see Frauds, Statute of, IV.

Pleading conditions in foreclosure suits, see Foreclosure, III, C.

Necessary allegations to obtain discovery, see Discovery § 4.

Averments in bill for equitable relief from drain proceedings, see Drains § 99.

Averments in foreclosure bills, see Foreclosure, III, C.

In bills to remove highway obstructions, see Highways, XI.

In bills to assert, protect or set out homestead, see Homesteads, VIII, IX.

In suits for contribution and exoneration, see Indemnity, III.

In injunction suits, see Injunctions, III.

In interpleader bills, see Interpleader; Insurance, XX.

In suits for relief from or enforcement of judgments, see Judgments, VI, XII.

In suits to enforce liens, see Liens; Mechanics' Liens, VIII, B; Foreclosure, III, C; Forestry, III (log liens); Vendors and Purchasers, XI.

In bills to redeem or to establish mortgage and for accounting, see Mortgages, IX.

In actions by, against or affecting municipalities, see Municipal Corporations, XVI, A.

In suits for nuisance, see Nuisances, III.

In partition suits, see Partition, II.

In suits by, against or involving partnerships, see Partnership, VI, VII, E.

In suits based on pledges, see Pledges, III.

In suits under Swamp Land Grants or in respect to other public lands, see Public Lands.

In suits to quiet title, see Quieting Title, III.

In reformation bills, see Reformation, III.

In rescission and cancellation suits, see Rescission, VI.

In suits to annul tax sales, see Taxes, XII, C.

In suits to establish, enforce or protect trusts, see Trusts, IX et seq.

Rules of pleading of general application, see 1916 C. C. Rule 21, ¶ 2 et seq.

Matters to be set forth in bill, see 1916 C. C. Rule 24.

[Note. By the New Federal Equity Rules, No. 18, the technical forms of pleadings in equity are abolished. Rule No. 25 prescribes what the bill shall contain and how it shall be stated. Rule 26 regulates joinder of causes, Rule 29 abolishes demurrers and pleas, and Rule 30 regulates the answers. The decisions of the federal courts made under these rules should prove instructive in Michigan practice, because of the great similarity in the rules to those of the Michigan circuit courts. Editor.]

¶ 296. Complainant in equity must so state his case in his bill that if admitted by answer or proved at the hearing the court can decree upon it.—Fox v. Pierce, 50 Mich. 500.

¶ 297. The bill must state such a case that if admitted by the answer or proved at the hearing some relief can be decreed upon it.—Highstone v. Franks, 93 Mich. 52.

¶ 298. A bill should contain allegations of facts and not mere recitals of circumstantial evidence, and should show the theory on which complainant intends to rely.—Wilson v. Eggleston, 27 Mich. 257.

¶ 299. An averment is sufficient which necessarily covers with its language full information of the claim sought to be enforced.—Evans v. Grand Rapids, L. & D. R. Co., 68 Mich. 602.

§ 78. ——Doubleness, uncertainty and inconclusiveness.

Doubleness in pleas, see post § 111a.

Manner of taking objections for uncertainty, see post § 99.

In pleadings at law, see Pleading, I, II.

Positiveness of averments in pleadings to be verified, see 1916 C. C. Rule 27, § 2.

¶ 300. A bill with a double aspect must be consistent with itself. It should not set up different and distinct causes of complaint that destroy each other.—Hart v. McKeen, W. 417.

¶ 301. A bill alleged that defendant proceeded to manage the affairs of a feebleminded grantor and occupied a fiduciary relation to her; that he exercised undue influence over her; that by fraud and deceit he induced her to execute a deed to him, which was not delivered before her death; and that after her death he had said deed recorded and went into occupation of the premises knowing he had no right to them. Held, the bill was not demurrable on the ground that it presented the case in a double aspect and was not consistent.—Gragg v. Maynard, 164 Mich. 535.

¶ 302. Where a case has been prosecuted and decided on a bill that expressly alleged the invalidity of a trust deed, and sought to have it canceled as fraudulent, and as void for being in violation of a prior agreement to execute a will making a different disposition of the property deeded, it was held that the bill was not impeachable for inconsistency, though some of its averments seemed to have been framed on the theory of calling the trustees to account for dereliction of duty, and so of affirming the trust and demanding its execution.—Mundy v. Foster, 31 Mich. 313.

¶ 303. In case of a bill to quiet title an averment that, after he had conveyed certain adjoining premises referred to, the complainant never knew that he had any land left there until shortly before the filing of the bill, was held not so repugnant to an express allegation of possession as to exclude evidence that both were true, and could not be held bad on demurrer.—Howell v. Merrill, 30 Mich. 282.

¶ 304. Facts essential to the complainant's title to maintain his bill and obtain the relief must be alleged positively, and cannot be inferred from other facts stated.—Manning v. Drake, 1 Mich. 34.

¶ 305. An excuse for leaving, that "if the said H. left, etc., he did so upon a good, sufficient and justifiable cause," is too hypothetical and indefinite to answer any legitimate purpose in a pleading.—LeBaron v. Shepherd, 21 Mich. 263.

¶ 306. Where a bill for an accounting alleges that in certain transactions complainant paid to defendant large sums of money stated under a videlicit as amounting to a certain sum, the bill does not state that there is a definite sum due and does not show that complainant is fully informed as to the amount due.—Excelsior Wrapper Co. v. Yund, 176 Mich. 372.

§ 79. ——Descriptions of property, papers or rights.

Inconclusive or hypothetical or inferential pleading, see ante § 78.

¶ 307. The description of premises in a bill which is such as to point them out by a name well known, and which distinguishes them from others, is sufficient.—Goodenow v. Curtis, 18 Mich. 298.

¶ 308. By referring in the bill to a deed or other written instrument as follows: "as in and by the said indenture, reference being thereunto had, when produced, will more fully and at large appear"—the whole document referred to is made a part of the record, although not fully and accurately described in the bill; and the complainant may, at the hearing, avail himself of the portions not recited, as well as of those inaccurately set forth.—Swetland v. Swetland, 3 Mich. 482.

§ 80. Relevancy and propriety of allegations.

See also cross-references, ante under § 77.

Mode and sufficiency of allegations, see ante §§ 77-79.

Needlessness of proof of immaterial allegations, see post § 180.

Striking out irrelevant and scandalous matter, see post § 118.

Averments of excusing reasons for not answering irrelevant parts of bill, see post § 109.

Pleading evidence or conclusions of law, see post §§ 81, 82.

Denial of costs for scandal and impertinence, see Costs § 30.

¶ 309. Where a bill to enforce a vendor's lien joins as defendant a railroad company that has taken possession of a distinct part of the land sold, it properly alleges the obvious facts in regard to such defendant's possession, and prays an answer under oath disclosing the company's position with respect to the property and that the court ascertain its true relation to the contract.—Proctor v. Plumer, 112 Mich. 393.

¶ 310. The statement, in a bill to have a lost or destroyed deed restored, that a codicil in the grantor's will, under which certain legatees would claim title to the land involved except for complainant's prior title, was made in their favor and in no way expresses the wish of grantor, was germane to the main purpose of the suit, when alleged for the purpose of cutting off such claims; and the bill was not multifarious, although it asked that such codicil be set aside, which relief it was beyond the power of the court to grant.—Blackford v. Olmstead, 140 Mich. 583.

§ 81. ——Matters of evidence.

¶ 311. Evidence is not to be set out in a bill.—Hubbard v. McNaughton, 43 Mich. 220.

§ 82. ——Conclusions of law.

Conclusions of law in answers, see post § 107.

¶ 312. General statements in a bill bearing upon the legal effect of a devise which is set out are of no importance and cannot be the subject of an issue.—LeBaron v. Shepherd, 21 Mich. 263.

¶ 313. In a bill to establish title to certain ritualistic work and for an injunction, the allegations that the complainant is owner of the ritual, that it is entitled to use it and that it has amended its articles of association for that purpose, state facts rather than conclusions of law.—Great Hive, Ladies of the Maccabees v. Supreme Hive, Ladies of the Maccabees, 129 Mich. 324.

§ 83. Jurisdictional averments.

Pleading jurisdiction generally, see also Courts § 78.

¶ 314. The jurisdiction of the court of chancery cannot be predicated upon the prayer for relief, but must be based upon the allegations of fact in the information.—Attorney General ex rel. McRae v. Thompson, 167 Mich. 507.

¶ 315. An allegation that complainant believes she would be "hampered and limited in her proof by the strict rules of the common law," in an action at law, does not warrant the interposition of equity, the rules of evidence being the same at law as in chancery.—Pittman v. Burr, 79 Mich. 539.

¶ 316. A bill by the insured in a fire insurance company states a cause of action upon the insurance contract to be tried on the law side of the court and not in a court of equity, where such bill avers that the insured, through mistake and his ignorance of the English language, in his application for such insurance stated incorrectly that there was no incumbrance upon the property covered by the policy; that the existence of the mortgage upon such property in no manner contributed to the destruction thereof; that defendant was in no manner injured or defrauded because of the existence of such mortgage; and that under the statute defendant is not relieved from its liability for the loss so sustained, because of such mortgage.—Ruppert v. Patrons' Mut. Fire-Ins. Co., 145 Mich. 473.

¶ 317. A bill alleged that defendant proceeded to manage the affairs of a feeble-minded grantor and occupied a fiduciary relation to her; that he exercised undue influence over her; and by fraud and deceit induced her to execute a deed to defendant. Held, the allegations of the bill were sufficient to give equity jurisdiction, the question being raised by general demurrer.—Gragg v. Maynard, 164 Mich. 535.

¶ 318. A bill to quiet title to a strip of land between two tracts of land and to fix the boundaries and a cross-bill for the same purpose, held simply to involve a boundary dispute in the light of the pleadings, proofs and other proceedings, and hence not within equity jurisdiction.—Weissert v. Fuller, 188 Mich. 327.

¶ 319. A bill to abate a private nuisance that alleges that the injury amounts to $500 is not bad for setting up a standard of damages that might be recovered at law.—Wilmarth v. Woodcock, 58 Mich. 482.

¶ 320. A declaration alleging a contract whereby a defendant corporation agreed to purchase certain patents of the plaintiff and to employ him, paying him a salary and a portion of the profits and which seeks relief and damages for the fraudulent destruction of profits does not show a fiduciary relation existing between the parties so as to give a court of equity exclusive jurisdiction of the case.—Church v. Anti-Kalsomine Co., 118 Mich. 219.

§ 84. ——Amount in controversy.

Sufficiency of averments to resist motion to dismiss for want of jurisdiction, see also post § 191.

¶ 321. Comp. L. 1897, § 435; How. St., § 11952, does not make an allegation of the amount in dispute jurisdictional.—Brandt v. Luce, 177 Mich. 184.

¶ 322. Whether, in a chancery bill to abate a private nuisance, it is necessary to allege that the injury it does exceeds $100, and whether the suit must fail if it falls below that, quære.—Wilmarth v. Woodcock, 58 Mich. 482.

¶ 323. A court of equity has jurisdiction, at the suit of a lower proprietor, to enjoin an upper proprietor from diverting the waters of a stream, where it appears from the bill that the injuries complained of materially lessen complainant's enjoyment of his property, and that he is remediless at law, although it is not alleged that he is damaged to the amount of $100.—Mastenbrook v. Alger, 110 Mich. 414.

¶ 324. While the failure to show an amount in controversy sufficient to give a court of chancery jurisdiction might not render a bill demurrable, yet it might be sufficient reason for the court's declining to entertain the case when the remedy at law is entirely adequate.—Bay City Bridge Co. v. Van Etten, 36 Mich. 210.

¶ 325. A bill to restrain the collection of a tax sufficiently shows the amount of the tax to be more than $100 if it states the amount to be about $150.—Palmer v. Rich, 12 Mich. 414.

¶ 326. It is not essential to jurisdiction that a bill in equity to enforce the right of a subsequent incumbrancer to redeem from a chattel mortgage should aver the property to be of the value of more than $100 where it discloses that the amount of the lien demanded, which is the proper test, is largely in excess of that sum.—Lucking v. Wesson, 25 Mich. 443.

¶ 327. An objection to a bill for specific performance that it fails to aver that the value of the lands exceeds $100 is not sustained where it appears from the bill that complainant paid more than that sum.—Raymond v. Shawboose, 34 Mich. 142.

¶ 328. The failure to allege that the demand in controversy does not exceed $100 will be regarded as a matter of form, where it appears the debtor has secured it by turning out 1,500 tons of No. 1 iron ore.—Glidden v. Norvell, 44 Mich. 202.

¶ 329. The objection that a bill of complaint did not allege that the disputed property was worth $100, and that the court therefore had no jurisdiction, was considered met where it did allege that the complainant claimed to own it in fee simple, described it as consisting of 360 acres, and stated that defendant had deeded it for the expressed consideration of $15,000.—Abbott v. Gregory, 39 Mich. 68.

¶ 330. The court will assume, in support of the jurisdiction over a bill to restrain the sale of 44 lots located in a thriving and populous city, that they are worth more than $100, in the absence of any allegation of value.—Wight v. Roethlisberger, 116 Mich. 241.

¶ 331. Where a bill to compel the set-off of judgments avers that the amount owing by complainant on one of the judgments is the sum of $100 "over and above any and all claims or liens which * * * any person or persons claim to have against said judgment," it has a sufficient statement of the amount involved to give the court jurisdiction.—Robinson v. Kunkleman, 117 Mich. 193.

¶ 332. Under the rule laid down by Fuller v. City of Grand Rapids, 40 Mich. 395, an objection that a complainant's bill to restrain a township from issuing railroad aid bonds cannot be maintained because it is not shown that the complainant's taxes would amount to $100, will not be sustained where it is alleged that the property subject to taxation, and which might be sold for taxes if unpaid, is of the value of $2,000.—Dodge v. Van Buren Circuit Judge, 118 Mich. 189.

¶ 333. A bill seeking to avoid contracts entered into by the county road commissioners for the purchase of machinery, alleging that the interest of complainants exceeded one hundred dollars, held good on demurrer for want of proper interest.—Brant v. Luce, 177 Mich. 184.

¶ 334. The mere fact that a foreclosure decree is for $50 too much does not make an amount sufficient to give chancery jurisdiction of a bill in the nature of a bill of review attacking such decree.—Sanford v. Haines, 71 Mich. 116.

§ 85. ——As to inadequacy or exhaustion of legal remedy.

Mode of objecting the legal remedy is adequate, see post § 103.

Necessity and sufficiency of allegations in bills for particular relief, see Creditors' Suits §§ 25, 26; Corporations §§ 327, 336; Fraudulent Conveyances, V.

Necessity of allegation as to inadequacy of legal remedy, see also Accounting Suits ¶ 26.

¶ 335. The bill need not show that there is no remedy at law where it is obvious that the injunction which it asks is the only adequate remedy.—Middleton v. Flat River Booming Co., 27 Mich. 533.

§ 86. Averments as to and descriptions of parties and joinder or nonjoinder.

Averments and descriptions of the interests in and relationship of the parties to the subject-matter of the suit, see the specific topics.

Pleading in suits by or against personal representatives, trustees, guardians, and the like, see specific topics such as Estates of Decedents, XI, A; Guardianship, IV; Trusts, IX.

Pleading incorporation of party, see Corporations §§ 189, 193.

Necessary averments to sustain joinder, see Jud. Act, chap. VIII, § 1; Comp. L. 1915, § 12309.

¶ 336. A bill in equity is not fatally defective for want of parties in merely failing to exclude the contingency that some person, having an unknown interest which would not be affected by the suit, is not impleaded as defendant.—Holcomb v. Mosher, 50 Mich. 252.

¶ 337. In a bill for a claim to stock in defendant corporation involving the rights and interests of complainant corporation and its stockholders, it is essential that all the parties in interest be made parties, or that some satisfactory reason for not making them parties be set forth. Such bill should show who the present owners of shares in the corporation are, or it should set forth the efforts to discover them, and should contain the proper averments that the bill is filed on their behalf as well as on behalf of the complainants named. The mere fact that a person, who is proper party complainant, is a nonresident of the state, is no sufficient reason for his not being joined in the suit; nor is the failure to join the heirs of a deceased party in interest excused by the mere averment that the party died in another state, and that since his death diligent inquiry has been instituted and failed to ascertain who and where his heirs are but they are all nonresidents of the state. Such averments are too general and vague.—Westcott v. Minnesota Mining Co., 23 Mich. 145.

¶ 338. A bill to restrain the sale of land on execution, which alleges that defendant levied "as sheriff," sufficiently shows that the suit is against defendant in his official capacity, although he is not described as sheriff in the prayer for relief.—Wight v. Roethlisberger, 116 Mich. 241.

§ 87. Allegations as to doing or offering equity.

Proper mode of objection for want of offer, see post § 100.

Averments in bills for particular relief, see specific topics such as Rescission; Specific Performance.

In bills to redeem from mortgages, see Mortgages, IX.

In bills for relief from taxes, see Taxes, VI, X, XII.

Offer or tender and payment by interpleading complainant, see Interpleader.

¶ 339. An administrator, suing for the cancellation of a title derived from foreclosure of a mortgage, which in fact was a forged one given in lieu of two valid ones, and for the reinstatement of the valid ones, need not offer in his bill to surrender the land and title if the purchase is regarded as having vested in him a title which he could not surrender in his representative capacity.—Linn v. Linn, 122 Mich. 130.

§ 88. Anticipating or rebutting matters of defense.

Anticipating defense of laches or limitations or excusing delay, see post § 89.

¶ 340. Avoidance of a special defense is pleaded by introducing the defense in the bill in the form of pretense and adding matter of reply in the shape of a charge. And if the bill is not so framed originally, a particular defense set up by the answer is not met by amending the bill.—Connerton v. Miller, 41 Mich. 608.

§ 89. ——Laches or limitations.

¶ 341. To justify equitable interference to remove obstructions to a water power that have existed for many years, the bill should make out a very strong case, and should show either that complainants protested at the outset or that circumstances existed which excused the failure to protest. It should also set forth the reasons which excuse the delay in applying for redress.—Bradfield v. Dewell, 48 Mich. 9.

¶ 342. If there be any ground of exception within the statute of limitations to prevent the bar, or ground to rebut the presumption arising from lapse of time, it should be stated in the bill.—Campau v. Chene, 1 Mich. 400.

¶ 343. The particular acts of fraud or concealment necessary to avoid the operation of a statute of limitations should be set forth in a bill by distinct averments, as well as the time when discovered, so that the court may see whether, by the exercise of ordinary diligence, the discovery might not have been before made.—Beaubieu v. Beaubieu, 23 How. (64 U. S.) 190, 16 L. ed. 484.

§ 90. Necessity and sufficiency of prayer.

Necessity of alternative prayer to sustain alternative relief, see post ¶ 825.

Character of bill as dependent on stating part rather than prayer, see post §§ 146, 147.

Insufficiency of prayer to plead jurisdiction, see ante § 83.

Praying diverse kinds of relief as making bill multifarious, see ante § 76.

Effect of statements in bill to give narrowing character to it and restrict relief prayed, see post ¶ 590.
Effect of alternative prayer to enlarge scope of relief under bill, see post § 209.
Effect of praying damages, see post § 92.
Sufficiency of prayer in bills for particular relief and propriety of relief incident thereto, see specific topics, such as Foreclosure, III; Reformation of Instruments, III; Rescission, VI; Specific Performance, IV.
Specific prayers and paragraphing and numbering same, and addition of general prayer, see 1916 C. C. Rule 24, § 2.

¶ 344. Where a bill in equity which does not make out a case for the specific relief prayed, but is sufficient as a bill to redeem, is not demurred to, the prayer for general relief will be treated as a prayer to be allowed to redeem.—Flanders v. Chamberlain, 24 Mich. 305; Dayton v. Dayton, 68 Mich. 437.

¶ 345. If a bill in equity makes out a clear case under any recognized head of equity jurisdiction, the court must take cognizance of it and grant the appropriate relief, even though the case made by the pleadings and proofs be insufficient to sustain the decree upon the complainant's theory that it was a bill under the statute to quiet his title.—Ormsby v. Barr, 22 Mich. 80.

§ 91. ——Relief or discovery.

¶ 346. Where a complainant, entitled to discovery only, goes on to pray relief, his whole bill is demurrable.—Welles v. River Raisin & G. River R. Co., W. 35.

¶ 347. Where answer under oath is waived, no ground of relief can be set up that rests merely on the necessity of a discovery.—Torrent v. Rodgers, 39 Mich. 85.

§ 92. ——Specific relief or damages.

¶ 348. A bill of complaint seeking a money judgment in a transaction founded on fraud, is demurrable for want of equity.—Reis v. Applebaum, 182 Mich. 582.

§ 92a. Prayer for process.

Abolishment of prayer for process except prayer for injunction or extraordinary process, see 1916 C. C. Rule 24, § 3.

¶ 349. The chancery rule requiring the prayer for process to specify the parties does not make a bill fatally defective for the want of it if they are otherwise identified.—Sheridan v. Cameron, 65 Mich. 680.

¶ 350. Omission of prayer for process does not render bill fatally defective if parties are otherwise identified.—Sheridan v. Cameron, 65 Mich. 680.

C. OBJECTIONS AND DEFENSES, ANSWERS, PLEAS, DEMURRERS, AND MOTIONS ON PLEADINGS.

§ 93. Right and time to make answer or plea.

Time under order allowing answer over after demurrer, see post § 211.
Making admissions in open court, see post § 174.
Necessity of joinder of issue before motion to dismiss, see post § 112.
Time to answer before default, see Defaults § 3.
Proffer of answer to open default, see Defaults § 38.
Proper practice to obtain further time to answer where default has occurred and answer cannot be prepared to open default, see Defaults ¶ 133.
Right to put in answer after default on published service, see Defaults § 29.
Requisites and sufficiency of process and return in respect to time for answer, see Process.
Time within which motions assailing pleadings must be filed and served, see 1916 C. C. Rule 31, § 6.
Extensions of time to plead, see 1916 C. C. Rule 31, § 8.
Time for service of answer or cross-bill, see 1916 C. C. Rule 31, § 3.
Time for service of answer to cross-bill, see 1916 C. C. Rule 31, § 4.

¶ 351. Solicitors for an infant defendant, deeming the appointment of a guardian ad litem invalid but having received from him an uncertified copy of the bill, are not excused from answering by the lack of certification.—Peck v. Kent Circuit Judge, 98 Mich. 639.

¶ 352. An answer by a guardian ad litem is properly interposed, where his infant's solicitors erroneously deeming his appointment invalid and their time for answering not ripe because the copy of the bill served was not certified omitted to answer and he answered without consulting them.—Peck v. Kent Circuit Judge, 98 Mich. 639.

§ 94. Proper party to make objections or defenses.

Manner, requisites and sufficiency of making particular objections and defenses, see post §§ 97-104.
Objection by court of its own motion for multifariousness, see post ¶ 368.
Party entitled to object for purpose of saving question for appeal, see Saving Questions.

¶ 353. For a misjoinder of parties defendant those only can demur who are improperly joined.—Sweet v. Converse, 88 Mich. 1; Torrent v. Hamilton, 95 Mich. 159.

¶ 354. For a misjoinder of defendants only those who are improperly joined can demur.—Bigelow v. Sanford, 98 Mich. 657.

¶ 355. One as against whom there is no misjoinder of claims cannot demur on the ground that the bill is multifarious.—Torrent v. Hamilton, 95 Mich. 159.

¶ 356. The misjoined former owner only can complain where a bill is filed against the vendee and a former owner of the land, who negotiated the sale for the vendor, to enforce a vendor's lien.—Walker v. Casgrain, 101 Mich. 604.

¶ 357. A defendant who is interested in all the matters embraced in the bill, so that as to him the court might make a decree covering them all, cannot raise the objection of multifariousness.—Payne v. Avery, 21 Mich. 524.

§ 95. Joinder in answer or demurrer.

Effect of joint motion to dismiss or demurrer when not sustainable as to all joining therein, see post § 115.

Answer of one as affecting other defendants, see post § 166.

Answer or demurrer by one inuring to others, see post § 96.

Impropriety of guardians joining in pleadings with other parties, see Guardians ad Litem; Guardianship, IV.

§ 96. Answer or demurrer by one inuring to all.

Answer by another as binding one who relies on it, see also post § 166.

¶ 358. Bill to remove a cloud upon complainant's title. As, under the statute of 1840, in order to obtain the decree they sought, the complainants were required to substantiate their own title, it was held that the defense of one inured for the benefit of all.—Stockton v. Williams, W. 120; affirmed in 1 D. 546.

¶ 359. Bill against the grantee named in a deed of lands, and purchasers under him, to set aside the deed for fraud. The grantee answered fully, denying the fraud; and as to the others the bill was taken as confessed. It was held that the defense of the grantee inured to the benefit of the others; and the bill being dismissed as to him was dismissed as to all.—Bucboz v. Lecour, 9 Mich. 234.

§ 97. Particular defenses and objections, how made.

By whom permissible, see ante § 94.

Delay in objecting and waiver thereby, see post §§ 119-121.

Answer or cross-bill as proper method, see post § 98.

Various objections, see post §§ 99-104.

Office and scope of pleas under former practice and objections properly made by plea, see post §§ 111a-111d.

Propriety of motion to strike, see post § 118.

Necessity of proof of defenses as pleaded, see post § 162.

Exceptions to sworn answer as evidence under former practice, see post § 166a.

Mode of pleading or urging fraud, see Fraud, III.

Mode of pleading duress, see Duress § 6.

Mode of pleading mistake or accident, see Mistake.

Mode of pleading or urging estoppels, see Estoppel, III; Former Adjudication, VII.

Mode of pleading or urging statute of frauds, see Frauds, Statute of, IV.

Pleading limitations, see Limitations, VII.

Manner of pleading or urging payment or release, see Payment, IV; Releases, IV.

Necessity and sufficiency of objections for purpose of saving the question for review on appeal, see Saving Questions.

Demurrers abolished and answer and motion substituted, see Jud. Act, chap. XIV, § 4; Comp. L. 1915, § 12456; 1916 C. C. Rule 25, 31.

Pleas in abatement and pleas to jurisdiction abolished, and defenses by answer substituted, see Jud. Act, chap. XIV, § 4; Comp. L. 1915, § 12456.

Abolishment of pleas and making of defenses available by answer, see 1916 C. C. Rule 25, § 3.

¶ 360. Where a bill does not allege the amount in dispute and the statute provides that where the amount is less than $100 as shown by the bill, the proper procedure of the defendant is not to demur, but to raise the jurisdictional question by plea or answer, although he may insist on the objection at the hearing, where it appears, either by pleading or proofs, that the value in question is less than $100.—Brassington v. Waldron, 143 Mich. 364.

¶ 361. The pendency of a suit at law on the same cause of action is not brought before the court of equity by pleading in abatement, but is usually suggested on motion after answer, unless appearing by the pleading; and upon such motion an election of the remedy is required, to be absolute or qualified, according to circumstances.—Joslin v. Millspaugh, 27 Mich. 517.

¶ 362. Want of jurisdiction in a court of equity must be raised by demurrer when the grounds of objection appear on the face of the bill; and it cannot be questioned after answer and a hearing on the merits.—Coffey v. McGahey, 181 Mich. 225.

§ 98. ——Answer or cross-bill.

Answer to be embodied in cross-bill, when a cross-bill is filed, and affirmative portion of cross-bill to follow without repetition of averments in answer portion, see 1916 C. C. Rule 26, § 2.

¶ 363. A subsequent incumbrancer may take the objection by answer that the mortgage sought to be foreclosed is of a homestead, and invalid for want of the wife's signature. A cross-bill is not necessary for the purpose.—Dye v. Mann, 10 Mich. 291.

¶ 364. Where a portion of the land covered by a mortgage has been conveyed subject to the payment of the entire mortgage by the grantee, the purchaser of another parcel is not obliged to file a cross-bill in the foreclosure suit to protect his rights, but may set out the facts in his answer.—Caruthers v. Hall, 10 Mich. 40.

§ 99. ——Objections to form or manner, uncertainty or indefiniteness.

Special and general demurrers under old practice, see post § 116a.

Motion for further and better particulars when pleading is deemed to be indefinite, uncertain or incomplete, see 1916 C. C. Rule 21, § 8.

[Note. This rule is very similar to New Federal Equity Rule 20, and the federal precedents under that rule may be instructive. Editor.]

¶ 365. An objection that a bill of complaint is inartificially drawn, in that it states the evidence instead of the facts, can be raised only by demurrer.—Hagerman v. Wigent, 108 Mich. 192.

§ 100. ——Failure to offer equity.

¶ 366. The failure of a bill filed for setting aside a tax title to offer to do equity by refunding the tax, is not such an omission as can be taken advantage of on general demurrer.—Greenley v. Hovey, 115 Mich. 504.

§ 101. ——Multifariousness.

¶ 367. The objection that a bill is multifarious should be taken by demurrer, that it may be passed upon by the court before the expense of reference and testimony is incurred.—Burnham v. Dillon, 100 Mich. 352; Miner v. Wilson, 107 Mich. 57.

¶ 368. While the court may of its own motion raise the question of multifariousness, it is not bound to do so, nor to permit the defendants to raise it upon the hearing where full justice can be done upon the record.—Childs v. Pellett, 102 Mich. 558.

¶ 369. Multifariousness in a bill must be taken advantage of by demurrer.—Flynn v. Third Nat. Bk. of Detroit, 122 Mich. 642.

¶ 370. An objection that a bill is multifarious may be raised by demurrer in the court of original jurisdiction.—Kerr v. Rupp, 144 Mich. 269.

¶ 371. Multifariousness is not ground for a general demurrer to a bill filed by the receiver of a defunct fraternal loan and insurance society for a discovery and accounting against the trustees, officers and agents of the company.—Snover v. Boynton, 173 Mich. 539.

¶ 372. The question of multifariousness in a bill can be raised only by demurrer.—Morris v. Kuhn, 190 Mich. 419.

§ 102. ——Misjoinder or defect of parties.

Want of parties as ground for dismissal, see post § 190.

¶ 373. It is a good ground of demurrer to the whole bill that one of the complainants has no interest in the suit, and has improperly joined with others in filing the bill; but there is no such rule in regard to defendants.—Barstow v. Smith, W. 394.

¶ 374. Where fifty-nine persons owing distinct parcels of land fronting upon a street join in a bill to restrain the collection of a tax on their several parcels for grading the street, all alleging the illegality of the tax as the ground for relief, and the questions, as presented by the bill, appear prima facie to depend upon the same proceedings for assessing the tax, the court cannot, on demurrer to the bill, say in advance that the bill is bad for multifariousness or misjoinder. If, in the progress of the cause, the controversy be found to turn upon the legality of such proceedings, or other grounds common to all the complainants, there is no objection to the joinder, and it avoids multiplicity of suits; but should it appear that the multiplicity of issues, or other complications growing out of the joinder, would produce such embarrassment as to overbalance the advantages to be derived from settling the rights of the whole in one suit, it is always competent for the court, of its own motion, to dismiss the bill on this ground.—Scofield v. City of Lansing, 17 Mich. 437.

¶ 375. Objection to misjoinder of plaintiffs in the bill, one being the legal owner and the other the equitable owner, if tenable must be made by demurrer.—Eaton v. Eaton, 68 Mich. 158.

¶ 376. An objection of a want of necessary parties in a chancery suit should be raised by demurrer before answer, where the facts showing the necessity of such parties, if any, are fully disclosed by the bill.—Powers v. Hibbard, 114 Mich. 533.

¶ 377. On an accounting between the trustee and complainant, one of the beneficiaries, praying that the ownership of certain trust property be declared as between complainant and another defendant, and seeking a receivership for the property in question, the objection that beneficiaries were not made parties should have been raised by demurrer before answer.—Snook v. Pearsall, 95 Mich. 534.

¶ 378. The failure to join necessary parties in a bill in equity apparent on the face of the bill must be raised by demurrer; objection comes too late on hearing.—Michels v. Western Underwriters' Ass'n, 129 Mich. 417.

¶ 379. A bill is open to general demurrer which joins a receiver as defendant and fails to aver that leave to sue him was obtained from the court.—Burk v. Muskegon Machine & Foundry Co., 98 Mich. 614; Steel Brick Siding Co. v. Muskegon Machine & Foundry Co., 98 Mich. 616.

§ 103. ——Defense of remedy at law.

Disfavor towards objections requiring all evidence to be in before decision is possible, see also ante ¶ 115.

¶ 380. The objection that there is a remedy at law should be taken by demurrer. If the object of the suit is embraced under any of the appropriate heads of equitable jurisdiction, the court will take cognizance of it, notwithstanding there may be a remedy at law, or other circumstances exist which would induce the court to refuse to entertain jurisdiction of the particular case, unless the defendant takes the objection by demurrer, or claims the benefit of it by his answer.—Williams v. City of Detroit, 2 Mich. 560.

¶ 381. The point that an allegation of inadequacy of remedy at law is wanting in a bill must be raised by demurrer.—Mactavish v. Kent Circuit Judge, 122 Mich. 242.

§ 104. ——Defense of limitations or laches.

Manner of pleading or urging limitation of action, see Limitations, VII.

¶ 382. The defense of the statute of limitations and lapse of time may be made by demurrer in equity.—Campau v. Chene, 1 Mich. 400; McLean v. Barton, H. 279.

¶ 383. Laches in filing a foreclosure bill cannot be urged upon pleading and proofs if the action is not barred; the objection should be taken by demurrer.—Baent v. Kennicutt, 37 Mich. 268.

¶ 384. The answer to a bill may raise the defense that relief is barred by the statute of limitations.—Highstone v. Franks, 93 Mich. 52.

§ 105. Office and scope of answer.

Necessity, mode, sufficiency, and completeness of answer, see post §§ 106-108.

Disclaimers, see post § 111.

Waiver of objections by interposing answer under old practice, see post §§ 119-121.

Matters for plea or for answer under former practice, see post §§ 111a-111d.

Answer to cross-bill, see post § 110.

Answer or cross-bill as proper mode of pleading, see ante § 98.

Signature and verification of answer, see ante, VII, A.

Propriety of and manner of amendments, see post § 126 et seq.

Propriety of supplemental or amended answers, see post § 127.

Rule that all defenses shall be made by answer, see 1916 C. C. Rule 25, § 3.

Statutory abolition of demurrers and establishment of answers instead, see Jud. Act, chap. XIV, § 4; Comp. L. 1915, § 12456.

[Note. The 29th Rule of the New Federal Equity Rules makes substantially the same practice apply as is provided in Michigan by the statute and the C. C. Rules. The federal precedents should therefore afford instructive authorities.]

¶ 385. Whether an answer can be used in place of a special demurrer for the lack of specific averments of facts that have been broadly enough averred, quære.—Hubbard v. McNaughton, 43 Mich. 220.

§ 106. ——Necessity and sufficiency of allegations.

Alleging various special defenses, see topics referred to ante § 97.

Mode of traverse or admission, see post § 107.

Completeness of answer, see post § 108.

Excuse in answer for not answering parts of bill, see post § 109.

Admissions by failure to answer fully, see post §§ 154, 155.

Sufficiency of answer on objection for variance, see post § 162.

Construction and effect of averments in answers, see post § 148 et seq.

Sufficiency of bill or answer to make answer admissive of facts averred, see post § 152.

Responsiveness of answer to bill for purpose of evidence, see post § 165a.

Specification of grounds of demurrer, see post § 116.

New answer to meet amendments, see post § 144.

Further answer after original partly quashed or expunged, see post § 145.

Necessity of answer to supplemental bill as well as to original bill on appearance after default, see post ¶ 936.

Answers to bills of review, see post § 247.

Provisions for waiver of answer on oath, see Jud. Act, chap. XIV, § 6; Comp. L. 1915, § 12458.

Right to sworn answer when sworn bill is filed, see 1916 C. C. Rule 25, § 1.

Contents and sufficiency of answer, positiveness and averments on information and belief, see 1916 C. C. Rule 25, § 2.

¶ 386. Facts on which defendants propose to rely should be set up in the answer.—Match v. Hunt, 38 Mich. 1.

¶ 387. The answer to a bill in chancery must apprise complainant of the nature of defendant's case, and the latter cannot avail himself of any matters in defense which are not stated in his answer, even though they should appear in his evidence. Accordingly an answer must plead that claims on which a bill to set aside decedent's conveyance in fraud of creditors is founded were not regularly allowed by the action of the legal number of commissioners, if that defense is relied on.—Reed v. Jourdan, 109 Mich. 128.

§ 107. ——Mode of denial, traverse or admission.

Positiveness required in pleas, see post § 111c.

¶ 388. An answer should show facts, and not conclusions of law.—Attorney General v. Oakland County Bank, W. 90.

¶ 389. Where an allegation is made in the bill with divers circumstances, the defendant should not in his answer deny the allegations literally, as laid in the bill, but should answer the point of substance positively and with certainty.—Jones v. Wing, H. 301.

¶ 390. An answer that admits a deed set out in the bill does not sufficiently impeach it by denying its validity in general terms; it should state the facts that are supposed to render the deed invalid, so that the court may pass upon them.—Payne v. Atterbury, H. 414.

¶ 391. The averment in a judgment creditor's bill against a corporation that it has ceased to do business is not, it seems, denied by an answer which admits that the only business done is such as is incident to closing up its affairs, and that it has no available capital.—Turnbull v. Prentiss Lumber Co., 55 Mich. 387.

¶ 392. A general allegation in a creditor's bill against the stockholders of an insolvent corporation, that a large number of subscriptions to the capital stock were not paid at all, while some were paid in worthless patent rights and some in goods at fictitious prices, is sufficiently met by an averment in the answer of an individual stockholder that he has fully paid for the stock subscribed by him.—American Mirror & Glass Beveling Co. v. Bulkley, 107 Mich. 447.

§ 108. ——Completeness of answer.

Excuse for not answering irrelevant parts of bill, see post § 109.

¶ 393. If a defendant submits to answer the whole bill he must answer fully, notwithstanding he might by demurrer or plea to the whole bill have protected himself against a particular discovery.—Gilkey v. Paige, W. 520.

§ 109. ——Excusing failure to answer.

¶ 394. Where irrelevancy is made a ground for refusing to answer a part, it must appear that an answer to such part would, in no aspect of complainant's case as made by the bill, be of service to him.—Gilkey v. Paige, W. 520.

§ 110. Answer to cross-bill.

Admissions by failure to answer cross-bill, see post § 155.

Answer to affirmative portion of cross-bill, see 1916 C. C. Rule 26, § 3.

§ 111. Disclaimers.

Requisites of disclaimer to carry costs, necessity of release with disclaimer, see Costs ¶ 122.

¶ 395. A disclaimer is the proper pleading to set up that a city, sued as a defendant in a suit to quiet title to an alley, has no control over it and therefore should be dismissed as a party; and by answering asserting right in it the city is estopped to say on hearing that it has no claim and should be dismissed.—Vier v. City of Detroit, 111 Mich. 646.

¶ 396. Defendant in a bill to foreclose a vendor's lien cannot properly disclaim in a demurrer to the bill.—Proctor v. Plumer, 112 Mich. 393.

§ 111a. Office, singleness and scope of pleas.

Another action pending at law as matter for motion after answer, see ante ¶ 361.

Doubleness of plea to bill for corporate receiver denying bill generally and also denying insolvency as averred, see Corporations ¶ 880.

Abolition of pleas by statute and by rule, see Jud. Act, chap. XIV, § 4; Comp. L. 1915, § 12456; 1916 C. C. Rule 25, § 3.

[Note. Notwithstanding the abolition of pleas by rule and statute the cases under this and the following sections (§§ 111a-111d) may be of some value as authorities on the proper mode of bringing on the objection.]

¶ 397. Objections to the equity of complainant's claim as stated in his bill should be taken not by plea but by demurrer.—Mains v. Homer Steel-Fence Co., 116 Mich. 526.

¶ 398. Where fraud is alleged in defense of a bill, and it consists of a variety of circumstances, it should be taken advantage of by answer, and not by plea.—Carroll v. Potter, W. 355.

¶ 399. One made a defendant to a foreclosure bill as having an interest in the mortgaged premises as subsequent purchaser, incumbrancer, or otherwise, may set up by plea that he claims title in fee by virtue of a tax deed.—Shafer v. Thompson, 109 Mich. 406.

¶ 400. A plea must rest the defense upon a single point. If it contains two distinct points it is bad.—Albany City Bank v. Dorr, W. 317; Carroll v. Potter, W. 355.

¶ 401. A plea should rest the defense upon a single point, and is bad if it contains two distinct points.—Mains v. Homer Steel-Fence Co., 116 Mich. 526.

¶ 402. A plea to a bill which sets up an estoppel, also raises the question of jurisdiction, and also contains a sweeping denial of complainant's averments is bad for duplicity.—Mains v. Homer Steel-Fence Co., 116 Mich. 526.

¶ 403. The trial equity court has power to allow a double plea to stand.—Andrews v. Osborn, 159 Mich. 77.

¶ 404. A plea of a release, unsupported by an answer, is insufficient.—Schwarz v. Wendell, H. 395.

§ 111b. ——Necessity and sufficiency of allegations.

¶ 405. While it is proper for defendant to assert in his plea that he does not confess or acknowledge all or any of the matters set forth in complainant's bill, it is not essential to a good plea that he should do so.—Detroit, L. & N. R. Co. v. McCammon, 108 Mich. 368.

§ 111c. ——Positiveness of plea.

¶ 406. A plea must be positive, and not on belief, when it states a fact within defendant's knowledge, or touching his own acts; but when it relates to the acts of third persons, and not to defendant's own acts, it may be on information and belief.—Parker v. Parker, W. 457.

§ 111d. Plea to part and answer to part.

¶ 407. A defendant may plead to one part of a bill and answer to another; but the defenses must clearly refer to separate and distinct parts. If both are to the same part, the answer overrules the plea.—Clark v. Saginaw City Bank, H. 240.

§ 111e. Replications.

Admissions made by interposing replication, see post § 152.

Statutory abolishment of replications and joining of issues on the answer, see Jud. Act, chap. XIV, § 14; Comp. L. 1915, § 12466.

¶ 408. Issue upon an answer to a petition for execution for deficiency in foreclosure can be taken by replication.—Wallace v. Field, 56 Mich. 3.

¶ 409. Where, by mistake, a replication has not been filed and yet witnesses have been examined by defendant, the court will permit a replication to be filed nunc pro tunc.—Brooks v. Mead, W. 389.

¶ 410. Where the omission to reply was evidently inadvertent and from a mistaken view of the practice, the court did not dismiss the bill, but allowed the complainant to reply and introduce proofs on equitable terms.—Hardwick v. Bassett, 25 Mich. 149.

¶ 411. It lies within the discretion of the trial judge to allow the complainant to file a replication after the expiration of fifteen days from date of filing the answer, despite the provisions of Chancery Rule 12.—Blodgett v. Kent Circuit Judge, 189 Mich. 9.

§ 112. Office and scope of motion to dismiss (or general demurrer).

Demurrer ore tenus, see post § 117.

Matters reached and considered, see post § 114.

Effect of joint and separate demurrers or motions, see post § 115.

Construction of motion or demurrer, see post § 151.

Objections waived by demurring or moving to dismiss, see post §§ 119-121.

Admissions made by demurrer or motion to dismiss, see post § 156.

Incompatibility of disclaimer and demurrer, see ante ¶ 396.

Party entitled to demur, see ante § 94.

Grounds for involuntary dismissal without decision or prejudice, see post §§ 190-193.

Proper decree or disposal of cause on issue made by demurrer, plea or motion to dismiss, see post §§ 210, 211.

Leave to plead over on sustaining demurrer or motion, see post § 211.

Pendency of cause on demurrer on motion as bar to dismissal, see post § 196.

Sufficiency of bill good in part or in one aspect and bad in others, see post § 113.

Prayer for relief in discovery bill as rendering whole bad, see ante § 91.

Answer or demurrer under old practice as proper method of raising objection, see ante §§ 97-104.

Matters proper for plea or demurrer under former practice, see also ante §§ 111a-111d.

Nature and propriety of general demurrer under former practice, see post § 112a.

Demurrers abolished by statute, see Jud. Act, chap. XIV, § 4; Comp. L. 1915, § 12456.

Motion to call up objections formerly raised by demurrer, see 1916 C. C. Rule 31.

[Note. For cases on the similar practice provided for the federal equity courts by the New Federal Equity Rule 29, see federal decisions thereunder.]

¶ 412. A motion to dismiss a bill is a substitute for a demurrer under former practice.—Allen v. Powers, 196 Mich. 622.

¶ 413. A motion to dismiss a bill as insufficient, under the Judicature Act, Pub. Acts 1915, No. 314, chap. XIV, § 4, raises only such questions as previous to the enactment of such law could be raised by demurrer.—Freeman v. Mitchell, 198 Mich. 207.

¶ 414. A motion to dismiss a bill to foreclose a land contract on the ground that the tax provided for in Pub. Acts 1911, No. 91, § 8, How. 2nd Ed., § 1986, has not been paid, before such contract is offered in evidence is not premature, as the filing of the bill constitutes an effort to enforce the contract and it would be idle for the court to inquire into facts as to contracts which it had no power to enforce.—Nelson v. Breitenwischer, 194 Mich. 30.

¶ 415. Under the Judicature Act, Pub. Acts 1915, No. 314, providing that objections to a bill of complaint heretofore raised by plea or demurrer may be raised by motion to dismiss, a motion to dismiss the bill is not proper, except where the jurisdiction is objected to, until after joining of issue.—Horner v. Knights of Columbus Bldg. Co., 197 Mich. 530.

§ 112a. ——Of general demurrer.

See also post §§ 113-116b.

¶ 416. A general demurrer is one going to the merits of the bill's case, and assigning no particular cause except a want of equity. —Taylor v. Taylor, 87 Mich. 64.

¶ 417. General demurrer for want of equity raises only the question whether there is any equity whatever in the bill.—Cochrane v. Adams, 50 Mich. 16.

¶ 418. Where a bill contains equity enough to furnish the means of amendment it should not be dismissed on general demurrer.—Merrifield v. Ingersoll, 61 Mich. 4.

¶ 419. On general demurrer to a bill in equity general allegations of matters which go merely to make up a completed consideration are good enough, though it is more correct pleading to set them out specifically.—Farwell v. Johnston, 34 Mich. 342.

¶ 420. Defects of form in a bill in equity cannot be taken advantage of by general demurrer.—Glidden v. Norvell, 44 Mich. 202; Day v. Cole, 56 Mich. 294.

¶ 421. It is not ground for general demurrer that a bill does not show that executors, under whom complainant claims, had power to sell, to the exclusion of heirs.—Day v. Cole, 56 Mich. 294.

¶ 422. A general demurrer assigning no particular cause except that there is no equity in the bill is always proper where the bill is defective in substance.—Taylor v. Taylor, 87 Mich. 64.

¶ 423. Grounds for demurrer to a bill which may or may not warrant a denial of the bill on final hearing after the evidence is in, are insufficient.—Union Banking Co. v. Truscott Boat Mfg. Co., 189 Mich. 698.

§ 113. ——Bill good in part or in any aspect.

Effect of joining in demurrer to bill good as to one demurrant, see post § 115.

¶ 424. A general demurrer must be overruled if there is matter in the bill upon which any equitable relief can be granted.—Clark v. Davis, H. 227; Hawkins v. Clermont, 15 Mich. 511; Hoffman v. Ross, 25 Mich. 175; Wilson v. Eggleston, 27 Mich. 257; Glidden v. Norvell, 44 Mich. 202; Wilmarth v. Woodcock, 58 Mich. 482; Darrah v. Boyce, 62 Mich. 480; Carney v. Carney, 63 Mich. 382; Hatch v. Village of St. Joseph, 68 Mich. 220.

¶ 425. A general demurrer will be overruled unless good to the whole bill.—Williams v. Hubbard, W. 28.

¶ 426. A demurrer to a bill cannot be sustained if any of several reliefs prayed for is allowable.—Phillips v. Jacobs, 145 Mich. 108.

¶ 427. A general demurrer cannot be sustained if the bill makes out any cause whatever for equitable relief.—Shaw v. Chase, 77 Mich. 436.

¶ 428. A general demurrer to a bill will not be sustained where there is matter in the bill upon which equitable relief can be granted.—Flynn v. Third Nat. Bk. of Detroit, 122 Mich. 642.

¶ 429. A general demurrer challenges the equity of the case made by the bill, and will be overruled if a case for equitable relief is set out, however imperfectly.—Greenley v. Hovey, 115 Mich. 504; Gilligham v. Ray, 157 Mich. 488.

¶ 430. Where a demurrer is to the whole discovery and relief prayed by the bill, if the complainant is entitled to any part of the relief the demurrer must be overruled.—Thayer v. Lane, H. 247.

¶ 431. If a defendant who should have demurred to discovery only, demurs to both discovery and relief, the demurrer will be overruled.—Edwards v. Hulbert, W. 54; Burpee v. Smith, W. 327.

¶ 432. Where a bill is filed for relief, the discovery is ancillary; and a demurrer which is good to the relief is good to the discovery. —Welles v. River Raisin & G. River R. Co., W. 35.

¶ 433. Where the discovery sought by a bill can only be assistant to the relief prayed, a ground of demurrer to the relief will also extend to the discovery; but if the discovery have a further purpose, the complainant may be entitled to it though he has no title to the relief.—Manning v. Drake, 1 Mich. 34.

§ 114. ——Matters reached and considered.

Specification of grounds, see post § 116.

Propriety of demurrer to reach objections, demurrer or answer as proper mode, see ante §§ 97-104.

To challenge bill for misjoinder or multifariousness, see ante §§ 101, 102.

What constitutes multifariousness, see ante §§ 73-76.

What constitutes doubleness and uncertainty or inconsistency, see ante § 78.

Demurrer as proper mode of objecting that legal remedy is adequate, see ante § 103.

Demurrer for laches, see ante § 104.

¶ 434. On demurrer to a bill to restrain the use of church property by an alleged faction, the question whether the members of it claiming to be a majority can by a majority vote withdraw from the general church body and reject pastors appointed by it and take the church property with them, the bill alone can be considered; and affidavits used on the hearing for a preliminary injunction cannot be considered as in the nature of an answer and must be excluded.—Fuchs v. Meisel, 102 Mich. 357.

¶ 435. The claim that a husband took title in himself and wife for the purpose of defrauding his creditors cannot be considered on general demurrer to a bill filed to restrain the sale of the land under an execution directed against the husband, where the bill shows upon its face nothing of such fraudulent purpose.—Wight v. Roethlisberger, 116 Mich. 241.

¶ 436. Under 1897 Chancery Rule 9a, in considering a demurrer to a bill of complaint, the court need not look further to the substance of the bill than to ascertain whether it is open to the specific objections raised by the demurrer.—Township of Merritt v. Harp, 131 Mich. 174.

¶ 437. On demurrer only those facts stated in the bill of complaint will be considered.—Steele v. Culver, 157 Mich. 344.

¶ 438. The court in passing upon the sufficiency of a pleading, demurred to on general grounds, cannot consider the character of the parties defendant, or the probability of their conspiring to do an unlawful act of the character charged, e. g., where a taxpayer's bill alleges conspiracy on the part of officials of a municipality for the illegal expenditure of public funds; but such matters are properly considered by the court in weighing the evidence, should the case come to trial.—Bates v. City of Hastings, 145 Mich. 574.

¶ 439. In passing upon demurrer to a taxpayer's bill, the court can only inquire whether the pleading is sufficient under the rules of law to make a case, should its allegations be supported by competent proof; and such demurrer admits the facts which are well pleaded.—Bates v. City of Hastings, 145 Mich. 574.

¶ 440. Grounds assigned for demurrer cannot be considered thereon or in advance of the hearing, if resort to the judicial knowledge must be had to make the ground appear.—People v. Michigan Cent. R. Co., 145 Mich. 149; People v. Detroit, G. H. & M. R. Co., 149 Mich. 72; Chapin v. Citizens' Tel. Co., 196 Mich. 331.

§ 115. ——Joint and separate motions or demurrers.

¶ 441. A joint demurrer may be good as to one defendant and bad as to other defendants.—Barstow v. Smith, W. 394.

¶ 442. Where one of several defendants demurs to discovery, on the ground that it would subject him to a criminal prosecution, his demurrer should be confined to such parts of the bill as tend to implicate him in the supposed crime.—Burpee v. Smith, W. 327.

¶ 443. The terms of a demurrer should suggest the errors complained of, and, when two defendants join a demurrer for want of equity solely, neither can be allowed to raise a question not available to both.—Sweet v. Converse, 88 Mich. 1.

¶ 444. Where several defendants join in a general demurrer to a bill to foreclose a mechanic's lien, only such grounds of demurrer will be considered as are available to all of the demurrants.—Burk v. Muskegon Machine & Foundry Co., 98 Mich. 614.

§ 116. ——Specification of grounds.

Special and general demurrers under former practice, see post § 116a.

Statement of reasons in demurrer to bill against corporate stockholders, see Corporations ¶ 1232.

¶ 445. A judgment creditor's bill averred that execution had been returned unsatisfied on a specified day. It was demurred to on the ground that it failed to show that the execution was returned as required by law to entitle complainants to maintain the bill. Held, that the demurrer did not sufficiently present the objection that the date of the return was Sunday.—Kellogg v. Hamilton, 43 Mich. 209.

§ 116a. Special or general demurrers.

General and special demurrers distinguished for purposes of appeal, see Appeal § 38.

¶ 446. Where an injunction bill avers special injury without explaining what, and the answer traverses the averment, the common formula questioning the bill for want of equity is not enough to raise, on the hearing, the point that there should have been greater particularity, especially where it is plain that the want of certainty has caused no prejudice.—Pratt v. Lewis, 39 Mich. 7.

¶ 447. Where a bill to set aside a tax deed as a cloud upon title fails to specify the grounds upon which the sale is claimed to be invalid, or to set forth any facts showing the proceedings to be defective, a special demurrer is properly interposed.—Bump v. Jepson, 106 Mich. 641.

¶ 448. An objection to the form of the answer and cross-bill in that it does not pray for process, should be raised by a special, and not by a general, demurrer.—Smalley v. Ashland Brown-Stone Co., 114 Mich. 104.

§ 116b. Answer serving as demurrer.

¶ 449. An answer to a complaint asking an injunction prohibiting a commissioner from taking depositions, properly raises the jurisdictional question whether said complaint was filed in the proper county, where said answer denies that complainant is entitled to relief, prays the same advantage as if defendant had pleaded or demurred to the said bill of complaint, and prays that the same be dismissed.—Titus v. Chippewa Circuit Judge, 168 Mich. 507.

§ 117. Demurrer ore tenus.

Objections open on hearing, see post §§ 119-121.

¶ 450. Where a new cause of demurrer is assigned ore tenus the cause must be coextensive with the demurrer.—Clark v. Davis, H. 227.

¶ 451. On the hearing of a general demurrer to a bill in equity, the defendants may orally assign any cause of demurrer coextensive with the demurrer upon the record. —Burk v. Muskegon Machine & Foundry Co., 98 Mich. 614.

§ 118. Striking out pleadings or allegations therein.

Amendment by striking out one's own pleading and substituting other, see post § 141, also post ¶ 523.

Dismissal of bill without decision for informalities and defects in pleading, see post § 192.

Further answer after expunging part, see post § 145.

Striking bill or pleading in chancery proceeding to set aside tax sales, see Taxes, XII, C.

Rule as to striking from files pleadings not according to proper rules or because of scandal or impertinence, see 1916 C. C. Rule 21, § 10.

¶ 452. A motion to strike a bill from the files is not the proper way to raise an objection to the substance of the bill or to correct the error.—McMann v. Westcott, 47 Mich. 177.

¶ 453. Where a defendant had leave to file a supplemental answer to explain certain ambiguities in his original answer, and he incorporated other matters of defense in his supplemental answer, it was ordered to be taken off the files, with leave to file a supplemental answer in conformity with the directions given in the former trial.—Graves v. Niles, H. 332.

¶ 454. Where a bill is amended by the addition only of a new party defendant, a further answer by a defendant having already answered, is not required, and therefore a new answer containing new defenses is properly stricken.—Casserly v. Wayne Circuit Judge, 124 Mich. 157.

§ 119. Waiver of or delay in making objections.

Objections for misjoinder or to parties, see post § 120.

Objections to jurisdiction, see post § 121.

Policy to disregard objections at hearing unless imperative, see post § 122.

Necessity for objections to pleadings below in order to have review of their sufficiency on appeal, see Saving Questions for Review.

Cross-bill invoking equity as working estoppel to deny jurisdiction of bill for want of equity, see also Courts ¶ 300.

¶ 455. Formal objections are not allowed on the hearing of a cause where they could easily have been made before.—Matson v. Melchor, 42 Mich. 477.

¶ 456. A defendant in chancery attending and examining witnesses before a master on complainant's notice will be regarded as waiving all objections because of failure to serve a copy of the replication.—Brooks v. Mead, W. 389.

¶ 457. The objection that a bill is too indefinite to form the basis of relief cannot prevail after answer, unless there is a lack of such substantial averments as are necessary to make out a case.—Salisbury v. Miller, 14 Mich. 160.

¶ 458. Where a bill in aid of execution alleges fraud, and has been answered, and the parties have been sworn, the objection that the allegations of fraud are too general cannot be raised.—Hubbard v. McNaughton, 43 Mich. 220.

¶ 459. A general demurrer admits the facts stated in the bill, but denies that they make a case for the interposition of a court of equity; and it waives all technical objections. —Caldwell v. Ward, 83 Mich. 13.

¶ 460. Where a demurrer to a bill has been sustained and the amended bill is again demurred to upon a ground which existed in the original bill but which was not set up in the first demurrer, and complainant without objection goes to hearing on the second demurrer and admits the defect and that it cannot be remedied, he is held to have waived any objection to the practice.—Daschke v. Schellenberg, 131 Mich. 103.

¶ 461. The objection that a bill is multifarious should be raised by demurrer and cannot be made for the first time on appeal from a decree on the merits.—Snook v. Pearsall, 95 Mich. 534.

¶ 462. An objection that a bill is multifarious is waived by answering to the merits. —Lyon v. Clark, 137 Mich. 438.

¶ 463. Where complainants against a drain assessment have improperly joined in one complaint, the court will not deny relief, if the question of multifariousness is not raised by the pleadings.—Hinkley v. Bishopp, 152 Mich. 256.

¶ 464. The objection to a bill to quiet title that it does not allege an assertion by defendant of a hostile title comes too late after answer filed and proofs taken, especially where the answer sets up a hostile title.—Cleland v. Casgrain, 92 Mich. 139.

§ 120. ——Objections to parties or for non-joinder.

¶ 465. An objection to a bill in equity for want of parties is not entitled to favor if not made until the hearing; and if well taken then, permission should be granted to amend.—Holcomb v. Mosher, 50 Mich. 252.

¶ 466. An objection for want of parties will not be regarded at the hearing unless the facts which would show the objection to be well taken appear on the record.—Campau v. Campau, 19 Mich. 116.

¶ 467. An objection for want of parties, not taken by any pleading, but raised for the first time at the hearing, will not prevail unless the defect be one that precludes a decree that will do justice as between the parties and fully determine the controversy.—Miller v. Thompson, 34 Mich. 10.

¶ 468. An objection to the misjoinder of complainants is not favored where it has not been taken by special demurrer, but is insisted upon at the hearing after proofs have been taken.—Turner v. Hart, 71 Mich. 128.

¶ 469. Objection for misjoinder made for the first time at the hearing will not be allowed where the court can make a decree which will do entire justice between the parties.—Reed v. Wessel, 7 Mich. 139.

¶ 470. One of two complainants sought to have certain judgments against him decreed satisfied, and the other to have sales made under the judgments declared fraudulent and void, and the relief sought by each depended upon the same state of facts, and the decree, if relief was due to either, would dispose of the whole equities without confusion. Objection to the misjoinder not being taken until the hearing, the bill was sustained.—Reed v. Wessel, 7 Mich. 139.

¶ 471. Where the bill did not seek to reduce trust property to complainants' possession, but merely to place them in a receiver's hands under the court's direction, it is too late for defendants, the trustee and a claimant, after complainants had succeeded on the merits, to object that beneficiaries had not been made parties.—Snook v. Pearsall, 95 Mich. 534.

¶ 472. Defendants were described in the bill as heirs of their father, when in fact they claimed as heirs of their mother. It was held that they were properly made parties as claiming an interest in the property in controversy; it was too late to take the objection for the first time at the hearing that their interest was not properly made to appear by the bill, proofs having been taken, and the proper parties being before the court.—Chipman v. Thompson, W. 405.

§ 121. ——Objections to jurisdiction.

See also post ¶ 847.

Objection that controversy has become wholly legal, see also ante ¶ 105.

¶ 473. Objections to jurisdiction apparent upon the face of a bill to quiet title, are held waived by answer without demurrer.—Negaunee Iron Co. v. Iron Cliffs Co., 134 Mich. 264. Writ of error dismissed in 197 U. S. 463, 49 L. ed. 836, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 474.

¶ 474. Want of jurisdiction in the court of equity is waived by the failure to interpose a demurrer until after the joining of issue and the taking of proof.—Coffey v. McGahey, 181 Mich. 225, 233.

¶ 475. A defendant, restrained from trespassing on land under a bill praying that restraint should be "until a judgment in said pending suit at law," cannot urge that an injunction decree determining title to be in complainant is erroneous and that the cause should be relegated to law, where the bill ran for four years without a hearing or a temporary injunction, during which time defendant forbore to prosecute the pending law action, and at the end of that time the parties submitted to a hearing in chancery.—McGaw v. Manning, 145 Mich. 378.

¶ 476. The objection of want of jurisdiction in a bill for a mechanic's lien, because the bill was signed in the name of an agent and verified as such, came too late after the case had been tried and after all the pleadings were in, without any suggestion of want of jurisdiction.—French v. Cardoni, 119 Mich. 402.

¶ 477. An unnecessary bill being filed, and the defendant, instead of demurrer, having submitted an answer, and not in his answer insisting on the objection that the question was triable at law, it was too late to raise the objection at the final hearing on pleadings and proofs.—Stockton v. Williams, W. 120.

¶ 478. Where a demurrer to a bill to set aside an instrument on the ground of fraud treats the instrument as a deed, the demurrant cannot deny the jurisdiction of equity on the ground that the instrument is testamentary in character.—Gragg v. Maynard, 164 Mich. 535.

¶ 479. In a suit in equity involving property, the objection that one hundred dollars is not involved as required by C. L. 1897, § 435, How. 2nd Ed., § 11952, may be made at the hearing.—Brandt v. Luce, 177 Mich. 184.

§ 122. Effect of reserving objections until hearing.

Exclusion of formal objections on hearing that might have been made sooner, see ante § 119.

Waiver of jurisdictional objections, see ante § 121.
Objections for defects of parties, see also ante § 120.
Matters amendable at hearing, see post § 131 et seq.

¶ 480. If, instead of demurring for multifariousness defendants by their answer reserve the privilege of making the objection at the hearing, when the expense of reference and testimony has been incurred, and when the court is put to the trouble of a full discussion of the case, they cannot complain if the court disregards their objection, unless the nature of the case is such that justice cannot be done to the parties upon the pleadings and evidence as then presented.—Burnham v. Dillon, 100 Mich. 352.

¶ 481. When defendants desire to take advantage of multifariousness the proper practice is to demur. But if they reserve the privilege of making the objection at the hearing, when the expenses of taking proofs have been incurred, and the court put to the trouble of a full discussion of the case, they cannot complain if their objection be disregarded. At that stage of the case it is for the court and not the party to take advantage of multifariousness; and unless the nature of the case be such that justice cannot be done upon the pleadings and evidence as then presented, the demurrer at the hearing will be overruled.—Payne v. Avery, 21 Mich. 524.

§ 123. Technical or immaterial objections.

Objections not affecting party objecting, see also ante § 94.
Placing cause on wrong side of the court in doubtful case, see ante ¶ 132.
Entitling in names of both defendants after discontinuance, see also ante ¶ 218a.
Amendment of clerical mistake in names, see post § 126.
Errors or defects regarded as harmless or as cured, and therefore not ground for reversal, see Harmless Error.

¶ 482. When all the parties and the subject-matter of the suit are before a court of equity, and the proofs show that a decree can be entered doing exact justice to all, technicalities in pleadings are to be overlooked.—Bigelow v. Sheehan, 150 Mich. 507.

¶ 483. A date misstated by clerical error may be rejected as surplusage where the bill sufficiently corrects the time.—Bailey v. Murphy, W. 424.

D. CROSS-BILLS.

§ 124. Occasion, propriety and germaneness of cross-bills.

When answer and when cross-bill is proper pleading, see ante § 98.
Cross-bill to bill of revivor, see post § 234.
Restriction of allegations to germane matters, see post § 125.
Declination of jurisdiction because of want of means to enforce prospective cross-bill, see ante ¶ 110.
Pendency of cross-bill as preventing dismissal, see post § 189.
Affirmative relief on cross-bill, see post § 212.
[Note. Inasmuch as the germaneness of a cross-bill always involves the nature and scope of the bill and the relief prayed for by it, the specific topics treating of equitable remedies should also be consulted to ascertain whether a cross-bill may be sustained and, if so, to what end. See cross-references which follow.]
Cross-bill to redeem, or for accounting, or for assertion of superior mortgage in foreclosure, see also Foreclosure, III, C.
Assertion of legal title by cross-bill in suit to quiet title, see Quieting Title, III.
Cross-bill for specific performance to bill for cancellation, see also Rescission, VI.
Cross-bill proper in suit for partnership accounting, see also Partnership, VII, E.
Cross-bills in mechanics' liens suits under the statute, see Mechanics' Liens, VIII, B.
Necessity of cross-bill to try equities on bill in aid of execution, see Creditors' Suits § 26, ¶ 107.
Propriety of cross-bill to question corporate power to hold land on its bill to quiet title, see Corporations ¶ 288.
Right of minority stockholders to file cross-bill on behalf of corporation which refuses, see Corporations § 345, ¶ 1298.
Cross-bills to divorce bills in general, see Divorce §§ 45, 46.
Cross-bill to annul separation agreement to bill for divorce, see also Divorce ¶ 171.
Propriety of cross-bill in mechanics' liens suits, see Mechanics' Liens, VIII, B.
See also other specific topics treating of equitable remedies.
Provision for filing cross-bills for affirmative relief, see 1916 C. C. Rule 26.

¶ 484. A cross-bill is designed for the purpose of enabling a defendant to avail himself of some defense which can only be made complete by granting him some relief against complainant, or against some other defendant.—Andrews v. Kibbee, 12 Mich. 94.

¶ 485. A cross-bill can be sustained only on matters growing out of the original bill and contained in it; nor can such a bill be filed in any case where the complainant therein could not have filed an original bill for the same purpose.—Hackley v. Mack, 60 Mich. 591.

¶ 486. A cross-bill can be sustained only on matters growing out of the original bill and embraced in it.—Root v. Root, 164 Mich. 638.

¶ 487. The language unnecessarily used in Hackley v. Mack, 60 Mich. 604, to the effect that a cross-bill must always be confined to cases when an original bill might have been maintained to enforce the desired remedy, is not to be taken as a rule preventing a cross-bill to establish a legal right to bonds and to the payment of them upon a bill to restrain defendant from negotiating them; where rejection of such a cross-bill would relegate defendant to multiplicity or circuity and prevent administration of complete justice.—Village of Frankfort v. Schmid, 151 Mich. 85.

¶ 488. A cross-bill is properly filed where the defendant who thereby seeks relief could not get it if complainants should dismiss their bill, or if the court should dismiss it.—Wilcox v. Allen, 36 Mich. 160.

¶ 489. Affirmative relief cannot be granted the defendant in equity in the absence of a cross-bill seeking it.—Barras v. Youngs, 185 Mich. 496.

¶ 490. Prior to the adoption of Chancery Rule 123 a cross-bill was necessary if defendant seeks affirmative relief beyond what complainant's bill would afford him.—Schwarz v. Sears, W. 170; Vary v. Shea, 36 Mich. 388.

¶ 491. In the absence of a cross-bill on a bill to redeem, a decree could not be entered that a sale of the premises be had under the mortgage in case they should not be redeemed.—Schwarz v. Sears, W. 170.

¶ 492. On a bill for the construction of a will it is not proper to interject in the proceeding by cross-bill or otherwise an account of the guardian of one of the testator's children for reimbursement of amounts claimed to have been advanced for such child's support.—Pray v. Railer, 144 Mich. 208.

¶ 493. A legal title may be asserted in equity by cross-bill when the bill seeks to invalidate bonds and an injunction against defendant claiming as a bona fide holder.—Village of Frankfort v. Schmid, 151 Mich. 85.

¶ 494. A mortgagee of street-railway property may, in injunction proceedings by the railway company to prevent the city from revoking its franchise granting it privileges in the streets, file a cross-bill asking for the appointment of a receiver of the property, with power to operate the road, and to borrow money to enable it to meet expenditures required by the terms of its franchise, so as to preserve the property; the subject-matter being substantially the same as that set up by the original bill, and the relief sought being germane.—Union St. R. Co. v. City of Saginaw, 115 Mich. 300.

¶ 495. Complainant and defendant, his wife, were engaged together in conducting a musical merchandise business. Defendant left her husband and started up a rival business in the same city. Complainant filed a bill alleging the marriage and asking an injunction forbidding defendant to conduct her business on the ground that he was entitled to her services. Held, defendant's cross-bill asking for a divorce was germane to the original bill.—Root v. Root, 164 Mich. 638.

¶ 496. On a bill by creditors to set aside certain acts of the assignee of an insolvent, a cross-bill by a defendant admitting the allegations of the bill as to the improper appointment of the assignee and claiming title through tax deeds and a quitclaim deed from the assignor, and praying that title be quieted in it and that a codefendant to whom a claim against it for trespass on the lands in question had been sold by the assignee be enjoined from prosecuting suit therefor pending the determination of the validity of the acts of the assignee, held properly dismissed.—Gordon v. Sherman, 178 Mich. 629.

¶ 497. Where a bill alleges that defendant made false representations as to the value of furniture, which was part of the consideration for certain property conveyed to him, and that he concealed from complainants the amount due on piano contracts and prays for damages and for an injunction restraining defendant from recording the deed to the property, no breach of the covenant of warranty and against incumbrances in the deed to defendant is the subject of relief upon a cross-bill.—McKenzie v. Call, 176 Mich. 198.

¶ 498. The questions of the rendition of services to plaintiff's testatrix in her lifetime by the defendant administrator in his individual capacity or services as such administrator and his disbursements as administrator are not germane to the issue raised by the original bill and answer whether he had secured deeds from plaintiff his coheir by fraud, so as to be the subject of an amendment to the answer in the nature of a cross-bill.—Thomas v. Nicolls, 191 Mich. 489.

§ 125. Contents, form and substance of cross-bill.

[Note. Since, ordinarily, the cross-bill is for relief which might have been had by bill, the pleading of the substantial allegations will be governed by the same rules. Consult the specific topics for precedents on the mode of pleading specific causes.]

Necessity and sufficiency of allegations in bills, see ante § 77 and cross-references there collected.

Necessity and sufficiency of verification, see ante §§ 68, 69.

Bill as original or cross-bill, see post ¶ 587.

Sufficiency as cross-bill where prayer is introduced by amendment, see post ¶ 600.

Right to hearing and reception of proofs on cross-bill, see post § 170.

Sufficiency of cross-bill to sustain retention of cause for complete relief, see post § 221.

Amendments to cross-bills, see post § 128.

Answer to cross-bill, see ante § 110.
Affirmative relief on cross-bill, see post § 212.
Ground for dismissing cross-bill without decision thereon, see post § 193.
Filing bill as cross-bill as cause for dismissal, see post ¶ 774.
Practice rule that answer shall form first division of cross-bill, when cross-bill is interposed, and that cross-bill proper shall be second division, see 1916 C. C. Rule 26.

¶ 499. A cross-bill must be strictly confined to the matters involved in the original cause. Where a bill introduces other distinct matters, it is an original bill and the suits are separate and distinct.—Andrews v. Kibbee, 12 Mich. 94; Farmers' & Mechanics' Bank of Michigan v. Bronson, 14 Mich. 361.

¶ 500. The rule that a cross-bill must be confined to the subject-matter of the original bill does not preclude the introduction by cross-bill of new facts bearing upon that subject-matter.—Powers v. Hibbard, 114 Mich. 533.

¶ 501. A cross-bill merely seeking a discovery that could not constitute a defense to the original bill is demurrable.—Cook v. Wheeler, H. 443.

§ 125a. Answer in nature of cross-bill.

Necessity and sufficiency of signature, see ante ¶ 225.

¶ 502. Chancery Rule 123 (first rules), authorizing a defendant in his answer to present the facts upon which his equity rests without filing a cross-bill, still requires him to state a case for equitable relief touching the matter in question in the original bill; and an answer to a bill to quiet title is insufficient as a basis for affirmative relief if it alleges that the deed under which complainant claims was obtained by fraud, with knowledge, etc., without stating by whom or how the fraud was committed.—McGuire v. Van Buren Circuit Judge, 69 Mich. 593.

¶ 503. When the matter set up in an answer by way of cross-bill is simply a matter of defense it is disposed of by a dismissal of the original bill, and cannot be retained for the purpose of an accounting for rents and profits which may be recovered in ejectment.—McGuire v. Van Buren Circuit Judge, 69 Mich. 593.

¶ 504. It is not the intention of Chancery Rule 123 to deprive a party of any of his substantial rights secured to him by a resort to a cross-bill, but to preserve to him all the benefits to be derived from a cross-bill by stating the substance thereof in his answer; and the complainant is entitled to make defense to matter so set up in the answer as fully as he could have done before the rule was made.—Hackley v. Mack, 60 Mich. 591.

¶ 505. Chancery Rule 123, allowing the benefit of a cross-bill, does not apply to a suit where the answer had already been filed at the time the rule was adopted.—Hackley v. Mack, 60 Mich. 591.

E. AMENDMENTS AND SUPPLEMENTAL PLEADINGS.

Treating defects as harmless or regarding them as amended under the Statute of Amendments, see Harmless Error; Appeal, XII, C.
Amendments at law, see Pleading, VI.
General provisions of the statute of amendments, see Jud. Act, Chap. XVI; Comp. L. 1915, § 12478 et seq.
Rules as to amendments without leave, see 1916 C. C. Rule 28.

§ 126. Grounds and matter of amendment of bill.

Supplemental or amended answers, see post § 127.
Amendments to cross-bills, see post § 128.
Amendments of parties, see post § 129.
Supplying signatures and verifications, see post § 130.
Time, mode and manner and form of amendments, see post §§ 131-137, 141-143.
Propriety of supplemental pleadings, see post § 138.
Motion, showing and order granting leave to amend, see post §§ 139, 140.
New pleadings to meet amendments, see post §§ 144, 145.
Amendments making new case or issues, see post § 134.
Supplemental pleading or amendment as proper way to introduce matters occurring after filing bill, see post § 137.
Stating proposed amendments in motion, see post § 139.
Inconsistency introduced into bill by amendment, see post § 150.
Amendments of divorce bills and cross-bills, see Divorce §§ 50-53.

¶ 506. Matter that constitutes a new bill, or that is inconsistent with or repugnant to the substantive allegations of the original bill, cannot be introduced by amendment.—Ogden v. Moore, 95 Mich. 290.

¶ 507. Where a bill is radically defective for want of definite averments, and is specially demurred to accordingly, complainant should amend, and unless he does so his suit cannot stand.—Jenks v. Hathaway, 48 Mich. 536.

¶ 508. A complainant in foreclosure who seeks to show that certain defendants were estopped from obtaining and asserting title under a prior mortgage should introduce the estoppel by an amendment to his bill.—Connerton v. Millar, 41 Mich. 608.

¶ 509. Leave was granted to amend an injunction bill so as to waive an answer under oath, an answer not having been filed.—Bronson v. Green, W. 486.

¶ 510. A bill to subject to the payment of a New York judgment an heir's interest in his father's estate averred the heir's insolvency and that complainant had no remedy at law, and prayed a receivership and an injunction. Held, that such bill could properly be amended so as to aver in addition that the judgment was obtained upon personal service and after an exhaustion of the legal remedies in New York, that the heir was a nonresident of Michigan, that the fund sought to be reached was within the jurisdiction of the court where the bill was filed, and that such fund could be reached in no other way.—Earle v. Kent Circuit Judge, 92 Mich. 285.

¶ 511. Such a clerical mistake in a bill as writing complainant's Christian name "Caroline" instead of "Paulina" is amendable as a matter of course as soon as it is pointed out.—Weaver v. Van Akin, 77 Mich. 588.

¶ 512. Amendment is admissible to cure the omission in a divorce bill of the averment that one of the parties resides in the county where suit is brought.—People v. McCaffrey, 75 Mich. 115.

¶ 512a. The refusal to allow a party to a bill for an accounting to amend his pleadings so as to allege the coverture of the other party, and the consequent invalidity of the contract upon which she bases her rights, is not an abuse of discretion, where it would be manifestly inequitable to urge such objection, and the applicant delayed for a long time in seeking to interpose it after learning of the facts.—Feige v. Babcock, 111 Mich. 538.

§ 127. Amended and supplemental answers, pleas and demurrers.

Time for amendment, denial when asked at hearing, see post § 135.

Amendments to objections filed to proceeding to sell lands for delinquent taxes, see Taxes, XI.

¶ 513. Leave to file a supplemental or amended answer is seldom granted, and never without the utmost caution, and when a just and necessary case is clearly made out; and it is then generally confined to a clear case of mistake as to matter of fact, and as to that only.—Graves v. Niles, H. 332.

¶ 514. The court is especially reluctant to grant an application to file a supplemental or amended answer after a considerable lapse of time from the filing of the bill or original answer.—Graves v. Niles, H. 332.

¶ 515. Leave should not be granted to change entirely the character of the defense by supplemental or amended answer, not upon the ground of any actual mistake in matter of fact, nor upon any discovery of new facts, but upon the ground that the defendant did not mean to be understood as he had stated in his answer.—Graves v. Niles, H. 332.

¶ 516. Where there was doubt in regard to the proper application of certain moneys admitted to have been received by defendant, and the answer was obscure, and there was a possibility that great injustice might be done to defendant, the court reluctantly granted an order permitting a separate supplemental answer to be filed as to this particular, and explaining this ambiguity.—Graves v. Niles, H. 332.

¶ 517. A plea may be allowed to be amended for the purpose of placing before the court an additional fact unknown to the defendant when the plea was filed, and consistent with the defense then made. But it will not be permitted for the purpose of setting up a fact or facts inconsistent with the original defense.—Freeman v. Michigan State Bank, H. 311.

¶ 518. Omission of plea setting up dismissal of former bill asking same relief to aver that former decree was on merits may be supplied by amendment.—Detroit, L. & N. R. Co. v. McCammon, 108 Mich. 368.

¶ 519. An infant defendant's guardian ad litem cannot in his answer admit away any of his ward's rights, and if such admission is shown upon the hearing it will be corrected by amendment.—Peck v. Kent Circuit Judge, 98 Mich. 639.

¶ 520. Even though the statute of limitations would bar a new bill, an amendment to an answer in the nature of a cross-bill asserting a mechanic's lien may be allowed under Pub. Acts 1891, No. 179, §§ 10, 27, regulating mechanics' liens procedure, if it seeks, not to introduce a new cause of action, but to state properly the cause of action set up in the original answer.—Smalley v. Northwestern Terra-Cotta Co., 113 Mich. 141.

¶ 521. It is within the discretion of the trial judge to allow amendments to a demurrer in chancery.—Phillips v. Jacobs, 145 Mich. 108.

§ 128. Amendment of or affecting cross-bill.

Germaneness of matter of amendment, see also ante ¶ 498.

Amendment where original bill would be barred, see also ante ¶ 520.

Of cross-bills in divorce cases, see Divorce §§ 50-53.

Amendment of cross-bill on bill to enjoin easement, see also Easements ¶ 160.

¶ 522. In a suit in chancery it is proper to permit defendant to file an amended cross-bill after the cause is at issue where the rights of the parties are complicated and it is necessary so to do in order to secure a full adjudication thereof.—Brown v. King, 172 Mich, 355.

¶ 523. A motion by a defendant to amend his answer by striking out a cross-bill seeking affirmative relief will not be granted when it would operate to the prejudice of other parties.—Leach v. Dolese, 186 Mich. 695.

¶ 524. A motion to amend an answer to a bill to redeem from an alleged usurious mortgage, by striking out a cross-bill affirmatively seeking the foreclosure of the mortgage, held properly denied when made at the hearing, since the granting of the motion would have prejudiced the complainant by preventing him from asserting the alleged usury. Leach v. Dolese, 186 Mich. 695.

¶ 525. It is an exercise of the discretion of the court on the trial of a suit by a contract purchaser for specific performance of the contract to allow a purchaser of the property from the vendor to file during the hearing an amended answer in the nature of a cross-bill for the removal of the contract as a cloud on his title.—Lake Erie Land Co. v. Chilinski, 197 Mich. 214.

§ 129. Amendments as to parties.

Leave to add parties on sustaining demurrer for want of parties, see post § 211.

Leave to amend before dismissing, see post ¶ 767.

Needlessness of new answer by old defendants on admitting new one, see post ¶ 580.

Terms imposable as condition of leave, see post § 140.

Changes and substitutions of parties, see generally Abatement §§ 19, 20; Parties.

Addition of other stockholders by amendment to bill for enforcement of stockholders' liability to creditors, see Corporations ¶ 1227.

¶ 526. Parties can be brought in by amendment at all stages. Where necessary parties are left out, leave is usually granted to bring them in; but this is not so where they are unnecessary and have been voluntarily left out.—Johnson v. Shepard, 35 Mich. 115.

¶ 527. A trustee in bankruptcy appointed since the commencement of a suit may be brought before the court by an amendment to the bill, and a supplemental bill is unnecessary, as he is a new party claiming only such interest as is acquired by operation of law.—Rennells v. Potter, 198 Mich. 49.

§ 130. Amendments to supply signatures and verifications.

¶ 528. Though a bill should be signed by counsel, yet, if this should accidentally be omitted, the signature will be allowed to be supplied afterwards without costs.—Sill v. Ketchum, H., 423.

¶ 529. Verification of an answer in the nature of a cross-bill for divorce may be supplied by amendment before decree to be entered on remand.—Harrison v. Harrison, 94 Mich. 559.

¶ 530. Where, in a divorce suit, complainant petitions the court to set aside the decree granted defendant under his answer in the nature of a cross-bill, on the grounds, among others, that the verification to the answer fails to negative the existence of collusion, as required by the statute, and that no replication to complainant's answer to the cross-bill was filed, it is within the discretion of the court to permit an amendment of the verification so as to make it conform to the statute, and to permit the filing of said replication.—Daly v. Wayne Circuit Judge, 102 Mich. 392.

¶ 531. The failure to verify an answer as a cross-bill may be remedied on application to the court.—Van Slyke v. Van Slyke, 183 Mich. 536.

§ 131. Time for amendments; amendments on hearing.

Motion, showing and order for leave, see post §§ 139, 140.

Amendment on or after appeal, see post § 136.

For amended cross-bill, see ante § 128.

¶ 532. Under Chancery Rule 16 authorizing an amendment to a bill without order of court at any time before plea, answer or demurrer is put in, a bill may be amended in a pro confesso case after the time limited for appearance.—Bowers v. Chippewa Circuit Judge, 136 Mich. 367.

¶ 533. Amendments not affecting the issue or prejudicing the rights of the defendant may be made at the hearing. Chancery Rule 21 has no application to such a case.—Goodenow v. Curtis, 18 Mich. 298.

¶ 534. Amendments to a bill in equity are discretionary with the court so long as they are not allowed to prejudice the substantial rights of the defendant. They should not be allowed at the hearing, if after amendment the case will be defective on the proofs.—Church v. Holcomb, 45 Mich. 29.

¶ 535. The allowance of amendment of pleadings and proofs on final hearing rests largely in the discretion of the court.—Dodson v. McKelvey, 93 Mich. 263.

¶ 536. An amendment to a bill of complaint, in the nature of a supplemental bill, is properly allowed at the hearing, when substantially the same as the original bill, and the defendant is not taken by surprise.—Antoszewski v. City Plumbing Co., 185 Mich. 215.

¶ 537. Amendments to a bill to meet matters set up in the answer may be allowed at or even after a hearing on pleadings and proofs.—Munch v. Shabel, 37 Mich. 166.

¶ 538. Where the complainant has stated his case defectively, and no demurrer has been interposed, but defendant has only claimed the benefit of a demurrer by his answer, and the case is brought to a hearing on pleadings and proofs, it may be proper to allow the defect in the bill to be corrected at the hearing if the proofs show complainant entitled to relief.—Gorham v. Wing, 10 Mich. 496.

¶ 539. A judgment creditor's bill to set aside a deed as in fraud of his rights under the execution did not aver that the sheriff had levied on the land before the bill was filed. The bill was not demurred to, however, and testimony was taken on the whole issue. Held proper to allow the bill to be amended on the hearing.—Smith v. Sherman, 32 Mich. 637.

¶ 540. A bill defective in its averments will not be amended where the case is essentially defective on the proofs, but may be dismissed without prejudice.—Curtis v. Goodenow, 24 Mich. 18.

¶ 541. The right to permit amendments is broader below than in the supreme court, and is rather a question of terms than of power if the amendment is proper. Where complainant in foreclosure held subsequent mortgages not referred to in his bill, and the answer of a subsequent incumbrancer, impleaded as defendant, based equities upon them, complainant might properly be allowed to so amend his bill at the hearing as to make it aver the facts as to these mortgages.—Slater v. Breese, 36 Mich. 77.

§ 132. ——To meet proofs and cure variance.

Amendment of bill to meet matter in answer after hearing, see also ante ¶¶ 537, 538.
Making amendment on or after appeal, see post ¶ 557.
Pleading at law, amendments to conform to proofs, see Pleading, VI.

¶ 542. A variance between the actual date of judgment and that set forth in a creditor's bill based on it may be corrected by amendment at any time during the proceedings; but if complainant is not confined to the exact date stated in the bill it may not be necessary.—First Nat. Bank of Marshall v. Hosmer, 48 Mich. 200.

¶ 543. Where the bill charged a fraudulent breach of trust, and it was difficult for complainant to get at the actual facts until the testimony had been taken, it was proper to allow the bill to be amended, even at the hearing, so as to secure the ends of justice.—Morrison v. Mayer, 63 Mich. 238.

¶ 544. Where a petition of a bank depositor for an order directing the receiver of an insolvent bank to treat him as a "general creditor" was granted, the court has power, on a subsequent petition, to amend so as to recognize him as a "general depositor" in accordance with the facts.—Kunze v. Tawas State Sav. Bank, 130 Mich. 688.

§ 133. ——To let in new and further proofs.

¶ 545. It is within the discretion of the court, after the cause has been set down for hearing on bill, answer and replication, to permit the bill to be amended and the cause opened for proofs; and the exercise of such discretion is proper in a case where, since the closing of proofs, evidence of material facts has come to the knowledge of the complainant, the existence of which was unknown before, and the facts were of a character rendering it quite proper not to set them out in the bill unless then supposed to be susceptible of proof.—Briggs v. Briggs, 20 Mich. 34.

§ 134. ——Amendments making new case or issues.

Letting in new matter, see also ante § 126.
Making new defenses by amendment asked at hearing, see also post § 135.

¶ 546. An amendment to a bill in equity proposed on the final hearing with the design of introducing or substituting a new controversy in principle will generally be refused. Bills of discovery have in some cases been made bills for relief at an earlier stage of the suit.—Livingston v. Hayes, 43 Mich. 129.

¶ 547. It is very much within the discretion of the lower court to allow a bill to be amended at the final hearing on the pleadings and evidence; and where the amendment would transfer the case to a different head of equity jurisdiction, a dismissal of the bill without prejudice will not be reviewed unless the refusal to allow the amendment was clearly error.—Livingston v. Hayes, 43 Mich. 129.

¶ 548. A bill filed and resisted as merely auxiliary to an action at law cannot be converted by amendment on final hearing into a bill for complete and independent relief under another branch of equity.—Livingston v. Hayes, 43 Mich. 129.

¶ 549. A bill in aid of ejectment proceedings cannot be converted into a foreclosure bill by merely substituting the ordinary prayer for foreclosure in place of the prayer originally made.—Livingston v. Hayes, 43 Mich. 129.

¶ 550. A bill filed by a ward for an accounting of the guardianship made the guardian's executor defendant, alleging that he held funds belonging to the ward; but the testimony showed that the guardian did not receive the money, owing to his neglect to collect it. Held, that the bill could be amended so as to charge the guardian's estate and to ask an accounting on the ground of such neglect.—Dodson v. McKelvey, 93 Mich. 263.

¶ 551. Leave to amend a bill for cancellation after the close of all the testimony but before argument, by adding the charge that the performance of an agreement to support was not secured by a lien upon the land as agreed, and that for such reason the deed should be set aside, was properly refused upon the ground that it would introduce a new issue in the case.—Pamment v. Warner, 135 Mich. 244.

§ 135. ——Of answer or plea on hearing.

Of cross-bill on hearing, see ante § 128.
Effect of delay on inclination to refuse leave to make supplemental answer, see ante § 127.

¶ 552. In the exercise of a proper discretion, the court may permit a defendant, on the hearing of a bill to foreclose a mortgage, to file an unsworn amended answer, setting up want of notice or knowledge of complainant's mortgage, an answer under oath being waived, and the amended pleading containing no admissions available to the complainant as evidence.—Balew v. Mercier, 75 Mich. 42.

¶ 553. Where, in an action to restrain the flooding of complainant's land, an offer to amend the answer was made after the testimony was all in, without any request being made to take further proof, and the amended answer was inconsistent with the defense already set up, the amendment was properly refused, especially where it appeared that, if the amendment had been allowed, and the testimony considered with reference to it, the defendants had not met the case presented by complainant.—Pluchak v. Crawford, 137 Mich. 509.

¶ 554. It is not an abuse of discretion to permit an amendment, under § 10268, Comp. Laws 1897, How. Ann. St., 2nd Ed., § 12969, and Chancery Rule 16, to an answer on the hearing of a chancery suit, setting up the invalidity of the contract sued on because made on Sunday, especially where the opposite party did not request an adjournment.—Berston v. Gilbert, 180 Mich. 638.

¶ 555. A circuit court may, in the furtherance of justice and in the exercise of a sound discretion, even after a full hearing on the merits of a bill, permit an amendment to an answer germane to the issue raised by the original bill.—Thomas v. Nicolls, 191 Mich. 489.

¶ 556. There is no abuse of discretion on the part of the trial court on a hearing upon petition of a claimant against the receiver of an insolvent banking partnership in permitting an amendment of an answer to conform to the proof where no claim is made that petitioner was denied opportunity to be fully heard and introduce any testimony desired before the matter was finally disposed of.—In re Farmers' & Merchants' Bank of Lawrence, 194 Mich. 200; Smith v. Mosier, Id.

§ 136. Amendment on or after appeal.

Amending record and papers on appeal, see Appeal, XI, F.
Allowing amendments in Supreme Court, see Appeal § 522.
Amendments after appeal, see Appeal § 560.

¶ 557. Amendments to matters germane to the case can be allowed at any time in chancery suits to conform with the proof, protect the substantial equitable rights of the parties and secure the ends of justice even in the appellate court.—City Bank & Trust Co. v. Hurd, 179 Mich. 454.

¶ 558. An objection for the want of a necessary party in chancery was not made until the hearing. The bill made out a case on all other points, and the court granted decree for complainant as prayed. On appeal, the supreme court, in reversing the decree for want of parties, granted leave to amend, and allowed an injunction which had been decreed below to stand until the further order of the court below, to which the cause was remitted.—Palmer v. Rich, 12 Mich. 414.

¶ 559. An administrator having filed a bill to compel the specific performance of a contract for the conveyance of land to his intestate, without making the heirs parties, with prayer that a conveyance be decreed to himself, the court would not allow the bill to be amended at the hearing on appeal by substituting the heirs as complainants.—House v. Dexter, 9 Mich. 246.

§ 137. Mode of pleading facts subsequent to bill.

Supplemental bills after decree in general, see post §§ 237-239.
Provision for filing of supplemental pleadings to aver new matter since bill, see Jud. Act, chap. XIV, § 15; Comp. L. 1915, § 12467.
Rule as to supplemental pleadings to set up matters transpiring or coming to knowledge after filing of original pleading, see 1916 C. C. Rule 29.

¶ 560. Facts which have transpired subsequent to the filing of the bill cannot be set forth by way of amendment.—Hammond v. Place, H. 438.

¶ 561. A supplemental bill is necessary to bring before the court facts which have transpired subsequent to the filing of the original bill.—Hammond v. Place, H. 438.

¶ 562. If material facts have occurred subsequent to the commencement of the suit, the court will give leave to file a supplemental bill; and in doing so will permit other matters to be introduced which might have been incorporated into the original bill by way of amendment. This is especially proper where the matter which occurred before is necessary to the proper elucidation of that which occurred subsequent to the filing of the original bill.—Graves v. Niles, H. 332.

¶ 563. Facts of which complainant has learned since filing his bill, but which occurred before, are not matter for a supplemental bill, but for an amendment.—Wood v. Truax, 39 Mich. 628.

¶ 564. Facts which existed at the time an original bill of complaint was filed, but which were not known to complainant for the reason that they were concealed by the defendants themselves, may be presented to the court by way of amendment instead of by supplemental bill.—Rennells v. Potter, 198 Mich. 49.

¶ 565. Tender and acceptance of payment operating to discharge a mortgage which is being foreclosed by advertisement cannot, if taking place after the mortgagor has filed a bill for an accounting as to the amount due on the mortgage, constitute part of the case made by the bill, though shown by the proofs; but complainant must bring in such new matter by supplemental bill to obtain the relief to which it entitles him.—Fisher v. Holden, 84 Mich. 494.

§ 138. Right and propriety of supplemental pleadings.

Amendment or supplemental pleading as correct practice to bring in subsequent facts, see ante § 137.

Amendment of parties instead of supplemental bill, see ante ¶ 527.

Supplemental answers, see ante § 127.

Amendments and new pleadings on revival of suit or decree, see post § 236.

Grounds for supplemental bills after decree, see post § 237.

Original bills of supplement or in the nature thereof, see post §§ 237-239.

¶ 566. Where by an original bill to recover taxes and interest on a contract for the sale of timber, a court of equity had obtained jurisdiction, the complainant could file a supplemental bill for the taxes assessed subsequent to the filing of the original bill even though all the timber may have been removed. The defendants could not be prejudiced by the court's retaining jurisdiction to settle the entire controversy.—Michigan Iron & Land Co. v. Nester, 147 Mich. 599.

§ 139. Motion and showing for leave to amend.

Necessity of motion or request to prevent final judgment without leave to replead over demurrer, see post § 211.

Leave to plead over demurrer or plea or motion, see post § 211.

Motion for leave to plead over as waiver of irregularity in taking bill pro confesso, see ante ¶ 215.

¶ 567. It is not a matter of course to allow the filing of an amended bill after a cause has been at issue and testimony taken. A special application should be made to the court with a full statement of the facts intended to be incorporated in the amended bill so that the court can judge of the propriety of giving leave.—Hammond v. Place, H. 438.

¶ 568. A complainant wishing to amend his bill must take the first opportunity, after being made acquainted with the defects in it, to ask leave to do so.—Bank of Michigan v. Niles, W. 398.

¶ 569. It is usual, on allowing a demurrer for any cause which the court sees may be obviated by amendment, to give leave to amend on paying costs of demurrer. But where the court cannot see on the argument, from the facts before it, how the objection on which the demurrer was sustained could be removed, it is necessary for the complainant to apply for leave to amend by petition setting forth the additional facts sought to be incorporated in the bill.—Bank of Michigan v. Niles, W. 398.

¶ 570. In an application to amend the defendant's pleading the proposed amendments should be set out.—Freeman v. Michigan State Bank, H. 311.

¶ 571. Where leave is given to amend an answer, a new answer, with the amendments added, must be made, filed and served, or the original answer withdrawn by leave of the court, and the amendments added; or the amendments must refer to the portions of the answer on file intended to be amended, and specify their nature and application.—Mason v. Detroit City Bank, H. 222.

¶ 572. If a statement of fact in his answer is erroneous, defendant should apply to the court, showing how the error occurred, and asking leave to amend the answer, which must otherwise be taken as true against him. —Emerson v. Atwater, 12 Mich. 314.

§ 140. ——Order of allowance, terms and conditions.

Review of ruling on motion to amend, see Appeal § 401.

¶ 573. The court has power to impose terms upon allowing, on the day set for hearing, a bill to enforce a mechanic's lien to be amended by joining as codefendant defendant's wife, the owner of the premises upon which stands the building whereon the labor was performed.—Rugg v. Bassett, 101 Mich. 441.

¶ 574. The court's discretion to impose terms on allowing a party to be joined as co-defendant is not abused by an order requiring, as a condition to such amendment, that within twenty days complainant file a $200 bond for security for costs, and pay a solicitor's fee of $15 and witnesses' fees to be taxed, and that, in the event of his failure to file said bond and amended bill, and otherwise comply with said order, the bill be dismissed.—Rugg v. Bassett, 101 Mich. 441.

§ 141. Manner and form of amendments.

See also ante ¶ 571.

Amendment of course or on motion, showing and leave, see also ante § 139.

Amendment by striking and substituting, see ante ¶¶ 523, 524.

¶ 575. Amendments in the form of affidavits, not referring to the answer, are irregular, and a motion to dissolve an injunction will not be heard upon them.—Mason v. Detroit City Bank, H. 222.

§ 142. ——Treating amendments as made.

Presumption on appeal as to amendments having been made, see Appeal § 369.

¶ 576. Where all the facts entitling defendant to affirmative relief are set up in the answer without a specific prayer for relief, the prayer may be treated as amended and relief granted.—Cooley v. Harris, 92 Mich. 126.

¶ 577. In equity the empty form of amending and praying a temporary injunction or of alleging a threatened obstruction of incorporeal rights under leases and contracts and praying a permanent injunction, will not be insisted to confer jurisdiction, where the merits are gone into by mutual consent revealing a case for equity.—Pere Marquette R. Co. v. Wabash R. Co., 141 Mich. 215.

¶ 578. In a suit for specific performance, defendant filed an answer and a cross-bill the latter merely containing denials of the allegations in the original bill; complainant's default was entered for want of an answer, and now defendant's counsel contends that under Chancery Rule 11 the allegations of the cross-bill must be taken as true. Held, however, that the cause having been heard upon proofs on all disputed questions, an order nunc pro tunc will issue setting aside the default, and the cross-claims will be treated as denied in all essential particulars.—Hickman v. Chaney, 155 Mich. 217.

§ 143. ——Reverification after amendment.

Necessity of reverifying divorce bill after amendment, see Divorce § 49.

¶ 579. If any fact is introduced into a divorce bill by way of amendment, the bill must be reverified to negative collusion.—Briggs v. Briggs, 20 Mich. 34.

§ 144. New answer, plea or demurrer to meet amendments.

Demurrer after amendment as abandonment of former plea, see post ¶ 603.

Striking new answer needlessly interposed, see ante ¶ 454.

Right to answer amended pleading, see Jud. Act, chap. XVI, § 2; Comp. L. 1915, § 12479.

¶ 580. When a bill is amended after answer by merely adding another defendant, no new answer by the original defendant is necessary.—Salisbury v. Miller, 14 Mich. 160.

¶ 581. A plea is superseded by amending the bill; and the defendant should plead, answer or demur to the amended bill as if no plea had been interposed before.—Peck v. Burgess, W. 485.

¶ 582. A bill was amended after hearing by adding allegations explaining matters referred to in the answer; held, that a demurrer to the amended bill was null in that it was not confined to the amendments, and did not purport to cover the whole bill, while it pointed out no part of it as demurrable which was separable from the rest.—Munch v. Shabel, 37 Mich. 166.

§ 145. Further answer after partial quashing or expunging.

Leave to plead over demurrer, plea or motion, see post § 211.

¶ 583. Where defendant both answers and demurs to different parts of the bill, and the demurrer is overruled, complainant, to obtain a further answer, must except to the answer already put in by defendant within twenty days after the demurrer is overruled.—Bragg v. Whitcomb, W. 307.

¶ 584. Whether a defendant should be required to answer over, on exceptions, where the disclosure sought is matter of record, quære.—Cummings v. Corey, 58 Mich. 494.

F. CONSTRUCTION, CHARACTER AND EFFECT OF PLEADINGS; ISSUES, PROOFS AND VARIANCE.

§ 146. Character, theory and effect of bill.

Character as affected or determined by prayer, see post § 147.

Pleading construable as petition for rehearing or as bill, see post ¶ 918.

Character of bill as amended bill or supplemental bill, see post ¶ 933.

Character of bill as original or of revivor and supplement, see post ¶ 934.

Bills of review as distinguished from bills of revivor and supplement or from original bills, see post § 240.

Admissions made and issues joined and burden assumed by theory of the bill, see post §§ 152-160.

Rule against shifting theory, see post § 163.

Effect of introduction of inconsistent theories by amendment, see post ¶ 597.
Construction and effect of the averments, see post §§ 148-151.
Cross-bill and answer thereto as bringing matter within scope of record, see also post ¶ 650.

¶ 585. The stating part of a bill of complaint determines its character, and it is immaterial that the prayer for relief is inconsistent.—Raniak v. Pokorney, 198 Mich. 567. (Ostrander, J., dissenting.)

¶ 586. A bill to restrain the prosecution of an action at law cannot be regarded as one of interpleader where the liability of the defendant is merely for a money judgment, and he does not hold any fund to which different parties are making claims. —Michigan Sugar Co. v. Moffett, 183 Mich. 589.

¶ 587. Creditor's bill, to enforce the payment of a judgment, making one a defendant who was alleged to be indebted to, and also the fraudulent grantee of, the judgment debtor. This defendant afterwards filed his bill against the complainant, claiming to have become the owner of the debt for which the judgment was rendered, and of a collateral mortgage given to secure it, and praying to have his title to these securities established. The judgment debtor—who was the mortgagor in the collateral mortgage—and the holder of a prior mortgage, were also made parties, and the bill prayed leave to redeem from the prior mortgage, and the foreclosure of the other. Held, that this was an original and not a cross-bill.—Andrews v. Kibbee, 12 Mich. 94.

¶ 588. A court is not bound by the opinion of the counsel concerning the theory of a bill for relief, but, whatever the purpose of its allegations, is governed by the case actually made by the bill.—Geney v. Maynard, 44 Mich. 578.

§ 147. ——As tested by prayer.
See also ante ¶ 585.
For purpose of deciding demurrer, see post § 156, ¶ 635.
Effect of alternative prayer to enlarge scope of proper relief, rule that decree must conform to bill, see post § 209.

¶ 589. The insertion in a bill in aid of proceedings at law of an inconsistent prayer for distinct independent relief does not change the ancillary character of the suit.—Lewis v. Campau, 14 Mich. 458; Livingston v. Hayes, 43 Mich. 129.

¶ 590. Where the prayer of a bill is broad enough to sustain the relief asked for, and the proof and pleadings warrant it, no statements in the bill that are not of controlling force will be allowed to defeat it.—Taylor v. Young, 56 Mich. 285.

§ 148. Construction and effect of allegations.
Construction for purpose of ascertaining if multifarious, see also ante §§ 73-76.
On hearing of demurrer, see ante § 112 et seq.
Effect of affidavits accompanying bill, see ante § 114.
Construction of amendments with original, see post § 150.
Of motions and demurrers, see post § 151.
Character and effect of bill, see ante §§ 146, 147.
Construction of pleading as bill or information, see ante ¶ 247.
Sufficiency of bill to show jurisdiction, see ante §§ 83-85.
Effect of pleading or failure to plead as admission of facts alleged by adversary, see post § 152 et seq.
What regarded as allegations of fact admitted by demurrer, see post § 156, ¶ 633.
[Note. Many cases of construction of pleadings and allegations therein are presented in decisions that a pleading is sufficient for this or that particular cause of action. It would be improper to take such cases from the specific topics, where they may be found, merely in order to collate them in one general place. See generally the topics referred to ante under § 77.]

¶ 591. A sentence in defendant's answer which is open to more than one construction ought not to be singled out and subjected to a construction which the context shows was not the pleader's intent; nor should relief be based upon such a sentence unsupported by proof and contradicted by defendant's theory and proofs.—Newaygo County Mfg. Co. v. Stevens, 79 Mich. 398.

¶ 592. When a party offers to show an agreement it is to be presumed that he proposes to prove all that is requisite to make the agreement sufficient in law; so, of an offer in a bill of complaint.—Bigelow v. Sanford, 98 Mich. 657.

¶ 593. A bill for an accounting is not bad as alleging that the matters at issue have already been settled, where it alleges that one of the defendants accepted settlement of his claim against the estate of plaintiff's decedent without paying to the estate what was owing by him to the estate, and where it seeks accounting of the amount so unpaid and owing.—Graham v. Graham, 171 Mich. 307.

¶ 594. Under the rule that a pleading is construed most strongly against the pleader an allegation in a cross-bill that the defendant holds by deed without notice of prior conveyance taken as confessed cannot be construed to mean more than a quitclaim deed which being insufficient to prevail over a prior conveyance does not by reason of the pro confesso defeat the complainant's title especially in the light of evidence that the deed was in fact a quitclaim deed.—Messenger v. Peter, 129 Mich. 93.

§ 149. ——Allegations implied from others.

See the note under the preceding section.

Inferential admissions, see post § 152.

¶ 595. On a bill by judgment creditors in aid of execution to set aside a deed by the debtor, where no positive allegation of possession is made in the answer by defendants, grantees of debtor, but ownership of the premises is repeatedly asserted and it is stated that the land, by reason of the improvements, is worth a certain sum, the matter of possession is presented. Atkinson v. Akin, 197 Mich. 289.

§ 150. ——Amendments and original matter.

Amendment as superseding original, see also ante ¶ 581.

¶ 596. A bill and its amendments constitute but one record, and the answers thereto but one.—Munch v. Shabel, 37 Mich. 166.

¶ 597. A bill and the amendment thereof constitute but one record; and where the bill as amended embraces inconsistent theories based upon repugnant averments, it should be dismissed on demurrer.—Ogden v. Moore, 95 Mich. 290.

¶ 598. There is no inconsistency between an original bill alleging that the sole management of an estate was intrusted to complainant executor, who dealt with investments through a certain agent incurring losses in them, and an allegation in a so-called supplement amendatory of the original bill stating that the two executors joined in appointing such agent.—Cheever v. Ellis, 144 Mich. 477.

¶ 599. An amendment (or supplement in form) to a bill, averring that an agent of executors for making investments was appointed by complainant's executor and defendant, a coexecutor, and that the agent conferred with both, that certain losses occurred through this agent and that the two executors participated in the management of the estate in respect to the affairs conducted through this agent, and that complainant's executor never had the exclusive management of affairs intrusted to this agent, is inconsistent with such part of the original bill as alleged in substance that defendant intrusted practically the entire management of the affairs of the estate to complainant's executor.—Cheever v. Ellis, 144 Mich. 477.

¶ 600. The fact that the original answer to a bill in equity does not contain a prayer for affirmative relief is not a bar to affirmative relief when the amended answer and cross-bill contains such a prayer.—Thomas v. Nicolls, 191 Mich. 489.

§ 151. ——Of motions and demurrers.

¶ 601. A demurrer to a supplemental bill cannot be treated as a general demurrer where it fails to allege a want of equity in the bill and assigns as ground of demurrer that the complainant has not made or stated a case which entitles him to file a bill, or any bill in the nature thereof, or a case which entitles him to the relief prayed for.—Taylor v. Taylor, 87 Mich. 64.

¶ 602. Where a so-called supplemental bill states no newly discovered evidence and merely repleads with amplifications the matter of the original bill and also sets forth all of the original pleadings and evidence, a demurrer may be treated as raising the question whether the whole record presents a prima facie case against defendant for the relief sought.—Cheever v. Ellis, 144 Mich. 477.

¶ 603. Though by amending the bill in response to a plea, the plea is admitted, the new bill standing in place of the former one is not answered by the plea; and accordingly the defendant then demurring treats the case as if no plea had been filed.—Tompkins v. Hollister, 60 Mich. 470.

§ 152. Issues presented and admissions.

Making admissions in open court, see post § 174.

Theory of bill, see ante §§ 146, 147.

Impropriety of general denials or denials in literal terms of bill, see ante ¶¶ 389, 390.

Admissions by failure to plead to bill or cross-bill or by demurrer, see post §§ 154-156.

Effect of answer to make admission, see also ante ¶ 391.

Presumptions and inferences from admitted facts, see post § 157.

Effect of admission or denial to fix burden of proof, see post § 160.

Unsworn answer as admission discharging burden of proof, see also post § 164a.

Taking issue on defective pleadings, see post § 153.

Variance of proofs from bill and record, see post §§ 161, 162.

Replications to join issue under former practice, see ante § 111e.

Disability of guardians to bind infants by admissions, see Guardians ad Litem, III; Guardianship, IV.

Admissions by one defendant to interpleader bill, necessity of traverse by other, see Interpleader.

Taking bill as confessed notwithstanding answer as admission of truth of the answer, see also Defaults ¶ 50.

Sufficiency of answer in bill to quiet title on tax sale to admit service of notice to redeem, see also Taxes, XII, C.

¶ 604. Nothing is regarded as admitted by an answer in chancery unless expressly admitted.—Morris v. Morris, 5 Mich. 171; Morris v. Hoyt, 11 Mich. 9; Young v. McKee, 13

Mich. 552; Hardwick v. Bassett, 25 Mich. 149.

¶ 605. The admissions in a bill or answer in chancery, to be conclusive on the party making them, must be full and unequivocal. They must not be inferred from other admissions, unless the express admissions are so closely connected with the one to be inferred that to disprove the latter would disprove the former.—Schwarz v. Sears, W. 19.

¶ 606. A bill in equity alleged that the defendant had platted certain disputed premises and had caused the plat to be acknowledged and recorded according to the statute. The answer admitted the ownership of the land and the platting and recording as alleged. Held, that the charge and admission amount to a full recognition of the validity of the plat and record.—White v. Smith, 37 Mich. 291.

¶ 607. Under Chancery Rule 10 the allegations of an answer are taken as true where the case is heard on bill and answer.—Gates v. City of Grand Rapids, 134 Mich. 96.

¶ 608. Under 1897 C. C. Rule 10, subd. d, providing that every material allegation in a bill not answered shall be taken as admitted, a defendant who fails to answer an averment of a bill to enforce a mechanic's lien that personal service of the lien statement was not made upon him because of his absence from the county thereby admits it to be true, and no proof need be made thereof.—J. E. Greilick Co. v. Rogers, 144 Mich. 313.

¶ 609. Under 1897 Chancery Rule 10, subd. d, providing that every answer shall contain an explicit "admission or denial of each allegation of the bill" as to which the defendant has knowledge or belief but as to matters alleged of which he has no knowledge sufficient to form a belief, he shall not be required to admit or deny but "shall state his want of such knowledge," and also providing that every material allegation to which defendant "shall not make answer" shall be taken as admitted, a foreclosure bill alleging all necessary facts and the amount due for principal and interest to the date of the bill stands admitted on an answer neither admitting nor denying it but putting complainant to proof.—Hoock v. Sloman, 145 Mich. 19.

¶ 610. Where a replication to a plea is filed, the truth of the plea is the only question to be tried; and, if established, it is a bar to so much of the bill as it professes to cover.—Hurlbut v. Britain, W. 454.

¶ 611. By replying to a plea to the whole bill, instead of setting it down for argument, its validity is admitted, and the only question left for trial is the truth of the facts alleged in the plea.—Little v. Stephens, 82 Mich. 596.

(3 Mich. Dig. 11)

¶ 612. Unless a replication is filed, the complainant in a bill in equity, if he brings the cause to a hearing, cannot help out his case by proof.—Lafrance v. Griffin, 160 Mich. 236.

¶ 613. Nothing in a bill in equity is taken as true without proof unless admitted by the answer, and whether the answer is or is not sworn to, if answer on oath is waived, the rule is the same.—Lafrance v. Griffin, 160 Mich. 236.

¶ 614. Where a bill contains a general charge against a defendant, of co-operation with other defendants to procure a deed to the latter, but makes no specific charge against him predicated upon or sustained by any statement of facts which could be met and denied, admitted or explained by the answer, neither his acts nor omissions are put in issue, so as to be receivable against the others.—Dawson v. Hall, 2 Mich. 390.

¶ 615. The validity of the acknowledgment and record of a plat held to be admitted by the course of pleading in chancery, wherein the bill alleged a plat according to the statute and the answer admitted it.—White v. Smith, 37 Mich. 291.

§ 153. ——On informal or defective pleading.

¶ 616. Introducing facts that should be the basis of an amended bill, in the shape of a supplemental bill, is not a substantial error; the defendants can take issue upon it as they would upon an amended bill.—Hess v. Final, 32 Mich. 515.

¶ 617. Where a bill in equity calls for an answer on oath, and an unsworn answer is put in to which complainant makes replication without objecting, the effect is to permit the answer to stand as unsworn pleading.—Adair v. Cummin, 48 Mich. 375.

§ 154. Admission by failure to plead or answer.

By failure to answer cross-bill, see post § 155.

Failure to admit as equivalent to denial casting burden on party alleging fact, see also post § 160.

Admissions by failure to answer bill fully, see 1916 C. C. Rule 25, § 2.

¶ 618. A material allegation in a bill not answered, is taken as admitted, under the chancery rules, as to a defendant competent to answer.—Nolan v. Garrison, 151 Mich. 138.

¶ 619. Where a defendant defaults in putting in a plea or answer to a bill, he admits every material fact stated therein, and cannot afterwards introduce evidence to controvert its allegations.—St. Louis Hoop & Stave Co. v. Danforth, 160 Mich. 226.

¶ 620. Every material allegation in the bill to which the defendant shall not make answer is taken as admitted by defendant, under Chancery Rule 10, subd. d.—Lafrance v. Griffin, 160 Mich. 236.

§ 155. Admissions by failure to answer cross-bill.

See also ante ¶ 594.

¶ 621. A replication to an answer by which defendant claims the benefit of a cross-bill under (First) Chancery Rule 123, puts at issue the original case as made by bill and answer; and cross-bill averments in the answer must be answered specifically or a default may be taken.—Coach v. Kent Circuit Judge, 97 Mich. 563.

¶ 622. Failure to file an answer to a cross-bill justifies an order taking it as confessed under 1897 Chancery Rule 11, subd. c.—Messenger v. Peter, 129 Mich. 93.

¶ 623. On a bill by creditors of a corporation against retiring stockholders, on failure to answer a cross-bill denying the validity of the debt, the order pro confesso admits the allegations to be true.—Clark v. E. C. Clark Mach. Co., 151 Mich. 416.

¶ 624. Complainant averred in his bill that the lands in question were in a wild state. Defendants denied this in their cross-bill and averred that they had possession. Held, complainant's omission to specifically deny this averment did not admit possession in defendants.—Beuthien v. Dillon, 160 Mich. 396. (Montgomery, C. J., and McAlvay, J., concurring on the ground that defendants were barred from relief on their cross-bill by their laches.)

§ 156. Admissions by demurring or moving to dismiss.

Assumption of truth of bill on appeal from demurrer without answer, see Appeal § 351.

¶ 625. Demurrer to a bill in equity does not admit the truth of matters that are not relevant or well pleaded, nor the correctness of legal inferences, nor unreasonable deductions of facts, nor unreasonable or inequitable meanings or implications.—Churchill Township v. Cummings Township, 51 Mich. 446.

¶ 626. A demurrer to a bill admits the complainant's case for the purpose of that issue only, and not for the purpose of establishing a right to relief which the proofs might not sustain if defendant should be allowed to answer after his demurrer is overruled.—Cook v. Detroit & M. R. R. Co., 45 Mich. 453.

¶ 627. A demurrer admits the truth of the averments of fact properly pleaded in the bill of complaint.—Traders' Bank of Canada v. Fraser, 162 Mich. 315; Cole v. Cole Realty Co., 169 Mich. 347; Barr v. Packard Motor Car Co., 172 Mich. 299; Olsen v. Williams, 172 Mich. 316; Young v. Reeves & Co., 172 Mich. 363; Levitan v. Houghton Nat. Bank, 182 Mich. 30; City of Owosso v. Union Tel. Co., 185 Mich. 349; Buck v. Lockwood, 193 Mich. 242; Freeman v. Mitchell, 198 Mich. 207.

¶ 628. For the purposes of the argument a demurrer admits the truth of the allegations of a bill of complaint.—Bushman v. Faltis, 184 Mich. 172.

¶ 629. Where a bill alleging fraud is demurred to, the truth of the allegations can only be determined after the testimony has been taken.—Toledo, S. & M. Ry. Co. v. Shafer, 190 Mich. 89.

¶ 630. A demurrer admits facts only. It would not admit the legal construction of a devise to be that which is claimed in the bill.—LeBaron v. Shepherd, 21 Mich. 263.

¶ 631. A demurrer to a bill against a corporation admits its allegation that there is no other creditor but complainant.—Brewer v. Michigan Salt Ass'n, 58 Mich. 351.

¶ 632. On demurrer to a bill, which does not allege that a trust attacked as invalid was by parol, an admission that it was such, coupled with the framework of the bill indicating that a parol trust was relied on, displaces the presumption that where a party offers to show an agreement it is in such form as the statute requires to be a legal one.—Thompson v. Marley, 102 Mich. 476.

¶ 633. An allegation in a taxpayer's injunction bill against the officials of a municipality that the "bonds of the city will be immediately issued and disposed of to innocent purchasers as your orators have good reasons to believe and do believe," is an allegation of fact based upon information and belief, and not a mere allegation of information and belief; and a demurrer to such allegation admits the fact alleged.—Bates v. City of Hastings, 145 Mich. 574.

¶ 634. Where the complainant in a bill for an accounting and for injunctive relief averred that the oral agreement between the parties for an accounting was not a contract enforceable at law but one that could be urged only in equity, held that the averment, being taken as true on the motion to dismiss, it could not be maintained by the defendant that the complainant had an adequate remedy at law.—Long Point Development Ass'n v. McIntosh, 193 Mich. 567.

¶ 635. Complainant's rights upon demurrer are to be tested by the allegations in his bill taken as true, rather than by his prayer for relief.—Laubengayer v. Rohde, 167 Mich. 605.

¶ 636. An objection to the sufficiency of a pleading only admits the facts stated for the temporary purpose of the pending suit.—Eveland v. Stephenson, 45 Mich. 394.

§ 157. Presumptions and inferences from admitted facts.

Admissions inferable from other admissions, see also ante ¶ 605.

Presumptions and inferences in general, see Evidence, II.

¶ 637. Where a bill to set aside a deed sets up arrangements which are admitted, and which do not appear, as alleged, to be lacking in any legal formalities, it must be assumed that they are legal and could be proved if not admitted.—Victor Sewing Mach. Co. v. Jacobs, 46 Mich. 494.

¶ 638. A complainant sought to redeem lands which he claimed to have transferred as security. Defendant answered that the assignment was absolute. Complainant replied that defendant had invited the transfer in order that the lands might be screened from an unfounded proceeding against complainant. Defendant denied that he so received it, or knew anything about the proceeding, as to which it did not appear whether it was well founded or not except from complainant's testimony that it was not. Held, that defendant could not claim that complainant's averment of the dishonest purpose of the transfer was sufficient ground for refusing to construe the transaction as a mortgage.—Gunderman v. Gunnison, 39 Mich. 313.

§ 158. Burden of proof.

Necessity of proof of matters not admitted, see also post § 164.

Of matters defensive in character, see post § 159.

General rule as to burden, see Evidence, II.

Burden as to particular issues and facts, see specific topics treating of such facts.

¶ 639. A complainant in chancery must be prepared to support his own case and to meet any evidence fairly controverting it.—Morris v. Morris, 5 Mich. 171.

§ 159. ——Matters of defense.

Answer as evidence for answering defendant, see also post ¶ 662.

Variance of proofs from pleading, see post § 162.

¶ 640. While an answer called for on oath is to be received as true so far as it is responsive to the averments of the bill, affirmative matters of defense which are thus set up must be proved.—Hart v. Carpenter, 36 Mich. 402.

¶ 641. Where complainant alleged in his bill a right to certain shares of partnership property, and defendant denied the right, and set up an independent contract to show himself entitled to one-half the shares, the answer was held not to come within the rule of being directly responsive to the allegations of the bill, and the new contract was required to be proved.—Ramsdell v. Millerd, H. 373.

§ 160. ——Effect of admissions or denials.

See also post ¶ 812.

Matters admitted, see ante §§ 152-156.

¶ 642. Where an answer does not admit a fact set up in a bill no denial is necessary; but the failure to admit is equivalent to a denial, and throws upon the complainant the burden of proof.—Hardwick v. Bassett, 25 Mich. 149.

¶ 643. Where the plea to a divorce bill denies the marriage, complainant has the burden of proving it.—Cross v. Cross, 55 Mich. 280.

¶ 644. A bill was filed to restrain the use of an easement to purposes specified in the grant under which it was claimed. The bill set forth an agreement between the parties, by which defendants were allowed to use the easement for the machinery then in use, and alleged a subsequent change in the machinery. The answer (not on oath) alleged that the change was made before the agreement. Replication was filed, but no proofs taken. Held, that the answer in this particular was responsive to the bill, and, as the case stood, complainant could have no relief on this part of the case.—Mandeville v. Comstock, 9 Mich. 536.

¶ 645. If the answer to a bill of complaint is so framed as by its omission or otherwise to admit by implication an allegation (of title) contained in the bill, even if said answer is not upon oath, it should relieve complainants from the burden of proof. The rule that nothing is to be admitted unless expressly admitted is to be interpreted in the light of common sense, and not given a mere arbitrary force.—Shook v. Proctor, 27 Mich. 349; Shook v. Proctor, 27 Mich. 377.

¶ 646. Where a bill in equity charges on information and belief that a transaction is fraudulent, and the answer directly denies it, the complainant has the burden of showing it to be so by independent evidence.—Darling v. Hurst, 39 Mich. 765.

¶ 647. Where a mortgage or other security is set forth and referred to in a bill in chancery, and made a ground of relief, it becomes a necessary part of the record, and if not denied in the answer it needs no formal proof.—Mickle v. Maxfield, 42 Mich. 304.

§ 161. Variance of proofs from pleadings.

Shifting theory on trial or hearing, see post § 163.

Immaterial variance or failure of proofs, see post § 180.

Disregarding facts proved but not in issue, see post § 179.
Basing decree on matters subsequent to filing of bill, see post § 207.
Necessity that decree conform to bill, see post § 208.
Variance in suits for particular relief or object, see specific topics like Fraud, III; Rescission, VI; Specific Performance, IV.
Rules as to variance at law, see Pleading, X.
Joint bill to redeem, necessity of proof of joint claim, see also Mortgages, IX.
Allegations of title by purchase at execution sale and of possession thereunder as sustaining proof of title by adverse possession, see also Rescission, VI.

¶ 648. Where complainant in a bill to quiet title claimed under a sheriff's deed, which both parties treat as applying to the specific property, it cannot be alleged as a variance between the deed and the bill that the deed, though otherwise properly specifying the lots and the name of the village and plat, has omitted the county and state. —Smith v. Brown, 34 Mich. 455.

¶ 649. Relief on a judgment creditor's bill will not be denied on the ground that judgment was entered upon a later date than that stated in the bill, if it appears that the later judgment entry was merely to correct the one relied on, and it does not appear that counsel did not have notice of the correction or were misled by the variance.—First Nat. Bank of Marshall v. Hosmer, 48 Mich. 200.

¶ 650. The fact that a bill for foreclosure of a land contract counts upon that contract alone does not render proof of supplemental agreements subject to an objection of variance, where such supplemental agreements are set up in a cross-bill by the defendant, and answered by the complainant. —Schmidt v. Gaukler, 156 Mich. 243.

§ 162. ——Of defenses and rebuttals from allegations.

¶ 651. A plea that defendant is the bona fide purchaser and owner of an absolute title to lands is not sustained by evidence that he is the owner of a mortgage interest only.—Emerson v. Atwater, 7 Mich. 12.

¶ 652. The defendant can only defend on the grounds set up in his answer.—Van Dyke v. Davis, 2 Mich. 144; Smith v. Brown, 2 Mich. 161.

¶ 653. A defense to a bill in equity fails so far as it depends on any affirmative showing where the evidence can only be used to establish an entirely different defense from that which the answer outlines.—Harrington v. Brewer, 56 Mich. 301.

¶ 654. Where complainant by a general replication puts in issue the truth of a plea that sets up an accord and satisfaction and certain receipts signed himself, he cannot show a mistake in the accord or explain the receipts by parol evidence—Horn v. Detroit Dry-Dock Co., 150 U. S. 610, 37 L. ed. 1199, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 214.

§ 163. Shifting theory of case.

Necessity that decree conform to bill and record, see post §§ 208, 209.
Rule against shifting theory on appeal or on retrial after remand, see Appeal §§ 267-269, 465 et seq.; 559 et seq.

¶ 655. A complainant will not be permitted to shift the position taken in his bill of complaint, but is bound by the case therein made.—Huggett v. Case, 61 Mich. 480.

¶ 656. A complainant seeking to have his deed construed as a mortgage is confined to the ground on which he filed his bill, and cannot afterwards claim that he was unduly influenced to execute the paper as a deed.—Tilden v. Streeter, 45 Mich. 533.

§ 164. Effect of pleadings as evidence.

Effect as admissions, see ante §§ 152-156.
Pleadings as admissions or declarations against interest made out of court and as such receivable in evidence in other suits and actions, see Evidence, VII, C.
Use of sworn pleadings as affidavits on motions for interlocutory relief, see Motions and Orders; Injunctions, IV; Receivers, II, A.

¶ 657. A bill in equity is no evidence for complainant; and where the case is submitted on bill and answer, and no exceptions are filed to the latter, relief must be based on the admissions in the answer. And if it denies or does not admit any averment that is material to the prayer for relief, the bill must fail.—Wiegert v. Franck, 56 Mich. 200.

¶ 658. A bill in equity is not evidence for complainant; and, since a sworn answer must be taken as true, where the case is submitted on bill and answer, and no exceptions are filed to the latter, relief must be based on the admissions in the answer; and, if it denies or does not admit any averment that is material to the prayer for relief, the bill must fail.—Fields v. Colby, 102 Mich. 449.

§ 164a. ——Of unsworn answer.

Effect of admissions or denials on burden of proof, see ante § 160.

¶ 659. Where answer on oath is waived and replication is filed, the answer is not evidence, but complainant may use the answer as an admission by defendant of any facts stated in it necessary to establish his case. But he cannot use one part and exclude other parts relating to the same subject that would be responsive to the bill had the answer been under oath.—Durfee v. McClurg, 6 Mich. 223.

¶ 660. The answer without oath is a mere pleading, and of no effect as evidence. So far as it admits the case made by the bill, it relieves the complainant from proof. So far as it controverts that case, it puts the complainant to his proof. But so far as it alleges any new matter of avoidance, or any matter the burden of proving which would naturally rest upon the defendant, it is of no effect without proof.—Morris v. Hoyt, 11 Mich. 9.

§ 164b. ——Attached documents or copies.

¶ 661. A deed is not made evidence by attaching to an answer in chancery what is alleged to be a copy of it; this only amplifies the pleading.—Shepard v. Shepard, 36 Mich. 173.

§ 165. Sworn answer as evidence.

See also ante ¶ 658.

As to affirmative matters of defense, see also ante § 159.

Necessity, requisites and sufficiency of verification, see ante §§ 68-70.

Exceptions to answer, see post § 166a.

Unsworn answer as receivable admission, see ante ¶ 659.

Effect of sworn answer to sworn bill as evidence, see 1916 C. C. Rule 25, § 1.

¶ 662. When an answer is called for on oath, whatever is responsive to the bill is evidence for as well as against defendant. —Schwarz v. Wendell, W. 267.

¶ 663. Where the bill waives answer under oath, a sworn answer has no greater effect than one unsworn.—Van Inwagen v. Van Inwagen, 86 Mich. 333.

¶ 664. A grossly evasive answer cannot have the force of one that shows apparent good faith.—Fairbairn v. Middlemiss, 47 Mich. 372.

¶ 665. An answer to a judgment creditor's bill, used in opposition to a motion for the appointment of a receiver before the time for replying has expired, can only be treated as an affidavit.—Rankin v. Rothschild, 78 Mich. 10.

§ 165a. ——Responsiveness and particularity.

Burden of proof as to new matter not responsive, see also ante ¶ 641.

¶ 666. If a fact stated in the bill, and answered by defendant, is material to complainant's case, or is a circumstance from which a material fact may be inferred, the answer, in such case, is responsive to the bill, and is evidence in the cause.—Schwarz v. Wendell, W. 267.

¶ 667. An answer may sometimes be evidence of a fact not stated in the bill; as where the bill sets forth part of complainant's case only, instead of the whole, and the part omitted, and stated in the answer, shows a different case from that stated in the bill, and is not in avoidance merely.—Schwarz v. Wendell, W. 267.

¶ 668. A bill to foreclose a mortgage alleged it to have been given for an actual indebtedness to an amount named, which still remained unpaid. Answer on oath was called for, and the answer which was filed purported to set forth the circumstances under which the mortgage was given, showing it to have been in part for money advanced, and in part for property at a valuation which the party had failed to convey according to agreement. Held, that the answer was responsive to the bill and was evidence.—Robinson v. Cromelein, 15 Mich. 316.

¶ 669. Where an answer does not show a different case from that set up in the bill, but sets up new matter in avoidance, it is not evidence of such new matter.—Schwarz v. Wendell, W. 267; Attorney General v. Oakland County Bank, W. 90; Van Dyke v. Davis, 2 Mich. 144; Hunt v. Thorn, 2 Mich. 213.

¶ 670. A judgment creditor's bill, filed to reach property acquired by the debtor's wife under various transfers made by him, called for answers under oath. The wife denied that any of the transfers made were to hinder or defraud creditors of her husband or of the firms to which he belonged, or to shield any of his property, and averred that at the time of the conveyances she believed her husband and the firms to be solvent. The answer was held responsive, and not being excepted to was sustained, though it would have been well to set forth in detail all circumstances connected with the transfers made.—Hubbell v. Grant, 39 Mich. 611.

§ 165b. ——Assumptions of truth.

¶ 671. A sworn answer to a bill in equity is taken to be true where the cause is heard on bill and answer.—Ruhlig v. Wiegert, 49 Mich. 399.

¶ 672. A sworn answer to a bill in equity is taken to be true in all points where the cause proceeds to a hearing on bill and answer only.—Huyck v. Bailey, 100 Mich. 223; Fields v. Colby Highway Com'r of Iosco Township, 102 Mich. 449.

¶ 673. An answer to a bill in equity is to be taken as true, where the cause is heard on bill, demurrer, and answer.—American Mirror Glass Beveling Co. v. Bulkley, 107 Mich. 447.

¶ 674. When no replication is filed the answer is received as true and is evidence.—Durfee v. McClurg, 6 Mich. 223.

§ 165c. ——Weight and conclusiveness.

¶ 675. A sworn answer is not conclusive, and, while treated as evidence, is subject to the same rules as to weight as any other evidence.—Newlove v. Callaghan, 86 Mich. 301.

¶ 676. A bill being filed to reach land for which it was alleged the husband had paid, taking title jointly to himself and his wife to defraud his creditors, a sworn answer was filed alleging that title was so taken in order that the survivor should take and that the consideration was paid principally from the wife's money. Held, that although the answer was evidence, it was not conclusive, and was of little weight in view of the defendant's refusal to testify how much the wife paid.—Newlove v. Callaghan, 86 Mich. 301.

¶ 677. The denial of fraud in an answer under oath is not conclusive on the court if the facts and circumstances of the case are such as irresistibly to lead the mind to a different conclusion.—How v. Camp, W. 427.

¶ 678. A defendant cannot, by his answer, vary the terms of a written contract.—Schwarz v. Wendell, W. 267.

¶ 679. A written contract that is complete in itself being set up in a bill in equity and produced in proof, it was held that it was not impeached by an averment in the sworn answer that it constituted but part of the entire contract of which the residue was reduced to writing and in complainant's possession, nor by contradictory and unsatisfactory parol proofs of an agreement not supplementary to the writing produced and proved.—Rogers v. Odell, 36 Mich. 411.

¶ 680. Since the statute of 1861 the defendant's answer on oath, responsive to the bill, is to be regarded as of the same force only which it would have were it the defendant's deposition as a witness.—Roberts v. Miles, 12 Mich. 297.

¶ 681. By his answer defendant had alleged the consideration of a certain deed (decreed by the court to be a mortgage) to have been a debt to a certain amount. The answer estops him from showing that a larger sum was due.—Emerson v. Atwater, 12 Mich. 314.

¶ 682. Where the answer is called for on oath, and the defendant of his own knowledge fully and fairly negatives any allegation of the bill, complainant can have no relief depending upon that allegation, unless the answer is overcome by more than the equally full testimony of one witness.—Roberts v. Miles, 12 Mich. 297.

¶ 683. The rule calling for more than one witness amounts simply to this: That there can be no decree in favor of complainant unless the evidence preponderates in his favor; and that where answer and opposing witness are equally fair and explicit, there can be no such preponderance.—Roberts v. Miles, 12 Mich. 297.

¶ 684. If defendant, after having answered, is called upon to stand as a witness under the statute of 1861, and furnishes the means of destroying his own answer, and corroborating complainant's case, his testimony on the oral examination and cross-examination is preferable to his answer.—Roberts v. Miles, 12 Mich. 297.

§ 166. Answer of one affecting other defendants.

Answer or demurrer by one inuring to all defendants, see ante § 96.

As admission receivable against others, see ante ¶ 605; and see also Evidence, VII, C, 2, 3.

¶ 685. The assignee of the grantee in a deed absolute in form interposed, to a bill to redeem, the plea of a bona fide purchase without notice, which plea, on the hearing, was found untrue. Held, that as he was then undefended except by the answer of his grantor, and was entitled to all the benefits of that, so, also, he was concluded by its statements—e. g., as to the amount due—to the same extent as his grantor himself.—Emerson v. Atwater, 12 Mich. 314.

§ 166a. Exceptions to answer as evidence.

¶ 686. Complainant cannot examine as a witness a defendant against whom he seeks relief; if such defendant's answer was insufficient, he should except, and if his testimony was sought to facts not stated in the bill, it should be amended.—Thomas v. Stone, W. 117.

¶ 687. A complainant in a judgment creditor's bill is not entitled to file exceptions to the voluntary answer of an officer of a defendant corporation, especially if the answer be an express denial of the charges made in the bill.—McCreery v. Bay Circuit Judge, 93 Mich. 463.

VIII. TRIAL AND HEARING.

A. IN GENERAL.

§ 167. In general; manner, time and notice.

Hearing on issues of law, see post § 168.

Hearing and trial of preliminary and dilatory fact issues, see post § 169.

Hearing on cross-bills, see post § 170.

Offering, taking and receiving proofs, see post §§ 171-178.

Striking out or rejecting proofs, see post § 181.

Admissibility and sufficiency of proofs, see post § 179.

References and making up issues for juries, see post, VIII, B.

Making amendments on hearing, see ante § 131 et seq.

Practice on entering decree, see post §§ 202, 203.

Calendaring cause for hearing, see Calendar.

Propriety of judge taking account instead of referring it, see Accounting Suits § 10.

Practice in hearing of chancery appeals, see generally Appeal, XII.
Trial de novo on appeal, see Appeal, XII, H.
On divorce bills, see Divorce § 85 et seq.
Taking proofs on default, see Defaults § 23.
Proceedings for discovery and inspection, see Discovery.
Errors regarded as harmless or as cured and therefore not ground for reversal, see Harmless Error.
Mode of taking proofs and hearing evidence, see post § 175 et seq.
Power to consolidate or sever suits, see Jud. Act, chap. VIII, § 1; Comp. L. 1915, § 12309.
Rules for conduct of trials and opening statements, see 1916 C. C. Rule 42.

¶ 688. A circuit court cannot decline to hear a cause in chancery, where either party has regularly claimed a hearing in open court, unless an order has been made upon good cause shown, directing it to be proceeded in otherwise. Such a case may be placed on the docket, and a mandamus lies to compel the court to proceed in it as right and justice may require.—People ex rel. Stebbins v. Barry Circuit Judge, 27 Mich. 170.

¶ 689. Issues of fact arising in cases where a court of chancery has jurisdiction are always tried by the chancellor, unless, in his discretion, he calls a jury for an advisory verdict to aid him in determining the facts (Comp. Laws, 1897, § 462), and if the case is properly one for equitable adjudication, the litigants' constitutional right to a trial by jury is not invaded.—Cole v. Cole Realty Co., 169 Mich. 347.

¶ 690. The circuit judge has a right to hear a case of accounting without a reference to a commissioner, but when he does so he should proceed as a commissioner would, and the parties should make their complaints of his action in such form that, if the case is appealed to the supreme court, the precise matters in controversy will be indicated by the record.—Barnebee v. Beckley, 43 Mich. 613.

¶ 691. The circuit judge has a right to hear an account without referring the taking of it.—Roelofs v. Wever, 119 Mich. 334.

¶ 692. In a foreclosure case the court may dispense with a reference to compute the amount due and may make its own computation.—Ireland v. Woolman, 15 Mich. 253; Vaughan v. Nims, 36 Mich. 297.

¶ 693. A decree made without notice of hearing, or on notice insufficient in point of time is erroneous.—Jenny v. O'Flynn, 5 Mich. 215.

¶ 694. Where, after overruling a demurrer in a foreclosure suit, the bill was taken as confessed by defendant, and the case referred to a commissioner to compute the amount due, the case heard on the commissioner's report, and decree of foreclosure made without notice of hearing to the defendant, who had appeared, but all the other proceedings in the case were regular, and no exception was taken by the defendant to the commissioner's report, and no application made to the court below for relief, held, that the supreme court would not, on the ground of want of notice of hearing alone, reverse the decree made below.—Martin v. McReynolds, 6 Mich. 70.

§ 168. On issues of law and demurrers.

Right to put in proofs, see post § 171.
Proper decree or disposal of cause, see post §§ 210, 211.
Pendency of hearing on demurrer as preventing dismissal, see post § 196.
Costs for failure to bring on and dispose of case on demurrer, see Costs § 31, ¶ 107.
Motion to bring on in advance matters of defense formerly made by plea, see 1916 C. C. Rule 25, § 3.
Rules for calling up petitions and motions for hearing, see 1916 C. C. Rule 15.

¶ 695. Separate hearings ought not to be had on the demurrer clause in the replication. Where a regular demurrer is not filed, if the case cannot be risked on a demurrer, it is better to proceed on the facts and amend the bill if necessary.—Zabel v. Harshman, 68 Mich. 270.

¶ 696. The practice of a separate hearing on a demurrer clause in an answer is condemned.—Brassington v. Waldron, 143 Mich. 364.

¶ 697. When defendants in a chancery suit have answered, and in their answer inserted the usual demurrer clause, and replication is filed the case must go on to hearing upon the issues joined and a final decree must be rendered. Questions of law on the demurrer cannot then be tried.—Gray v. Eldred, 144 Mich. 23.

§ 169. On preliminary and dilatory issues of fact.

Effect of withholding objections until hearing, waiver by delay, see ante §§ 119-122.
Proper decree or disposal of cause, see post §§ 210, 211.

¶ 698. Suit at issue on replication cannot be heard and disposed of piecemeal; and dismissal, before testimony closed, on ground that statute of limitation bars complaint, is erroneous.—Goodrich v. Goodrich, 66 Mich. 522.

¶ 699. Defendant entered a plea to a bill in chancery, and, no replication being filed, noticed the same for argument. After the lapse of twenty days, complainant, claiming that defendant should have secured an order of reference to a master to obtain a report as to the truth of the plea, petitioned for an order that the bill be taken as confessed, which order was denied. Upon argument, the plea was sustained; and, after the lapse of ten days, the complainant not having taken issue on the plea, a decree was made dismissing the bill. Held, that the practice pursued was that prescribed by (First) Ch. Rule 25, which contemplates that the truth of the plea shall be determined after issue joined.—Detroit, L. & N. R. Co. v. McCammon, 108 Mich. 368.

§ 170. On cross-bill.

¶ 700. The trial court in chancery is bound to hear evidence to support the claims set out by defendant in her answer and cross-bill.—Davis v. Wardowski, 164 Mich. 561.

§ 171. Right to offer proofs.

On cross-bill, see ante § 170.

¶ 701. The cause having gone to trial in open court on an issue of fact, the judge refused to receive evidence, and dismissed the bill for want of equity. Held, that the dismissal was erroneous. The complainant was entitled of right to put in his evidence, since in no other way could he render his statutory right of appeal effectual.—Hewlett v. Shaw, 9 Mich. 346.

¶ 702. The procedure of entering a decree for a complainant upon bill and answer, without hearing any testimony, was disapproved; since under such a practice, if the Supreme Court had disagreed with the trial court on the legal propositions, a final disposition could not have been made on the record.—Culy v. Upham, 135 Mich. 131.

¶ 703. A bill should not be dismissed without giving complainant an opportunity to take proofs when it is brought on for hearing on pleadings and proofs to be taken in open court.—Wyandotte Public Schools v. Harding, 157 Mich. 86.

¶ 704. Where issue is joined on demurrer, complainant is nevertheless entitled to put in his proofs and have the case come up on the facts.—Lamb v. Jeffrey, 41 Mich. 719.

§ 172. Extension of time to take proofs.

Reopening for further proofs, see post § 173.

¶ 705. Where a party applies for leave to take testimony after the time allowed by the rules has expired, he must state in his application what he expects to be able to prove by the witnesses he seeks leave to examine.—Thayer v. Swift, W. 384.

¶ 706. Where complainant had allowed the time given by the rules for taking testimony to expire, without showing any excuse for neglect, except that his counsel were occupied with other business, the motion was denied.—Thayer v. Swift, W. 384.

¶ 707. It is within the jurisdiction of the lower court to grant an order extending the time to take testimony, the cause shown being that the party's solicitor told him at the time that the court was not ready, and that said solicitor departed from the state and has not returned.—Becker v. Saginaw Circuit Judge, 117 Mich. 328.

¶ 708. Upon an application, made with leave at the hearing, for further time to take additional testimony upon the subject-matter of amendments to a bill and answer, the showing should point out what facts were expected to be proved, so that the court could determine upon their relevancy and importance. And where a party has failed in his showing for time to take proofs out of court, permission to him to take further proof in open court at the hearing, being a provision to that extent in his favor, will authorize no complaint on his part.—Slater v. Breese, 36 Mich. 77.

§ 173. Reopening for further proofs.

Rehearings, see post §§ 229-232.

Occasion and propriety of taking further proofs and having reargument on motion of chancellor, see post ¶ 910.

Extension of time for proofs, see ante § 172.

Amendment to let in further proofs, see ante § 133.

¶ 709. Whether a chancery suit will be reopened in order to permit the introduction of further proof, rests in the discretion of the court.—Cowan v. Anderson, 184 Mich. 649.

¶ 710. It is often proper to open proofs generally and allow further testimony to be taken on both sides, but it is matter of discretion.—McClung v. McClung, 40 Mich. 493.

¶ 711. Where there is nothing to hinder a party from taking his proofs within the time allowed by the rules, and from cross-examining the witnesses of his opponent, and he neglects to do so, he cannot get leave afterwards to bring in contradictory testimony without a strong showing that justice requires it, and that he has not been so far at fault as to have forfeited his claim to favor.—McClung v. McClung, 40 Mich. 493.

¶ 712. A complainant may have special equities making it proper to reopen proofs for his benefit without allowing defendant to put in further testimony.—McClung v. McClung, 40 Mich. 493.

¶ 713. A defendant in contempt cannot have leave to introduce proofs after the time allowed by rule has expired.—McClung v. McClung, 40 Mich. 493.

¶ 714. After the proofs have been taken, especially if they have been taken in open court, it is not proper upon the hearing to open the case generally for the reception of further proofs, nor to open it at all without special reasons, and then usually for the admission only of formal or documentary evidence, or of testimony that has been overlooked by excusable inadvertence.—Wendell v. Highstone, 52 Mich. 552.

¶ 715. It is in general within the discretion of the judge to open a cause for further proofs at any time before decree. But where a party who seeks to open a case to set up proof of facts not set out in the pleadings in such manner as to have entitled him to introduce the testimony in the first instance, fails in his petition to point out what the testimony sought to be offered will show, opening is an excess of power.—Wagar v. Bowley, 104 Mich. 38.

¶ 716. Where several years elapse after the commencement of a suit for partnership accounting, and the record of the proceedings prior to a reference to a commissioner to state the account is very voluminous, embracing testimony taken at great expense in several states, and the circumstances are such as to show clearly that the omission of certain testimony is the fault of the party claiming its benefit, an order permitting such testimony to be taken is properly denied.—Feige v. Babcock, 111 Mich. 538.

¶ 717. Where it appeared that the issues were so important that they should not be disposed of without proofs being taken on both sides, and where the failure on defendant's part to take proofs was due to the illness of one of its solicitors, the vacating of an order closing proofs entered on the belief that a commissioner's order extending time for proofs was unauthorized was compelled by mandamus.—Lansing Lumber Co. v. Ingham Circuit Judge, 108 Mich. 305.

¶ 718. Since the manner of taking of testimony in a chancery case lies largely in the discretion of the court, it is not an abuse thereof to hear further proof after final submission of a cause, after ample notice to the solicitor for the opposite party, who, although present at the taking of such further proof, refused to take part in the proceeding. However, the better practice is to make a motion to take such testimony, and to properly notice it for hearing.—Hayward v. Chase, 181 Mich. 614.

§ 174. Admissions and confessions in open court.

Admissions by the pleadings, see ante § 152 et seq.

Trial practice generally in making and receiving judicial admissions by counsel, see Trial, V.

Sufficiency and effect of stipulations as evidence or for admission of evidence, see Stipulations.

¶ 719. A solicitor has no authority to make admissions for his client in a proceeding, as for a contempt, to enforce a civil remedy. The defendants can only be bound by written admissions, made part of the record, so as to be examinable on appeal.—Scott v. Chambers, 62 Mich. 532.

§ 175. Introduction and reception of evidence.

On trial of issues before jury, see post § 184.

Right to present evidence bearing on cross-bill, see ante § 170.

Right to put in proofs and extension of time for same, see ante §§ 171, 172.

General practice in examining witnesses and offering, introducing, receiving, and striking evidence, see Trial, V.

Statutory provisions for taking proofs in same manner as at law, see Jud. Act, chap. XVII, § 1; Comp. L. 1915, § 12489.

¶ 720. Under the Judicature Act, Pub. Acts 1915, No. 314, chap. XVII, § 5, the authority of the court over introduction of evidence in chancery cases is greater than under the old practice, and the court is required to rule authoritatively upon all objections, and parties cannot, as a matter of right, continue a line of evidence against sustained objections.—Atkinson v. Akin, 197 Mich. 289.

¶ 721. All testimony offered in a chancery cause should be admitted, and if admitted subject to objection an appeal from the ruling thereon brings up the whole testimony.—Bilz v. Bilz, 37 Mich. 116.

¶ 722. Under ordinary circumstances the circuit judge should not exclude testimony in a chancery case, but should admit, subject to objection, all that is offered.—Merson v. Merson, 101 Mich. 55.

¶ 723. The circuit judge cannot absolutely reject testimony, taken in open court in a chancery suit, unless the testimony is of a nature so scandalous as to be improper to appear in the record.—Meech v. Lee, 82 Mich. 274.

¶ 724. Testimony may be taken by consent as well before as after an issue in fact has been joined.—Woods v. Monroe, 17 Mich. 238.

§ 176. ——Examination or production in open court.

General rules for examination and cross-examination of witnesses, see Examination of Witnesses.

Mode of interrogating witnesses, see Examination of Witnesses.

Examination of opposite party on stand as witness and cross-examination, see Examination of Witnesses.

Manner of taking testimony of parties in open court in divorce suits, see Divorce §§ 86-88.

Statutory provision that testimony shall be taken in open court unless referred, see Jud. Act, chap. XVII, § 1; Comp. L. 1915, § 12489.

Order to parties and witnesses to testify in open court, practice to obtain, see 1916 C. C. Rule 36.

¶ 725. The failure of a party to a chancery case to demand an examination of witnesses in open court by giving notice as provided by Comp. Laws 1897, § 10188 (How. 2nd Ed., § 12966), does not deprive the court of the right to make an order for such examination on his own initiative.—Judd v. Judd, 192 Mich. 198. (Stone, C. J., and Brooke and Ostrander, JJ., dissenting.)

¶ 726. The formal notice that evidence is to be heard in a chancery suit in open court, provided by Comp. Laws 1897, § 10188, may be waived.—Tarsney v. Wayne Circuit Judge, 152 Mich. 641.

¶ 727. Where stipulations for continuances of a chancery suit, correspondence between the attorneys, and their conduct in open court, indicate that the evidence in a chancery suit is to be given in open court, the formal notice required by Comp. Laws 1897, § 10188, is waived.—Tarsney v. Wayne Circuit Judge, 152 Mich. 641.

¶ 728. The right to an examination of the witnesses in a chancery suit in open court cannot be claimed until the cause is at issue as to all of the defendants, or until those who have not answered have been defaulted.—Kelly v. Wayne Circuit Judge, 90 Mich. 264.

¶ 729. A demand for the examination of witnesses in open court is of no force if not made within ten days after the cause is at issue, and a defendant who has failed to make such a demand is not entitled to have the benefit of one made by a codefendant as to whom the suit has been dismissed.—Gray v. Franks, 86 Mich. 382.

¶ 730. A witness once examined is not to be re-examined to the same facts without an order of the court; but he may be as to other facts, or new matter arising out of the testimony of other witnesses.—Sawyer v. Sawyer, W. 48.

¶ 731. Pub. Acts 1903, No. 31, providing that in Wayne county either at law or in chancery cases may be placed on a trial list, "and said cause shall then be in condition after a lapse of one week, to be tried as the judges of said court may from time to time direct," does not imply that in that county testimony in a foreclosure suit may be taken in open court without the notice required by Comp. L. 1897, § 10188, and 1897 Chan. Rule 14, subds. (b) and (c).—Hoock v. Sloman, 145 Mich. 19.

¶ 732. The taking of proofs as to the amount due on a note and mortgage from the date of the bill to the date of decree, amounts to no more than the making of a computation by the court, where the amount of the note due and unpaid stands admitted by the answer in a foreclosure suit; and it is therefore not objectionable as a taking of proofs in open court without proper notice.—Hoock v. Sloman, 145 Mich. 19.

¶ 733. Comp. L. 1897, § 491, providing for examination of a complainant as to payments made, and that it may be done either before a master or in open court, applies only in cases of absent, concealed or nonresident defendants; and therefore does not warrant the taking of such proofs in a foreclosure suit where the defendant is in court.—Hoock v. Sloman, 145 Mich. 19.

§ 177. ——Documents.

¶ 734. It is not a matter of course to allow a deed to be proved at the hearing; but a satisfactory excuse must be given for the failure to prove it before the master.—Bachelor v. Nelson, W. 449.

¶ 735. The documentary evidence referred to in Rule 56 had reference to documents which prove themselves. But to entitle a party to use such documentary evidence, there must have been an order entered for taking proofs, to give the opposite party an opportunity of exhibiting witnesses relative thereto, or of introducing countervailing proofs.—Bachelor v. Nelson, W. 449.

¶ 736. Where the assignee of a mortgage files his bill to foreclose, setting forth the mortgage and assignment, he may, upon the notice required by Chancery Rule 61, have an order to prove the assignment as an exhibit at the hearing under Rule 56.—Jerome v. Seymour, H. 255.

§ 178. ——Objections and exceptions to evidence.

See also ante ¶¶ 720-722.

On trial of issues to jury, see post § 184.

Making and sufficiency of objections to save question for review, see Saving Questions.

Embodying evidence and objections in the record for appeal, see Appeal, VI, D, XI, B.

Provisions as to practice in receiving evidence when objected to, see Jud. A chap. XVII, § 5; Comp. L. 1915, § 12493.

¶ 737. Formal defects in testimony are waived by not moving to suppress.—Botsford v. Botsford, 49 Mich. 29.

§ 179. Admissibility and sufficiency of proofs.

Sufficiency of proofs sustaining relief leaving part of averments unproved, see post § 180.

Effect and sufficiency of pleadings as evidence, see ante § 164 et seq.

Weight and conclusiveness of sworn answers under former practice, see ante § 165c.

Assumption of truth of answer where hearing is on bill and answer, see ante §165b.

Sufficiency of proofs of particular facts and issues, see specific topics treating of such facts and issues.
Sameness of rules in equity and at law, see also ante ¶ 315; and see Evidence, III.
Judicial notice in general, see Evidence, I.
Presumptions of law in general, see Evidence, II.
Presumptions against person failing to produce available evidence or hindering production by others, see Evidence, II.
Competency of secondary, opinion, hearsay, character, or documentary evidence, or of parol evidence respecting contents of writings, see generally Evidence, IV-VIII.
Admissibility of tangible objects or demonstrations addressed to the senses as well as to the mind, see Evidence, IX.
Exclusion of evidence incompetent because relative to transaction had with one since deceased or become incompetent, see Witnesses, IV, A.
Sufficiency and weight of the proofs, see generally Evidence X (which is restricted to the general rules); and see specific topics treating of the various rights, acts and facts to be proven.
Credibility, impeachment, contradiction, and corroboration of witnesses, see Witnesses, VI.
Degree and clarity of proof required in rescission or other suits where parol evidence is relied on to establish equities taking case out of the rule requiring writings, see Frauds, Statute of, IV; Reformation, III; Rescission, VI; Specific Performance, IV; Trusts, IV, XII.
Sufficiency of evidence on appeal, see Appeal, XII, C, E, 1.
Sufficiency of proof of execution and delivery of instrument, see Execution of Instruments, III.

¶ 738. Facts proved, but not put in issue by the pleadings, cannot be regarded at the hearing.—Cicotte v. Gagnier, 2 Mich. 381: Warner v. Whittaker, 6 Mich. 133; Bloomer v. Henderson, 8 Mich. 395; Barrows v. Baughman, 9 Mich. 213; Peckham v. Buffam, 11 Mich. 529; Dunn v. Dunn, 11 Mich. 284; Wurcherer v. Hewitt, 10 Mich. 453; Covell v. Cole, 16 Mich. 223; Harlow v. Lake Superior Iron Co., 41 Mich. 583.

¶ 739. Where a bill was filed to set aside a mortgage as fraudulent, and neither the mortgage, the bill nor the answer contained any reference to a promissory note accompanying the mortgage, held, that the absence of such a note was not involved in the issue, and evidence with respect to it, which was objected to when taken, must be disregarded at the hearing.—Bloomer v. Henderson, 8 Mich. 395.

¶ 740. Evidence not tending to establish the case made by the bill is not regarded. —Gorham v. Wing, 10 Mich. 486.

¶ 741. Where a bill in equity is ambiguous in its statement of oral agreements that are essential to the relief sought, and the proofs are loose and incongruous, and do not preponderate in favor of the substance of the case stated, no relief can be granted.—Craig v. Bradley, 26 Mich. 353.

¶ 742. A court of chancery will not determine on the evidence that an award was fraudulent merely because it is urged that a jury would have done so, if the question was before them.—Michels v. Western Underwriters' Ass'n, 129 Mich. 417.

§ 180. Necessary proofs; partial failure of proofs.

Matters admitted by the pleadings, see ante § 152 et seq.
In cases heard on bill and answer, see also ante § 164.
Taking proofs on default, see Defaults § 23.
Issues necessary to be proved at law, see Pleading, IX.
Matters not requiring proof in injunction suit, see also Injunctions, III.
Sufficiency of proof of one alleged ground in injunction suit, see Injunctions, III.
Sufficiency of proofs for quieting title, other allegations being unproved, see also Quieting Title, III.

¶ 743. Where there is such a fundamental difference between the facts alleged in a bill in equity and those set up by the answer that the bill and answer alone will not support a decree, the complainant cannot have relief without introducing proofs to sustain his bill.—Ruhlig v. Wiegert, 49 Mich. 399.

¶ 744. The proof of allegations in a bill which are not material to complainant's equities, and which might have been omitted without affecting the case, is not essential. —Edsell v. Briggs, 20 Mich. 429.

¶ 745. Allegations in a bill which are not supported by proof do not prevent relief if there are allegations supported by proof which are sufficient grounds for equitable relief.—Guntzviller v. Gitre, 195 Mich. 695.

¶ 746. Relief is properly granted where the facts are sufficient to justify it, even though the bill asserts a claim broader than the facts which it discloses warrant; as where complainants against waste claim that they are owners, whereas the conveyance set up in the bill amounts to no more than a mortgage.—Webster v. Peet, 97 Mich. 326.

§ 181. Striking out or rejecting proofs.

Suppression of improper proofs or depositions taken on reference, see post § 186.
Striking out evidence at law, see Trial, V.
Suppression of depositions, see Depositions. VI.

¶ 747. A divorce case containing grossly improper testimony taken before a commissioner ought to have it stricken out and the case should be heard on what properly remains; and on appeal the Supreme Court so considered it.—Page v. Page, 51 Mich. 88.

B. REFERENCE OR ISSUES TO JURY.

§ 182. Reference or commission in general.

[Note. The subject of Reference has been made a specific topic by that name. The general law of references should be there consulted, including (I) Occasion and propriety of reference, (II) Procedure for reference and for appointment of master or referee, (III) Scope of reference and hearing on reference, (IV) Report and findings, and return to court, (V) Proceedings and hearing on the report and exceptions to it, (VI) Decree and findings by court, recommitment or new reference, (VII) Compensation, fees and costs.]

Form of decree for reference, avoidance of finality in form, see post ¶ 807.

References in foreclosure suits to make computations, see Foreclosure, III, V.

Applicability to equity of statutes for taking depositions, see Depositions § 1.

Taking depositions on notice in chancery proceedings, see ante § 1.

Mode of taking testimony on depositions, see Depositions.

Sufficiency of process and underwriting thereon to sustain reference and attendance for examination, see Process.

Rules regulating proceedings before commissioners, see 1916 C. C. Rules 51-54.

¶ 748. A court of chancery may sometimes award issues or other modes of inquiry, in order to satisfy its own conscience, where the testimony on well-defined issues is conflicting.—Wendell v. Highstone, 52 Mich. 552.

¶ 749. Where the defendants in a chancery cause have elected under the statute to have the case tried in open court, the circuit judge has no power at chambers to order the proofs to be taken before a commissioner.—Eslow v. Township of Albion, 27 Mich. 4; Eslow v. Township of Albion, 32 Mich. 193.

¶ 750. An order to take testimony before a commissioner cannot be entered until the expiration of the time allowed for claiming examination in open court; (Ch. Rule No. 47), and this cannot be claimed until the cause is at issue as to all defendants or until those who have not answered are defaulted.—Hall Lumber Co. v. Gustin, 54 Mich. 624.

¶ 751. The right of the court to direct an accounting before a commissioner in a proper case is not taken away by a demand for the examination of witnesses in open court.—Shouler v. Bonander, 80 Mich. 531.

§ 183. Trial of issues by jury.

General law of juries and jurors, see Jury.

Mode of trial by jury, see Trial.

Issues to jury in divorce and annulment suits, see Divorce § 85; Marriage, IV.

Provision for submission of issues of fact to jury, see Jud. Act, chap. XVIII, § 21; Comp. L. 1915, § 12593.

§ 184. ——Offers, objections and reception of evidence.

¶ 752. Although on an issue sent to a jury all objections as to competency of evidence are to be reserved and the evidence received, a jury cannot pass upon the competency of testimony, but must consider all the testimony before them and come to a conclusion thereon.—Collins v. Jackson, 43 Mich. 558.

¶ 753. In the submission of any special question to a jury, whether the verdict is to be regarded as final or as advisory only, the same rules of evidence should be observed as in the ordinary jury trial; otherwise the verdict has little weight.—Worthington v. Major, 94 Mich. 325.

§ 185. Operation and effect of verdict or report.

See also ante ¶ 753.

Report as basis for decree, see also post ¶ 811.

Review on appeal of findings of fact based on jury verdict or findings, see Appeal, XII, E, 1.

Reports of master or referee, exceptions thereto and settlement thereof, see Reference.

¶ 754. A verdict on a feigned issue in chancery does not bind the court, and a decree may be rendered against it (as to effect of verdict when case is heard in open court, see Laws 1887, Act No. 267).—Dunn v. Dunn, 11 Mich. 284; Willard v. Magoon, 30 Mich. 273.

¶ 755. The verdict of jury upon questions of fact given to it in chancery cannot be final.—Brown v. Kalamazoo Circuit Judge, 75 Mich. 274.

§ 186. Suppression of improper proofs or depositions.

Use or suppression of depositions, see Depositions, VI.

¶ 756. Where an order to take proofs was duly entered, but notice was not given within the thirty days required by Chancery Rule 47, and the examination of a witness was objected to before the master on that ground, the deposition was suppressed.—Bachelor v. Nelson, W. 449.

¶ 757. A rightful claim to have the testimony taken in open court has the effect to suppress depositions prematurely taken by the other party.—Hall Lumber Co. v. Gustin, 54 Mich. 624.

¶ 758. Depositions taken after proofs closed are not to be read, though no motion to suppress is made.—Abbott v. Alsdorf, 19 Mich. 157.

¶ 759. Where defendant was improperly examined his deposition was suppressed, and the taking thereof by complainant held not to amount to a release to him.—Norris v. Hurd, W. 102.

IX. INTERLOCUTORY PROCEEDINGS AND DECREES.

§ 187. In general.

Parties entitled to notice of proceedings, see ante § 59.

Procedure on rehearing, bill of revivor, bill of supplement, or bill of review, see post, XI.

Inapplicability of term "decree" to interlocutory orders in cause, see post ¶ 806.

Provisions in final decree for future contingencies or for reservation of questions and further inquiry, see post §§ 215, 216.

Conditions requisite to rendition of decree, see also post ¶ 797.

Pendency of interlocutory proceeding as preventing dismissal, see post § 189.

[Note. Nearly all matters of interlocutory procedure are treated in specific topics, as shown by references immediately following. They should be consulted.]

On divorce bills, see Divorce, VIII.

Contempt proceedings, see Contempt.

Injunctions and injunction procedure, see Injunctions.

Ne exeat writs, see Ne Exeat.

Sequestration, see Sequestration; Corporations, § 234.

Receiverships in general, see Receivers.

Appointment of corporate receiver pending demurrer to bill, see Corporations § 239.

Proceedings under decree for accounting, taking the account, see Accounting Suits; Reference.

Decree for partition to be followed by partition and confirmation decree, see Partition, III.

Impounding assets on railroad foreclosures to pay labor claims, see Railroads, VI.

Motion practice in general and necessity for notice and hearing on motions, see Motions and Orders.

Interlocutory decrees as res adjudicata, see Former Adjudication.

Review of interlocutory or provisional orders for relief or protection of interests, see Appeal § 411.

Appealability of order dismissing cross-bill, see Appeal § 46, ¶ 213.

Appealability of order striking pleadings, see Appeal § 46.

Appealability of order on petition for leave to plead or intervene, see Appeal § 47.

Review of order granting or denying leave to plead, see Appeal § 397.

Reviewableness of intermediate or interlocutory decrees as anterior parts of appealable final decrees, see Appeal, III, XII, B, 2.

¶ 760. The practice of inserting in interlocutory decrees directions and abstract rulings on future contingencies, condemned as leading to confusion.—Patterson v. Hopkins, 23 Mich. 541.

X. DETERMINATION AND DISPOSAL OF CAUSE.

A. DISMISSALS WITHOUT DECISION OR PREJUDICE.

Divorce decrees in general, see Divorce, VII.

§ 188. Voluntary discontinuance or dismissal.

Grounds for involuntary dismissal, see post §§ 190-193.

Dismissal as to one of several parties, see post § 195.

Time and stage or condition of cause, see post § 196.

Order of dismissal and entry of same, see post § 198.

Discontinuance or dismissal of divorce suit, see Divorce §§ 81-84.

Voluntary dismissals at law, see Discontinuance.

¶ 761. The complainant may, at any time before there has been an interlocutory or final decree in a cause, dismiss his bill, of course, on payment of costs.—Seymour v. Jerome, W. 356.

¶ 762. A consent decree adjusting and determining the rights of adverse claimants in and to a judgment upon an insurance policy operates as a discontinuance of the suit as to the company, which was made a nominal party defendant, so that it cannot thereafter file a cross-bill therein.—Cartwright v. Johnston, 110 Mich. 312.

§ 189. ——Pending cross-bill or interlocutory proceeding.

Stage or condition of cause for involuntary dismissal, see post § 196.

¶ 763. Where an interlocutory order had been entered by consent of parties, operating as an adjudication to some extent upon the rights of the parties, the court refused to allow complainant to dismiss.—Seymour v. Jerome, W. 356.

¶ 764. After a consent order has been entered for a mutual accounting before a commissioner the defendant has acquired rights; and the complainant cannot, by a common order, dismiss his bill and cut off the accounting.—Wyatt v. Sweet, 48 Mich. 539.

¶ 765. The complainant in a divorce bill will not be permitted to dismiss his bill upon payment of costs pending a determination, under an order of reference, of an application by defendant for temporary alimony and solicitor's fees.—Clutton v. Clutton, 106 Mich. 690.

§ 190. Grounds for involuntary dismissal.

Time and stage or condition of cause, see post § 196.
As to one of several parties, see post § 195.
Motion and showing to dismiss, see post § 197.
Right to put in proofs, see ante § 171.
Dismissal of information and retention as bill, see ante ¶ 247.
Dismissal of bill of review, see post § 250.
Conditions for voluntary dismissal, see ante §§ 188, 189.
Grounds for dismissal without prejudice, see post § 194.
Dismissals finally and with prejudice, see post, X, B.
Dismissal with prejudice on demurrer or plea or motion, see post §§ 210, 211.
Grounds at law, see Discontinuance.
Dismissal on extinction of right sued on, see also Abatement § 7.
Impropriety of dismissal of foreclosure bill which all defendants allow to be taken as confessed, see also Defaults ¶ 55.
Failure to furnish security for costs, see Security for Costs, II.

¶ 766. Want of necessary parties is good ground for dismissing a bill on the hearing, and it will be done the more readily where the facts disclosed by the proofs fail to make out a strong case on the merits.—Westcott v. Minnesota Min. Co., 23 Mich. 145.

¶ 767. Chancery will not dismiss a bill for want of parties without allowing leave to amend, when the bill is not demurred to on that ground, and the defect is only pointed out on the argument.—Woodward v. Clark, 15 Mich. 104.

§ 191. ——Want or defect of jurisdiction.

Statutory rule for dismissal of suits not involving $100, see Jud. Act, chap. VI, § 3; Comp. L. 1915, § 12301.

¶ 768. Where, in a suit respecting property (not a foreclosure suit, or between partners), the bill shows the amount in controversy to be less than $100, the court must dismiss the bill whether the objection of want of jurisdiction is taken by the defendant or not.—Gamber v. Holben, 5 Mich. 331.

¶ 769. Where a bill filed by the remainderman to restrain the cutting and removal of the timber standing on the land by a purchaser from the life-tenant charges that the threatened removal of the timber will damage the estate $350, and the answer asserts the value of the timber to be no more than $25, and, for aught that appears, the timber may have a particular value to the estate, the contention that the pleadings show the amount in controversy to be less than $100, and that for this reason the bill should have been dismissed, cannot be sustained.—Huyck v. Bailey, 100 Mich. 223.

¶ 770. Where upon a bill filed by the lessee in a renewal lease of the right of cutting ice to restrain the cutting thereof, it appears that the renewal of the lease for more than the current year is invalid, the bill is properly dismissed if it does not show that any injury complainant might suffer from not being allowed to gather ice for one year would be sufficient to give the court jurisdiction.—Oliver v. Olmstead, 112 Mich. 483.

¶ 771. On a bill to enjoin a trespass where the bill failed to show the value of the property in controversy, and the answer claimed the benefits of a demurrer, followed by replication, but did not plead the inadequacy of the amount in controversy, there is nothing to warrant a dismissal under Comp. L. 1897, § 435, providing that suits where the matter in dispute does not exceed $10 shall be dismissed, and no such order should have been made until after the proofs showed such inadequacy; the allegation of amount in dispute not being made jurisdictional by the statute.—Brassington v. Waldron, 143 Mich. 364.

¶ 772. The dismissal of a bill to enjoin trespass and to quiet title will not be decreed on the ground that the proceeding should have been at law rather than in chancery where the case has been heard upon the merits, and without objection, and without raising that question.—Lawrence v. Kirby, 147 Mich. 432.

¶ 773. Where a woman brought an action for divorce in Washtenaw county, the defendant answering that she fraudulently induced him to enter into the marriage, and before the determination of the action the latter brought suit in the court of another county for the annulment of the marriage on that ground, the latter suit will be dismissed.—Van Slyke v. Van Slyke, 183 Mich. 536.

§ 192. ——Informal or defective pleadings or proceedings.

Dismissal of defective bill of review, see post § 250.

¶ 774. A bill filed as a cross-bill in a case not proper for it is not to be dismissed for that reason if it prays affirmative relief.—Farmers' & Mechanics' Bank v. Bronson, 14 Mich. 361.

¶ 775. A bill in equity which is demurrable as to the specific relief prayed, on the ground that the complainant has an adequate remedy at law, but which also contains a prayer for general relief, will not be dismissed on the hearing for that reason, where the defendant has not demurred, but has answered without claiming the benefit of a demurrer, and both parties have introduced evidence upon the whole merits of the case, provided it states a case proper for any equitable relief, and the evidence supports the case so made.—Flanders v. Chamberlain, 24 Mich. 305.

¶ 776. As a bill not fatally defective or past remedy by amendment is not to be dismissed upon the demurrer clause in the answer, a bill filed by a mortgagee and foreclosure purchaser to restrain removal by the mortgagor of machinery upon the mortgaged premises should not be dismissed at the hearing, where defendant has not demurred, merely because it does not directly allege that the articles are fixtures, or because it fails to show any claim by defendant, or any threat on his part to remove the machinery. —Smith v. Blake, 96 Mich. 542.

§ 193. ——Of cross-bill.

¶ 777. A cross-bill by the corporation to a bill by a stockholder, in which cross-bill the corporation alleges that a sum due to D. for wages was taken by plaintiff as a credit to himself and his stock acquired partly against it, and asking an accounting, was dismissed without prejudice on a statement in counsel's brief that D. had sued the corporation for such wages.—Essex v. Essex, 141 Mich. 200.

¶ 778. Defendant started a suit for injunction against one Reed, who was cutting timber from defendant's land, in order to protect himself for advances made to Reed who gave the timber as security and then proceeded to ship it out independently of defendant. This suit being dismissed by consent, complainant filed suit for injunction against defendant, laying claim to the timber. Defendant filed a cross-bill asking affirmative relief. Held, it was as much complainant's as defendant's duty to make Reed a party and the affirmative relief could not be denied defendant on account of his failure so to do.—Brown v. King, 172 Mich. 355.

§ 194. Dismissal without prejudice.

See also ante ¶ 540.

Dismissal without prejudice rather than allow new case by amendment, see ante ¶ 547.

Dismissal without prejudice as reason to deny reinstatement, see post ¶ 795.

¶ 779. A bill cannot be dismissed without prejudice where a new bill must necessarily cover the same ground.—Gale v. Gould, 40 Mich. 515.

¶ 780. Leave, on dismissing a bill, to sue again in equity should not be granted without some equitable reason, and is properly denied where the amount involved is trifling and there is a legal remedy.—Gamble v. City of East Saginaw, 43 Mich. 367.

¶ 781. A bill which seeks relief on the mistaken assumption of a fact which does not exist, but which is the only ground relied on, should be dismissed without prejudice.—Chandler v. Jenks, 50 Mich. 151.

¶ 782. The dismissal of a judgment creditor's bill may be without prejudice where the sole ground of dismissal is that lands sought to be reached by it were beyond the jurisdiction of the court.—Krolik v. Bulkley, 58 Mich. 407.

§ 195. Discontinuance or dismissal of one party.

Dismissal of one to retain suit for complete relief of other parties, see post § 220.

Effect of order of partial dismissal, see post § 199.

In actions at law, see Discontinuance §§ 2-4.

Dismissal against defaulting complainant, see also Defaults ¶ 80.

¶ 783. Discontinuance was allowed as to an unnecessary party who had died after decree.—Howe v. Lemon, 37 Mich. 164.

¶ 784. Discontinuance as to a deceased party defendant is needless.—Howe v. Lemon, 47 Mich. 544.

¶ 785. A city is not entitled to a dismissal of a bill against it to quiet title to land laid out for an alley, on the ground that it has no control over the alley, and therefore is not a proper party, where it asserted in its answer its right and authority in the premises. —Vier v. City of Detroit, 111 Mich. 646.

¶ 786. A bill for injunction against a drain commissioner and highway commissioners for deepening certain drains so that complainant was flooded, will be dismissed as to the highway commissioners on its appearing that the wrong and damage was due to the acts of the drain commissioner alone and that they did no unlawful act contributing to the injury.—Township of Merritt v. Harp, 141 Mich. 233.

§ 196. Stage or condition of issues and cause.

Pendency of cross-bill or interlocutory proceeding as obstacle to voluntary discontinuance, see ante § 189.

¶ 787. A bill cannot be dismissed for want of prosecution while the demurrer is pending. The defendants may themselves expedite the case by noticing the demurrer for argument.—McVickar v. Filer, 24 Mich. 241.

¶ 788. A suit in equity at issue on replication cannot be heard and disposed of piecemeal. A dismissal before the testimony is closed, on the ground that the statute of limitations bars complainant, is erroneous.—Goodrich v. Goodrich, 66 Mich. 522.

§ 197. Motion and showing to dismiss.

Motions to dismiss under Judicature Act equivalent to demurrers, hearing on such motions, and decisions thereon, see ante §§ 112, 168, post §§ 210, 211.

¶ 789. It is irregular to dismiss a bill in equity, on motion, for want of jurisdiction, upon grounds required to be supported by proofs, except it be accomplished by way of what may be treated as a final hearing upon pleadings and the facts brought in by way of stipulation.—Attorney General ex rel. Foster v. Lake County Sup'rs, 33 Mich. 289.

§ 198. Order and effect of dismissal.

Effect of dismissal of part of defendants or of conditional dismissal, see post §§ 199, 200.

Reinstatement of cause and parties, see post § 201.

Relief on cross-bill upon dismissal of bill, see post § 212.

Of dismissal of bill of review for defects, see post ¶ 994.

Entry of discontinuance of suit nunc pro tunc, see Discontinuance ¶ 17.

Effect of irregular voluntary dismissal in record of decree on the merits, conclusiveness of the decree, see Former Adjudication, II, B.

¶ 790. The effect of a voluntary dismissal of a bill in chancery is the same as an adverse one, if made on the hearing, when the merits are involved.—Edgar v. Buck, 65 Mich. 356.

¶ 791. If an order entered by complainant, dismissing his bill, is operative, he cannot be affected by subsequent irregularities in practice disregarding it.—Wyatt v. Sweet, 48 Mich. 539.

§ 199. ——As to portion of parties.

Dismissal of one as carrying dismissal of others defaulting, see also ante ¶ 359.

¶ 792. The dismissal of a bill to enjoin the disclosure and use of trade secrets as to some defendants, is held not to leave the complainant without a cause of relief against the remaining defendant, an employee who learned them by reason of his employment. —Sanitas Nut Food Co. v. Cemer, 134 Mich. 370.

§ 200. ——Of conditional dismissal.

Items and amounts of costs, when imposed as condition, see Costs §§ 5, 55 et seq.

¶ 793. If complainant has leave to dismiss conditionally, the defendant, until the condition is complied with, may consider the case as in court or out of court, at his discretion; he may either proceed in it or consider it dismissed, and apply to the court to enforce payment of his costs.—Jerome v. Seymour, W. 359.

§ 201. Reinstatement of cause or parties.

Reinstatement at law, see Discontinuance §§ 8-10.

¶ 794. Parties as to whom a bill has been dismissed by complainant after decree can only be brought back by the usual process; and an order rescinding the discontinuance could not bring them in and hold them bound by the previous decree and proceedings.—Johnson v. Shepard, 35 Mich. 115.

¶ 795. Complainant filed a bill in December, 1907, to enjoin the defendant administrator from collecting a judgment against a third person, and secured a temporary injunction. The hearing of the cause was adjourned from time to time at the request of the complainant, and was adjourned from April 9, 1910, to April 16, 1910, upon the distinct understanding that no further adjournment would be granted. On April 16, 1910, a decree was entered dismissing the bill for want of prosecution. Complainant petitioned the court to set aside this decree, alleging that he was informed on April 14, 1910, that his principal attorney would not be able to try the case; that he had relied on said attorney to manage the cause for him; and that he was informed by one of his attorneys that the court would undoubtedly grant an adjournment to enable him to secure counsel. The matters involved in the suit were not complicated. No effort was made by complainant after learning of the withdrawal of his counsel, to prepare for the hearing, and no excuse was given other than the general statement that it was then too late to employ other counsel for the hearing. Held, there was no abuse of judicial discretion in the order of the trial court refusing to set aside the decree dismissing the bill, where the effect of the decree was simply to dissolve the injunction and where it gave leave to complainant to file a new bill within sixty days to determine the merits of the case.—Burton v. Snow, 165 Mich. 530.

B. FINDINGS AND DECREE; PROPER RELIEF.

[Note. In so far as the law is general to both judgments at law and decrees in equity, endeavor has been made to collect all the precedents under the topic Judgments and Decrees, which see. The changes in procedure leading up to the Judicature Act and embodied therein, have made many of the technical rules relating to decrees of small importance. So much of the force of the precedents under such rules as now remains is likely to be of greater value in a general topic than in the highly specific topic of Equity.]

Costs in chancery cases below and on appeal, see Costs.

§ 202. Rendition, entry and record.

Hearing and trial on preliminary issues and issues of law, see ante §§ 168, 169.

Application and notice to enter final decree, see post § 203.

Rendition or announcement, entry and record of the judgment, see Judgments, III.

Entry or amendment nunc pro tunc, see Judgments, III, V.

Practice and proofs on entering decrees against infants, see Infants, VII.

Record proper for appeal, see Appeal § 99.

Inclusion of original pleadings as parts of record on appeal from decree after amendments, see Appeal § 99.

Return to lower court for enrollment, see Appeal § 144, ¶ 616.
Enrollment of decree, notice of enrollment and papers to be included in the roll, see 1916 C. C. Rule 55.

¶ 796. The court will not adjudge upon a part of the case; it will not make a final decree until the case is properly presented in such form as will enable the court to make a final disposition of the case, and do justice to all the parties.—Graham v. Elmore, H. 265.

¶ 797. A final decree, or an interlocutory decree which, in a great measure, decides the merits of the cause, cannot be pronounced until all the parties to the bill, and all the parties in interest, are before the court.—Graham v. Elmore, H. 265.

¶ 798. Where there are joint defendants, the complainant cannot, upon a pro confesso obtained against one before the cause is at issue or in readiness for hearing against the other, enter a final decree and issue execution thereon against the party against whom the bill has been taken as confessed, and leave the cause to proceed against the other defendant.—Graham v. Elmore, H. 265.

¶ 799. The rule that a decree will not be made until all parties in interest are before the court is inapplicable where some cannot be made parties.—Michigan State Bank v. Hastings, 1 D. 225.

¶ 800. Where a decree in chancery is made before all of the defendants have been brought in or have appeared, and the case is then appealed, the decree will be vacated and the record remanded for further proceedings in the chancery court.—Schwab v. Mabley, 47 Mich. 512.

¶ 801. A decree entered immediately upon the overruling of a demurrer to the bill is premature and irregular. The proper practice is to grant defendant leave to answer, and upon his failure within the time granted to answer, then to enter final decree.—Creasey v. St. George's Soc. of Detroit, 34 Mich. 51.

¶ 802. The order to confirm a decree against nonresidents being a matter of right after seven years, and the statute requiring the defendants to appear within that time, the omission to enter such order is immaterial.—King v. Harrington, 14 Mich. 532.

¶ 803. ——Application and notice.
Necessity of notice of hearing, see also ante ¶¶ 693, 694.

¶ 803. Applications for final decree must be made at a general term even though they be based on a default. An application to dismiss a bill is one for final decree.—Higgins v. Carpenter, H. 256.

¶ 804. Good practice requires that a defendant who has appeared in the cause should have such notice of the entry of the decree as will give him an opportunity to attend and be heard upon the settlement thereof.—Detroit Fire & Marine Ins. Co. v. Renz, 33 Mich. 298.

¶ 805. Under Comp. L. 1871, §§ 4967, 4968, How. St., §§ 6491, 6492, when a decree is entered in vacation, notice must be given to the opposite party.—McClung v. McClung, 39 Mich. 55.

§ 204. Nature, form and finality.
Decree for conveyance as a conveyance, see post § 227.
Requisites and sufficiency of the decree, see post §§ 205-212.
Propriety of the relief granted, see post §§ 213-222.
Propriety of dismissal at hearing without decision, see ante ¶¶ 766, 768 et seq., 775, 776.
Dismissals without prejudice, see ante § 194.
Propriety of dismissal on demurrer, plea or motion, see post §§ 210, 211.
Retention instead of dismissal to grant complete relief, see post §§ 219-222.
Affirmative relief on cross-bill notwithstanding dismissal of bill, see post § 212.
Necessity of cross-bill or answer standing as cross-bill to sustain affirmative relief, see also post ¶ 841.
Nature of judgment or decree, and its kind or class, see Judgments, I.
Finality of decree for purpose of res adjudicata, see Former Adjudication, II.
Appealable decrees and orders, see Appeal, III.
Final and interlocutory decrees and orders for purposes of appeal, see Appeal, III, B.
Notice of filing decree to fix time for appealing, see Appeal § 74.

¶ 806. The term decree is not applicable to the interlocutory orders made for the furtherance of suits, but belongs to such adjudications as settle some right or liability pertaining to the substance of the controversy.—Haines v. Haines, 35 Mich. 138.

¶ 807. The practice of making decrees final in form, which consists in part of a reference to a commissioner to take an account between the parties, is objectionable.—Enos v. Sutherland, 9 Mich. 148.

§ 205. Requisites and sufficiency in general.
Form and finality, see ante § 204.
Basis in pleadings and proofs and conformity of decree to them, see post §§ 206-209.
Decree on issue made by demurrer or motion, see post §§ 210, 211.
Affirmative relief, see post § 212.
Propriety and sufficiency of the relief and completion of relief, see post §§ 213-222.
Requisites, form, terms and substance, parties, entirety and severableness, see Judgments, II.

Character of jurisdiction for personal judgments, see Courts §§ 41, 42; Judgments, II, A.
Process essential to personal judgment, see Process.
Chancery decree on appeal, see Appeal § 493 et seq.
Necessity of disposing of case so as to admit of effective appeal, see Appeal § 1, ¶ 11.

¶ 808. A decree should define with precision the rights which it assumes to declare and protect.—Bradfield v. Dewell, 48 Mich. 9.

¶ 809. A decree, reciting the death of a defendant in foreclosure before the bill of complaint was filed and dismissing as to her, disposes of the objection that as she had not appeared or been brought into court the cause was not ready for hearing when proofs were taken.—Miller v. Miller, 48 Mich. 311.

§ 206. Basis for decree.

Matters confessed or taken as true on demurrer or motion, see ante § 156.
Proved or admitted facts where case is heard on bill and answer, see ante § 164.
Right to put in proofs in order to have basis for appeal, see ante § 171.
Conformity of decree to bill and record, see post §§ 208, 209.

¶ 810. A decree may be made between co-defendants grounded upon the pleadings and proofs between complainant and defendants.—Thurston v. Prentiss, 1 Mich. 193.

¶ 811. The decree of a court in a matter of reference is based on the testimony taken before the referee and not on the referee's conclusions, when they are excepted to.—Heath v. Waters, 40 Mich. 457.

¶ 812. Where the answer is such that the burden lies upon complainant to overcome it, and he does not reply or introduce proofs, he is entitled to no decree as to any matter not admitted.—Hardwick v. Bassett, 25 Mich. 149.

§ 207. ——Matters subsequent to filing of bill.

Variance in proofs, see ante § 161.

¶ 813. A court of equity may, in many cases, grant relief justified by the conditions existing at the time of decree, since it is not bound like a court of law to confine its relief as of the date of the institution of the action.—Lansing Co. v. Rogers, 183 Mich. 334.

§ 208. Conformity of decree to bill.

Conformity of default decree to bill, see post § 224; and see also Defaults § 24.
Conformity of judgments to pleadings, issues and verdicts or findings, see Judgments, II, B.

¶ 814. The court adjudges according to the case shown and issues raised by the pleadings.—Smith v. Rumsey, 33 Mich. 183.

¶ 815. No relief can be given on unproved allegations nor on evidence establishing a case not stated in the bill.—Thayer v. Lane, W. 200; Jerome v. Hopkins, 2 Mich. 96; Cicotte v. Gagnier, 2 Mich. 381; Warner v. Whittaker, 6 Mich. 133; Bloomer v. Henderson, 8 Mich. 395; Bomier v. Caldwell, 8 Mich. 463; Barrows v. Baughman, 9 Mich. 213; Wurcherer v. Hewitt, 10 Mich. 453; Peckham v. Buffam, 11 Mich. 529; Dunn v. Dunn, 11 Mich. 284; Perkins v. Perkins, 12 Mich. 456; Moran v. Palmer, 13 Mich. 367; Converse v. Blumrich, 14 Mich. 109; Hubbard v. Winsor, 15 Mich. 146; Payne v. Avery, 21 Mich. 524; Fosdick v. Van Husan, 21 Mich. 567; Harwood v. Underwood, 28 Mich. 427; Jones v. Wells, 31 Mich. 170; Rudd v. Rudd, 33 Mich. 101; Ford v. Loomis, 33 Mich. 121; Harlow v. Lake Superior Iron Co., 41 Mich. 583; Connerton v. Millar, 41 Mich. 608; Livingston v. Hayes, 43 Mich. 129; Elliot v. Amazon Ins. Co., 49 Mich. 579; Kelly v. Kelly, 54 Mich. 30.

¶ 816. A complainant must recover, if at all, upon the case he has made in his bill, and not upon a different case made for him by the defendants in their answer.—Jerome v. Hopkins, 2 Mich. 96.

¶ 817. Matters not set up in a bill but only in the answer are not thereby put in issue and cannot properly be adjudicated.—Miles v. Skinner, 42 Mich. 181.

¶ 818. A court of equity cannot grant relief based upon a case substantially different from that stated in the bill, nor involving other or additional parties.—Walker v. Detroit Transit R. Co., 47 Mich. 338.

¶ 819. Where the bill based the claim to relief entirely upon an alleged error in the village plat referred to in complainant's deed, while the evidence showed that the plat was correct, but that the description in the deed was erroneous in referring to the plat for the description of the land conveyed, held, that no relief could be given, as the bill made one case and the evidence another.—Peckham v. Buffam, 11 Mich. 529.

¶ 820. On a bill by one tenant in common to foreclose a mortgage on the property held in common, it is not competent for the court to decree a partition, even though the relief is shown to be just.—Payne v. Avery, 21 Mich. 524.

¶ 821. Where a bill for an accounting is filed only on the theory of a partnership in the ownership and operation of a farm, and prays for an accounting in respect to said copartnership and for general relief, a claim for an accounting as secondary relief as to an alleged partnership in stock dealing concerning which evidence is introduced is inconsistent with the case made in the bill, and is beyond the power of the court to grant.—Miller v. Casey, 176 Mich. 221.

¶ 822. Where a bill to restrain statutory foreclosure of a real estate mortgage for an alleged excessive amount and for an accounting to determine the amount due alleges that, while defendant claimed and sought to foreclose the mortgage for a stated amount, there was in fact no such sum due upon such mortgage, either for principal or interest, or any amount, and prays that defendant may come to a just and equitable account with complainant as to the amount of money due and owing upon the mortgage and notes, if any, complainant being ready and willing and offering to pay whatever sum is due on the mortgage and notes, the court may, under the issues, although complainant alleges that the excess amount claimed by defendant arose from the failure to give credit for payments made, grant relief as to such excess where it finds that the failure to give credit was in fact due to improper computation of interest.—Lowe v. Schuyler, 187 Mich. 526.

¶ 823. If the complainant's case depends upon a condition which he has not performed, he cannot have relief based upon proof of an excuse for performance which he has not set up in his bill.—LeBaron v. Shepherd, 21 Mich. 263.

§ 209. ——General or alternative prayer.

Sufficiency of prayers in general, see ante § 90 et seq.

Granting appropriate relief under general prayer where bill does not sustain specific prayer, see also ante § 90.

Complete relief though not prayed for, see post ¶ 865.

Rule against shifting theory of case, see ante § 163.

¶ 824. A general prayer for relief in a bill merely enlarges the special prayer as the case may warrant, and the relief granted must always be consistent with the case made by the bill.—Miller v. Casey, 176 Mich. 221.

¶ 825. A court of equity will not grant alternative relief where the bill of complaint does not pray for such relief.—Case v. Bogart, 188 Mich. 297.

¶ 826. A bill fully setting out necessary facts and alleging that complainant loaned money to defendant with which to pay a mortgage, in reliance upon defendant's promise to execute a new mortgage to complainant for the amount advanced, asking, as specific relief, that defendant be required to execute such mortgage, but containing a prayer for general relief, will support a decree adjusting set-off between the parties, and subrogating complainant, to the amount of his claim, to the rights of the holder of the mortgage prior to its discharge.—Van Voorhis v. Bond, 110 Mich. 3.

§ 210. Decree on issue made by motion, plea or demurrer.

See also ante ¶¶ 775, 776.

Impropriety of dismissal unless defects are not amendable, see post § 211.

Leave to plead over, see post § 211.

Time to answer on overruling demurrer before rendering decree, see ante ¶ 801.

Necessity of entry of order overruling plea before taking further proceedings in cause, see ante § 60.

Appealable decrees on pleas, see Appeal § 40.

Appealability of orders on demurrers under the statute, see Appeal § 38.

Appealability of demurrer to cross-bill, see Appeal § 38.

¶ 827. Where the complainant takes issue upon the defendant's plea, and on the hearing the plea is found not to be true, he will be entitled only to the same decree as if the bill had been taken as confessed; and if the allegations of the bill do not entitle him to any relief whatever, the bill will be dismissed.—Hurlbut v. Britain, 2 D. 191.

¶ 828. If the allegations in a bill do not entitle complainant to any relief, the bill should be dismissed for that cause, notwithstanding a plea to the bill, on which issue was taken, is found not to be true since the bill then stands confessed for such relief only as may be proper.—Hurlbut v. Britain, 2 D. 191.

¶ 829. Where, upon a bill to quiet title, the question of the good faith of complainant's purchase is presented, and is not met by the plea or demurrer, so that an issue of fact remains which may be raised, it is erroneous to dismiss the bill on allowing the plea and demurrer.—Lafferty v. People's Savings Bank, 70 Mich. 210.

¶ 830. Under the rule that a general demurrer to a bill must be overruled as to the whole bill where the latter contains any grounds for equitable relief, it was error to sustain such a demurrer in part and overrule it in part.—C. H. Little Co. v. Woodworth Ave. Cemetery Assn., 135 Mich. 248.

¶ 831. On a bill to restrain a city from taking for public use water from property adjoining property of complainants, on the ground that by so doing the water is taken from complainants' property and the region thereabout, and thus deprives the owner of the land of the water for domestic and agricultural purposes, without compensating the owner for his loss, held that as the question was one of public importance the demurrer to the bill should be overruled, and the defendant should be required to answer so that decision might be on the proofs.—Osborne v. City of Ann Arbor, 189 Mich. 96.

§ 211. ——Leave to amend or plead further.

See also ante ¶¶ 569, 776.

Further answer after partial quashing, see ante § 145.

Motion for leave as waiver of irregularity in entry of pro confesso decree, see ante ¶ 215.

¶ 832. A bill should not be dismissed on demurrer unless the defects are not amendable or the complainant declines to amend.—Lamb v. Jeffrey, 241 Mich. 719.

¶ 833. Where, on the allowance of a special demurrer the objection can be obviated by striking out the objectionable feature, opportunity should be given for amendment.—Bigelow v. Sanford, 98 Mich. 657.

¶ 834. Under Chancery Rule 9, subd. e, requiring an opportunity to amend a bill after demurrer sustained, such amendment will not be allowed where the demurrer goes to the merits of the whole bill and its defects are such as not to be amendable.—Macomber v. Cottrell, 162 Mich. 718.

¶ 835. Where a demurrer to a bill in aid of execution is sustained because the execution did not issue until the period of limitation had elapsed for the original decree, complainant is properly given leave to amend so as to set up an alleged estoppel of defendants by reason of their conduct in delaying the issuance of their execution and procuring a stay of proceedings.—Albert v. Patterson, 167 Mich. 162.

¶ 836. A bill should not be dismissed on demurrer for want of a formal party, but leave should be given to amend.—Palmer v. Rich, 12 Mich. 414.

¶ 837. A complainant has the right to amend a demurrable bill if desired, but the court cannot assume that it so desires, and there being no such showing in the record of a proceeding to foreclose a lien upon stock, by a corporation, a peremptory dismissal is not improper.—Aldine Mfg. Co. v. Phillips, 118 Mich. 162.

¶ 838. In an action to enjoin the sale of personalty on execution, it was held error to dismiss complainant's bill without leave to file an amendment where plaintiff claimed to have learned on the trial for the first time that defendant had sold collateral given to secure his claim and had not applied the amount realized on such sale towards the payment of the claim.—City Bank & Trust Co. v. Hurd, 179 Mich. 454.

§ 212. Affirmative relief to defendants; decree on cross-bill.

Necessity of cross-bill to sustain affirmative relief, see also ante § 124.

Insufficiency of answer alone to sustain relief not conformable to bill, see ante § 208.

Waiver of default preventing relief on cross-bill, see post ¶ 886a.

Grounds for dismissal of cross-bill without decision, see ante § 193.

Provision to ascertain sum due defendant and for dismissal if not paid, see post ¶ 856.

Adjudging nonliability of defaulting defendant where that appears by the bill, see also post ¶ 889.

Power on accounting to decree balance for defendant without cross-bill, see Accounting Suits ¶ 44.

¶ 839. A cross-bill cannot be maintained if the defense to the original bill fails, where both are based on the same facts.—Hall v. Harrington, 41 Mich. 146.

¶ 840. The dismissal of an original bill does not carry with it a cross-bill where such cross-bill sets up additional facts relating to the subject-matter of the original bill and asks affirmative relief.—Griffin v. Griffin, 118 Mich. 446.

¶ 841. Where a defendant has neither filed a cross-bill nor asked affirmative relief in its answer, it is entitled at the most only to a dismissal of the bill.—McManus v. City of Petoskey, 164 Mich. 390.

¶ 842. Where a bill to correct a description in a deed is dismissed, defendants having asked for no affirmative relief, a decree cannot be made determining the title to the land.—Tuthill v. Katz, 174 Mich. 217.

¶ 843. Complainant vendor brought a bill to foreclose a land contract. Defendant answered that a twenty-three-foot strip of the lot conveyed was owned by adverse possession by a third party, and asked the court to compel complainant to account to him for overpayment. Held, the court was authorized to grant affirmative relief under such answer, and settle all rights between the parties.—Nelson v. Gibe, 162 Mich. 410.

¶ 844. Where a bill for injunction is filed to prevent a contractor and subcontractor from interfering with the completion of a building after default by the contractor, and the contractor fails to answer but suffers the bill to be taken as confessed, an intervening assignee of the rights of the contractor and subcontractor in money due on a portion of the contract is not entitled, upon a cross-bill, to a personal decree against the owner upon such claim unless the contractor gives satisfactory assurances to the owner, or gives notice and files with the clerk of court a release and satisfaction of all demands and claims growing out of the contract.—La Tour v. Hibbler, 188 Mich. 140.

¶ 845. On a bill to cancel a mortgage and note upon the ground that it was procured by fraudulent representations by defendant that no contest of the will would be made by anybody, the court, upon finding that the note and mortgage are supported by a consideration, will not grant complainant relief to the extent of allowing her a certain portion of the expense of the litigation in establishing the will, as authorized under the agreement, where the answer does not claim the benefit of a cross-bill and does not ask to foreclose the mortgage, and the bill is not framed according to any theory of an abatement or reduction of any portion of the mortgage for such reason.—Sellers v. Perry, 191 Mich. 619.

¶ 846. On a bill by a creditor of a corporation to whom the majority of the stock of the corporation had been pledged by the principal stockholder as collateral security for the indebtedness of such corporation, to cancel two mortgages, one of which was given by the corporation to the stockholder and assigned to another person, and the other to such other person as security for the payment of a bond given as guaranty for the payment of other indebtedness to a bank, held that as the defendant mortgagee had not in her answer prayed for a foreclosure, such a decree was improper and should be vacated on her motion.—Osborn v. Detroit Kraut Co., 193 Mich. 664.

§ 213. Propriety and sufficiency of relief.

Personal coercive nature of relief and remedies, see also ante ¶¶ 107, 108.
As dependent on maxims and principles of equity, see also ante, I.
Provisions for contingencies in the future, see post § 215.
Reservation of questions and issues for further inquiry, see post § 216.
Compensation as proper relief, see post § 217.
Completeness of the relief and retention of bill to that end, see post §§ 218-222.
Several relief to several parties, see post § 214.
Affirmative relief to defendants, see ante § 212.
Proper relief on bill of review, see post § 249.
Proper relief in particular actions and suits, see specific topics treating of the suit in question or of the right or remedy involved. A list of the principal topics will be found referred to ante under § 77.
Decree in creditors' suits, see Creditors' Suits § 34.
Scope and terms of relief in suits for setting aside drain proceedings or drain taxes, see Drains § 111.
Impropriety of injunctions suspensive of legal rights without trial thereof, see Injunctions, V.

¶ 847. Where a complainant seeks relief of an equitable character in a case where there is also a legal remedy, and the defendant answers without taking this objection, he may be properly subjected to a decree granting the relief prayed if it is within the equitable powers of the court.—Bennett v. Nichols, 12 Mich. 22.

¶ 848. The court will consider, in connection with the other circumstances in the case, the consequence of its decree, and will see to it that an oppressive or unjust result is not reached.—Perrin v. Lepper, 72 Mich. 454.

¶ 849. When all of the parties are before a court of chancery, although representing different interests, such a decree may be rendered as justice demands.—Antoszewski v. City Plumbing Co., 185 Mich. 215.

¶ 850. After land was sold and the purchaser was in possession under a contract calling for future payment, he sold at an advanced price under a contract calling for payment in instalments of which the earlier were to be paid to the original vendor until he was paid up. The other payments were to be made to the original purchaser. This was assented to in writing by the original vendor, who "accepted the said (second purchaser) in payment." One payment was made and the original vendor then made a deed to the second purchaser in order to enable him to mortgage the land and raise the money to complete the payments, which was done without fraud and without notice. Held that on a bill to cancel the deed and mortgage and for specific performance by the original purchaser, joining all the other parties as defendants, it was proper to allow the mortgage to stand as a lien and to cancel the deed and direct conveyance by the original vendor to the original purchaser.—Fountaine v. Leveque, 108 Mich. 614.

¶ 851. On a bill for reformation of a deed by one common tenant to the other, so as to make it express their intention that all the timber should be reserved to the grantor, and to declare the ownership of plaintiff to said timber with a license to remove same, an injunction against claim or interference by the grantee with the timber is sufficient relief, where it appears that the timber has meanwhile been cut and removed, coupling with it an adjudication that the plaintiff is so entitled.—Smith v. Wakeman, 114 Mich. 611.

§ 214. Joint and several relief.

Answer by one defeating bill as carrying judgment for all defendants, see ante ¶ 358.
Decree against part of defendants, others being dismissed, see also ante ¶ 792.
Rendition of decree against joint defendants, one confessing bill, see also ante ¶ 798.
Decree between codefendants on pleadings and proofs had between complainants and defendants, see ante ¶ 810.
Relief on cross-bill on dismissing bill, see ante § 212.
Party entitled to enforce one of several provisions of decree, see post § 228.

¶ 852. Although the decree is an entirety, it may embody different requirements of the respective parties against whom it is pronounced.—Kephart v. Farmers' & Mechanics' Bank of Michigan, 4 Mich. 602.

¶ 853. A court of equity cannot define and secure the rights of one litigant without reference to the corresponding rights of the other.—Hoxsie v. Hoxsie, 38 Mich. 77.

§ 215. Provisions for future or contingencies.

Provisions for contingencies in interlocutory decrees, see ante ¶ 760.

¶ 854. On accounting in equity begun pending a trover action, where the facts of the latter cause were set up by cross-bill improperly, the court decreed that when the trover action was decided there should be a proper credit.—McGraw v. Dole, 63 Mich. 1.

¶ 855. In a proceeding between two secret benevolent societies, in which complainant was enjoined from competing with defendant in the field occupied by the latter, by using the same ritual, secret work, badges, etc., the court on settlement of the decree, refused to investigate and determine whether complainant's proposed new ritual, etc., sufficiently differed from that used by defendant; as such action would require the answering of questions relating to controversies which had not arisen.—Great Hive L. O. T. M. of Michigan v. Supreme Hive L. O. T. M. of World, 135 Mich. 392.

§ 216. Provisions as to further inquiry and procedure.

Making ancillary and supplementary decrees, see post § 226.

Reservation of questions on appeal or remand for determination on retrial, see Appeal § 512 et seq.

¶ 856. A decree ordering a reference to ascertain amounts due defendant and granting relief on condition of their repayment should fix the time within which repayment is to be made after confirmation of the report of the reference; and further provide that in case of default the bill be dismissed. —Match v. Hunt, 38 Mich. 1.

§ 217. Compensation as relief.

Retention for compensation as at law as complete relief, see also post § 222.

Compensation for fraud on denying rescission, see Rescission, VI.

Compensation in lieu of specific performance, see Specific Performance, IV.

Compensation for damages from nuisance instead of injunction, see Injunctions, V; Nuisances, III.

Allowance in suits to quiet title of value of improvements, see Quieting Title, III.

Allowance of owelty in partition, see Partition, IV.

¶ 857. The court is not bound, in all cases where compensation can be made, to give relief; for the party seeking relief may have so conducted himself as to have lost all claim to its interposition; but where this is not the case, and it is equitable under the circumstances that relief should be given, it is competent for the court to give it.—Chipman v. Thompson, W. 405.

¶ 858. Damages are not recoverable in equity where no case for equitable relief is made out to which the damages would be applicable or subsidiary.—Bourget v. Monroe, 58 Mich. 563.

¶ 859. Damages are not recoverable in chancery where the grievance asserted is a fraud committed by one person upon another in a dealing in personal property; they are to be awarded at law by a jury.—Teft v. Stewart, 31 Mich. 367.

¶ 860. Equity has jurisdiction to give compensation for the damages sustained by a fraudulent execution of a trust.—Morrison v. Mayer, 63 Mich. 238.

¶ 861. The maxim that equity having entertained jurisdiction for one purpose may retain it for the purpose of doing complete justice, applied so as to allow compensation to complainants for damages caused by the erection of a trestle upon their land, although injunctive relief to compel the removal of the track in question was denied.—Lane v. Michigan Traction Co., 135 Mich. 70.

§ 218. Completeness of relief.

Withholding decree until cause is in condition for complete relief, see ante § 202.

Retention of bill to complete the relief, see post §§ 219-222.

Completeness of relief proper in particular suits, see specific topics, e. g., Accounting Suits §§ 9, 12; Creditors' Suits, III, IV; Foreclosure, III, D; Indemnity, III, B; Injunctions, V; Mortgages, IX; Reformation, III; Rescission, VI; Restoration of Papers; Specific Performance, IV; Quieting Title, III.

¶ 862. Equity is entitled to do complete justice between the parties in a controversy before the court; and accordingly may retain a cross-bill to determine legal rights attacked by the bill.—Village of Frankfort v. Schmid, 151 Mich. 85.

¶ 863. The power in equity to grant complete relief when jurisdiction is once taken cannot be extended to persons not parties to the suit, and whose rights a party to the suit cannot take by assignment.—Cochran Timber Co. v. Fisher, 190 Mich. 478.

¶ 864. Complainants filed a bill to obtain a construction of certain instruments whereby the property of their debtor became vested in one of the defendants as trustee for creditors, certain of whom were preferred. The bill prayed that the instruments be decreed to amount to a common-law assignment and the preferences be declared void, that the trustee render an account as to his doings, which were alleged to have been fraudulent, and that a receiver be appointed to take charge of the property. Before any proofs were taken, the court, upon the hearing of a motion for an injunction and a receiver, entered a decree dismissing the bill, which was controverted by answer, based upon a finding that the instruments were merely securities, and could not be construed as a common-law assignment. Held, that the court was in error, as complainants were entitled to be heard, in any event, upon the question of the fraud of the trustee.—Albion Malleable Iron Co. v. First Nat. Bank, 116 Mich. 218.

¶ 865. A bill in equity to remove a cloud from the title of stock arising from a contract made between several parties to control said stock, contained several defendants. A cross-bill to enforce the contract contained several defendants. Held, that equity would enter a decree so as to settle up the rights between all parties, although such relief as between certain defendants was not prayed for.—Scripps v. Sweeney, 160 Mich. 148.

§ 219. Retention of bill to complete the relief.

Rule that relief must be feasible, see post § 220.

Sufficiency of the bill or cross-bill to sustain complete relief, see post § 221.

Administration of legal relief to make relief complete, see post § 222.

Retention to decree compensation, see also ante ¶ 861.

Retention in specific kinds of suits, see topics treating of them, e. g., Injunctions; Rescission; Reformation; Specific Performance; Quieting Title.

Retention of cause or part of it on appeal, see Appeal § 496.

Retaining cross-bill on disposing of original bill on appeal, see Appeal ¶ 2195.

Retention of accounting suit to render personal decree, see Accounting Suits ¶ 45.

Retention of divorce bill as bill for injunction to protect property rights, see also Divorce ¶ 415.

Retention of bill to adjust dower and do complete relief, see also Dower ¶ 111.

¶ 866. Equity having once acquired jurisdiction may retain it to give such full relief as will finally dispose of the controversy.—Whipple v. Farrar, 3 Mich. 436; Miller v. Stepper, 32 Mich. 194; Wallace v. Wallace, 42 Mich. 326; Drayton v. Chandler, 93 Mich. 383; In re Axtell's Petition, 95 Mich. 244; Culver v. Avery, 161 Mich. 322; Hamilton v. Wilcox, 167 Mich. 551; Buck v. Lockwood, 193 Mich. 242.

¶ 867. Where the court had determined that the equitable title was in complainant, assignee of the purchaser of land at execution sale, and the period for redemption was past, it decreed a surrender of the possession to him instead of leaving him to his remedy by ejectment.—Whipple v. Farrar, 3 Mich. 436.

¶ 868. Matters in a bill in aggravation are not to be considered where the main case fails.—Smith v. Walker, 57 Mich. 456.

¶ 869. Where a widow is compelled to resort to equity to obtain her dower and share in her husband's estate, the court will retain jurisdiction for the purpose of disposing of the whole question of dower, mesne profits and distribution.—Miller v. Stepper, 32 Mich. 194.

¶ 870. A bill to prevent forfeiture of a timberland contract because of a shortage in the amount of the timber, may be retained for the purpose of allowing damages for the shortage.—Chase v. Boughton, 93 Mich. 285.

§ 220. ——Feasibility of complete relief.

¶ 871. When it can be done without disregarding rules of right, the court, having once assumed jurisdiction, should put an end to the controversy.—Toledo, A. A. & N. M. R. Co. v. Detroit, L. & N. R. Co., 63 Mich. 645.

¶ 872. The fact, that a township of Bay county is joined as a defendant in a suit to restrain a continuance of trespasses in Saginaw county, is not an obstacle to the retention of the bill; since, if it be true that the township is not suable save in Bay county, it may be dismissed from the suit, which can continue as to individual defendants.—Davis v. Township of Frankenlust, 118 Mich. 494.

¶ 873. This court cannot on dismissing a bill for specific performance brought to enforce a contract for the sale of land for a right of way of a railroad determine the damages of the defendant in having had her land taken where the possession was wrongful inasmuch as Const. art. XVIII, § 2, provides that in taking private property for private use the necessity and compensation for such taking shall be ascertained by a jury.—Grand Rapids, G. H. & M. R. Co. v. Stevens, 143 Mich. 646.

¶ 874. Where a bill is filed against an administrator and the subsequent grantees of a contingent interest in real estate, to set aside such deed upon the ground that it was without consideration and was given without knowledge as to existing rights, and for an accounting by such administrator, the fact that the deed cannot be set aside because the land is in the possession of innocent purchasers for value, and the accounts are not mutual and an adequate remedy exists at law, does not deprive equity jurisdiction to retain the cause to compel an accounting from the administrator.—Parks v. Brooks, 188 Mich. 645.

§ 221. ——Sufficiency of bill or cross-bill.

Sufficiency of bill by creditor to be retained for general equitable relief, see Creditors' Suits § 25, ¶ 94.

Retention of creditors' bill against administrator as bill by him for benefit of creditors, see Creditors' Suits ¶ 139.

¶ 875. The rule that a court of equity having jurisdiction for one purpose, may, and usually will, retain jurisdiction to settle the entire controversy has no application where equitable jurisdiction is not made out by the bill itself.—Allen v. Heft, 200 Mich. 593.

¶ 876. Complainant brought a bill in equity to cancel on the ground of fraud a contract for the purchase of a printing press from defendant, and to have the notes given in payment therefor given up. Held, on denial of the bill, that equity would, in order to settle up the controversy, grant defendant's cross-bill asking for performance from the plaintiff by payment of the price and damages and costs, the cross-bill being sustainable to grant complete relief.—Grabill v. Barnhart Bros. & Spindler, 160 Mich. 81.

¶ 877. Although a bill in equity may contain allegations proper in a bill to quiet title, and include this object in the prayer for relief—while not maintainable on this ground alone, because the complainant is not shown to be in possession, yet, if it also sets forth acts which show a well-established ground of jurisdiction, such as the cancellation of a mortgage, which, though paid, is nevertheless held as an outstanding and existing security—a court of equity will retain the bill and decree the surrender and cancellation of the mortgage.—Jones v. Smith, 22 Mich. 360.

¶ 878. Where judgment creditors file a bill in aid of execution, and join as defendants prior attaching creditors, who have levied upon the land to satisfy a judgment rendered in the attachment suit, and who also hold a mortgage upon the property having priority over complainants' lien, and who in their answer claim the benefit of a cross-bill, and pray for the foreclosure of their mortgage, a statutory foreclosure of which was enjoined in said suit at the instance of complainants, the court on dismissing the bill should decree such foreclosure.—Harrington v. Upton, 78 Mich. 28.

§ 222. ——Matters outside of equity jurisdiction; remedy at law.

Compensation for condemnation ascertainable only by constitutional jury, see ante ¶ 873.

Decree for payment of price of goods as complete relief on bill for fraud in sale, see also ante ¶ 876.

¶ 879. Where rescission of a land contract has been denied because the loss to the vendee—arising from a few inches' deficiency—was insignificant, the suit will not be retained for the purpose of making compensation when the amount of the damage is less than $100.—Steinbach v. Hill, 25 Mich. 78.

¶ 880. A bill by an administrator sought the surrender of a note payable by him as an individual but belonging to his decedent, and it also sought for the delivery of other personal property alleged to belong to the estate. The bill was sufficient as to the note and as to the other personalty complainant's title was not disputed. Held that though replevin or trover might have been maintained for such other personalty, yet the right being admitted complainant would not be relegated to law; the court having jurisdiction of the cause, the surrender of this property should be decreed notwithstanding that the remedy at law was adequate.—Wales v. Newbould, 9 Mich. 45, per Christiancy, J.

¶ 881. A bill in chancery is properly dismissed where complainant has by other means obtained all of the relief to which he is entitled, except damages for defendant's wrongful act for which there is a complete legal remedy.—Pulezer v. Kucharzyk, 116 Mich. 92.

¶ 882. The fact that a complainant will be liable in damages for wrongful injunction under a decree dismissing a bill will not ordinarily confer jurisdiction in a court of equity where it would not otherwise be retained.—Crosby v. Hutchinson, 126 Mich. 56.

¶ 883. While equity will retain jurisdiction to settle controversies for which courts of law afford adequate relief when they are involved with and grow out of an equitable cause which gives the chancery court jurisdiction, the bare pleading, in connection with them, of equitable rights not proven, does not confer jurisdiction to try such controversies, which otherwise are of exclusive law jurisdiction.—Schook v. Zimmerman, 188 Mich. 617.

¶ 884. The rule that equity, once having obtained jurisdiction, will retain it to give such full relief as will finally settle the controversy, applies in a proceeding to enjoin continuing trespasses by forcibly seizing logging improvements with the intention of retaining control for an entire season, and to award damages for the trespass, where the injunction was dissolved on giving bond and the case retained, but repetition of the trespass is threatened.—Hall v. Nester, 122 Mich. 141.

¶ 885. In a suit to set aside an order of probate court and to restrain its enforcement, equity is not deprived of jurisdiction on the ground that the order was void and hence available defensively, in an action of law where jurisdiction has once been assumed under a plea to the merits.—Lothrop v. Duffield, 134 Mich. 485.

¶ 886. The maxim that equity having obtained jurisdiction it should dispose of every question involved, applied so as to award damages for trespass, in an injunction proceeding to enjoin continuing trespass.—Rhoades v. McNamara, 135 Mich. 644.

C. DEFAULTS AND CONFESSIONS.

§ 223. In general.

Admissions and confessions by pleading, see ante § 152 et seq.

Failure to answer as admission or confession, see ante §§ 154-156.

Rendition of decree on confession by one joint defendant, see ante ¶ 798.

Rehearing of decree taken pro confesso, see post § 230.

[Note. The general law of defaults and the practice of taking bills as confessed for want of answer are treated in the topic Defaults, which see. The cross-references following point out where the particular matters will be found which pertain to defaults in equity.]

Proofs necessary to enter decree pro confesso, see Defaults § 2.

Notice to appearing defendants before taking decree as confessed, see Defaults § 7, ¶ 27.

Decree as to one bad because decree pro confesso as to other essential thereto was invalid, see Defaults ¶ 29.

Affidavit and motion to enter decree pro confesso, see Defaults § 10 et seq.

Order and entry of default, see Defaults § 15.

Matters admitted by allowing bill to be taken pro confesso, see Defaults §§ 17, 18.

Matters admitted by default of answer to cross-bill, see Defaults § 17.

Motion or petition and showing to open decree pro confesso, see Defaults § 37.

Proffer of answer or plea on motion to open decree pro confesso, see Defaults § 38.

Disregarding imperfect or incomplete copy served as laches preventing opening of resultant default, see Defaults ¶ 97.

Appealability of consent or default decree, see Appeal § 37.

Conclusiveness of decrees entered on consent or confession, see Former Adjudication, II, V.

Collateral attacks on default judgments and decrees, see Judgments, VII.

¶ 886a. A default and an order pro confesso is practically waived in so far as it might estop the defendant from maintaining a cross-bill, where the cross-bill is really filed and both cases are argued together and treated as a single litigation.—Johnson v. Van Velsor, 43 Mich. 208.

§ 224. Scope and terms of decree.

Propriety and sufficiency of the relief granted, in so far as the same does not depend on the default character of the decree, see ante § 213 et seq.

General law of judgments other than that of the taking, entering and opening of defaults, see Judgments.

General law of res adjudicata and estoppel by default decrees, see Former Adjudication.

Modes of correcting default decree, see also post ¶ 890.

Conformity of decree pro confesso to bill as confessed, see Defaults § 24.

¶ 887. Where there is a default at the hearing, a complainant can take no decree except such as would be authorized by the state of the pleadings had there been no default.—Hardwick v. Bassett, 25 Mich. 149.

¶ 888. Where a defendant appears but refuses to plead, the decree pro confesso cannot be based on anything not contained in the bill either originally or by way of amendment.—McMahon v. Rooney, 93 Mich. 390.

¶ 889. Where complainant's own showing proves that a person impleaded as defendant is not a proper party, such defendant will be declared not liable even though he did not appear and defend.—Pool v. Horton, 45 Mich. 404.

D. CORRECTION, AMENDMENT AND VACATION OF DECREES.

§ 225. In general; mode and propriety.

[Note. Except for the matters treated post, division XI, the correction, amendment and vacation of judgments and decrees is treated in Judgments. The opening of defaults is treated in Defaults, VI. For more particular references, see those which follow.]

Reinstatement of cause after dismissal, see ante § 201.

Vacation of decree taken before all necessary parties were brought in, see ante ¶ 800.

Rehearing and the procedure for it, see post §§ 229-232.

Bills to revive, to supplement, to review, or to carry decrees into execution, see pos. XI.

Necessity of answer to both supplemental and original bills by defendant appearing after default, see post ¶ 936.

Amendment of judgments or decrees in same court by motion or petition, see Judgments, V.

Suits to set aside judgments, or for injunction against enforcement or other relief, see Judgments, VI.

Alteration and amendment of divorce and alimony decrees, see Divorce, VII, IX, X, B, E.

Opening defaults and letting defendants in to plead, see Defaults, VI.

Right to appeal and general law of appeals, see Appeal.

Trial de novo on appeal, see Appeal, XII, H.

Modification or correction on appeal, see Appeal, XIII, C.

Rules for review of equity findings on the evidence, see Appeal, XII, E, 1.
Statute of amendments, grounds on which judgments and decrees on confession may be reversed, impaired or affected, see Jud. Act chap. XVI, § 5; Comp. L. 1915, § 12482.

¶ 890. When a decree has been enrolled upon default after appearance, it can be opened for re-examination only on bill of review, and an order setting aside such a decree, and, on petition filed, dismissing the bill for a demurrable defect in the original cause, is irregular and erroneous.—Maynard v. Pereault, 30 Mich. 160.

¶ 891. Opening a decree and permitting a defendant to come in and defend is a matter within the sound discretion of the court when applied for within a reasonable time. Whether it should be done by bill of review or petition depends upon the situation and circumstances of the case.—Low v. Mills, 61 Mich. 35.

¶ 892. A substantial amendment asked after the close of the term at which the original decree was rendered, and after the time for appeal has passed, should not be permitted; the appropriate remedy under such circumstances and the only one where the decree has been enrolled, being by bill of review.—Reynolds v. Reynolds, 115 Mich. 378.

§ 226. Supplementary and ancillary decrees.
Nature and qualities of bills of review, see post § 240.
Decree of revivor, see post § 235.
Decree on bill of review, see post § 249.
Ancillary and supplementary orders in divorce cases after decree, see Divorce, VII, X, E.
Appealability of amendatory and supplementary decrees, see Appeal § 43.
Effect of appeal to transfer jurisdiction to higher court, see Appeal, IX.

¶ 893. Where a case remains in court upon equities reserved and for future supervision, orders subsequent to the decree can be made as circumstances require.—Loud v. Winchester, 52 Mich. 174.

¶ 894. A lower court cannot make a supplementary decree in a chancery case while an appeal is pending in the supreme court on the original decree.—Beal v. Chase, 31 Mich. 490.

¶ 895. Orders and decrees respecting the right of the Village of Highland Park to empty sewage into the sewers of the City of Detroit, and reserving to the court power to take further action on the application of either party on the subsequent change of existing conditions, require such application to be by supplemental petition.—City of Detroit v. Village of Highland Park, 186 Mich. 166. (Equally divided court.)

E. CONCLUSIVENESS, OPERATION AND EFFECT OF DECREES.

§ 227. In general.
Duty to prepare deed for conveyance as decreed, see post ¶ 901.
[Note. The entire doctrine of estoppel and bar by decree, including the matters and causes and also the persons concluded or barred, is treated in Former Adjudication. The doctrines as applied to judgments at law are also treated there. The doctrine, that a judgment is not collaterally assailable by the parties thereto or their privies for any mere error or irregularity, but only for some jurisdictional defect in the proceedings or for fraud on the court procuring the making of the decree or judgment or for mistake or accident likewise operating to procure the making of the judgment, is fully treated in Judgments, VII. Presumptions indulged on the record, when the judgment is collaterally assailed, see Judgments, VII; Courts § 80.]
Estoppel to claim under and attack decree at same time, see also Estoppel, III, A.

¶ 896. Stipulations between parties, or signed by the parties to be bound in a chancery suit, and filed with the papers in the cause, may be considered in determining the interpretation of the decree.—Thayer v. McGee, 20 Mich. 195.

¶ 897. A decree requiring defendant to convey has the same effect as a voluntary conveyance to break adverse possession.—Gower v. Quinlan, 40 Mich. 572.

¶ 898. A decree for the rescission of a deed and for reconveyance may stand in lieu of the conveyance until made.—Thorn v. Thorn, 51 Mich. 167.

¶ 899. A decree for the specific performance of a land contract cannot relate back to the date of filing the bill for the purpose of bringing trespass against the lessee of a defendant who holds the legal title and actual possession.—Goetchius v. Sanborn, 46 Mich. 330.

F. SATISFACTION, PERFORMANCE AND ENFORCEMENT OF DECREES.

§ 228. In general.
[Note. The matters denoted by this division are in the main fully treated elsewhere for reasons which will be obvious on reading the cross-references which follow.]
Provision for dismissal on failure of complainant to pay sum due defendant to be ascertained, see ante ¶ 856.
Remedy to recover parcel allotted in partition, see post ¶ 924.
Mode and sufficiency of payment or discharge of judgments generally, see Judgments, XI.

Medium and sufficiency of payment and tender, see Payment, I.
Payment or deposit in court, see Payment, I, B.
Application of payments, see Payment, III.
Pleading and proof of payments, see Payment, V.
Recovery of payments made under mistake or improperly, see Payment, VI; Implied Contracts, II.
Restitution on reversal of judgment, see also Executions, XIII.
Actions or suits, writs and process to enforce decrees and judgments, see Judgments, XII; Assistance, Writ of.
Possessory process on judgment, see Judgments, XII.
Enforcement by execution process, see Executions.
Contempt proceedings and attachment of the person to coerce obedience to decree and performance of it, see Contempt.
Judicial sales, see Judicial Sales; and see also Foreclosure, III, E; Partition, IV.
Power of chancery to enforce decrees by execution against property or person, see Jud. Act, chap. XXIII, § 150; Comp. L. 1915, § 12965.
Modes of enforcement other than by execution, see Jud. Act, chap. XXIV, § 1 et seq.; Comp. L. 1915, § 12966 et seq.
Necessity of enrollment before enforcement, see 1916 C. C. Rule 55, § 1.

¶ 900. Enforcement of a decree can be demanded only by those to whom it gives affirmative relief; on appeal they are the parties provided for by the appeal bond, and on a bill of review they cannot object that the decree was not performed.—Mickle v. Maxfield, 42 Mich. 304.

¶ 901. One who has been ordered to execute, acknowledge and deliver a deed containing a special covenant of warranty cannot be held guilty of contempt in disobeying such decree until such deed has been presented to him for execution, and he has refused: he is not bound at his peril to prepare it.—Berry v. Innes, 35 Mich. 189.

XI. REHEARING, AND BILLS OF REVIVOR, SUPPLEMENT AND REVIEW.

Suits to impeach or set aside decrees or judgments, see Judgments, VI.
Suits to restrain enforcement of judgments or decrees, see Judgments, VI; and see also Injunctions.
Relief against executions, see Judgments, VI; Executions, X; Injunctions, II, B.
Parties to bills for relief from judgments, see Injunctions, III; Judgments, VI, B.
Suits to relieve infants, see also Infants, VII.
Mandamus to compel judicial action in allowing leave or granting relief, see Mandamus, II, V.

§ 229. Rehearings in general.

Stipulation for rehearing, see post § 231.
Grounds for allowing or denying rehearing of default decree, see post § 230.
Laches in suffering default as ground for refusing rehearing, see post ¶ 916.
Relative scope and distinction of rehearings and bills of review, see post ¶ 991.
Bills of review after enrollment, see post § 240 et seq.
Grounds and propriety of leave to file bill of review, see post § 241.
Grounds for rehearing on appeal, see Appeal, XIV.
Laches and diligence in seeking rehearing on appeal, see Appeal § 545.
Power of trial court to grant rehearing after appellate decree, see Appeal § 564.
Appealability of order granting or denying rehearing, see Appeal § 50.
Sufficiency of case to review ruling or petition for rehearing, see Appeal § 192.
Review of discretion as to rehearing, see Appeal § 414.
Rehearing of divorce suit for remissness of wife's guardian ad litem, see Divorce ¶¶ 341, 342.
Showing and grounds for rehearing, see 1916 C. C. Rule 56.

¶ 902. A rehearing will not be granted where a party by lapse of time has lost his right to appeal.—Benedict v. Thompson, W. 446.

¶ 903. A motion for rehearing that has been delayed until after the time allowed for taking an appeal has expired is too late if the laches is not excused.—Warner v. Juif, 38 Mich. 662.

¶ 904. The circuit court in chancery has power to grant a rehearing before enrollment, even after the time for taking an appeal has expired.—Barnes v. Kent Circuit Judge, 97 Mich. 212.

¶ 905. For a trial court to refuse a motion for a rehearing of a chancery case after the failure of the applicant to perfect an appeal within the statutory time, is not an abuse of discretion.—Perkins v. Perkins, 181 Mich. 166.

¶ 906. Rehearing was properly denied where no relief could be granted which would not be practically allowing two applications for a rehearing,—one granted and not acted on, and another a substantial repetition of it,—without a willingness to comply with the practice, and after a longer delay than would support an appeal.—Bope v. Ferris, 77 Mich. 299.

¶ 907. Rehearing as to decree for compensation will be allowed a trustee who, it appeared, had properly managed trust estate, where such decree was entered before opportunity had of proving the value of such services.—Hodges v. McDuff, 76 Mich. 303.

¶ 908. Where the only positive testimony in his own behalf came from the complainant, and after the hearing a rehearing was asked on a showing of newly discovered evidence that complainant had made statements contradicting his evidence in material points in such a way as to be decisive of the case, held, that the rehearing should have been granted.—Sheldon v. Hawes, 15 Mich. 519.

¶ 909. A rehearing upon a decree declaring a deed a mortgage, on the ground that one to whom a portion of the land had been conveyed by the defendants was not made a party, was properly denied where no injury to defendants by the failure to bring in such party was shown, and where complainant claimed that the deed was not recorded and he was unaware that such party had an interest.—Roelofs v. Wever, 119 Mich. 334.

¶ 910. Where the judge in a chancery case after announcing his decision, but before signing the decree, concludes that he had an improper conception of the law and facts, and desires additional light, it is his duty to require further testimony and reargument. —J. L. Hudson Co. v. No-Name Hat Co., 174 Mich. 109.

¶ 911. Refusal of rehearing in an equity suit held no abuse of discretion where the testimony offered was merely cumulative.—Marquette Lumber Co. v. Albee, 196 Mich. 127.

¶ 912. A motion by defendant for a rehearing of a suit for the specific performance of an agreement for the extension of an oral lease on the ground of newly discovered evidence is properly refused where the evidence, a sublease by complainant in which he stated he had no lease, was merely cumulative, and such evidence could have been discovered while the trial was in progress,—Charlet v. Teakle, 197 Mich. 426.

¶ 913. Denial of rehearing in equity will be sustained where the record does not show that the court below acted improperly in taking an account without referring it, or that any complaint was there made on that ground, or that the petition for rehearing was based on such a ground.—Roelofs v Wever, 119 Mich. 334.

¶ 914. A rehearing was properly denied upon a decree that a deed should be treated as a mortgage and directing the making of certain payments, on the ground that a house built by defendants should have been considered in the rendition of the decree; where, although the opportunity for considering such house was afforded upon the hearing, there was nothing to indicate that the defendants offered proof upon the subject or even called the attention of the court to it, and where the latter omission appeared from the petition.—Roelofs v. Wever, 119 Mich. 334.

§ 230. ——On consent or pro confesso decrees.

¶ 915. Where a decree has been entered by consent, a party who knew what the decree was, and to whom no misrepresentations were made in obtaining it, is properly denied a rehearing.—Hodges v. McDuff, 76 Mich. 308.

¶ 916. In a bill for specific performance of a land contract a petition for a rehearing after a decree pro confesso assigning as reasons for not appearing that the defendant expected to adjust the matter and that it "entirely slipped his mind" shows laches and the decree should not be opened on technical grounds or unless grave injustice will result. —Wilkinson v. Kneeland, 125 Mich. 261.

§ 231. ——Stipulation for rehearing.

¶ 917. A stipulation reciting a decree avoiding certain taxes and that the same questions were involved in the case at bar and giving ten days after decision and the filing of an opinion by the supreme court in the first case to petition for rehearing or to perfect an appeal in the case at bar, will control and will warrant a rehearing as stipulated; though the decree entered under the stipulation provided that it should be without prejudice to the right of the state to hereafter enforce payment, and it is not necessary to resort to a new proceeding under the statute as in case of failure to render a decree.—Auditor General v. Smith, 95 Mich. 132.

§ 232. ——Application and procedure for allowance.

Grounds for allowing or denying, see ante §§ 229-231.

Showing of reasons, see also ante ¶¶ 913, 914.

Applications for rehearing and practice thereon, see 1916 C. C. Rule 56.

Time for application for rehearing, see 1916 C. C. Rule 56.

¶ 918. E. filed a bill to assure his title to land recovered from him by H. in a previous suit; he asked also that a former decree be declared void, or that a rehearing be allowed on the grounds that false testimony had been given in the previous suit; that after the decree both parties had agreed to a settlement, but that H. had repudiated the bargain when it was too late for E. to appeal; and that there was newly discovered evidence. Held, that this was merely a bill for a rehearing, and that, not being sworn to, it could not stand as a petition for a rehearing under Chancery Rule 81.—Eveland v. Stephenson, 45 Mich. 394.

§ 233. Bills of revivor.

Supplemental bills, see post §§ 237-239.

What constitutes bill of revivor and supplement as distinguished from original bill, see post ¶ 934.

Elements of supplement and revivor in bills of review, see post § 240.

Cross-bill to revivor bill, see post § 234.
Order or decree of revivor, see post § 235.
New pleadings or amendments, see post § 236.
Practice for revival under the statutes, see Abatement § 20.
When original bill is necessary under the statutory practice, see Abatement § 20.

¶ 919. A bill of revivor lies to bring in only those who claim by operation of law in consequence of the death of the original party, and one who takes by deed from defendant must come in by original bill.—Barnett v. Powers, 40 Mich. 317.

¶ 920. Titles that do not arise by operation of law on the death of a party cannot be brought into a case without a new suit, or an original bill in the nature of a supplemental bill or bill of revivor.—Barnett v. Powers, 40 Mich. 317.

¶ 921. Where the entire subject-matter of a suit in chancery is assigned by the complainant, the suit becomes defective, and can no longer be prosecuted in his name after the assignment is brought to the notice of the court; and the only mode in which the assignee can revive or get the benefit of the original suit is by filing an original bill in the nature of a bill of revivor and supplement.—Webster v. Hitchcock, 11 Mich. 56; Perkins v. Perkins, 16 Mich. 162.

¶ 922. The assignee of the subject-matter of a suit in chancery may, without the previous leave of the court, and in the name of a new solicitor, file the original bill in the nature of a bill of revivor and supplement necessary to get the benefit of the original suit.—Webster v. Hitchcock, 11 Mich. 56.

¶ 923. Where a mortgagor dies after a bill has been filed to foreclose the mortgage, but before he is served with subpœna, the suit can be revived by petition against his heirs.—Stevenson v. Kurtz, 98 Mich. 493.

¶ 924. A bill of revivor and supplement based on a partition decree to recover the land will not lie; ejectment for distinct parcels of land must be brought against each separate holding.—Walsh v. Varney, 38 Mich. 73.

¶ 925. A wife is neither an heir nor a legal representative of her husband and accordingly cannot be brought in by a bill of revivor in a foreclosure suit which omitted her. Original bill is necessary.—Barnett v. Powers, 40 Mich. 317.

§ 234. ——Cross-bill to bill of revivor.

¶ 926. In a suit for the construction of a deed conveying water privileges, and for an account of an excess of water claimed to have been used by defendants, in which a bill of revivor and supplement is filed by purchasers of defendants' interest, stating that they have become the owners of such interest, and entered into possession, and that controversies have since arisen between them and complainant as to the quantity of water used, and denying that they have misapplied or wasted any water, complainant may set up by way of cross-bill that such purchasers have bought additional interests, and have reconstructed their mill and changed the water wheel in an improper manner, and are using a specified amount of water in excess of that to which they are entitled under their several grants.—Powers v. Hibbard, 114 Mich. 533.

§ 235. ——Order or decree of revivor.

¶ 927. It is sufficient that an order of revivor made on the suggestion of defendant's death recites the petition upon which it is based.—Stevenson v. Kurtz, 98 Mich. 493.

§ 236. ——Amendments and new pleadings.

¶ 928. Where a complainant in chancery dies, the suit is revived by an order substituting his representative as complainant, without amendment of the bill.—Webster v. Hitchcock, 11 Mich. 56.

¶ 929. Where, on the death of the complainant, a chancery suit is revived by a statutory order in the name of the administrator and heirs, it is unnecessary to file amendments alleging the death, devolution of the estate, and the withholding of rights from the new complainants, with a prayer for relief corresponding to that originally made; but, if filed, they do not prejudice the defendant and may be disregarded as surplusage.—Webster v. Bailey, 31 Mich. 36.

§ 237. Supplemental bills.

Propriety of supplemental pleadings before decree passed, see ante § 138.
Amendments in nature of supplemental bill, time when allowable, see ante § 131.
Supplemental pleading or amendment as proper way of introducing matters occurring after bill is filed, see ante § 137.
When supplemental bill requisite to bring in new interests and parties, see ante § 233.
Supplemental petition to make ancillary decree on later facts, see also ante ¶ 895.
Elements of supplement in bills of review, see post § 240.
Grounding supplemental bill on necessity for asserting right first arising after decree, though right existed before, see post ¶ 955.
Subsequent matters as extraneous to bill of review, see post § 249.
Supplemental creditors' bill to reach after-acquired assets, see Creditors' Suits § 27.
Procedure to change decree for custody of children, need for original new suit, see also Divorce ¶ 444.

¶ 930. A supplemental bill after a decree must be strictly in aid of that which the court has done, and it cannot be filed for the purpose of introducing a completely new case.—Austin v. Hayden, 190 Mich. 528.

¶ 931. Where an original bill of complaint is filed by the receiver of an insolvent partnership for an accounting, and for an adjudication of the respective rights of numerous creditors and to restrain them from instituting separate proceedings, and to enjoin defendants from selling property claimed by complainant as receiver of the partnership, a supplemental bill which involves an issue between creditors of one of the partners, of whose property complainant was also receiver, and the same defendants as to the right to assets of the partner, seeks for relief not germane to the original cause.—Austin v. Hayden, 190 Mich. 528.

¶ 932. Where the purpose of an original bill for an accounting by the receiver of a partnership against defendants was to secure a money decree against defendants, and such decree was satisfied, a supplementary bill by such complainant, as receiver for an individual partner, against the same defendants, involving the right to assets of such partner, is not in aid of the original bill, so as to constitute a proper supplementary bill.—Austin v. Hayden, 190 Mich. 528.

¶ 933. A so-called supplemental bill filed pursuant to leave to review a decree and to enforce any right of contribution the complainant might have against defendant under a former decree, which right of contribution might have been enforced under the original bill by allowing amendment and remanding it when on appeal, is not technically a bill of supplement when it sets up no new matter but merely amplifies what was alleged in the original bill; but, having been made under an order allowing it to be filed and stating the purpose of the bill, and all parties having understood such purpose, it was not error to make it as a supplemental bill though in fact an amended bill.—Cheever v. Ellis, 144 Mich. 477.

¶ 934. A bill for a decree against the purchaser of complainant's stock for an alleged violation of the agreement of sale, and for dividends alleged to have been earned by such stock prior to its sale, of which dividends complainant alleges to have been fraudulently deprived, is not a bill of revivor and supplement, but an original bill, although it sets forth in full a bill in a former suit, which to all intents and purposes had been abandoned, in which the complainant sought to restrain the mismanagement of the affairs of defendant corporation in which he was a minority stockholder and asks for an accounting and a receiver.—Phillips v. Jacobs, 145 Mich. 108.

§ 238. ——Application and leave to file.

¶ 935. A petition for leave to file a supplemental bill in an action to foreclose a mechanic's lien is properly denied where it is filed long after the party requesting it had given notice of appeal from the decree rendered by the trial court.—Zilz v. Wilcox, 190 Mich. 486.

§ 239. ——Parties and procedure.

Effect of delay, time to apply, see ante § 238.
Construction and scope of demurrer to supplemental bill, effect to reach defects in original bill, see ante § 151.

¶ 936. If nonresident defendants appear and answer after decree, and after supplemental bill filed to execute the same, and no further proceedings are taken in the original suit, they must answer the supplemental bill if they would protect the rights acquired by so appearing and answering the original bill.—Griggs v. Detroit & M. Ry. Co., 10 Mich. 117.

§ 240. Bills of review or in the nature of bills of review.

What constitutes technical bill of review, see also post ¶ 980.
Petition for relief or bill of review as better practice, see also ante § 225.
Amount necessarily in controversy to give jurisdiction, see ante ¶ 77.
Contents and averments of the bill of review, see post § 247.
Scope of the review, see post § 249.
When bill of review is necessary to open default decree, see Defaults ¶ 129.
Bill of review to obtain alimony where not granted or reserved by divorce decree, see Divorce § 123.
Petition for relief as remedy rather than appeal, see Appeal § 3.
Appealability of leave or denial of petition for review, see Appeal § 47.
Review of grant or denial of leave to fill bill of review, see Appeal § 397.

¶ 937. Any bill whose main purpose is to obtain a new hearing of a controversy already decided, either as question of law or on the same or additional testimony, is a bill of review, or in the nature of a bill of review, even though it involves matters of supplement or revivor, or other additional elements.—Eveland v. Stephenson, 45 Mich. 394.

¶ 938. A bill of review is one brought to have a decree of the court reviewed, altered or reversed.—Dodge v. Northrop, 85 Mich. 243.

¶ 939. Bills of review seek to review or re-examine causes upon their merits.—Chapman v. Chapman, How. N. P. 18.

¶ 940. A bill filed for the purpose of obtaining the vacation of a decree obtained by the defendant against the complainant on the ground that the subpoena was fraudulently served does not raise the question as to the merits of the former cause and is not a bill of review.—Chapman v. Chapman, How. N. P. 18.

¶ 941. A bill of review lies where a foreclosure decree has been made contrary to the terms of the mortgage, and an application for the correction of error, made within a reasonable time, has been refused.—Mickle v. Maxfield, 42 Mich. 304.

¶ 942. A bill attacking a foreclosure decree and sale, and seeking leave to redeem, is in effect a bill in the nature of a bill of review.—Sanford v. Haines, 71 Mich. 116.

¶ 943. A bill seeking the partial annulment for fraud of a foreclosure decree, but praying that sale already made be ratified and time allowed for payment of balance due, is a bill in the nature of a bill of review.—Dodge v. Northrop, 85 Mich. 243.

¶ 944. Where, pending appeal, the whole basis of the suit had disappeared because of a decree rendered in another suit, the cause was remanded with instructions to allow appellant, the defendant below, to file a supplemental bill in the nature of a bill of review, or a bill to suspend or avoid the operation of the decree, upon the new matter arising from the reversal of the decree in the other cause.—Ballard v. Searls, 130 U. S. 50, 32 L. ed. 846, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418.

¶ 945. Where a party has lost his right of appeal innocently and through mistake of his counsel, he cannot file a bill of review as a substitute for such appeal.—Roberge v. De Lisle, 158 Mich. 16; De Lisle v. Wayne Circuit Judge, Id.

¶ 946. A bill of complaint is not a bill for review where it does not assume the validity of the pleadings in the case sought to be reviewed.—Raniak v. Pokorney, 198 Mich 567. (Ostrander, J., dissenting.)

¶ 947. A petition to set aside a tax sale though based on jurisdictional grounds, cannot be treated as a petition for review, as in the latter the petitioner must present to the court his proposed bill, excuse the delay and show the merits of his case.—Cook v. Hall, 123 Mich. 378.

§ 241. ——Grounds and propriety of leave.

Change of law by decision as ground, see also post ¶ 964.
Laches or other objection to granting leave, see post § 242.
Discretion to allow or deny, see post § 243.
Denial on conditions or alternative imposed, see post § 246.
Newly discovered evidence as ground for rehearing, see ante § 229.
Ground for bill of review of divorce decree, see Divorce ¶ 380.

¶ 948. A petition for leave to file a bill in the nature of a bill of review will not be granted unless the court sees reason to believe that its allegations can be sustained by proof.—Day v. Cole, 65 Mich. 154.

¶ 949. The power of the court to grant or deny an application for leave to file a bill of review is largely discretionary, and is always to be exercised in view of the peculiar circumstances of each case, so as to effectuate substantial justice.—Stockley v. Stockley, 93 Mich. 307.

¶ 950. A bill of review on the ground of newly discovered evidence cannot be granted if the evidence is not material, or if the party knew of it in season to have obtained it for use at an earlier stage in the cause.—Ryerson v. Eldred, 23 Mich. 537.

¶ 951. Leave to file a bill of review will not be granted on the ground of newly discovered evidence that is merely cumulative, and is directed to a point to which the attention of the moving party must have been called on the first hearing, when he ought to have known as much of the means of proving it as afterwards.—Taylor v. Boardman, 25 Mich. 527.

¶ 952. An original bill in the nature of a bill of review will lie to set aside a partition where the commissioners appointed to make it acted fraudulently in dividing the property and deceived the court, and defendants ratify their acts and insist on retaining the benefit of it.—Adair v. Cummin, 48 Mich. 375.

¶ 953. Where a complainant, whose bill has been dismissed on appeal, and whose motion for a rehearing and for leave to introduce further testimony has been denied, presents a petition for leave to file a bill of review, containing the affidavits upon which the motion for leave to introduce further testimony was based, as well as other affidavits, which are for the first time presented, which affidavits, if true, make a strong case in his favor on the point upon which the case turned on appeal, and it appears that he was not at fault in not producing the testimony upon the former hearing, equity requires that the case be opened to permit such testimony to be introduced.—Mosher v. Mosher, 108 Mich. 612.

¶ 954. The commencement of a suit by third parties, subsequent to the decree of the supreme court, under circumstances indicating fraud and collusion and an unauthorized use of the names of parties living and dead, for the purpose of affecting the controversy, was disregarded in disposing of an application for leave to file a bill of review.—Ryerson v. Eldred, 23 Mich. 537.

¶ 955. A supplemental bill in the nature of a bill of review was properly filed by a national bank receiver who, by reason of the refusal of the Comptroller of the Currency to permit him to join in the purchase of property at a mortgage foreclosure, according to an agreement made with other banks to protect a second mortgage under which the receiver's bank and the others were parties, neglected to assert his tax lien for moneys advanced; as, although the right to the relief had not arisen since the decree, the necessity of asserting it had.—Noeker v. Howry, 119 Mich. 626.

§ 242. ——Laches and other objection or defense.

See also ante ¶¶ 160, 950, 951, 953.
Loss of right of appeal without fault, see also ante ¶ 945.
Recent necessity of asserting prior right as excuse for not asserting at hearing, see ante ¶ 955.
Unlikelihood of success, see also ante ¶ 948.
Discretion to deny leave, see post § 243.
Showing of objections and counterproofs, see post § 245.

¶ 956. A bill of review should be filed within the time allowed for appealing, unless grounded on newly discovered evidence, or where there is some satisfactory reason for the delay.—Sanford v. Haines, 71 Mich. 116.

¶ 957. Parties claiming through a general assignee are bound, in case of a controversy, to inquire of him for any facts in his knowledge bearing upon it, and failure to do so is gross negligence, depriving them of the right to have a bill of review on the ground of newly discovered evidence which the assignee is to furnish.—Ryerson v. Eldred, 23 Mich. 587.

¶ 958. As the allowance of permission to file a bill of review is discretionary (Chancery Rule 101), the objection that an application for leave to do so comes too late should not prevail where gross injustice will follow.—Vaughan v. Black, 63 Mich. 215.

¶ 959. Lapse of time will not prevent the correction of a decree of foreclosure where the record furnishes means of determining what land was really meant, as all the papers in the case must be read together.—Merrifield v. Ingersoll, 61 Mich. 4.

¶ 960. The diligence and prudence required of ordinarily prudent litigants involves something more than the mere employment of counsel, especially when they are given information that would put an ordinarily prudent person upon his guard.—Stockley v. Stockley, 93 Mich. 307.

¶ 961. Leave to file a bill of review will be denied for gross laches, consisting in many years' delay while rights were in litigation, and for 20 months afterwards, without appeal or other action though the parties knew or could have known their adjudicated rights.—Day v. Cole, 65 Mich. 154.

¶ 962. Laches such as should preclude leave to file a bill of review to vacate a decree which canceled a mortgage is not shown by failure to sue for enforcement of the mortgage, where the holder appeared and resisted a suit to annul the mortgage and sues to review that decree.—Cook v. French, 9(Mich. 525.

¶ 963. In proceedings by a vendor against a vendee and his wife to foreclose a land contract, both defendants were served with process, and both appeared by solicitor, who interposed a demurrer in the name of both. The demurrer was overruled, an answer filed, a decree for complainant duly entered, and a sale made. The day before the order of confirmation became absolute, the wife made a petition for leave to file a bill of review, claiming that she had not authorized the employment of the solicitor who appeared for her of record, and raising the same questions passed upon by the court upon the demurrer and answer. Held, that the petition was properly denied.—Converse v. Barnard, 114 Mich. 622.

¶ 964. A petition for leave to file a bill of review to reopen a chancery suit in which a decree had been settled by consent was properly denied where the ground of it was a decision in a similar case by the supreme court, rendered more than a year after such decree and twenty months prior to such petition, construing the law differently from what the parties supposed it to be when the decree was entered.—Ingles v. Bryant, 117 Mich. 113.

¶ 965. A petition for leave to file a bill of review, based chiefly on a claim of newly discovered evidence, may be filed and passed on over a year after a decree was rendered in the cause.—Tisman v. Tisman, 176 Mich. 94.

¶ 966. An infant complainant is guilty of fraud and comes into equity with unclean hands in a bill to review and reverse a decree setting aside a deed of a farm made to him by his parents some years before, where the deed was set aside on his petition alleging that it was made without his consent and unknown to him, and he now alleges that he signed the former petition without knowledge of its contents and on account of the fraud of his parents and his solicitor, and the testimony shows that the original deed was made without present consideration except his promises to assume a mortgage and to support his parents, that subsequently he decided to trade the property for hotel property and the suit to set aside was then brought and the trade made in his parents' name and at present he claims the original farm on the deed which was set aside at his own request.—Lowes v. Lowes, 127 Mich. 307.

¶ 967. Leave to file a bill of review is discretionary and this discretion must be exercised to effectuate essential justice, and inasmuch as a bill of review must show substantial equities, the application therefor will be denied where want of equity is clearly shown.—Smith v. Smith, 142 Mich. 413.

§ 243. ——Discretion to allow or deny.

Discretion of court, see also ante ¶¶ 948, 949, 958, 967.

Denial on conditions imposed, see post § 246.

¶ 968. A decision of the lower court denying leave to file a bill of review will only be overruled in the supreme court upon abuse of discretion.—Roberge v. De Lisle, 158 Mich. 16; De Lisle v. Wayne Circuit Judge, Id.

¶ 969. The granting of a petition for leave to file a bill of review on bill for separate maintenance, based chiefly on a claim of newly discovered evidence, is within the discretion of the trial court.—Tisman v. Tisman, 176 Mich. 94.

¶ 970. Denial of leave to file a bill of review on bill for separate maintenance and cross-bill for divorce when a decree granting a divorce was rendered after complainant agreed to a financial settlement, held not an abuse of the court's discretion.—Tisman v. Tisman, 176 Mich. 94.

¶ 971. When the defendants in a foreclosure case have failed to produce witnesses in their behalf, although repeatedly urged to do so, within the time set by the order of court, and have allowed a decree to be taken against them, they cannot complain of a refusal of leave to file a bill of review as being an abuse of discretion.—Stockley v. Stockley, 93 Mich. 307.

§ 244. ——Application and leave to file.

Time for applying, see ante § 242.

Grounds and showing, see ante § 241.

Counterproofs or showing, see post § 245.

Averment and showing of equities, see also ante ¶ 967.

Sufficiency of allegations as to amount of judgment in dispute to be reviewed, see ante ¶ 334.

Security to adversary, see also post ¶ 982.

Contents and sufficiency of the bill of review proper, see post § 247.

¶ 972. A petition for leave to file a bill of review is not governed by the same considerations as a bill of review itself, so that it can present and open all errors whether specified or not.—Johnson v. Shepard, 35 Mich. 115.

¶ 973. An order granting leave to file a bill of review cannot be made at chambers or without notice.—People ex rel. Clark v. Huron Circuit Judge, 40 Mich. 166.

¶ 974. The circuit court cannot allow a bill of review upon a decree made by the supreme court on appeal. If allowable at all, it must be on leave granted by the appellate court.—Ryerson v. Eldred, 18 Mich. 490.

¶ 975. The bills referred to in Chancery Rule 101 for which leave of court must be first obtained before filing are such only as may technically be styled bills of review or bills in the nature of bills of review.—Chapman v. Chapman, How. N. P. 18.

§ 245. ——Counterproof or showing.

¶ 976. Upon the hearing of a petition for leave to file a bill of review affidavits are admissible to contradict the averments of the petition by explaining the nature of the evidence.—Loth v. Loth, 116 Mich. 684.

§ 246. ——Denial on condition or alternative.

Remission of part of decree to avoid bill of review, see Appeal ¶ 2154.

¶ 977. A petition for a bill of review, filed after a long delay, will be governed by equitable considerations, and will not be allowed for technical irregularities where it appears that the petitioner has not been really damnified. Where the only tenable ground of relief is that the decree was excessive in amount, a remission of the excess will justify refusing the petition.—Johnson v. Shepard, 35 Mich. 115.

¶ 978. A petition for leave to file a bill of review in a suit to reform a deed and mortgage held to have been rightly denied, where leave to redeem within an extended time was granted.—Knapp v. Perry, 117 Mich. 97.

§ 247. ——Averments and sufficiency of bill and answers.

Distinction between bill of review and petition for leave, see ante ¶ 972.

¶ 979. A bill of review should recite the proceedings in the former case and show that complainant has equities.—People ex rel. Clark v. Huron Circuit Judge, 40 Mich. 166.

¶ 980. A bill cannot properly be sustained as a bill of review, or a supplemental bill in the nature of a bill of review, which, though filed more than five years after decree, does not show any performance of the decree by the party filing it, or any reason for the long delay, even if equities might at some time have existed; which, however, does not seem to have been the case here.—People ex rel. Clark v. Huron Circuit Judge, 40 Mich. 166.

¶ 981. Where a sworn plea to a bill of review is regular in form and positive in substance, and consists of a denial of the main issue presented, a demurrer to it, if permitted by practice, would be so frivolous as to entitle the pleader to final judgment. And setting the plea down for hearing would be equivalent to a demurrer. If it leaves any issue to be disputed, it should be replied to and the facts investigated.—Thomas v. Burt, 52 Mich. 489.

¶ 982. It seems that a bill of review filed after foreclosure sale and after the time for appealing has expired, and allowed on the ground that the property has been sold at a great sacrifice to a purchaser who really represents the complainant, should be accompanied by adequate security and contain an offer to redeem or procure a higher bidder. —Thomas v. Burt, 52 Mich. 489.

¶ 983. A bill to correct a mistake in the description of land in a foreclosure decree and in the commissioner's deed did not contain averments sufficient to show that the mistake was rectified on the sale so as to identify the land sold as the true parcel, and it was defective in other respects, but as it showed sufficient cause for amending the decree it should not have been dismissed on general demurrer.—Merrifield v. Ingersoll, 61 Mich. 4.

§ 248. ——Parties to the review.

¶ 984. Where a defendant in foreclosure retains part of the property in suit, and is responsible on his covenants for other portions, he is interested in having the mortgage foreclosed according to its terms, and, if it is not, he is a proper complainant in a bill to review the decree.—Mickle v. Maxfield, 42 Mich. 304.

¶ 985. It is not error, though perhaps not necessary, to implead the commissioners in partition as defendants to a bill to set it aside for their fraud in dividing the property.—Adair v. Cummin, 48 Mich. 375.

¶ 986. The purchaser at an execution sale under a personal decree for a deficiency on foreclosure is not properly a party to a bill of review.—Gies v. Green, 42 Mich. 107.

¶ 987. Parties interested in both parcels are necessary defendants to a bill to rectify a mistake in the description of land in a foreclosure decree, the expression "southeast quarter" being written "northeast quarter," thereby rendering a resale necessary.—Merrifield v. Ingersoll, 61 Mich. 4.

§ 249. ——Scope of the review and relief thereon.

¶ 988. A bill of review concerns the original controversy only and does not cover subsequent proceedings.—Gies v. Green, 42 Mich. 107.

¶ 989. Where a bill of review is filed there is no practice which authorizes rights which accrued after the decree to be introduced into the controversy except by some affirmative pleading in the shape of an original or supplemental bill bringing the new parties into court.—Mickle v. Maxfield, 42 Mich. 304.

¶ 990. A mere subsequent encumbrancer cannot, on appeal from a decree on a bill of review, raise a question as to the security to be given on obtaining leave to file the bill, nor object that it was not given earlier.—Mickle v. Maxfield, 42 Mich. 304.

¶ 991. One who files a bill of review does not thereby lose any rights that he would have had on a rehearing; the only distinction is that a rehearing precedes and a bill of review follows enrollment. Neither remedy can be had without leave.—Mickle v. Maxfield, 42 Mich. 304.

§ 250. ——Dismissal of bill.

¶ 992. A bill of review to set aside a foreclosure sale was dismissed where complainant took no steps to facilitate inquiry into the facts or to obviate delays, and did not make any offers.—Thomas v. Burt, 52 Mich. 489.

¶ 993. A bill in the nature of a bill of review not sworn to and not accompanied by any sworn showing, filed without leave after long delay and without security, should be dismissed.—Sanford v. Haines, 71 Mich. 116.

¶ 994. A bill of review not filed under Chancery Rule 101 (first rules) is properly dismissed on motion, but the order of dismissal does not bar further proceedings by complainant under said rule.—Dodge v. Northrop, 85 Mich. 243.

XII. BILLS OF PEACE AND QUIA TIMET.

§ 251. In general.

[Note. Bills of this character are almost always brought to quiet title, and therefore the topic Quieting Title should be consulted. Injunctions against vexatious suits are treated in Injunctions, II, B. Interpleader, which see, treats of bills to interplead conflicting claimants against complainant.]

¶ 995. Bills of peace are only allowed where the complainant has established his right at law, or where the persons who controvert the right are so numerous as to render an issue under the direction of chancery indispensable to embrace all the parties concerned, and save a multiplicity of suits. —Lapeer County Com'rs v. Hart, H. 157.

¶ 996. A bill in equity, essentially a bill of peace is sufficient to warrant equitable relief in alleging that the complainant is a secret society, that it is entitled to a certain ritualistic book of procedure and the right to use the ritual in other states and territories, that its articles of association have been amended for that purpose, that the defendant has a mere license to use the ritual, that threats have been made and overt acts to prevent the complainant's use, and that the complainant will suffer irreparable injury.—Great Hive, Ladies of the Maccabees v. Supreme Hive, Ladies of the Maccabees, 129 Mich. 324.

EQUITY OF REDEMPTION to ESCAPING GAS.

Cross-References.

Equity of Redemption—
Under chattel mortgage, see Chattel Mortgages, II, VI.
Under land mortgages, see Foreclosures; Mortgages.
Under tax sales, see Taxes, XI, B.
Equivocal Pleading—
See Equity, VII; Pleading, I.
Erasures—
As alterations of instruments, see Alteration.
Effect to raise presumption against spoliator, see Evidence, II.
Effect on admissibility of document, see Evidence, VIII, A.
Validity of execution of instrument erased after partial execution, see Execution of Instruments, I.
Of indorsements by indorsee of paper, see Negotiable Instruments, VII, XIII.
In wills, see Wills, IV, C.
Erection of Buildings—
See Buildings; Building Contracts.
Incroachment on highways, see Highways, XI.
Invasion of right of adjoiner, see Adjoining Owners.
As nuisance, see Nuisances.
Erosion and Accretion—
See Waters, IV, A; Boundaries §§ 13, 20, 23, 38.
Error—
Writ of error, see Appeal and Error; Indictment, XVI.
Saving question for review, see Saving Questions.
Grounds for reversal or new trial, see Harmless Error; New Trial, II; Appeal, XII, XIII; Certiorari; Indictment, XV, XVI.
Judicial error as denial of due process, see Constitutional Law § 133.
Cure of error, see Harmless Error; Indictment, XV.
Amendments of pleadings, see Equity, VII, E; Pleading, VI.
Grounds for collateral attack, see Judgments, VII.
Amendment of Indictments, see Indictment, I, D.
In arbitration or award, see Arbitration.
On reference, see Reference, V.
Error in sense of mistake, see Mistake.
Actionable error, see Negligence; Highways, XII; Officers, VI; Municipal Corporations, XI.
Errors in records as affecting notice, see Notice and Record of Title, II, B, C.
Escape and Rescue—
As crimes, see Crimes, II; Indictment.
Civil liability of sheriff, see Sheriffs, IV.
Liability on bail bonds or recognizances, see Arrest, X-XII; Civil Arrest, IV, V.
Escaping Gas—
See Gas; Explosives.

ESCHEATS.

TREATS of the devolution to the state of the properties of persons dying intestate without legal heirs or successors in estate, and of rights of the state in properties of extinct corporations.

Analysis.

§ 1. In general.
§ 2. Inquest and evidence.
§ 3. Waiver, estoppel or release of escheat.
§ 4. Use and disposal of escheated estates.
§ 5. Title under the state.
§ 6. Property of extinct corporation or trust.

§ 1. In general.

Rights and disabilities of aliens to inherit, see Aliens § 2.

Descent and distribution, see Descent.

Construction of wills in favor of complete testacy, see Wills, VI, E.

Statutory provision for escheats, see Comp. L. 1915, § 11795, ¶ 6.

Statutory procedure for ascertainment and protection of interest of state in escheats, see Comp. L. 1915, §§ 317-339.

Uncalled for deposits of money and securities with banks and rights of state therein, see Comp. L. 1915, §§ 321-327.

Indemnification of bank for escheated deposits when subsequently bank is required to pay same to depositor, see Comp. L. 1915, § 339.

¶ 1. The term "escheat" defined, and the leading features of the English law of escheats considered.—Crane v. Reeder, 21 Mich. 24.

¶ 2. The right of reversion or escheat, to which, at common law, prior to the statute quia emptores, the grantor of an estate in fee simple was entitled on default of heirs of his grantee, never existed in Michigan; here the escheat could only accrue to the sovereignty, the state.—Mandlebaum v. McDonell, 29 Mich. 78.

¶ 3. Estates, on the failure of heirs, must go where the law directs. During the period while Michigan was governed as a territory the local legislature had power to provide for such cases. The act of the governor and judges regulating descents, adopted July 27, 1818, to take effect Oct. 1, 1818 (R. L. 1820, p. 29, § 1), which prescribed that for want of heirs estates should accrue to the territory, was a valid exercise of such power; and congress having made no other provision, the act of June 15, 1836, for the admission of Michigan into the Union, and ratifying the proposed constitution of the state, which provides (Schedule, § 3) that all escheats accruing to the territory shall accrue to the state, establishes the title to all lands escheated before that time in the state.—Crane v. Reeder, 21 Mich. 24.

¶ 4. Comp. L. 1857, § 2812, subd. 9; How. St., § 5772a, subd. 9, providing that certain estates shall escheat to the state for the use of the primary school fund, contains nothing repugnant to the special act of 1846, for it contains no provision applicable to estates which had escheated before, nor any provision for the sale of such as had escheated or might thereafter escheat. Nor did the constitution of 1835 or the R. S. 1846 make any appropriation of the proceeds of the sale of escheated lands, and until the adoption of the constitution of 1850 the only appropriation of such proceeds is found in the special act of 1846. There is, therefore, no repugnancy between the general revision of 1846 and the special act, which was passed on the same day, but took effect nine months earlier.—Crane v. Reeder, 22 Mich. 322.

§ 2. Inquest and evidence.

Evidence as to title, see also post ¶ 10.

Presumption of death entitling state to administration to determine escheat, see Comp. L. 1915, § 329.

Rights and duties of attorney general on administration of estate without known heirs, see Jud. Act. chap. LIII, §§ 20, 21; Comp. L. 1915, §§ 13838, 13839.

¶ 5. Inquest, or other proceeding in the nature of office found, is not necessary to vest in the sovereignty the title to lands escheating for want of heirs. To prove a failure of heirs in case of escheat, it is not necessary to exhaust the possibilities; and in cases where aliens are disqualified, proof of alienage, the American marriage, and death without issue, is enough.—Crane v. Reeder, 21 Mich. 24.

§ 3. Waiver, estoppel or release of escheat.

¶ 6. The state, by causing lands to be assessed to their occupant for taxation, and by selling them for delinquent taxes, does not waive its right to insist upon an escheat or estop itself from claiming them as escheated.—Crane v. Reeder, 25 Mich. 303.

§ 4. Use and disposal of escheated estates.

Trustees authorized by statute to take charge and dispose of escheated property, see Comp. L. 1915, § 316.

¶ 7. The act of May 18, 1846 (How. St., § 411), "concerning the estates of intestates escheated to the state," conferred upon the trustees therein named the power of selling and disposing of, in such manner as they shall deem for the best interests of the state, all lands which had then escheated or should thereafter escheat to the state.—Crane v. Reeder, 22 Mich. 322.

¶ 8. As the general powers of the commissioner of the land office (Comp. L. 1857, § 2428; How. St., § 5227) to lease, sell and dispose of the public lands can only be exercised in the "manner directed by law," and as there is no provision of law for the sale of the escheated lands except that contained in the special act of 1846, which commits this power to the trustees named in it, the act of 1846 must be construed as creating an exception to the general act, and therefore the sole power of selling the escheated lands is in the trustees named in the act of 1846.—Crane v. Reeder, 22 Mich. 322.

¶ 9. The lands mentioned in Const., art. XIII, § 2, do not include escheated lands, and section 3, which provides that the interest on the clear proceeds of the sales of escheated lands shall be appropriated exclusively to the support of primary schools, is not so repugnant to the act of 1846, which directs that these proceeds shall be deposited in the treasury to the credit of the general fund, as to deprive the trustees named in the act of 1846 of the power to sell the land as therein provided.—Crane v. Reeder, 22 Mich. 322.

§ 5. Title under the state.

¶ 10. Where a plaintiff in ejectment claims under a deed from the state board of escheats, evidence is not admissible on behalf of defendants, claiming adversely thereto, to show that in the sale and conveyance by such board to the plaintiff a fraud was committed upon the state.—Crane v. Reeder, 25 Mich. 303.

§ 6. Property of extinct corporation or trust.

Disposal of property of association on dissolution, see Associations § 12.

Duration of estates in land by corporations for limited term, see Corporations § 82.
Succession to property of dissolved private corporation, see Corporations §§ 261, 262.

¶ 11. The doctrine of escheat to the state of a previously dissolved charitable corporation is expressly disparaged.—Hopkins v. Crossley, 138 Mich. 561.

¶ 12. An escheat to the state of a charitable fund can be asserted by the state only.—Hopkins v. Crossley, 138 Mich. 561.

ESCORTS.

Cross-References.

Escort of Passenger—
Duty and liability of carrier, see Carrier § 153.

ESCROWS.

TREATS of agreements for the delivery of instruments through the hand of a third person upon a condition or event to occur whereupon the instrument shall be given to the other party or returned to the executing party and become ineffectual. It excludes delivery upon condition without any intermediary and also delivery through a third hand without any condition, as to both which, see Execution of Instruments, III. It also excludes trusts of property or muniments and evidences of right (see Trusts).

Analysis.

§ 1. In general; agreements of escrow.
§ 2. Existence and terms of escrow.
§ 3. Requisites and sufficiency of deposited writing.
§ 4. Character and certainty of the conditions.
§ 5. Parties to escrow.
§ 6. Delivery in escrow and revocation or recall.
§ 7. Operation and effect, relation back.
§ 8. ——Fulfillment or performance of conditions.
§ 9. Completion or enforcement of delivery by depositary.
§ 10. Effect of delivery contrary to conditions.
§ 11. Liability of depositary or principals.

§ 1. In general; agreements of escrow.

Existence and terms of escrow, see post § 2.
Requisites and sufficiency of deposited writing, see post § 3.
Character and certainty of the conditions, see post § 4.
Parties to escrow, see post § 5.
Delivery in escrow and revocation or recall, see post § 6.
Operation and effect, see post § 7.
Fulfillment or performance of conditions, see post § 8.
Completion or enforcement of delivery by depositary, see post § 9.
Effect of delivery contrary to conditions, see post § 10.
Liability of depositary or principals, see post § 11.

[Note. The term "escrow" is used in two senses, viz., the technical sense of a delivery through an intermediary on a condition or contingency, failing which redelivery is to follow so that the instrument shall have no effect, and the colloquial sense, viz., a delivery to an intermediary to be held for a time or until a certain event, like the grantor's death, and then turned over to the grantee but without any condition to frustrate the effect of the delivery. The latter is a sort of postponed or suspended delivery and the cases of it are treated in Execution of Instruments, III.]

Execution and delivery of instruments in general, see Execution of Instruments.
Rights and liabilities of bailees for deposit and keeping, see Bailments § 12.
Bank as depositary of shares of stock, see Bailments ¶ 50.
Necessity of writing to alter conditions for delivery of deeds, see Frauds, Statute of, I, G, II, B.

¶ 1. A memorandum made by the custodian of a deed delivered in escrow as to the conditions is not conclusive as to the terms.—Francis v. Francis, 143 Mich. 300.

¶ 2. The condition upon which an escrow deed is to be delivered need not be in writing, but may rest in parol, or partly in writing and partly in parol.—Fulton v. Priddy, 123 Mich. 298.

¶ 3. Upon a question whether a village council had deposited certain bonds with a bank in escrow for delivery, or simply for safe keeping, testimony that the banker later made a report orally to the council that the bonds had been delivered and that the council made no protest, is admissible.—Schmid v. Village of Frankfort, 131 Mich. 197.

§ 2. Existence and terms of escrow.

Character and certainty of terms and conditions of escrow, see post § 4.

Admissibility of parol evidence of terms of escrow agreement, see Evidence § 157.

Delivery of writing to depositary to deliver to grantee on death of grantor or fulfillment of condition certain, see Execution of Instruments, III.

Admissibility of parol proof of conditions of escrow, see Evidence § 119, ¶ 598a.

¶ 4. A bill to quiet title averring that a deed was deposited by a wife to be delivered after her death to her husband and to no other person, that both husband and wife planned and intended that the property should belong absolutely to her if she survived her husband is sufficient to support evidence of a deposit in escrow only to be delivered to the husband only in the event that he survived her.—Skinner v. Kelley, 138 Mich. 134.

¶ 5. In a suit to quiet title, testimony by the depositary of a deed that both husband and wife desired to fix it so that the deed by the wife to the husband would be delivered to him on her death and the wife to retain title if she survived the husband, that he drew the deed with that end in view and to make doubly sure he also drew a will for the wife at the same time and that without direction of either party he made a note on the deed that it was to be delivered to the husband on the wife's death, is sufficient to support a decree upholding the surviving wife's right to the land when taken in connection with evidence of a previous long and bitter dispute and lawsuit with a son over the same land.—Skinner v. Kelley, 138 Mich. 134.

¶ 6. Where a contract for leasing of premises for the lifetime of the lessor was made with a provision for a deed thereafter, and a warranty deed was delivered in escrow to a third person, to take effect at the death of the lessor, held that it was the intention of the lessor that if the lessees performed the contract and survived the lessor, they should, upon her death, have the fee of the land, she, in the meanwhile, to own and control the property herself and retain all interest therein except a determinable leasehold.—Pollock v. McCarty, 198 Mich. 66.

§ 3. Requisites and sufficiency of deposited writing.

General requisites of deeds and mortgages and other contracts, see Deeds; Mortgages; Contracts; Frauds, Statute of; Execution of Instruments.

¶ 7. A deed conveying a homestead to [illegible] son, signed by husband and wife and pro[illegible] viding that title should not pass until th[illegible] death of both grantors, and delivered in e[illegible] crow to the wife, which was delivered to th[illegible] son upon the death of the father, did no[illegible] operate as a conveyance of the homestea[illegible] during the life of the wife, under Cons[illegible] art. XVI, § 2, prohibiting alienation of [illegible] homestead without the signature of the wif[illegible] to the paper creating the alienation.—Francis v. Francis, 122 Mich. 10.

¶ 8. A deed, which after the erasure, by the consent of the grantor, of a provision for its recall, was redelivered in escrow, became effectual without either re-execution, witnessing or acknowledging.—Fulton v. Priddy, 123 Mich. 298.

§ 4. Character and certainty of the conditions.

Invalidity of deed where condition for delivery not fulfilled till after death of grantor, see post ¶ 24.

Fulfillment or performance of conditions, see post § 8.

¶ 9. Delivery of an assignment of a land contract into the custody of one of the partners in a firm to which it is assigned cannot be considered a delivery in escrow, to operate until the assignee shall execute a mortgage back, where both the assignment and the contract have first to be delivered to another party to the contract in order to obtain from him a deed on which to base the mortgage. The condition is inconsistent with the delivery in escrow.—Ortmann v. Plummer, 52 Mich. 76.

¶ 10. Deeds executed by a father and his wife in favor of their sons and deposited with a third party with verbal instructions to such depositary to keep the deeds until the death of the father and then to deliver them to such sons on condition that they execute a certain note payable to a daughter, which note the father placed with such depositary, were invalid and did not rest upon the doctrine of escrow; since the conditions to be performed by the grantees were only to be performed after the death of the grantor and to allow the performance of unwritten conditions to be postponed till after death would practically remove the restraint against parol and nuncupative wills.—Taft v. Taft, 59 Mich. 185.

¶ 11. A deed has no present effect and is a nullity though delivered to the grantee by the depositary after grantor's death, where its terms impose a condition of supporting the grantor during his life, failing which no title is to pass from grantor, and where he delivers it to a third person to be delivered to the grantee after grantor's death. The intent, being testamentary cannot be consummated by a deed.—Culy v. Upham, 135 Mich. 131.

§ 5. Parties to escrow.

Delivery of assignment to assignee as escrow, see ante ¶ 9.

¶ 12. A deed cannot be delivered to the grantee in escrow. If delivered to him, whatever be the form of words accompanying the delivery, it is absolute, and the deed takes effect at once.—Dawson v. Hall, 2 Mich. 390; In re Hicks, 20 Mich. 280, 288.

¶ 13. In an action by infants by their next friend involving the sufficiency of a delivery of a deed in escrow, testimony of the scrivener, to whom the alleged delivery was made, given in another action in which the next friend was a party, is inadmissible to show directions given at the time of delivery to him since the fact that the next friend, who is only a nominal party, was a party to that action cannot affect the rights of such minors.—Walterhouse v. Walterhouse, 130 Mich. 89.

§ 6. Delivery in escrow and revocation or recall.

¶ 14. Under a bill brought by complainant to compel her father to convey certain property, there was evidence that the defendant had deeded the property to complainant and placed the deed with a third person to be delivered to her upon his death, and that the defendant had obtained the deed from said third person and destroyed it. Complainant testified that after making the deed defendant informed her he had given her the property, and told her she might take possession and collect the rents. Complainant's husband and brother testified to conversations with the defendant in which the latter stated that he had deeded the property to the complainant. The will of defendant's wife introduced in evidence showed that no provision was made therein for complainant because of the deed of the said property to her. Defendant testified that he never intended to place the deed beyond his recall and that his instructions to the third person were that the latter should deliver it if it was still in his possession and not called for before defendant's death, which testimony was corroborated by defendant's son. Said third person refused to testify. Held, the evidence was sufficient to sustain a decree holding that defendant relinquished all control over the deed, and ordering him to convey the property to complainant.—Wagner v. Kirchberg, 166 Mich. 411.

§ 7. Operation and effect, relation back.

Revocation or recall, see ante § 6.

Fulfillment or performance of conditions, see post § 8.

Effect of delivery contrary to conditions, see post § 10.

Time when deeds become effective, see Deeds § 26.

¶ 15. The doctrine that the deed is effectual by relation is not universal but is restricted to the purpose of giving effect to the deed, which otherwise would fail because of the intervening death of the grantor or his incapacity before delivery out of the escrow.—Taft v. Taft, 59 Mich. 185.

¶ 16. A deed was deposited in escrow with a written agreement by the grantor that the sale might be abandoned if the title to be conveyed should not be found by the depositary to be a full title in fee simple and free from all encumbrances. Held, that this paper referred to the title as it stood when the arrangement in escrow was made, and did not bind the grantee to accept any future rectification.—Fletcher v. Moore, 42 Mich. 577.

¶ 17. Where the grantor delivers a deed to a third party with instructions that it is to be recorded on her death in case a certain settlement should be made, the delivery does not devest her of any present title.—Miller v. Bearslee, 175 Mich. 414.

¶ 18. Where a note by defendant to plaintiff and a deed by plaintiff to defendant were placed in escrow with a third party, the note to be delivered to plaintiff and the deed to defendant at the maturity of the note, held that such deed passed by such delivery in escrow beyond plaintiff's control and at the stipulated time became defendant's absolutely and vested title in him unconditionally.—Bishop v. Dodge, 196 Mich. 231.

¶ 19. Where a note by defendant to plaintiff and a deed by plaintiff to defendant were placed in escrow with a third party, the note to be delivered to plaintiff and the deed to defendant at the maturity of the note, held that such escrow was to be construed as a deed by plaintiff to defendant from its first delivery to the depositary as soon as the time expired and the condition was fulfilled under which it remained in escrow, during which its effect as a deed to defendant remained suspended.—Bishop v. Dodge, 196 Mich. 231.

¶ 20. Specific performance will not be awarded to a son under a deed to a homestead executed by his father and mother, which provided that title should not pass until the death of both grantors, and which was delivered in escrow to the mother, and by her delivered to the son upon the death of the father; as under the terms of the deed the title had not yet passed to complainant, the mother still being alive, and her homestead not having been alienated by her signature to the paper creating the alienation.—Francis v. Francis, 122 Mich. 10.

¶ 21. A deed was executed and left in escrow, to be delivered when the grantee had paid all of the claims against the estate of a deceased person. Neither the conveyance nor the agreement to pay was intended to be absolute. Held, that creditors acquired no lien upon the land by virtue of such arrangement to secure the payment of their claims.—Marshall v. Blass, 82 Mich. 518.

§ 8. ——Fulfillment or performance of conditions.

Delivery of note on condition that collateral contract be not performed, effect of extension and subsequent default, see also Contracts ¶ 1091.

¶ 22. A condition that signed contracts should not be delivered until a committee investigated the reasonableness of the price of the plant contemplated, was sufficiently met by an investigation followed by an adverse report, though it was understood that in making the investigation they might go at the promisee's expense to two certain states for that purpose, which they forbore to do, making the investigation without such travel.—Davis v. Kneale, 103 Mich. 323.

¶ 23. A deed delivered to a third person to be by him delivered to the grantee upon the happening of some event, which may or may not happen, does not pass the title to the land until the event occurs, and then from that time only.—McIntyre v. McIntyre, 147 Mich. 365.

¶ 24. Where a deed and bill of sale were made and delivered in escrow and not to take effect until a mortgage conditioned for the payment of an annuity to the grantor should be executed, such deed was void where the mortgage was not executed until after the death of the grantor.—McIntyre v. McIntyre, 147 Mich. 365.

¶ 25. Under an escrow agreement providing for the delivery of two deeds to the purchaser of certain lots and two notes and mortgages to the seller upon the payment of a stated sum, the purchaser was entitled to a delivery of the deeds upon payment of such amount, notwithstanding the fact that the purchaser had for a time insisted that the notes and mortgages should not be delivered until the title was perfected.—Alexander v. Bernard, 136 Mich. 642.

¶ 26. Where a deed was delivered in escrow and the conditions upon which it was delivered fully performed by the grantee, the title vests in him.—Francis v. Francis, 143 Mich. 300.

¶ 27. Until delivery of the deed by the depositary in escrow, in conformity with the conditions of holding, no title passes to the grantee.—Taft v. Taft, 59 Mich. 185.

¶ 28. A deed was executed by two only of three grantors named therein and delivered to an agent of both parties, who was to obtain the signature of the third grantor and then deliver it to the grantee, and the grantee deposited the consideration with the agent to be delivered to the grantors when the transaction was completed. The third grantor refused to sign the deed. Held that there was no delivery to the grantee.—Wisconsin & M. R. Co. v. McKenna, 139 Mich. 43.

§ 9. Completion or enforcement of delivery by depositary.

Impropriety of mandamus to compel delivery of deed held by official but in unofficial capacity, see Mandamus, III, B.

¶ 29. A grantee should establish his right to a deed held in escrow by a bill in equity or other proper proceeding against the grantor. Mandamus to compel it is not a proper remedy.—People ex rel. Austin v. Curtis, 41 Mich. 723.

¶ 30. The passage of a resolution by a township board accepting a deed of a site for a town hall which the grantors had deposited with an attorney for delivery when a warrant for the purchase price was drawn and the money paid over, which warrant was afterwards ordered to be drawn in favor of the grantors, is not equivalent to such delivery, and mandamus will not lie at the instance of the grantors to compel the supervisor of the township to sign said warrant, there being no valid executory contract for such purchase.—Wilhelm v. Fagan, 90 Mich. 6.

§ 10. Effect of delivery contrary to conditions.

¶ 31. A grantor may show by parol that a deed though executed and acknowledged was left with a depositary not to be delivered until the happening of certain contingencies, and a delivery contrary to such agreement is not binding upon him.—Dikeman v. Arnold, 71 Mich. 656.

¶ 32. A mortgage left with a third party to be delivered, when a prior mortgage had been discharged and other conditions performed, was assigned by the mortgagee to the depositary before the conditions had been fulfilled, and was afterwards assigned to another party before it fell due. Held, that there had been no delivery.—Cressinger v. Dessenburg, 42 Mich. 580.

¶ 33. A deed deposited in escrow, but delivered without authority by the depositary to the grantee, who inequitably refuses to perform the condition, will be declared void.—Abbott v. Alsdorf, 19 Mich. 157.

¶ 34. Where a purchase-price mortgage has been executed and deposited in escrow to await completion of title in the mortgagor in fulfillment of an oral bargain by the mortgagee to sell the land to the mortgagor, and the title to the land in the meantime passes into other hands, the delivery of the mortgage in violation of the arrangement will not operate to make it a valid mortgage binding upon the mortgagor.—Powell v. Conant, 33 Mich. 396.

¶ 35. A purchase-price mortgage executed and deposited in escrow to await completion of title in the mortgagor, in fulfillment of an oral bargain by the mortgagee to sell the land to him, is, at the time of execution, without foundation or consideration, and is subject to recall at all times before the condition is performed; and a delivery thereof in violation of the arrangement does not operate to make it a valid mortgage, binding on the mortgagor.—Powell v. Conant, 33 Mich. 396.

¶ 11. Liability of depositary or principals.

¶ 36. A bill in equity will not lie to recover damages for the wrongful act of a depositary in suppressing a conveyance, there being an adequate remedy at law.—Pulezer v. Kucharzyk, 116 Mich. 92.

¶ 37. Where two parties have mutually arranged that one shall deliver certain notes and ship certain property, paying the freight, to a third person, who shall deliver the same to another and take his receipt in full of all demands against the first, and afterwards deliver such receipt to him on his giving a like receipt back to him for the other party, the party who has delivered the notes, shipped the property and paid the freight, in full compliance with the agreement on his part, cannot be held responsible because the third person, mutually agreed upon, afterwards of his own motion refuses to turn over the same except upon compliance with a further demand which the agreement did not authorize.—Crippen v. Hope, 34 Mich. 55.

ESTABLISHED BUSINESS to ESTATES IN LAND.

Cross-References.

Established Business—
- Disturbance as element of damages, see Damages, I.
- Taking and compensation in eminent domain, see Eminent Domain, III, IV.

Establishment—
- Of boundaries, see Boundaries.
- Public highways, see Highways, II.
- Private roads, see Highways, XV.
- Of lost papers, see. Restoration of Papers.
- Of wills, see Wills, V.
- Of claims against estates of decedents, see Estates of Decedents, VI.

Estates in Land—
- The plan of this digest is to treat of the various estates and the estates of persons in a given status or relation in specific topics, denoting the name and kind of the estate or the status or relation.
- See Real Property; Property; Curtesy; Dower; Life Estates, Remainders and Reversions; Mortgages; Tenants in Common; Husband and Wife, II; Infants, III; Insane Persons, III.
- Devolution and Administration, see Descent; Estates of Decedents; Wills.
- Transfers and conveyances, see Deeds; Wills; Mortgages; Gifts; Trusts; Vendors and Purchasers; Perpetuities; Frauds, Statute of; Fraudulent Conveyances.
- Taxable estates, see Taxes, II.
- Vesting and future estates, see Real Property; Deeds, III; Wills, VI; Perpetuities; Life Estates, Remainders and Reversions.
- Entails, see Real Property.
- Incorporeal estates, see Easements.

ESTATES OF DECEDENTS.

TREATS of the administration and distribution of the estates of decedents excluding the substantive rights of descent and distribution under the laws of intestacy (see Descent and Distribution), the general law of wills and the probate and construction of wills and the substantive rights given by will (see Wills). The administration of estates of wards or of trust estates is treated in Guardianship; Insane Persons; Trusts. Administration of affairs of a partnership by the surviving or remaining partner is treated in Partnership, VII. For other inclusions or exclusions see analytical index and cross-references in the body of this topic.

I. NECESSITY, OCCASION AND KINDS OF ADMINISTRATION (§§ 1-6).
II. JURISDICTION AND PROCEDURE IN GENERAL (§§ 7-17).
III. ADMINISTRATORS AND EXECUTORS AND THEIR LETTERS (§§ 18-45).
IV. STATUS AND AUTHORITY OF REPRESENTATIVES, AND TITLES IN THE ESTATE (§§ 46-66).
V. PROPERTY AND ASSETS (§§ 67-139).
VI. DEBTS AND LIABILITIES OF DECEDENT AND CLAIMS AGAINST ESTATE (§§ 140-221).
VII. RECOURSE TO LAND FOR PAYMENT OF DEBTS, CHARGES AND EXPENSES (§§ 222-261).

Analysis and Index to Sections.

VIII. LIABILITY OF HEIRS, DEVISEES AND DISTRIBUTEES FOR DEBTS (§§ 262-263).
IX. LIABILITY OF REPRESENTATIVE PERSONALLY TO CREDITORS (§§ 264-268).
X. RIGHTS AND LIABILITIES OF REPRESENTATIVES AND DISTRIBUTEES IN THE ESTATE OR TOWARDS EACH OTHER (§§ 269-304).
XI. ACTIONS AND SUITS; ARBITRATIONS; COSTS (§§ 305-331).
XII. ACCOUNTING AND SETTLEMENT OF ESTATE (§§ 332-355).
XIII. SHARES IN THE ESTATE; DISTRIBUTION, PAYMENT AND DELIVERY (§§ 356-382).
XIV. DISCHARGE; LIABILITIES ON BONDS (§§ 383-393).
XV. PARTITION BY PROBATE COURT AND DETERMINATION OF HEIRSHIP (§§ 394-398).

Analysis.

I. Necessity, occasion and kinds of administration.

§ 1. In general; settlements by agreement.
§ 2. ——By heirs in absence of creditors.
§ 3. ——Effect on pending or later administration.
§ 4. ——Conclusiveness, acquiescence or delay.
§ 5. Special administration.
§ 6. Administration de bonis non.

II. Jurisdiction and procedure in general.

§ 7. Nature and requisites of procedure in general.
§ 8. Jurisdictional facts of death, domicile and assets.
§ 9. Relative jurisdiction of probate and circuit courts.
§ 10. ——Equity jurisdiction to protect or conserve estate.
§ 11. ——Equitable rights, trusts and remedies collateral or incident to administration.
§ 12. ——Receivership.
§ 13. ——Accounting and distribution.
§ 14. Place or county for administration or accounting.
§ 15. Domiciliary, ancillary and foreign administration.
§ 16. ——Wills probated abroad and foreign wills.
§ 17. ——Property beyond state.

III. Administrators and executors and their letters.

A. NOMINATION AND SELECTION.

§ 18. In general.
§ 19. Persons entitled and priorities in right.
§ 20. ——Grantee of person primarily entitled.
§ 21. Nomination by testator.
§ 22. ——Delegation of authority by testator.
§ 23. ——Disqualification of nominee.

B. PETITION FOR ADMINISTRATION, PROCEDURE THEREON, AND LETTERS.

§ 24. Persons entitled to petition or be heard.
§ 25. Necessity and sufficiency of petition.
§ 26. ——For secondary, special or qualified letters.
§ 27. Objections, answer and subsequent pleadings.
§ 28. Notice and publication.
§ 29. ——Affidavits of publication.
§ 30. Matters litigable on hearing.
§ 31. Appointing order and letters.
§ 32. ——Collateral attack on letters.
§ 33. ——Persons entitled to attack or question appointment.

C. ASSUMING AND QUALIFYING FOR OFFICE, SECURITY AND BOND.

§ 34. In general.
§ 35. Necessity and sufficiency of bond.
§ 36. ——Time for presentation and approval.
§ 37. Justification on bond.

D. RESIGNATION OR DEATH, REMOVAL AND VACANCIES.

§ 38. Resignation, death, or vacancies in general.
§ 39. Probate and equity jurisdiction.
§ 40. Grounds for removal.
§ 41. ——Nonresidence or alienage.
§ 42. Persons entitled to petition removal.
§ 43. Petition and procedure on removal.
§ 44. ——Notice.
§ 45. ——Hearing, issues and order.

IV. Status and authority of representatives, and titles in the estate.

A. IN GENERAL.

§ 46. Status, relationship, powers and duties.
§ 47. Fiduciary character of functions.
§ 48. Individual or representative acts or capacity.
§ 49. Special or other limited letters.
§ 50. Joint representatives' authority and mode of action.
§ 51. Authority of foreign representatives.
§ 52. Representative's right to defend his authority.
§ 53. Estoppel to question capacity.
§ 54. Letters or other evidence of authority.

B. CONTRACTING AND DEALINGS FOR ESTATE.

§ 55. In general.
§ 56. Right to borrow money.

C. TITLE AND RIGHTS IN PROPERTY OF ESTATE.

§ 57. In general.
§ 58. Title and interest in personalty.
§ 59. Possession of personalty.
§ 60. Right and title in mortgages.
§ 61. Rights and interest in realty.
§ 62. ——Rents, issues and profits.
§ 63. Title to lands bought by representative.
§ 64. Recognition and title of foreign representatives.
§ 65. ——Mortgages and mortgage debts of other state.
§ 66. Title of residuary legatee as executor.

V. Property and assets.

A. IN GENERAL; WHAT INCLUDED.

§ 67. Personal or real property in general.
§ 68. Debts, claims and contracts owing decedent.
§ 69. Money orders, bills, notes and deposits.
§ 70. Rents, royalties and current income.
§ 71. Contracts payable "to heirs" or "assigns."
§ 72. Debt of representative as asset.
§ 73. Share of decedent in another estate.

§ 74. Insurance on decedent's life.
§ 75. Right of action for wrongful death.
§ 76. Rights of action for tort to property.
§ 77. Occupational or business licenses.
§ 78. Property in possession of others.
§ 79. Property held by other spouse or jointly owned.
§ 80. Equitable assets.
§ 81. Goods held as agent or bailee or trustee.
§ 82. Unadministered assets.

B. COLLECTION AND REDUCTION TO POSSESSION.

§ 83. Authority and primary right to collect or sue for assets.
§ 84. ——Refusal or neglect by representative.
§ 85. ——Administrators de bonis non and special administrators.
§ 86. ——Suits by agents of representative.
§ 87. Suing in individual or representative name, when permissible.
§ 88. Maturity of right, suit before letters.
§ 89. Collection of debts due from heirs or distributees.
§ 90. Action for conversion or on implied promise for value.
§ 91. Suits on contracts running to "heirs and assigns."
§ 92. Claims for proceeds of land or rents and profits.
§ 93. Claims for insurance.
§ 94. Statutory probate proceedings to discover assets.
§ 95. Equitable remedies, procedure and relief.
§ 96. Suits to rescind transfers and recover property.
§ 97. Suits to annul decedent's fraudulent conveyances.
§ 98. ——Suits by creditors.
§ 99. ——Existence of debts and of fraud on the claimants.
§ 100. ——Bill and procedure thereon, decree, and relief.
§ 101. ——Parties affected by setting aside.
§ 102. Evidence and presumptions as to assets and title of decedent.

C. INVENTORY AND APPRAISAL.

§ 103. In general.
§ 104. Partnership or trust properties.

D. ALLOWANCE TO WIDOW AND CHILDREN.

§ 105. In general; nature of right.
§ 106. Amount allowable or proper.
§ 107. ——Estates below $150.
§ 108. Household furniture and property allowances.
§ 109. From insolvent estates.
§ 110. Bar or release of right.
§ 111. ——Effect of will or other provision.
§ 112. Commencement and duration of allowance or payments.
§ 113. Petition, notice and procedure to secure allowance.
§ 114. ——Hearing, issues and orders or decrees.
§ 115. Further allowances.

E. MANAGEMENT, CUSTODY AND DISPOSAL.

1. In general.

§ 116. Acts or disposals before letters.
§ 117. Management, use or application of properties.

§ 118. Separate funds and management of same.
§ 119. Continuing business or completing contracts.
§ 120. Speculating or engaging in new enterprises.
§ 121. Discharge of incumbrances on land, redemption.
§ 122. Sales or disposal of personalty.
§ 123. Release, waiver or compromise of rights.
§ 124. Surrender of trusts, pledges and property of others.

2. Real property.

§ 125. In general.
§ 126. Possessory rights and control over lands.
§ 127. ——Surrender or loss of possession.
§ 128. Power to sell or dispose.
§ 129. Completion of contracts for conveyance of land.
§ 130. Power to lease lands in possession.
§ 131. Right to rents and profits.
§ 132. Payment of taxes and current charges.
§ 133. Chattel interests and equities in lands.
§ 134. Mortgages and securities belonging to estate.
§ 135. Waiver or release of rights and equities.
§ 136. Requisites and sufficiency of deeds or other instruments.

F. Possession or Dealings by Persons Other than Representatives.

§ 137. In general.
§ 138. Right to follow property for creditors or heirs.
§ 139. Purchase of property of estate.

VI. Debts and liabilities of decedent and claims against estate.

A. In General; What Considered Debts; Defenses.

§ 140. Contract liabilities in general.
§ 141. ——Of married woman's estate.
§ 142. ——Contracts payable at death, or by share in estate.
§ 143. ——Performance or breach occurring after death.
§ 144. Contingent and immature claims.
§ 145. Joint obligations and contribution.
§ 146. Taxes and insurance on real property.
§ 147. Mortgage debts and other secured debts.
§ 148. ——Effect of grant or devise subject to mortgage.
§ 149. Expenses of administration and attorney fees.
§ 150. Expenses of last sickness and funeral.
§ 151. Sustenance and expenses of decedent's family.
§ 152. ——Rendered under or charged by terms of will.
§ 153. Alimony, current and accrued.
§ 154. Claims by wife for property or money used.
§ 155. Decedent's torts.
§ 156. Torts and frauds of representatives.
§ 157. Set-offs and defenses.
§ 158. Interest for delay in payment.
§ 159. Assignment or purchase of claims.

B. Debts and Liabilities Resting on Heirs or Representative.

§ 160. In general.

C. PRESENTMENT, HEARING AND DECISION ON CLAIMS, AND ENFORCEMENT OF ALLOWANCE OR JUDGMENT.

1. Mode and requisites in general; notices.

§ 161. Procedure in general.
§ 162. Notice to creditors to present claims.
§ 163. Claims provable on presentment or requiring suit.
§ 164. ——Negotiable instrument out of creditor's possession.
§ 165. Presentment of set-offs.
§ 166. Stating claim and petition for allowance.
§ 167. Filing and notice of claim.
§ 168. Notice of hearing on claims.
§ 169. Notice of claim presented or made by representative.

2. Time for presentment and delay as bar.

§ 170. In general; stage or completion of administration.
§ 171. Time limitations, claims affected.
§ 172. Claims accruing during administration.
§ 173. Claims by representative.
§ 174. Claims by infants.
§ 175. Time for presenting set-offs.
§ 176. Extension of time for presentment or waiver of bar.
§ 177. ——By death of party and vacancy in administration.
§ 178. Reopening administration; newly discovered assets.

3. Hearing, proof and determination; report of commissioners.

§ 179. In general; hearing by commission or by court.
§ 180. Appointment and compensation of commissioners.
§ 181. Functions, jurisdiction and nature of commissioners' office.
§ 182. Stay or postponement of hearing.
§ 183. Parties in the hearing.
§ 184. Issues, proof, and objections.
§ 185. Admissions or stipulations for allowance.
§ 186. Decision and order on hearing.
§ 187. ——Conclusiveness and effect.
§ 188. ——Collateral attack.
§ 189. Commissioners' report and return.
§ 190. Revival of commission.
§ 191. ——Application for revivor.
§ 192. Proceedings of revived commission.
§ 193. Second revival and proceedings thereunder.

4. Contingent, immature and secured claims.

§ 194. Secured claims and mortgages.
§ 195. Claims against residuary legatee bonded to pay debts.
§ 196. Immature, contingent and secondary liabilities.

5. Actions, suits and hearings on appeals on claims; judgment and execution.

§ 197. Original jurisdiction and appellate hearings.
§ 198. Jurisdiction and remedies in equity.
§ 199. ——Relief from fraudulent claims.
§ 200. ——Enforcement of allowance order or subjection of assets.
§ 201. ——Laches and equitable defenses.
§ 202. Form and sufficiency of claim; pleadings.
§ 203. Issues and defenses open in action based on allowance.
§ 204. Issues and variance on appellate trial.

§ 205. Presumptions and burden of proof.
§ 206. Admissibility of evidence.
§ 207. Sufficiency of evidence.
§ 208. Jury trial and questions for jury.
§ 209. Directing verdict.
§ 210. Instructions.
§ 211. Verdict and findings.
§ 212. Execution and attachment.

D. PAYMENT AND SATISFACTION OF CLAIMS.

1. Assets and securities for payment; rank and priorities of claims.

§ 213. In general; liens, rank and priorities.
§ 214. Land as an asset for payment.
§ 215. Lands in hands of heirs' grantees.
§ 216. Lands occupied as homestead.
§ 217. Primary exhaustion of personalty.
§ 218. Election between general claim and lien.

2. Payment or discharge, shares and distribution among creditors.

§ 219. In general.
§ 220. Effect of bond by residuary legatee as executor.
§ 221. Shares or dividends, and distribution.

VII. Recourse to land for payment of debts, charges and expenses.

A. SALE OR MORTGAGE UNDER THE STATUTES.

1. Occasion and propriety.

§ 222. In general.
§ 223. Prerequisites to the proceeding.
§ 224. Estates and interests liable.
§ 225. Statutory provision as to lands devised or assigned to heirs.
§ 226. Right to possession before recourse.

2. Procedure, pleading and proof.

§ 227. In general.
§ 228. Procedure against heir's grantee.
§ 229. Petition for license.
§ 230. Notice and hearing on petition.
§ 231. Evidence and proofs.
§ 232. Special bonds and oaths.

3. Order and license and sale or mortgage thereunder.

§ 233. Order or decree and license.
§ 234. Recordation of license.
§ 235. Notice of sale and adjourned sale.
§ 236. ——Proof of notice.
§ 237. Time, place, manner, and conduct of sale.
§ 238. Terms of sale and sale on credit.
§ 239. Default of purchaser and resale.
§ 240. Report of sale and confirmation.
§ 241. Deeds and other instruments of transfer.
§ 242. Setting aside sale or deed.
§ 243. Persons entitled to urge objections; estoppel.
§ 244. Collateral attack and impeachment.
§ 245. ——Loss of jurisdiction by delay.

§ 246. Title and rights of purchasers.
§ 247. ——Right to crops on land.
§ 248. ——Effect of irregularities in deed or proceedings.
§ 249. Recovery back of bid on avoidance of sale.
§ 250. ——Lien for price on avoidance of sale.
§ 251. Statutory force and effect of sale and deed.
§ 252. ——Effect of lapse of time without question.
§ 253. ——Evidence to rebut presumption or impeach title.
§ 254. Validity and effect of mortgage by representative.
§ 255. ——Variance between mortgage and authority.
§ 256. ——Objections available collaterally or on foreclosure.
§ 257. ——Subrogation under void mortgage.

B. Under Terms of Will.

§ 258. In general.
§ 259. Sale by administrator with will annexed.
§ 260. Sale or subjection to legacies charged.
§ 261. ——Remedy in equity.

VIII. Liability of heirs, devisees and distributees for debts.

§ 262. In general.
§ 263. Remedy to enforce liability.

IX. Liability of representative personally to creditors.

§ 264. In general.
§ 265. Nature and limit of liability.
§ 266. Liability imposed by delay.
§ 267. ——By fraud, waste or misappropriation.
§ 268. Procedure to determine and enforce.

X. Rights and liabilities of representatives and distributees in the estate or towards each other.

A. In General; Dealings Respecting Shares and Properties.

§ 269. In general.
§ 270. Dealings of representatives in general.
§ 271. ——Purchase of property.
§ 272. ——Through agents or intermediaries.
§ 273. ——By or for benefit of representatives' children.
§ 274. ——Lands out of state.

B. Claims by Representatives as Creditors, and Set-off or Retention.

§ 275. In general.
§ 276. Representative as stockholder in creditor corporation.
§ 277. Procedure to enforce rights.

C. Accountability for Rents, Profits and Interest, and Losses or Depreciation.

§ 278. Rents, issues and profits received.
§ 279. Liability for losses or depreciation.
§ 280. ——Moneys deposited in bank which fails.

§ 281. ——Depreciation in value of securities.
§ 282. Loss from failure to collect assets, rents or profits.
§ 283. ——From forfeiture of equities in land.
§ 284. Improper disbursements or interest lost.
§ 285. Failure to buy in claims at discount.
§ 286. Liability for interest on money or property held.

D. COMPENSATION, ALLOWANCES AND REIMBURSEMENT.

§ 287. Compensation in general.
§ 288. ——Measure and amount.
§ 289. ——Extra services and allowances.
§ 290. ——Services in sale of realty.
§ 291. ——Discretion of court.
§ 292. Compensation of corepresentatives, joint representatives and successors.
§ 293. Compensation of foreign and domiciliary representatives.
§ 294. Assignment or transfer of compensation or claim.
§ 295. Indemnification, reimbursement and liens for disbursements.
§ 296. ——Expenses of administration and attorney fees.
§ 297. Claim or procedure to obtain allowance.
§ 298. ——Evidence or showing.
§ 299. ——Questions of law and fact.

E. ACCOUNTABILITY FOR COREPRESENTATIVES, PREDECESSORS AND SURVIVING PARTNER'S ACTS AND OMISSIONS.

§ 300. In general.
§ 301. Contribution, indemnity and exoneration.
§ 302. Partnership property and shares therein.

F. EXECUTORS DE SON TORT AND INTERMEDDLERS.

§ 303. Executors de son tort.
§ 304. Intermeddlers' rights and liabilities.

XI. Actions and suits; arbitrations; costs.

A. RIGHT AND AUTHORITY TO SUE OR DEFEND; COMPROMISES.

§ 305. Representative authority in general.
§ 306. Right to sue or appear and defend, on whom devolved.
§ 307. ——Replevin.
§ 308. ——Ejectment or possessory actions for land.
§ 309. ——Waste and trespass.
§ 310. ——Suits to remove clouds or perfect title.
§ 311. Suits by heirs or creditors on refusal or neglect of representative.
§ 312. ——Suits in name of representative.
§ 313. Joint and several causes and actions.
§ 314. Survival or abatement of cause of action.
§ 315. Time for suing and effect of delay or vacancy in administration.
§ 316. Set-off and recoupment.
§ 317. Arbitrations, compromises and confessions.
§ 318. Actions and suits against representative.

B. PLEADING AND PRACTICE.

§ 319. In general.
§ 320. Revivor proceedings.
§ 321. Representative or individual name or capacity as party.
§ 322. Pleadings and averments.
§ 323. ——Traverse or admission of right and capacity.
§ 324. Evidence and burden of proof.
§ 325. Judgments and decrees.

C. COSTS AND ALLOWANCES.

§ 326. In general.
§ 327. Contested cases.
§ 328. Denial to representative for neglect or default.
§ 329. Needless or forced litigation.
§ 330. Amount and items allowable.
§ 331. Award, order and enforcement of cost judgment.

XII. Accounting and settlement of estate.

A. IN GENERAL; RIGHT, DUTY AND TIME.

§ 332. Nature and scope.
§ 333. Right and duty in general.
§ 334. ——Accounting for deceased representative, guardian or trustee.
§ 335. ——Accounting between corepresentatives.
§ 336. Time for accounting, delay, laches and estoppel.

B. PROCEDURE AND PRACTICE; STATING THE ACCOUNT.

§ 337. Jurisdiction and proceedings in general.
§ 338. Accounts involving rights of infants.
§ 339. Accounting suits in equity.
§ 340. Testamentary trust accountings.
§ 341. Application, other pleadings and procedure.
§ 342. Method of stating and items to be included.
§ 343. Variance from inventory or property receipted for.
§ 344. Mistakes, amendments and corrections.
§ 345. Procedure on refusal of representative to account.

C. EXCEPTIONS, CONTESTS AND HEARINGS; SURCHARGE AND FALSIFICATION.

§ 346. Practice and procedure on hearing.
§ 347. Issues and questions open on appeal.
§ 348. Evidence and presumptions.
§ 349. Instructions.
§ 350. ——Issues to jury and findings on same.

D. DECREE AND ITS EFFECT; SUPPLEMENTAL ACCOUNTING.

§ 351. In general.
§ 352. ——Rights and facts concluded.
§ 353. ——Conclusiveness and finality of annual or intermediate accounts.
§ 354. ——Collateral attack and impeachment.
§ 355. Reopening, rehearing and supplemental accountings.

XIII. Shares in the estate; distribution, payment and delivery.

A. In General; Duty, Time and Manner of Payment or Delivery.

§ 356. Shares and interests in estates in general.
§ 357. Assignability of shares or expectancies.
§ 358. Rights or title of assignee or transferee.
§ 359. Bigamy or adultery as bar to right of surviving spouse.
§ 360. Prerequisites to distribution.
§ 361. Time for distribution.
§ 362. Devises and specific bequests.
§ 363. Mode and medium of payment.
§ 364. ——Set-off or application against debts owing.
§ 365. ——Deduction and adjustment of advancements; hotchpot.
§ 366. ——Payment or delivery into trust for heir.
§ 367. ——Showing and record to support payment to guardian or representative of heir.
§ 368. Liability for bequest improperly delivered or paid.
§ 369. Recalling payment or delivery.
§ 370. Disposal of assets of foreign estates.

B. Remedies and Procedure; Enforcement of Order to Pay.

§ 371. Jurisdiction and procedure in general.
§ 372. ——Conflicting claims and contests.
§ 373. ——Construction of will incident to distribution.
§ 374. Remission of ancillary estate to domicile.
§ 375. Petition, parties, notice, and hearing for distribution.
§ 376. ——Evidence and procedure in general.
§ 377. Decree, effect and conclusiveness.
§ 378. Procedure to enforce decree and recover shares.
§ 379. Enforcement of agreements as to distribution.
§ 380. Remedy and procedure by assignees.
§ 381. Equitable remedies and relief.
§ 382. Garnishment, bill or other remedy to reach shares for creditors.

XIV. Discharge; liabilities on bonds.

§ 383. Discharge in general.
§ 384. ——Validity and effect of order.
§ 385. Presumptions and evidence.
§ 386. Obligation, breach and liability on bonds.
§ 387. ——On special bonds for real estate sale.
§ 388. ——On bonds of residuary legatees to dispense with further administration.
§ 389. Liability of sureties.
§ 390. Defenses open to sureties.
§ 391. Remedies and procedure on bonds.
§ 392. ——On residuary legatee's bond.
§ 393. ——On predecessor's bond.

XV. Partition by probate court and determination of heirship.

§ 394. Partition by probate court.
§ 395. ——Conclusiveness of findings.
§ 396. ——Collateral attack and impeachment.
§ 397. Probate proceedings for determination of heirship.
§ 398. ——Effect and conclusiveness of finding.

Testamentary trusts and administration of them, see Trusts; Wills, VI.

I. NECESSITY, OCCASION AND KINDS OF ADMINISTRATION.

§ 1. In general; settlements by agreement.

Settlements by heirs in absence of creditors, see post § 2.
Effect on pending or later administration, see post § 3.
Conclusiveness, acquiescence or delay, see post § 4.
Enforcement of agreements for distribution, see post § 379.
Distribution in course of administration, see post XIII.
Agreements and settlements among beneficiaries under wills, see Wills, VII, B.
Public policy as to agreements among heirs relating to shares in estate, see Contracts § 69.
Acquiescence in division as working estoppel, see Estoppel § 35.
Right of widow to hold decedent's land as against creditors without administration, see Descent ¶ 54.
Right to relief in equity from execution of trust created to carry out unfair settlement among heirs, see also Equity ¶ 54.

¶ 1. It is the right of all parties interested in an estate to settle it up by voluntary proceedings if they agree to do so; and they may do this after an administrator is appointed as well as before.—Brown v. Forsche, 43 Mich. 492.

¶ 2. The amicable settlement of disputed matters and controversies, relating to estates of deceased persons, are favored by the courts and contracts looking thereto are valid.—Layer v. Layer, 184 Mich. 663.

¶ 3. Where the payee of a note dies intestate and no administrator is appointed, those who would be the distributees of the estate may assign the equitable title to the note, and if the maker thereof secures it by giving a chattel mortgage in good faith to the assignee, his creditors cannot complain.—Wood v. Weimar, 104 U. S. 786, 26 L. ed. 779.

¶ 4. The provision in a settlement for an additional allowance in case her "actual necessities" should require it, has reference to the necessities for support and comfort provided for in the will, and does not invalidate the agreement as depriving the legatee and widow of the rights given her by the will.—Hull v. Hull, 149 Mich. 500.

¶ 5. On the discovery of additional assets after the closing of an estate and the satisfaction of the claims of creditors, it is not necessary to have the administrator reappointed, where the heirs are all of full age.—Powell v. Pennock, 181 Mich. 588.

¶ 6. A will provided that the testator's widow should receive the entire income of the estate, and such further sum from the principal as should be agreed upon by the executors or ordered by the court as her necessities might require, and appointed the widow and a nephew as executrix and executor. By a contract consented to in writing by all others interested in the estate, it was agreed that the executrix should have a stipulated sum annually and an additional allowance if her necessities required it in lieu of the provision for her support contained in the will, and that the executor should have the entire management of the estate. Held, that the contract was a fair one, and it was competent for the parties to enter into it, the object being to settle differences injurious to the estate.—Hull v. Hull, 149 Mich. 500.

¶ 7. B. died intestate, being possessed of personal property of great value. His wife survived him one year, and upon her death left her share of the estate to be divided among several legatees. A contest over the will was compromised, the will being set aside, and the manner of distribution of the estate agreed upon. B., twenty-one years before his death, had taken a lease of certain real estate for 100 years. The lessor's estate agreed to sell its rights under the lease and the fee of the land for a lump sum. The probate judge, upon application of the administrator of B.'s estate, authorized the purchase, claiming power to enter the order under How. St., § 5932, passed after the widow's death, and which provides that, in case any continuing claim shall be made against the estate of a deceased person for rent under a lease, the administrator may by and with the consent of the probate judge, compromise the claim, and may, in effecting the compromise, if necessary and if so ordered by the judge of probate, purchase the real estate covered by the lease, in which case the property so purchased shall be disposed of and distributed as personalty. Held, that the enactment and application of the statute were remedial and did not deprive the heirs of the wife of B. of rights vested under their agreement, even though the agreement contemplated a conversion into money of all personal property belonging to the estate.—In re Beecher's Estate, 113 Mich. 667.

§ 2. ——By heirs in absence of creditors.

¶ 8. Where no creditors appear, the heirs and legatees may divide the property as they see fit, regardless of decedent's will.—Letts v. Letts, 73 Mich. 138.

¶ 9. Where there are no creditors the law favors the collection and distribution of the personal estate of a decedent by the heirs or legatees without the intervention of an administrator, if the heirs or legatees can agree upon and carry such a distribution into effect.—Brobst v. Brobst, 190 Mich. 63.

¶ 10. Where there are no claims for adjustment an estate may be settled by the heirs without the intervention of the probate court.—Powell v. Pennock, 181 Mich. 588.

¶ 11. Where an estate is not in debt, and the heirs at law, being of full age, carry out a settlement upon which they have all agreed, and by which they receive all that they could by virtue of an administration, they are estopped from disturbing it.—Needham v. Gillett, 39 Mich. 574.

¶ 12. When there are no creditors, the heirs or legatees may collect the personal estate and make such distribution among themselves as they may agree to and carry into effect without the intervention of administrators and regardless of the provisions of decedent's will, if he made one.—Foote v. Foote, 61 Mich. 181.

§ 3. ——Effect on pending or later administration.

Propriety of reopening estate and requiring accounting after settlement by agreements, see post ¶ 1132.

¶ 13. An administrator duly appointed without appeal, cannot be denied the uncollected choses in action yet belonging to the estate, upon the ground that the heirs have agreed that there should be no administration upon the estate.—Ormsbee v. Piper, 123 Mich. 265.

¶ 14. The persons interested in property left under a will did not probate the same at the testator's death, but distributed the same by private agreement. The defendant, son of the testator, took possession of the personal property and used the same. Thirteen years after the testator's death, his daughter, who had no interest in the personal property and none under the will, had plaintiff administrator appointed for the sole purpose of bringing suit in trover for the conversion of the personalty. Held, plaintiff could not recover.—Diem v. Drogmiller, 158 Mich. 380.

§ 4. ——Conclusiveness, acquiescence or delay.

¶ 15. Where a voluntary division between the heirs of an intestate whose estate was not administered has been acquiesced in and its benefits received for more than twenty years, it cannot be disturbed or impeached by a party thereto.—Mitchell v. Mitchell, 68 Mich. 106.

¶ 16. Acquiescence by adult children for fourteen years in their father's ante-mortem disposition of his estate bars administration for the purpose of contesting such disposition.—Beardslee v. Reeves, 76 Mich. 661.

¶ 17. One entitled to claim by intestacy and to contest a will, but who is provided for in a family agreement made among legatees for the purpose of disposing of the residuum which has lapsed into intestacy, is bound by the entirety of it if he accepts its provisions, and cannot contest the will which it affirms.—Wilkins v. Hukill, 115 Mich. 594.

¶ 18. Heirs or legatees who have collected the personal estate of a decedent and have effected a distribution thereof by agreement will be bound thereby, in the absence of fraud or mistake, and, where there are no creditors, will be estopped from attempting to disturb such distribution by asking for the appointment of an administrator.—Brobst v. Brobst, 190 Mich. 63.

¶ 19. On a bill by an executrix and legatee against her coexecutor to set aside a contract between them by which the entire management of the estate was to be given to defendant and complainant was to accept a specified sum per year in lieu of the provisions for her support contained in the will, it was held that complainant had failed entirely to support her contention that she was deceived and misled or did not understand this contract which she signed, the agreement having been made to end disagreements as to management of the estate which were injurious to all concerned.—Hull v. Hull, 149 Mich. 500.

§ 5. Special administration.

Petition for special letters, see post § 26.

Authority and status of special administrators, see post § 49.

Authority and right of special administrator to collect or sue for assets, see post § 85.

Administration de bonis non, see post § 6.

Necessity of special administration for hearing of claims during pendency of appeal from appointment of representative, see post ¶ 539.

Appointment of special administrator, see Jud. Act, chap. LIII, § 4, Comp. L. 1915, § 13822.

¶ 20. Under How. St., § 5851, the probate court has almost absolute discretion as to whether a special administrator shall be appointed in any case.—Grece v. Helm, 91 Mich. 450.

¶ 21. When an appeal has been taken from the appointment of an administrator, the probate court should, on application, appoint a special administrator.—People ex rel. Palms v. Wayne Probate Judge, 39 Mich. 302.

¶ 22. A special administrator may be appointed though the only property of the estate is a litigated claim, where an immediate settlement can be made at once and where there must be delay before a general administrator can be appointed.—Grece v. Helm, 91 Mich. 450.

§ 6. Administration de bonis non.

See also post ¶ 244.

Petition for letters de bonis non, see post § 26.

Status and authority of administrator de bonis non, see post § 49.

Right and authority of administrator de bonis non to collect or sue for assets, see post § 85.

Right of legatee to appointment of administrator de bonis non, see post ¶ 1209.

¶ 23. On the resignation of an administrator the probate court may, under express provisions of § 9334, Comp. Laws 1897, How. St., 2nd Ed., § 11050, where the necessity of the case demands it, appoint an administrator de bonis non without the filing of a final account by the original administrator.—In re Thompson's Estate, 183 Mich. 618.

¶ 24. Section 9333, Comp. Laws 1897, How. St., 2nd Ed., § 11049, providing for an accounting does not prevent the appointment by the probate court on the resignation of an administrator of an administrator de bonis non under section 9334 without the filing of the final account of the original administrator, when the necessities of the case demand it.—In re Thompson's Estate, 183 Mich. 618.

¶ 25. Where an executor refused to bring suit against a municipality for causing his testator's death by reason of a defective bridge, but closed his administration and obtained his discharge, held that, under How. St., § 5843, letters of administration were properly granted to the widow to permit her to prosecute the action.—Merkle v. Township of Bennington, 68 Mich. 133.

¶ 26. Where an executor's final account showing what was left of the estate after paying the debts and certain legacies has been allowed, but no order made discharging the officer and on his death, there are legacies still unpaid and both real and personal estate to be administered, the residuary legatee is entitled to have an administrator de bonis non appointed.—Buss v. Buss' Estate, 75 Mich. 163.

¶ 27. Comp. L. 1897, § 9334, providing for the appointment of an administrator de bonis non covers the case of the discharge of an executrix before a legacy is paid and without notice to the legatee.—Cole v. Shaw, 134 Mich. 499.

¶ 28. The executor of an administrator is not entitled ex officio to succeed his intestate in his trust as administrator, but the trust is committed to an administrator de bonis non.—Perrin v. Calhoun Circuit Judge, 49 Mich. 342.

¶ 29. Under Comp. L. 1897, § 9320, providing that the executor of an executor shall not as such have any authority to administer the estate of the first testator, but that on the death of the only surviving executor letters de bonis non with the will annexed may be granted to such person as the probate court may judge proper, the executor of an executor has no duty or office representatively in the settlement of the first estate.—Robbins v. Burridge, 128 Mich. 25.

II. JURISDICTION AND PROCEDURE IN GENERAL.

§ 7. Nature and requisites of procedure in general.

Nature of procedure, see also post ¶ 38.

Procedure for appointment of representative, see post, III, B.

On qualifying as representative, see post, III, C.

On removal of representative, see post §§ 42-45.

Procedure to enforce collection of assets, see post, V, B.

Procedure for presentment, establishment and enforcement of claims, see post, VI, C.

Due process in administration proceedings, see Constitutional Law § 145.

¶ 30. The proceedings to administer an estate are essentially proceedings in rem.—Michigan Home Missionary Society v. Corning, 164 Mich. 395.

¶ 31. Proceedings in the probate court in the matter of estates of deceased persons are proceedings in rem, or proceedings to determine the status of the estate, and not proceedings inter partes between the various claimants.—In re Brown's Estate, 198 Mich. 544.

¶ 32. The probate of a will in another state is sufficient to entitle a devisee to be heard in Michigan in any administration proceedings which are essentially in rem and without parties.—In re Mower's Appeal, 48 Mich. 441.

§ 8. Jurisdictional facts of death, domicile and assets.

See also post ¶ 103.

Sufficiency of jurisdictional facts in petition, see post § 25.

Relative jurisdiction of probate and circuit courts, see post § 9.

Persons entitled to question proceedings for want of jurisdiction, see post § 33.

Facts and proof of domicile in general, see Domicile.

Presumptions and proof of death of person absent and not heard from, see Death and Survivorship.

Evidence as to domicile of testator dying abroad, see Domicile § 7.

¶ 33. Where foreclosure proceedings were taken by foreign executors to whom letters testamentary had been issued in Michigan, and the proceedings were taken under a stipulation by the parties to the suit that the executors were duly appointed and acted as such, and the probate records showed nothing to the contrary, it was assumed that the appointment referred to in the stipulation meant the appointment in Michigan, and that such a showing was made to the court, by sworn petition or by oral proof, that the estate had such property interests in the county as would warrant the issue of the letters.—Alexander v. Rice, 52 Mich. 451.

§ 9. Relative jurisdiction of probate and circuit courts.

Equity jurisdiction to protect or conserve estate, see post § 10.

Equitable rights, trusts and remedies collateral or incident to administration, see post § 11.

Receivership, see post § 12.

Accounting and distribution, see post § 13.

Jurisdiction and discretion of probate court for appointment of special administrators, see ante § 5.

Jurisdiction for removal of representatives, see post § 39.

Original jurisdiction and appellate hearings on claims, see post § 197.

Jurisdiction and discretion of probate court to extend time for presentment of claims, see also post ¶ 521.

Jurisdiction of probate court for distribution of estate, see post §§ 371-373.

Jurisdiction and discretion of probate court to determine amount of widow's allowance, see also post ¶ 338.

Jurisdiction and discretion of probate court to determine time for and duration of widow's allowance, see post ¶¶ 355, 356.

Jurisdiction of probate court to determine fact of marriage where made issue on widow's allowance, see also post ¶ 364.

Jurisdiction and discretion of probate court to modify or rescind order for widow's allowance, see also post ¶¶ 368-370.

Jurisdiction and discretion of probate court over representative's bond, see post ¶ 139.

Jurisdiction of probate court in general, see Probate Courts, I.

Jurisdiction of probate courts, see Probate Courts, I.

Conflicting federal suit to reach assets, see also Courts ¶ 351.

¶ 34. The probate court has exclusive jurisdiction of all matters relative to the settlement of estates of deceased persons except in cases where its remedies are inadequate.—Brooks v. Hargrave, 179 Mich. 136.

¶ 35. Courts of probate have exclusive jurisdiction of the settlement of estates of decedents, except where their remedies are inadequate, or the interposition of equity is necessary for some auxiliary purpose.—Powell v. Pennock, 181 Mich. 588.

¶ 36. The probate court has original and exclusive jurisdiction in the administration of estates, and it alone can order sums to be paid out of the estate needed to carry on a will contest. The circuit court in such contest cannot.—Goff v. Cass Circuit Judge, 152 Mich. 121.

¶ 37. The probate court has exclusive jurisdiction over the settlement of the estates of deceased persons, except where its remedies are inadequate or the interposition of equity is necessary for some auxiliary purpose.—Davis v. McCamman, 165 Mich. 287.

¶ 38. The probate court is the only court that has any such jurisdiction in rem as will enable it to reach persons out of the state, or call in all creditors; the circuit court has no power in equity to act as a substitute for the probate court in this way, and, unless it has authority to deal with a case through the parties actually before it, cannot deal at all with it.—Dickinson v. Seaver, 44 Mich. 624.

¶ 39. Under our probate system a very large portion of the old equity jurisdiction is vested in the courts of probate; and it seems that the court of chancery has jurisdiction in those cases only in which an adequate remedy does not exist in the probate court.—People ex rel. Campau v. Wayne Circuit Court, 11 Mich. 393.

§ 10. ——Equity jurisdiction to protect or conserve estate.

Equity jurisdiction in distribution, see post § 381.

¶ 40. Estates of deceased persons are not settled in equity under our laws.—Holbrook v. Campau, 22 Mich. 288.

¶ 41. In the settlement of estates, equity will act only where the remedy at law is clearly inadequate.—Graham v. Graham, 171 Mich. 307.

¶ 42. It is within the jurisdiction of equity to enjoin an attempted sale by executors under order of probate court contrary to the requirements of law.—Ireland v. Miller, 71 Mich. 119.

¶ 43. Equity may assume jurisdiction when it is necessary to protect funds pending proceedings in a probate court.—Ewing v. Lamphere, 147 Mich. 659.

¶ 44. An order of a circuit court of chancery restraining executors from turning over to a legatee any money or property belonging to such legatee until a further order of the court and ordering such legatee to pay unpaid alimony to complainant does not constitute an incroachment upon the jurisdiction of the probate court.—Craig v. Wayne Circuit Judge, 192 Mich. 106.

¶ 45. Complainants cannot by a bill in equity retry issues, which were before tried in the probate court and determined against them, and which relate to matters within the jurisdiction of said court, since equity has no power of interference except where by fraud or mistake unusual conditions preclude an adequate remedy in the probate court in the first instance.—Davis v. McCamman, 168 Mich. 587.

§ 11. ——Equitable rights, trusts and remedies collateral or incident to administration.

¶ 46. Whether specific performance or other relief should be granted against a wife who, having agreed to accept, and having accepted, a conveyance, a mortgage, and a bequest from her husband in lieu of dower, etc., asserts claims against his estate, is within the jurisdiction of a court of chancery, not of the probate court.—Dakin v. Dakin, 97 Mich. 284.

¶ 47. The probate court cannot require an executor to advance money from a fund for accumulation, although the infant distributees are in need. Any relief in the premises must be sought in equity.—Knorr v. Millard, 52 Mich. 542.

¶ 48. The circuit court in chancery of the county in which land covered by a trust deed is located, and where reside the complainants to a bill against the trustee for an accounting, and against his grantee for a cancellation of a deed to such land, to establish the deficiency after determination of the value of such land, to determine the purpose of the giving of a note alleged to have been signed by a deceased person as additional security for the liabilities of the debtor, and to obtain a lien upon the property of such deceased person, in case of a deficiency, has exclusive jurisdiction, although a claim for the amount of such note was filed in the probate court of the county in which the estate of such deceased person was being administered.—Buck v. Lockwood, 193 Mich. 242.

¶ 49. A special administrator, who has filed a bill to revive and to complete the enforcement of a decree under which a fund was recovered by his predecessor, stands by the act of filing his bill in the relation of an intervening litigant in the original suit and subject to the jurisdiction of the chancery court; and hence such court has power on a petition to compel him to repay into court such fund improvidently paid out and in his keeping, although his bill of revivor has not yet progressed to the point where he stands as a party admitted to enforce the decree as revived against the other parties.—Dennis v. Kent Circuit Judge, 42 Mich. 249.

¶ 50. W., who was administrator of the estate of his deceased daughter, and her only heir at law, and also administrator de bonis non of the estate of a former husband of hers, upon which the said daughter had administered in her lifetime, filed a bill against her surviving husband, the defendant, setting forth that certain property, which had come into the hands of the defendant, in a piece of real estate the title to which had been taken in his name, really belonged to the wife. The defendant claimed most of the property as a gift from his wife. Held, that the court could only force the defendant, if he failed to prove the gift alleged in his answer, to account with complainant and place the property in his hands, without deciding the amount belonging to each estate or which must remain for distribution, etc., and that all such subsequent matters were within the proper jurisdiction of the probate court.—Wales v. Newbould, 9 Mich. 45.

§ 12. ——Receivership.

Suit against residuary legatee for appointment of receiver, see also post ¶ 1062.

¶ 51. A bill filed by the sister of an intestate, claiming as a distributee of personalty and not as heir, alleging fraud in the appointment of a guardian and administrator for the decedent, and asking the appointment of a receiver, is demurrable; proceedings must be had in the probate court.—Kellogg v. Aldrich, 39 Mich. 576.

¶ 52. A bill for the appointment of a receiver to take charge of the assets of an estate was denied, where it appeared that under the terms of the will executor was given full power to collect the rents and profits for the benefit of the widow who was given a life estate in the properties of the testator and was not a complainant.—Pitcher v. Douglas, 37 Mich. 339.

§ 13. ——Accounting and distribution.

Accounting and settlement of estates, see post, XII.

Jurisdiction and procedure in general for distribution, see post §§ 371-373.

Jurisdiction for statement of account, see also post § 337.

¶ 53. The probate court has jurisdiction of an action against an executor for an accounting.—Wessborg v. Merrill, 195 Mich. 556.

¶ 54. Proceedings to compel executor to account must be instituted in the probate court.—Pitcher v. Douglas, 37 Mich. 339.

¶ 55. Proceedings to compel an executor to file an account should be instituted in the probate court and not in chancery.—Pitcher v. Douglas, 37 Mich. 339.

¶ 56. The probate court has sole jurisdiction of a suit for an accounting between the estates of a husband and wife, who were grantors of land under a conditional sale contract, to determine how much one estate is indebted to the other for moneys collected on such contract during the lives of the parties.—Flammer v. Cullen, 194 Mich. 585.

¶ 57. It is only when other interests than those of the estate or the executor are involved that chancery assumes jurisdiction of an accounting, and then rather because of the complexity of the parties than because of the complexity of the accounting.—Brooks v. Hargrave, 179 Mich. 136.

¶ 58. After the closing of an estate, the receipt of their distributed shares by the several heirs and the discharge of the administrator with their consent, chancery has jurisdiction to require a widow to account for money fraudulently obtained by her from her husband in his lifetime, and secretly withheld from his administrator.—Powell v. Pennock, 181 Mich. 588.

¶ 59. Jurisdiction to allow the final account of executors and to close an estate is not derived from Act No. 253, Pub. Acts 1899, relating to testamentary trustees.—Michigan Home Missionary Society v. Corning, 164 Mich. 395.

¶ 60. The rules which give chancery courts jurisdiction in matters of accounting as against courts of law are not applicable to the probate courts.—Brooks v. Hargrave, 179 Mich. 136.

¶ 61. The probate court having assumed jurisdiction by admitting a will to probate and appointing an executor, such jurisdiction is not lost until the estate is finally closed, and hence a bill will not lie in equity to compel the executor to account.—Brooks v. Hargrave, 179 Mich. 136.

§ 14. Place or county for administration or accounting.

Proper forum for accounting, see also post ¶ 76.
Venue in general, see Venue, I.
Court of what county to have jurisdiction over estate, see Jud. Act, chap. LIII, § 1, Comp. L. 1915, § 13819.

¶ 62. Under Comp. L. 1897, § 9323, How. 2nd Ed., § 11039, providing that when any person dies intestate and is a resident of the state letters of administration shall be granted to the probate court of the county of which he is resident and the administration first legally granted shall extend to all the estate of deceased in the state and shall exclude the jurisdiction of every other county, and Comp. L. 1897, § 9340, How. 2nd Ed., § 11056, relating to the giving of notice of application for appointment of an administrator for an intestate estate by the probate judge, and Comp. L. 1897, § 657, How. 2nd Ed., § 12105, providing that the "jurisdiction assumed in any case by a judge of probate, so far as it depends upon the place of residence of any person, or the location of his estate, shall not be contested in any suit or proceeding whatever, except in an appeal from the probate court in the original case, or when the want of jurisdiction appears on the same record," and Comp. L. 1897, § 658, How. 2nd Ed., § 12106, providing that the probate court of one of two counties first taking cognizance of a case of which they both have jurisdiction shall retain jurisdiction throughout the proceedings, and Comp. L. 1897, § 9336, How. 2nd Ed., § 11052, providing that if, after the granting of letters of administration by any probate court on the estate of an intestate a will is duly approved and allowed by such court, the administration shall be revoked, the probate court of a county first obtaining jurisdiction of the administration of an estate will retain such jurisdiction, even though a will is subsequently found and proceedings for probate are commenced in another county.—In re Carney's Estate, 199 Mich. 663.

¶ 63. The place for final accounting and settlement of an estate is in the forum of original administration.—In re Steven's Estate, 171 Mich. 486.

§ 15. Domiciliary, ancillary and foreign administration.

Wills probated abroad and foreign wills, see post § 16.
Property beyond state, see post § 17.
Authority and status of foreign representatives, see post § 51.
Recognition and title of foreign representatives, see post §§ 64, 65.
Remission of ancillary estate to domicile, see post § 374.
Compensation of foreign and domiciliary representatives, see post § 293.
Force and effect of foreign judgments in actions wherein personal representatives were parties, see Foreign Judgments, II.
Jurisdiction to annul or revise action of foreign court of probate, see also Courts ¶ 142.

¶ 64. Where certain tribunals have acquired jurisdiction over an estate and its representative within their territory, the representative is bound to account to them only for all assets, and the courts of other states cannot interfere. Otherwise intervening claimants within different foreign jurisdictions may claim through different courts the right of controlling the management of the estate.—Woodruff v. Young, 43 Mich. 548.

¶ 65. A suit in equity for a general accounting against the estate of a deceased person must be brought in the forum of the home administration rather than that of an ancillary one.—Spoon v. Baxter, 31 Mich. 279.

¶ 66. A foreign executor suing in Michigan in his own name on a note belonging to the estate and payable to bearer is accountable in the court having jurisdiction of the estate for the judgment recovered.—Knapp v. Lee, 42 Mich. 41.

¶ 67. While personal property accompanies the person of the owner, and is to be disposed of on his death according to the law of his domicile, it may still be necessary to have distinct proceedings in administration if the property is in one jurisdiction and the domicile in another.—Reynolds v. McMullen, 55 Mich. 568.

¶ 68. A bill to compel the payment of the purchase moneys on contracts for the sale and conveyance of lands filed by persons claiming as assignees of foreign executors is not demurrable on the ground that the will was probated in another state, if it appears that letters of administration based on the foreign probate have also been issued in the state where suit is brought.—Day v. Cole, 56 Mich. 294.

¶ 69. Where assets within the state are justly subject to a claim which arises within the state, the claim may be litigated in ancillary proceedings within the state, and need not be presented in the courts in which principal proceedings for administration are had.—In re Colburn's Estate, 153 Mich. 208; More v. Luther, Id.

¶ 70. Where there are two administrations of a single estate, one in the place of the domicile of the testator or intestate, and the other in a foreign jurisdiction, the question whether the courts of the latter will decree distribution of the assets collected under the ancillary administration or remit them to the jurisdiction of the domicile, is not one of jurisdiction but of judicial discretion, dependent upon the circumstances of the particular case.—In re Steven's Estate, 171 Mich. 486.

¶ 71. In an ancillary administration in Michigan, the trial court found that the testatrix had her domicile in another state and died there, where her will was admitted to probate. Held, the contention that testatrix had her domicile in Michigan could not be litigated in the ancillary proceeding.—In re Steven's Estate, 171 Mich. 486.

¶ 72. Where ancillary administration is taken out in Michigan upon an estate left by a person dying and domiciled in Florida, the executors are not estopped from asking that the funds be transmitted to the Florida court by the fact that they asked for an order apportioning, assigning and distributing in Michigan the residue of the estate.—In re Steven's Estate, 171 Mich. 486.

¶ 73. Where there has been no application as respects the property of an intestate situated in the state for administration ancillary to administration proceedings in a foreign state and there has been no application to the probate court by the foreign administrator to direct the local administrator to turn over funds in his hands, a court of equity will not interfere with the local probate proceedings or order distribution of the funds in the hands of the local administrator according to the laws of the foreign state, especially when it is denied by complainants, the foreign administrators and an heir only under the laws of the foreign state, that the court of equity can determine, for itself, where the intestate was domiciled, and where the estate in the foreign state cannot be, by its order, brought into the state of Michigan for final distribution, if the facts require it.—Colvin v. Jones, 194 Mich. 670.

§ 16. ——Wills probated abroad and foreign wills.

See also post ¶ 1169.

Disposal of assets of foreign estates, see post § 370.

Necessity for bond on probate of foreign will, see post ¶ 135.

¶ 74. Under our probate system estates must be settled and claims proved in the probate court. Whatever may be done with the final balance where a will has been previously probated at a foreign domicile, the estate must be administered under the probate laws of the state to the time of distribution.—Dickinson v. Seaver, 44 Mich. 624.

§ 17. ——Property beyond state.

Dealings of representative with lands out of state, see also post § 274.

Effect of foreign judgment on property of estate within jurisdiction of court rendering it, see Foreign Judgments, II.

¶ 75. Letters of administration can have no such extraterritorial force as to give Michigan administrators control over Illinois lands.—Sheldon v. Rice, 30 Mich. 296.

¶ 76. A general accounting of matters extending over more than one state should be in the forum of the home administration rather than in that of an ancillary one. Heirs at law cannot be compelled to litigate here for land abroad.—Spoon v. Baxter, 31 Mich. 279.

¶ 77. A bill that makes an ancillary administrator alone a defendant will not lie to enforce an accounting as to lands in another state which are within the jurisdiction of the home administration; the interests involved would be such as affect heirs at law, who cannot be compelled to litigate here for lands abroad.—Spoon v. Baxter, 31 Mich. 279.

¶ 78. A court of equity will not pass upon the validity of trusts in a will or upon the distribution of a possible residue when the property involved consists of real estate located in another state, and is not within the control of the executors asking for instructions.—Fuller v. McKim, 187 Mich. 667.

III. ADMINISTRATORS AND EXECUTORS AND THEIR LETTERS.

A. NOMINATION AND SELECTION.

§ 18. In general.

Persons entitled to administer, see post §§ 19, 20.

Nomination by testator, see post §§ 21-23.

Persons entitled to petition or be heard, see post § 24.

Petition and procedure thereon, see post §§ 25-30.

Appointing order and letters, see post §§ 31-33.

Validity of Federal Reserve Act empowering national bank to be executor, see Banking § 90, ¶ 284.

§ 19. Persons entitled and priorities in right.

Grantee of person primarily entitled, see post § 20.

Right of widow to appointment, see also post ¶ 146.

Who entitled to letters of administration, see Jud. Act, chap. LIII, § 2, Comp. L. 1915, § 13820.

¶ 79. The widow of one dying intestate, leaving an estate in the state of Michigan to be administered, may be appointed, or may nominate, the administrator of the estate.—In re Dettman's Estate, 195 Mich. 231.

¶ 80. Where an executor refused to bring suit against a municipality for causing his testator's death by reason of a defective bridge, but closed his administration and obtained his discharge, the right of action remains as a chose in action unadministered and under How. St., § 5843, letters of administration were properly granted to the widow to permit her to prosecute the action.—Merkle v. Township of Bennington, 68 Mich. 133.

¶ 81. Where the statute distributes equally between the father and the mother damages for a child's negligent killing, the mother has an equal interest in administration with the father, and may be appointed administratrix of the child's estate.—Rajnowski v. Detroit, B. C. & A. R. Co., 74 Mich. 20.

¶ 82. Where the mother of an incompetent would have under the statute been entitled to letters on the incompetent's estate if application had been made within thirty days, but she did not do so, and thereafter died and no one made application for eight years, a brother beneficially interested may apply and be appointed as against objection of his sisters contending that the administrator of the mother should be appointed, there being no creditors claiming the right.—In re Sprague's Estate, 125 Mich. 357.

¶ 83. A creditor of a decedent can take out letters of administration upon his estate if others do not do so.—Aldrich v. Annin, 54 Mich. 230.

¶ 84. Administration, when letters are issued on petition to the court, can only be granted to, or on application by, one or more of the persons specified in Comp. L., § 4379 (How. St., § 5849), viz., creditors and distributees; and as between these, only in this order, and under the contingency specified, of their being competent or willing to take the trust.—Breen v. Pangborn, 51 Mich. 29.

¶ 85. A widow failed for 50 days after the death of her husband to apply for administration of his estate, and plaintiff claiming to be a creditor applied to be appointed. The widow opposed his appointment claiming that he was not a creditor and there was much feeling between them, and the probate judge refused to appoint plaintiff but appointed another party. Upon appeal, held, that the probate judge was justified in his action and in finding that plaintiff was not a competent and suitable person to administer the estate. (Comp. L. 1897, § 9324).—Carpenter v. Wood, 131 Mich. 314.

¶ 86. Under a statute providing that administration of the estate of a person dying intestate shall be granted, on application, first, to the widow or next of kin, or such person as the widow or next of kin may request to have appointed, if suitable and competent to discharge the trust, and then, if the widow or next of kin, or the person selected by them, shall be unsuitable or incompetent, or if the widow or next of kin shall neglect for thirty days after the death of intestate to apply for administration, or to request that administration be granted to some other person the same may be granted to creditors, if an application for the appointment of an administrator is made by the next of kin within the thirty-day period he must be appointed, where he is a suitable and competent person.—Estate of Campau, How. N. P. 149.

§ 20. ——Grantee of person primarily entitled.

¶ 87. Under Comp. L. 1897, § 9324 providing that administration of the estate of a deceased person shall be granted "First to the widow, husband, or next of kin, or a grantee of the interest of one or more of them," a trustee in bankruptcy of a daughter of the decedent may be appointed administrator against the objection of the husband of deceased, since such trustee comes within the meaning of "grantee" as used in the statute.—Osmun v. Galbraith, 131 Mich. 577.

§ 21. Nomination by testator.

Delegation of authority by testator, see post § 22.

Disqualification of nominee, see post § 23.

Directions, designations and nominations in will and construction of terms of will respecting persons to administer, see Wills, VI, F.

¶ 88. In the matter of selecting a person to administer there is wide distinction between administrators and executors, since the latter must ordinarily be appointed according to the nomination of the testator unless because of ineligibility or by reason of a discretion reposed in the court by statute letters may be refused.—Breen v. Kehoe, 142 Mich. 58.

§ 22. ——Delegation of authority by testator.

¶ 89. A common law testator may delegate to another the power to choose his executor.—Brown v. Just, 118 Mich. 678.

¶ 90. The common law right of a testator who delegates to another the power to choose his executor has not been abrogated in this state, as such right cannot be held to be abrogated except by express enactment or by necessary implication.—Brown v. Just, 118 Mich. 678.

¶ 91. How. St., § 5849, providing that the administration of the estates of a person dying intestate shall be granted to the widow or next of kin, or both, or such person as they may request to have appointed, applies only to cases where persons die intestate, or have left wills without any provision for the appointment of executors, and not to cases of delegated authority. Accordingly a direction in a will conferring power upon a probate judge to appoint an executor is not within the statute.—Brown v. Just, 118 Mich. 678.

§ 23. ——Disqualification of nominee.

¶ 92. A nominee of testator for executor is not disqualified because he is indebted to the estate.—Breen v. Kehoe, 142 Mich. 58.

¶ 93. At common law a nonresident, or even an alien, might be appointed as executor.—Breen v. Kehoe, 142 Mich. 58.

¶ 94. Under Comp. L. 1897, § 9310, providing that the probate court shall issue letters testamentary to the person named as executor in the will if he is legally competent, and section 9317, providing that if an executor shall reside out of the state the probate court "may" remove him, it being within the discretion of the probate court to appoint or to revoke letters on the ground of alienage, the word "may" is used in a permissive sense and does not imply a prohibition to appoint on the ground that one must not be appointed who may be removed.—Breen v. Kehoe, 142 Mich. 58.

B. PETITION FOR ADMINISTRATION, PROCEDURE THEREON, AND LETTERS.

§ 24. Persons entitled to petition or be heard.

Nature and requisites of procedure in general, see ante § 7.

Right of widow of intestate to nominate administrator, see also ante ¶ 79.

Procedure for appointment of representative where decedent left no known heirs, see Jud. Act, chap. LIII, §§ 20, 21, Comp. L. 1915, §§ 13838, 13839.

¶ 95. One having no interest in the estate of a deceased has no right to petition for the appointment of an administrator.—Diem v. Drogmiller, 158 Mich. 380.

¶ 96. How. St., § 5849, subd. 2, authorizing appointment of one or more of the principal creditors, does not require the petition to be made by the principal creditors of the deceased; any creditor may apply, and the court on such application may grant administration to one or more of the principal creditors. Whether the person whom the petitioner asks to be appointed is such a creditor, and whether he is competent, are questions to be judicially determined upon the hearing, and cannot be inquired into thereafter except on appeal.—Wilkinson v. Conaty, 65 Mich. 614.

¶ 97. A widow being entitled presumptively to choose who shall administer her husband's estate may petition to have her former petition for the appointment of another person as general administrator dismissed, and to have herself appointed.—Grece v. Helm, 91 Mich. 450.

¶ 98. A husband has a right to be heard in regard to the appointment of an administrator for his wife's estate if she leaves any personalty, as he has an interest in the property.—Breen v. Pangborn, 51 Mich. 20.

¶ 99. Subdivision 2, § 9324, Comp. Laws, 1897, providing that if the parties so entitled neglect for thirty days after death of the intestate to apply for administration, or to request that it be granted to some other person, the same may be granted to one or more of the principal creditors, does not give to a petitioning creditor the right to dictate the appointment, and it is proper for the probate judge to give due consideration to the rights of other creditors in making the appointment.—McMeekin v. Saginaw Probate Judge, 150 Mich. 354.

§ 25. Necessity and sufficiency of petition.

For secondary, special or qualified letters, see post § 26.

Necessary jurisdictional facts, see ante § 8.

Sufficiency of petition to withdraw original petition and seek appointment of petitioner instead of third person named in first petition, see ante ¶ 97.

Petition for administrator of intestate estate, see Jud. Act, Chap. LIII, § 24, Comp. L. 1915, § 13842.
Petition for appointment of representative, see Prob. Ct. Rule 4.

¶ 100. A proper petition is a condition precedent to the appointment of an administrator under the statute providing for the administration of the estates of deceased persons.—Haug v. Primeau, 98 Mich. 91.

¶ 101. Jurisdiction to appoint an administrator must appear affirmatively on the face of the petition for administration.—Shipman v. Butterfield, 47 Mich. 487.

¶ 102. The petition for the appointment of an administrator must be by some one interested in the estate, and must set forth facts necessary to give the court jurisdiction.—Wilkinson v. Conaty, 65 Mich. 614.

¶ 103. The jurisdictional facts to be set forth in a petition for letters are, that the person whose estate is to be administered died intestate, and was, at the time of his death, either an inhabitant or resident of the county in which the application is made, or, if he died without the state, that he left an estate in the county to be administered. The other usual allegations are made for procedural purposes to inform the court.—Wilkinson v. Conaty, 65 Mich. 614.

¶ 104. A creditor's petition for administration, filed after thirty days from the date of the decease, need not state that no application has been made by the widow or next of kin; the court takes judicial notice of that fact.—Wilkinson v. Conaty, 65 Mich. 614.

¶ 105. A creditor's petition for administration need not state the nature and amount of the debt, nor that petitioner was a "principal" creditor.—Johnson v. Johnson's Estate, 96 Mich. 525.

¶ 106. A petition for the appointment of an administrator, which shows upon its face that the petitioner is not one of the persons to whom administration is required in the first instance to be granted, and which fails to show that the petitioner is a creditor of the estate, or that he has been requested by any of said persons to make said petition, confers no jurisdiction upon the probate court to grant letters of administration to the petitioner or to any other person, and an order for the sale of real estate made in the course of such an unauthorized administration, as also the sale made thereunder, is void.—Haug v. Primeau, 98 Mich. 91.

¶ 107. A petition for administration does not confer jurisdiction to appoint an administrator if it does not show that the petitioner is interested in the estate as next of kin, creditor or in some other capacity enumerated in Comp. L. 1871, § 4379 (How. St., § 5849).—Shipman v. Butterfield, 47 Mich. 487.

¶ 108. A woman died intestate leaving a husband and four minor children. The husband was a creditor to her estate, and applied for letters of administration, but the probate court issued them to a person who was neither a creditor nor a distributee, and did so on a petition filed by the intestate's brother and setting forth on its face that there were lawful distributees residing in the county, and that the petitioner was not interested. Held, that the petition negatived the jurisdiction, and that, in the absence of reasons for disregarding the petition of the husband, the appointment was void as against him (Comp. L., § 4379, subd. 3).—Breen v. Pangborn, 51 Mich. 29.

§ 26. ——For secondary, special or qualified letters.

Authority of representative under special or limited letters, see post § 49.
Procedure for appointment of temporary administrator, see Jud. Act, chap. LIII, §§ 22, 23, Comp. L. 1915, §§ 13840, 13841.
Application for letters of administration with will annexed or administration de bonis non, see Jud. Act, chap. LIII, § 18, Comp. L. 1915, § 13836.

¶ 109. The mere filing of a petition alleging facts sufficient to justify the issuance of letters de bonis non does not entitle the petitioner to the letters as of course. It is only upon making a prima facie case by proof that the court can lawfully act.—Owen v. Ward's Estate, 127 Mich. 698.

§ 27. Objections, answer and subsequent pleadings.

¶ 110. It is no objection to the appointment of an administrator that the petitioner —a judgment creditor—proposes to file a bill in equity to set aside, as fraudulent and void against himself, a deed executed by intestate; How. St., § 5884, expressly confers this right in certain cases, and without an administrator the remedy might be lost.—In re Nugent's Estate, 77 Mich. 500.

¶ 111. Where an answer to a petition for the appointment of an administrator attempts improperly to traverse the allegation that the intestate died possessed of real and personal property, an untenable demurrer thereto, on the ground that such allegation is not traversable, does not admit the non-possession of property, so as to make out the defense despite the bad answer and justify the probate court in denying the petition upon that ground.—Brooke's Estate, 110 Mich. 8.

§ 28. Notice and publication.

Affidavits of publication of notice, see post § 29.

Legality of newspapers for publication of notice, see Newspapers.

Execution and return of process in general, see Process, II.

¶ 112. The power to determine in what particular newspaper probate notices shall be published is vested by the statute in the probate court.—Lynch v. Wayne Probate Judge, 101 Mich. 171.

¶ 113. One who appears and contests an application for the appointment of an administrator cannot complain that the publication of the time and place of hearing was insufficient to confer jurisdiction upon the court to make the appointment.—In re Brooke's Estate, 110 Mich. 8.

¶ 114. Under Comp. Laws 1897, § 9340, an appointment of an administrator de bonis non and subsequent sale of the real estate is void where the order and notice of hearing on the appointment fixed the time for hearing as Monday, August 9, 1878, when Monday fell on August 5th, and the appointment was then made.—Kammerer v. Morlock, 125 Mich. 320.

§ 29. ——Affidavits of publication.

¶ 115. When notice of application for a judicial order is required to be published, Comp. L. 1871, § 5924, How. St., § 7497, authorizes the filing of an affidavit of its publication. Held, that a probate order appointing an administrator, and based on an affidavit, was invalid where the affidavit did not conform to the statute, since it is only by the statute that the affidavit has any force as evidence.—Gillett v. Needham, 37 Mich. 143.

¶ 116. Where by the statute proof of publication is allowed to be made by the affidavit of "the printer of any such paper, or his foreman or principal clerk," an affidavit only made by "a printer in the office of"—not naming any paper—is fatally defective.—Gillett v. Needham, 37 Mich. 143.

¶ 117. An affidavit stating that notice of hearing of application for letters was published once in each week for four successive weeks, giving date of first publication, sufficiently specifies times of publication. It need not state each date of publication.—Wilkinson v. Conaty, 65 Mich. 614; Feustmann v. Gott's Estate, 65 Mich. 592.

§ 30. Matters litigable on hearing.

¶ 118. Property rights cannot be litigated in proceedings to appoint an administrator.—In re Nugent's Estate, 77 Mich. 500.

¶ 119. Property rights arising under a will cannot be litigated in a proceeding attacking the appointment of an executor, pursuant to delegated power, and it cannot be contended that the parties attempting to sustain the appointment have no interest in the estate.—Brown v. Just, 118 Mich. 678.

¶ 120. Though a petition for administration shows that decedent's only property is a bequest in her behalf, it should be granted; whether the claim to such bequest is well founded or not cannot be litigated in the proceedings for an administrator's appointment.—In re McCarty's Appeal, 81 Mich. 460.

§ 31. Appointing order and letters.

Collateral attack on letters, see post § 32.

Persons entitled to attack or question appointment, see post § 33.

Letters as evidence of representative's authority, see post § 54.

Operation and force of letters out of state, see ante ¶ 75.

Appeals from order of appointment to circuit court, see Probate Courts, III; and see note, post § 197, explaining digest plan.

Writ of error from circuit judgment on appeal to supreme court, see Appeal.

Operation and effect of probate court decrees in general, see Probate Courts, III.

Decrees as judicial estoppels, see Former Adjudication.

Reviewableness of proceedings in circuit on appeal from appointment or removal of representative, see Appeal § 28.

Best and secondary evidence of appointment and character, see Evidence § 126.

Effect of grant of letters as adjudication of fact of relationship of holder to decedent, see also Death by Wrongful Act ¶ 64.

Jurisdiction of the various "superior" courts and other municipal courts, see Municipal Courts, II.

Mandamus as remedy for refusal to grant letters, see Mandamus, II.

Procedure when executor is under age, see Jud. Act, chap. LII, § 40, Comp. L. 1915, § 13812.

Appointment of administrator where estate consists of personalty of less than five hundred dollars in value, see Jud. Act, chap. LIII, § 25, Comp. L. 1915, § 13843.

¶ 121. The order appointing an administrator need not specify the relation which the person appointed holds to the estate.—Wilkinson v. Conaty, 65 Mich. 614.

§ 32. ——Collateral attack on letters.

See also post ¶¶ 178, 763, 1036.

Estoppel to question capacity of representative, see post § 53.

Competency of person granted letters as question open only on appeal, see also ante ¶ 96.

Presumption of jurisdiction on collateral attack on letters, see ante ¶ 33.

Collateral attack and conclusiveness of judgments in general, see Judgments, VII.

¶ 122. The regularity of the appointment of a special administrator cannot be inquired into collaterally.—Cook v. Stevenson, 30 Mich. 242.

¶ 123. The regularity of an order appointing an administrator will not be considered in a collateral proceeding, where the probate court has by subsequent proceedings treated it as valid.—Woods v. Monroe, 17 Mich. 238.

¶ 124. The action of the probate court in appointing an administrator is not open to collateral attack, but should be appealed from if not satisfactory.—Johnson v. Johnson's Estate, 66 Mich. 525.

¶ 125. An administrator's right to sue for a fatal injury to his decedent is sufficiently established as against strangers by the letters of administration granted him by the proper court; and in the case of one who, as decedent's widow, has been appointed administratrix, the legality of her marriage cannot be questioned in an action by her for an injury to her decedent.—James v. Emmet Min. Co., 55 Mich. 335.

¶ 126. The appointment by the probate court of an administrator cannot be assailed in a chancery suit to restrain an action at law by the administrator.—Crane v. Beedle, 95 Mich. 524.

¶ 127. Letters of administration which are valid cannot be collaterally attacked on the ground that there was no necessity for the appointment of the administrator.—Ormsbee v. Piper, 123 Mich. 265.

¶ 128. A decree of the probate court granting letters of administration cannot be collaterally attacked by testimony that the deceased was last seen alive during the month of the issuance of letters.—Benjamin v. Early, 123 Mich. 93.

¶ 129. The determination of the probate court that a judgment creditor of decedent was a party entitled to letters of administration, is not open to collateral attack by decedent's widow, in an action to restrain such proceedings, where the petition for administration was regular in form, and there was within the jurisdiction of the court an estate to be administered.—Ackerman v. Pfent, 145 Mich. 710.

¶ 130. Where an administrator sues in trover for the conversion of personal property, and his evidence reveals the fact that he has no right to sue as administrator, an order of a verdict for the defendant by the court does not constitute a collateral attack on the decision of the probate court appointing him administrator.—Diem v. Drogmiller, 158 Mich. 380.

§ 33. ——Persons entitled to attack or question appointment.

Right of one appearing and contesting appointment to question it, see also ante ¶ 113.

Estoppel of person administering to deny liability to account, see post ¶ 1061.

¶ 131. Although the appointment of an administrator cannot be inquired into collaterally by a stranger to the proceedings, parties whose interests are prejudiced may always take advantage of a want of jurisdiction.—Gillett v. Needham, 37 Mich. 143; Breen v. Pangborn, 51 Mich. 29.

¶ 132. Parties interested in the property left by an intestate can always object to the want of jurisdiction in the court which issues the letters of administration; but no one can intervene in the affairs of an estate unless he is authorized by law to do so, or is personally interested.—Breen v. Pangborn, 51 Mich. 29.

C. ASSUMING AND QUALIFYING FOR OFFICE, SECURITY AND BOND.

§ 34. In general.

¶ 133. Executors appointed by the probate court and who file a bond cannot bind the estate or the heirs of the testator, where letters testamentary were never issued nor an inventory or appraisal filed, or any of the steps taken that are usual and necessary in the settlement of estates, and it did not appear that they ever entered upon the discharge of the duties of executors.—Marsh v. Breen Iron Co., 181 Mich. 204.

§ 35. Necessity and sufficiency of bond.

Time for presentation and approval, see post § 36.

Justification on bond, see post § 37.

Liability on bonds, see post § 386.

Remedies and procedure on bonds, see post § 391.

Necessity and sufficiency of special bonds for sale of real estate, see post § 232.

Obligation, breach and liability on bonds of residuary legatees to dispense with further administration, see post § 388.

Sufficiency of probate bonds, see Jud. Act, chap. LXIII, §§ 1, 2, Comp. L. 1915, §§ 14119, 14120.

Bond of administrator, see Jud. Act, chap. LIII, § 3, Comp. L. 1915, § 13821.

When new or additional bond required, see Jud. Act, chap. LXIII, § 13, Comp. L. 1915, § 14131.

Bond of executor, see Jud. Act, chap. LII, §§ 36-39, Comp. L. 1915, §§ 13808-13811.

Bond of administrator with will annexed, see Jud. Act, chap. LII, § 41, Comp. L. 1915, § 13813.

Bond of special administrator, see Jud. Act, chap. LIII, § 7, Comp. L. 1915, § 13825.

Separate or joint bonds for executors, see Jud. Act, chap. LII, § 46, Comp. L. 1915, § 13818.

Joint or separate bond where two or more representatives appointed, see Jud. Act, chap. LIII, § 17, Comp. L. 1915, § 13835.
Bond to secure payment of funeral expenses on petition for appointment as administrator of intestate estate, see Jud. Act, chap. LIII, § 24, Comp. L. 1915, § 13842.

¶ 134. Comp. Laws 1897, § 311, How. 2nd Ed., § 11786, requiring an executor to give bond, is mandatory.—Chamberlain v. Husel, 178 Mich. 1.

¶ 135. Bond on executor's part is not required by statute on Michigan probate of foreign will.—Gray v. Franks, 86 Mich. 382.

¶ 136. Where the statute provides that an administrator shall give bond before letters are granted to him, and the letters granted are dated one day before the date of the bond, the presumption is that the probate court did not deliver the letters until after the date of the bond.—Brown v. Hannah, 152 Mich. 33.

¶ 137. An executor's bond covers all moneys received by him under color of his official authority.—Clark v. Fredenburg, 43 Mich. 263.

§ 36. ——Time for presentation and approval.
See also ante ¶ 136.

¶ 138. Where a statute provides that the administrator shall give bond before letters are issued to him, and the letters are issued by the court before such bond is given, but the bond is later supplied, the irregularity does not invalidate the appointment.—Brown v. Hannah, 152 Mich. 33.

§ 37. Justification on bond.
Liability of sureties and defenses open to sureties, see post §§ 389, 390.
Justification of sureties on bond of representative, see Prob. Ct. Rule 6.
Residence qualification of sureties on bond of representative, see Prob. Ct. Rule 6.

¶ 139. A probate judge cannot arbitrarily reject an administrator's bond, but he has the right to require the securities to justify if there is any reasonable doubt of their responsibility; and the supreme court will not interfere with such an exercise of discretion unless in a clear case of its abuse.—Carpenter v. Ottawa Probate Judge, 48 Mich. 318.

¶ 140. Executors' bonds are not such official bonds as will fall within the title of Laws 1885, Act No. 179, p. 244, "to provide that all sureties upon official bonds shall make justification, under oath, of their pecuniary responsibility." Nor are any probate bonds.—Bissell v. Durfee, 58 Mich. 237.

D. RESIGNATION OR DEATH, REMOVAL AND VACANCIES.

§ 38. Resignation, death, or vacancies in general.
Duty of representative to account after resignation, see post ¶ 1059.
Effect of removal of executor who has given bond as residuary legatee, see post ¶ 216
Administration de bonis non on resignation death or vacancy, see ante § 6.
Effect of death of representative to abate action, see Abatement §§ 2, 3.
Termination of agency for representative by latter's death, see Agency ¶ 73.
Removal or resignation of representative, see Jud. Act, chap. LIII, §§ 11, 12, Comp. L. 1915, §§ 13829, 13830.
Procedure on death of representative pending administration, see Jud. Act, chap. LIII, § 10, Comp. L. 1915, § 13828.

§ 39. Probate and equity jurisdiction.
Relative jurisdiction of probate and equity courts in general, see ante §§ 9-13.

¶ 141. The probate court has complete jurisdiction, and equity cannot interfere to remove administrators for breach of trust: Holbrook v. Campau, 22 Mich. 288; Kellogg v. Aldrich, 39 Mich. 576.

¶ 142. The court of chancery cannot remove an administrator for an abuse of his trust; its powers are limited to some purpose auxiliary to the relief sought in the court of probate, in which tribunal is vested complete jurisdiction over the subject.—Holbrook v. Campau, 22 Mich. 288.

§ 40. Grounds for removal.
Nonresidence or alienage, see post § 41.
Failure to file account as ground, see also post ¶ 147.
Representative's possession of property fraudulently conveyed by decedent as ground, see also post ¶ 157.
Necessity and sufficiency of alleging grounds for removal in petition, see post ¶¶ 154, 155.
Removal of representative for failure to render account, see Jud. Act, chap. LXII, § 10, Comp. L. 1915, § 14113.
Removal of executor, see Jud. Act, chap. LII, §§ 42, 43, Comp. L. 1915, §§ 13814, 13815.
Revocation of administration on proof of will, see Jud. Act, chap. LIII, § 14, Comp. L. 1915, § 13832.

¶ 143. The fact that one executor is a legatee while the other is a member of a partnership in which the testator was interested, is not grounds for their removal in order to permit the other legatees to file a bill for an accounting against the surviving partners because of the undervaluation of the testator's interest in the business.—In re Sloman's Estate, 186 Mich. 434, 440.

¶ 144. The probate court in Michigan is not bound to remove an ancillary administrator upon a showing that he has been removed as executor in the probate court of the deceased's domicile in a foreign state.—American Missionary Ass'n v. Hall, 138 Mich. 247.

¶ 145. The appointment as executor by the probate court of the attorney of the sole creditor of the estate, who has a claim equal to four-fifths the entire assets, is not so improper as to call for removal.—In re Rice's Estate, 158 Mich. 53.

¶ 146. The widow is entitled, under section 9324, Comp. Laws 1897, to the first right of appointment as administratrix, and cannot be removed upon petition of a creditor of the estate unless such creditor is without another and complete remedy.—McFarlan v. McFarlan, 155 Mich. 652.

§ 41. ——Nonresidence or alienage.

Sufficiency of notice of removal proceedings on nonresident representative, see post ¶ 155.

¶ 147. Where an executor changes his residence to another state, removes the funds of the estate out of the jurisdiction of the court, and fails for more than two years to file with the probate court any account of his dealings with the estate, ample ground is afforded for his removal.—In re Rice's Estate, 158 Mich. 53.

¶ 148. Nonresidence is not of itself a sufficient reason for the removal in a foreign jurisdiction of an administrator whose powers are merely ancillary there, but who is also the principal administrator at the domicile of the intestate; the petition for removal must show that the nonresidence prejudices the petitioner's interest.—White v. Spaulding, 50 Mich. 22.

§ 42. Persons entitled to petition removal.

Nature and requisites of procedure in general, see ante § 7.

¶ 149. A petition for the removal of an administrator must purport to have been made by persons interested; and if one signs the name of another to the petition he must show his authority for doing so.—White v. Spaulding, 50 Mich. 22.

¶ 150. The widow of an intestate whose administrator was given ancillary powers over property supposed to have been left in another jurisdiction from that in which he was domiciled when he died has no interest in petitioning a probate court in the foreign jurisdiction to remove the administrator, especially if her petition does not allege the existence of real property there.—White v. Spaulding, 50 Mich. 22.

¶ 151. Persons merely claiming to be principal creditors of an intestate who died in a foreign domicile do not make a sufficient showing of interest to sustain their petition to a probate court in Michigan for the removal, for neglect of duty, of an administrator who was given ancillary powers over property supposed to be left within its jurisdiction, especially if the letters of administration were taken out seven years before the petition was filed, and the records of the court do not show that any claims have ever been allowed in the petitioners' favor, and their petition is the first notification to the administrator that they claim to be creditors of the intestate.—White v. Spaulding, 50 Mich. 22.

§ 43. Petition and procedure on removal.

Notice of hearing, see post § 44.
Hearing, issues and order, see post § 45.

¶ 152. A petition for removal of an administrator is insufficient if it is not presented by persons interested.—White v. Spaulding, 50 Mich. 22.

¶ 153. The mere allegation, in a petition for removal, that the petitioner is a creditor, is not enough to establish the fact, even for the purposes of the petition, without showing by what instrument or contract he became so, or making some prima facie showing in support of the claim.—White v. Spaulding, 50 Mich. 22.

¶ 154. A petition for the removal of an administrator "for nonperformance of his duty" is fatally defective in that the allegation of cause is not specific enough to put the administrator on his defense. Nor is it sufficient to merely allege neglect and refusal to perform the orders of the court without being more specific; or to allege delay without showing that the petitioner had tried to expedite proceedings.—White v. Spaulding, 50 Mich. 22.

§ 44. ——Notice.

¶ 155. Notice of proceedings to remove an administrator who lives in a foreign jurisdiction, and whose residence is known, should be personally served on him and on the heir at law.—White v. Spaulding, 50 Mich. 22.

¶ 156. Where a proceeding to remove an administrator is fatally defective and an amended petition is filed, the proceedings on the amended petition must be taken precisely as if it were the first step, and the heir at law and the administrator must have full notice.—White v. Spaulding, 50 Mich. 22.

§ 45. ——Hearing, issues and order.

Note relating to appeals from orders of probate court, see post § 197.
Appeals to circuit court from order of removal, see Probate Courts, III.
Writ of error from circuit court judgment on appeal to supreme court, see Appeal.

¶ 157. Upon a petition by a creditor of an estate for the removal of the administratrix on the ground that she holds property conveyed to her by deceased in fraud of creditors, the court will not pass upon the validity to the deed, this being a proper question for the court in chancery upon a bill to set the deed aside.—McFarlan v. McFarlan, 155 Mich. 652.

IV. STATUS AND AUTHORITY OF REPRESENTATIVES, AND TITLES IN THE ESTATE.

A. IN GENERAL.

§ 46. Status, relationship, powers and duties.

Fiduciary character of functions, see post § 47.

Authority of representative to contract or deal for estate, see post §§ 55, 56.

Right and title of representative in property of estate, see post §§ 57-66.

Authority and right of representative to collect or sue for assets, see post, V, B.

Authority and right of representative respecting management, custody and disposal of estate, see post, V, E.

Authority of representative over real property, see post §§ 125-136.

Debts and liabilities resting on representative, see post, VI, B.

Duty and authority of representative to pay debts, see post, VI, D.

Duty and authority of representative to resort to sale or mortgage of lands to pay debts, see post, VII.

Personal liability of representative to creditors, see post, IX.

Rights and liabilities of representative in dealing with shares and properties of estate, see post, X, A.

Status of representative as creditor of estate, see post, X, B.

Acccountability for rents, profits and interest and losses or depreciation, see post, X, C.

Compensation, allowances and reimbursement of representatives, see post, X, D.

Status, duties and accountability of corepresentatives, see post, X, E.

Authority of executors de son tort and intermeddlers, see post, X, F.

Authority and duty to sue or defend in general, see post, XI.

Duty to render accounting and settlement, see post, XII.

Duty to make distribution and payment of shares, see post, XIII.

Right to and effect of discharge, see post §§ 383-385.

Duty of representative respecting inventory and appraisal, see post § 103.

Authority and duty of representative to annul decedent's fraudulent transfers, see post §§ 97-101.

Torts and frauds of representative as debt of estate, see post § 156.

Right of representative to purchase claims against estate, see post § 159.

Authority of representative to assign or transfer claim for compensation, see post § 294.

Authority of representative to clear title or remove clouds therefrom, see post § 310.

Effect of agreement for settlement on rights and authority of representative in later proceedings, see ante § 3.

Right of representative who was removed for failure to pay debts to object to delay in sale of realty, see post ¶ 739.

Power and status of representative appointed by court but never receiving letters, see ante ¶ 133.

Effect of acts of representative before appointment on rights of estate, see post ¶¶ 372, 373.

Power of representative to form partnership with surviving partner, see Partnership, I.

Right to vote stock in name of decedent, see Corporations § 65.

Privity between decedent or heirs and personal representative for purpose of applying bar or conclusiveness of judgment, see Former Adjudication, V.

Duty of executor to present will to probate court, liability for failure, and procedure thereon, see Jud. Act, chap. LII, § 5 et seq., Comp. L. 1915, § 13777 et seq.

Authority of executors where several designated in will but part only qualified to act, see Jud. Act, chap. LII, § 44, Comp. L. 1915, § 13816.

Authority of executor of executor, see Jud. Act, chap. LII, § 45, Comp. L. 1915, § 13817.

Validity of acts of representative before revocation of letters, see Jud. Act, chap. LIII, § 16, Comp. L. 1915, § 13834.

Powers of representative appointed as successor, see Jud. Act, chap. LIII, § 13, Comp. L. 1915, § 13831.

¶ 158. An executor or administrator is a mere officer of the law with no personal interest in the property intrusted to him; his powers are all statutory, and he is accountable for the due and proper execution of them.—Hatheway v. Weeks, 34 Mich. 237.

¶ 159. An administrator cannot in law be regarded as the agent of any single person interested in the estate, notwithstanding the evidence is strong that he favors that person's interest. In a suit between him and a third party, his intention faithfully to discharge his trust is to be assumed, even though an heir at law against whom such third party has equities was active in securing his appointment and advising the suit.—McKinney v. Miller, 19 Mich. 142.

¶ 160. An executor's duties as such are closed, except for the adjustment of his account, when he has paid the funeral expenses, debts and legacies, and nothing remains but the division of the residue. Any further acts in respect to the estate are done as donee of a power in trust.—Calkins v. Smith's Estate, 41 Mich. 409.

§ 47. Fiduciary character of functions.

See also post ¶¶ 501, 849.

Fiduciary title of representative in personalty, see post § 58.

Necessity of notice to all persons interested in estate of claim filed by representative against estate, see post § 169.

Nature of trusts in general, see Trusts, I.

Testamentary trustees, see Wills, VI, F.

¶ 161. While an administrator cannot be classed, in the technical sense, as a trustee holding legal title to real estate and the primary use of it in trust for another, yet his control involves fiduciary and confidential trust relations.—Parks v. Brooks, 188 Mich. 645.

¶ 162. The estate of the administrator in the personal property of his intestate is a trust created for the purpose of laying hold of the estate to make distribution to the persons entitled.—Brobst v. Brobst, 190 Mich. 63.

¶ 163. An administrator is a trustee of the assets that come into his hands for the benefit of all interested therein.—Pierce v. Holzer, 65 Mich. 263.

¶ 164. The care, prudence and judgment which the man of fair business capacity and ability brings to bear in the transaction of his own business furnish the standard that governs the administrator in performing his trust duties.—Loomis v. Armstrong, 63 Mich. 355.

§ 48. Individual or representative acts or capacity.

Suits brought in representative or individual name or capacity as party, see post § 321.

Acts and representations in representative capacity as estoppels, see Estoppel § 54.

Estoppel as individual, effect in representative capacity, see Estoppel § 54.

Construction of deed to determine whether party was such as individual or as representative, see Deeds § 19.

¶ 165. An administratrix, who is also the widow, who continues in possession of real estate for many years after the death of the husband under a statute which gives no right of possession to the administratrix as such is presumed to have been in possession under her rights of dower and homestead and is not chargeable with rents and profits.—Russell v. Wheeler, 129 Mich. 41.

§ 49. Special or other limited letters.

Necessity and occasion for special administration, see ante § 5.

Necessity and occasion for administration de bonis non, see ante § 6.

Status and rights of special administrator in equity, see also ante ¶ 49.

Authority and right of special administrator to collect or sue for assets, see post § 85.

Right and authority of administrator de bonis non to collect or sue for assets, see post § 85.

Petition for special or other limited letters, see ante § 26.

Collateral attack on appointment of special administrator, see ante ¶ 122.

Authority of administrator de bonis non to bring probate proceedings to discover assets, see also post ¶ 276.

Authority of special administrator to rescind transfers fraudulently obtained from decedent, see also post ¶ 284.

Authority of administrator de bonis non to set aside mortgage, see also post ¶ 308.

Defenses open to administrator de bonis non on suit for nonpayment of claims, see post ¶ 474.

Right and authority of special administrator to represent estate on hearing of claims, see also post ¶¶ 541, 542.

Authority of administrator de bonis non in staying execution against insolvent estate, see post ¶¶ 665, 666.

Sufficiency of petition of administrator de bonis non for license to sell realty to pay debts, see post ¶ 709.

Authority of administrator de bonis non against intermeddler, see also post ¶ 974.

Authority of special representative or administrator de bonis non to sue or defend in ejectment, see also post ¶¶ 990, 991.

Authority of special representative to make a compromise, see also post ¶ 1012.

Accountability of special representative for variance in account from property receipted for, see post ¶ 1092.

Powers and duties of special administrators, see Jud. Act, chap. LIII, §§ 5-8, Comp. L. 1915, §§ 13823-13826.

¶ 166. A special administrator has no power to pay either himself or another, as attorney for some of the heirs in a contest over the will, his duty being simply to conserve the estate ready to be turned over to the regularly appointed administrator when appointed (section 9326, Comp. Laws 1897).—Zimmer v. Saier, 155 Mich. 388.

§ 50. Joint representatives' authority and mode of action.

Accountability for corepresentatives and predecessors, see post, X, E.

Compensation of corepresentatives, joint representatives and successors, see post § 292.

Authority of one of several representatives on sale of real estate, see also post ¶ 770.

¶ 167. Under Comp. L. 1897, § 9386, one of two administrators may appeal from an order allowing claims, although his coadministrator withholds his consent to such appeal.—Hammond v. Wayne Circuit Judge, 140 Mich. 371.

¶ 168. A foreclosure by advertisement by executors is not invalidated by the fact that only two out of three executors acted, if these two acted under proper authority and there is no showing that the third ever gave an official bond or qualified.—Alexander v. Rice, 52 Mich. 451.

§ 51. Authority of foreign representative.

Jurisdictional rights under foreign administration, see ante §§ 15-17.

Recognition and title of foreign representatives, see post §§ 64, 65.

Compensation of foreign representatives, see post § 293.

Rights of representatives under foreign probate, see Conflict of Laws § 32.

Effect and conclusiveness of judgments by or against foreign representatives, see Foreign Judgments, II.

Writ of error in name of Michigan representatives of foreign testator on foreign probate, see Appeal ¶ 363.

Right of foreign representative to file authenticated copy of his appointment, see Jud. Act, chap. LIX, § 34, Comp. L. 1915, § 14020.

Right of foreign representative to sell real estate, see Jud. Act. chap. LIX, § 35, Comp. L. 1915, § 14021.

¶ 169. An executor or administrator appointed in another state has not, as such, any authority beyond the sovereignty by virtue of whose laws he was appointed.—Colvin v. Jones, 194 Mich. 670.

¶ 170. Comity in the recognition of a foreign administrator is determinable by statute, or by usage as evidenced by judicial decisions.—Reynolds v. McMullen, 55 Mich. 568.

¶ 171. Proceedings by a foreign administrator under proper letters of administration cannot be attacked collaterally; but nothing can be presumed in favor of an administration that has not been judicially ordered.—Reynolds v. McMullen, 55 Mich. 568.

¶ 172. The force of a grant of administration is confined to the jurisdiction granting it; a person appointed administrator in another state cannot, as such administrator, bring suit in this state.—Vickery v. Beir, 16 Mich. 50.

§ 52. Representative's right to defend his authority.

Proceedings for removal of representative, see ante §§ 42-45.

¶ 173. An executor, whether named in the will or by delegated power has a right to defend his authority to act in the courts.—Brown v. Just, 118 Mich. 678.

§ 53. Estoppel to question capacity.

Estoppel of person administering to deny liability to account, see post ¶ 1061.

Estoppel of representative to bring trover for stock certificate because of indorsement before appointment, see also post ¶ 267.

Estoppel as individual, effect on representative capacity and vice versa, see Estoppel, II, III, C.

¶ 174. One who without authority assumes to administer is estopped from denying representative character when called to account.—Damouth v. Klock, 29 Mich. 289.

¶ 175. Where persons who are appointed as executors and also as trustees under a will take possession of corporate stock as executors, charge themselves with it as executors, inventory and appraise it as an asset of the estate, continue to hold it in the name of the estate, untransferred, collect dividends paid to them as executors by checks drawn in favor of the estate, indorse checks as executors, and deposit them in a bank to the estate's account and as executors draw checks on such account in distributing dividends to the beneficiaries and never qualify as trustees, are estopped to claim that they hold such stock in any other capacity than that of executors.—Wessborg v. Merrill, 195 Mich. 556.

¶ 176. A defendant who has appealed in an administrator's name from a decision of commissioners on claims, and has defended the appeal in such name, cannot, when sued by the administrator seeking to collect the estate to pay claims, question the administrator's title to the office.—Farrand v. Caton, 69 Mich. 235.

§ 54. Letters or other evidence of authority.

Proof of representative capacity by general reputation, see also post ¶ 1034.

Letters as evidence of authority in action by representative, see also post ¶ 1035.

Admissibility of letters notwithstanding admission of representative capacity of plaintiff, see also Evidence ¶ 394.

Necessity of proof of executorship of grantee to make his deed as such admissible, see also Evidence ¶ 2583.

Certificate of foreign appointment as proof, see Evidence ¶ 2791.

Necessity of letters to sustain proxy by executors to vote stock, see Corporations ¶ 233.

¶ 177. In a suit by an administrator under How. St., § 5884, to recover real estate conveyed by decedent in fraud of creditors, his letters of administration are admissible in evidence to show his representative character, and he need not go back of such letters to show his official title.—Ferrand v. Caton, 69 Mich. 235.

¶ 178. Letters of administration and the presentation of administratrix's claim to the common council were properly admitted in evidence, in an action against a city for the death of her intestate, where the declaration, brought in the name of such administratrix, alleged her due appointment as such administratrix and her presentation to the city of her claim as such administratrix as provided by the city charter, and where the proofs showed that while her bond bore the date February 27th, it was approved and left in the clerk's office not later than February 26th, that her claim was filed with the clerk of the common council on February 26th and was acted upon by such council in March following; although objected to by opposing counsel on the ground that such letters were issued before her bond was filed and that when the claim was presented she was not administratrix.—Warn v. City of Flint, 140 Mich. 573.

B. CONTRACTING AND DEALINGS FOR ESTATE.

§ 55. In general.

Management use and application of properties, see post § 117.
Right to borrow money, see post § 56.
Right and authority of representative to petition for street improvement, see post ¶ 204.
Authority of representative to pay interest on unallowed claim to defer foreclosure sale, see also post ¶ 220.
Authority of representative to assign right of suit for decedent's fraudulent transfers, see post ¶ 294.
Authority of representative to warrant personalty on making sale of it, see also post ¶ 388.
Purchase by representative of claims against creditors for use as set-offs, see post ¶ 472.
Authority of representative to secure agreement to bid from prospective purchaser at sale of realty, see also post ¶ 726.
Dealings for estate by person other than representative, see post, V, F.
Surrender of assets to heir as consideration for heir's promise to executor, see Contracts § 114, ¶ 484.
Continuation of liquor business by personal representative of deceased licensed dealer, see Intoxicating Liquors, II, C.

¶ 179. An executor has no power in or of himself to bind the estate by contract, even for the necessities of infant devisees, since the probate court has an ear always open to these necessities and must be consulted as to whether they exist.—Roscoe v. McDonald, 91 Mich. 270.

¶ 180. Acceptance of goods by the administrator of a deceased purchaser cannot ratify an oral contract of sale that is already void under the statute of frauds; nor can the administrator make contracts for his intestate.—Smith v. Brennan, 62 Mich. 349.

§ 56. Right to borrow money.

¶ 181. Under How. St., § 6105, which provides that an administrator may borrow money to pay debts against the estate, money may be borrowed to pay a mortgage on decedent's property, even though such mortgage was not given by the decedent, it being, nevertheless, a "debt against the estate."—In re Lambie's Estate, 94 Mich. 489.

C. TITLE AND RIGHTS IN PROPERTY OF ESTATE.

§ 57. In general.

Authority and title of representative of decedent representative, see ante ¶¶ 28, 29.
Title of residuary legatee as executor, see post § 66.
Estoppel sufficient to cut off title as representative, see also Estoppel § 54.
Validity against heirs or next of kin of stock voting by representative, see also Corporations ¶ 233.

¶ 182. An administrator is, under our probate system, a mere officer of the law, and though his title to the assets of the estate relates back to the death of the intestate, yet it is an official title which cannot be affected to the prejudice of the estate by any acts of his prior to his appointment; nor will it be affected by any estoppel that does not rest on equities against the estate.—Gilkey v. Hamilton, 22 Mich. 283.

§ 58. Title and interest in personalty.

Possession of personalty, see post § 59.
Right and title in mortgages, see post § 60.
Fiduciary character of representative, see ante § 47.
Right of legatees to possession of specific bequests, see post § 362, ¶¶ 1148-1150.

¶ 183. The legal estate only in personal property vests in the administrator; the equitable estate is in the heirs or other persons entitled to distributive shares thereof.—Foote v. Foote, 61 Mich. 181.

¶ 184. On the death of an intestate the title to his personalty does not vest in the next of kin, but remains in abeyance until the appointment of an administrator, and then vests in him in trust, in his official capacity, as of the time of such death; and he is entitled to the possession of such assets, and to the management of the property for the purposes of the trust.—In re Palmer's Appeal, 1 D. 422; Cullen v. O'Hara, 4 Mich. 132; Wales v. Newbould, 9 Mich. 45; Morton v. Preston, 18 Mich. 60; Gilkey v. Hamilton, 22 Mich. 283; Albright v. Cobb, 30 Mich. 355; Miller v. Clark, 56 Mich. 337.

¶ 185. The legal title to personalty is held in abeyance on the death of its owner, until the appointment of an administrator, in whom the title then vests for the purposes of administration.—Powell v. Pennock, 181 Mich. 588.

¶ 186. The equitable title to personalty on the death of its owner, vests in his heirs, subject to the rights of creditors and the expenses of administration.—Powell v. Pennock, 181 Mich. 588.

¶ 187. The legal estate in the personal property of an intestate vests in the administrator, the equitable estate being in the heirs or distributees.—Brobst v. Brobst, 190 Mich. 63.

¶ 188. The title to the personal effects of an intestate remains in abeyance till the appointment of an administrator, when such title vests in the administrator as of the date of the death of intestate, and such administrator is thereupon entitled to the possession of such effects, to be managed for the purposes of the trust.—Brobst v. Brobst, 190 Mich. 63.

¶ 189. The general rule is that title to personal property of a decedent, testate or intestate, vests in the personal representative until administration is completed and the estate is fully settled and distributed, or until he chooses or is forced to part with it earlier.—In re Reidy's Estate, 164 Mich. 167; Shattuck v. Watson, Id.

§ 59. Possession of personalty.

Authority of representative to take possession of personalty, see post § 83.

Right of possession of person other than representative, see post, V, F.

Right to possession of chattels held under life tenancy on death of life tenant, see Life Estates, II.

Representative's right to possession of personalty, see Jud. Act, chap. LIV, § 5, Comp. L. 1915, § 13849.

¶ 190. The statute does not make it imperative upon the administrator to take possession of the intestate's personalty; it only empowers him to do so. It is not expected that he will disturb the possession of decedent's family except so far as the proper discharge of his duties may require.—Brown v. Forsche, 43 Mich. 492; and see Howard v. Patrick, 38 Mich. 795.

¶ 191. A general administrator is entitled to the possession and control of all the personalty, including money and securities, of which his intestate died in possession; and this includes property covered by a bill of sale from him, but never delivered.—Palmer v. Palmer, 55 Mich. 293.

¶ 192. Comp. L. 1871, § 4407, providing that the executor or administrator shall be entitled to the possession of the personal estate of the deceased, until assignment or distribution of the same to the persons entitled thereto, by order of the probate court, or until the estate is finally settled, simply empowers the personal representative to take possession of the estate and does not require him to do so.—McDermott v. Copeland, 9 Fed. 536.

§ 60. Right and title in mortgages.

¶ 193. Mortgages, being part of the personal estate, belong to the personal representatives of the mortgagee after his death, and not to his heirs.—Abbott v. Godfroy's Heirs, 1 Mich. 178.

¶ 194. Under R. S. 1838, p. 285, pt. 2, tit. 4, chap. 3, § 10, unforeclosed mortgages belonging to the estates of deceased persons were made personal assets, and the right there recognized as belonging to the mortgagee, his executor or administrator, to take possession of the mortgaged premises, is one that did not descend to the heirs of the mortgagee; deeds of such heirs could not transfer the mortgage interest of the deceased, at least without a showing that the estate had been administered and settled and the debts paid, and that such mortgage had, upon a final distribution, been conveyed to them.—Albright v. Cobb, 30 Mich. 355.

¶ 195. A mortgage executed subject to the provisions of R. S. 1838, p. 285, pt. 2, tit. 4, chap. 3 § 10, did not, even after forfeiture for nonpayment, convey the legal estate to the mortgagee to the extent of making the mortgagee's interest descendible to heirs instead of executors and administrators.—Albright v. Cobb, 30 Mich. 355.

¶ 196. Under the amendments (Laws 1843, p. 139, R. S. 1846, chap. 71, § 12), to the provisions in R. S. 1838, p. 285, pt. 2, tit. 4, chap. 3, § 10, while the right of possession is taken away, executors and administrators have always had the right to enforce payment or release a foreclosure or convey mortgages of the deceased, and the heirs, as such, have no power over them or right to dispose of them or to maintain an action in respect to them.—Albright v. Cobb, 30 Mich. 355.

§ 61. Rights and interest in realty.

See also post ¶ 405.

Rents, issues and profits, see post § 62.

Title to lands bought by representative, see post § 63.

Right to possession to realty before recourse for payment of debts, see post § 226.

Occasion and propriety of recourse to lands for payment of debts, see post §§ 222-226.

Right to ejectment and possessory actions for lands, see post § 308.

Right to possession of realty by person other than representative, see post, V, F.

Rights of executors in land as dependent on law of place, see Conflict of Laws § 32.

Disability of administrator to make dedication for lack of title in him, see Dedication § 3.

Representative's right to possession of realty, see Jud. Act, chap. LIV, § 6, Comp. L. 1915, § 13850.

Title of administrator or executor as trustee for heirs where deed is made to him as successor of purchaser at execution sale pursuant to statute, see Jud. Act, chap. XXIII, § 118; Comp. L. 1915, § 12933.

¶ 197. Comp. L. 1857, § 2904, conferring right to possession, did not create an intervening estate between that of the ancestor and the heir converting the heir's estate into one of expectancy.—Campau v. Campau, 19 Mich. 116.

¶ 198. An administrator, either general or special, has no interest in the real estate, and no right to the possession thereof, except where there is insufficient personal property to pay the debts and expenses of administration.—Pratt v. Millard, 154 Mich. 112.

¶ 199. An heir at law may recover in ejectment his undivided interest in the lands of which his ancestor died seized, as against the administrator of the ancestor's estate, where the administrator shows no authority from the probate court to take possession of the realty.—Warren v. Tobey, 32 Mich. 45.

¶ 200. The administrator's right of possession was not one of which the probate court had exclusive jurisdiction, or since the amendment of 1871, Laws 1871, p. 80, taking away the right, any jurisdiction at all, and was held to be no defense to an application for a writ of possession under a decree in a partition suit.—Campau v. Campau, 25 Mich. 127.

¶ 201. An executor in possession of land, who for several years has had entire control of the property without objection, and who is acting under the direction of the probate court, is presumably rightly in possession.—City of Detroit v. Schilling, 93 Mich. 429.

¶ 202. The real estate referred to by R. S. 1846, chap. 71, § 7, and successive later statutes giving the administrator right of possession of lands, includes only such lands as belonged to and were left by the decedent, and not to lands bid in by the administrator or executor on mortgages and executions, which are covered by Comp. L. 1871, §§ 4112-4115. Of the latter the administrator has the same right of possession as of personalty.—Kunzie v. Wixom, 39 Mich. 384.

¶ 203. Laws of 1881, Act No. 236 (How. St. § 5875), authorizing administrators to take possession of the real estate of their decedents, is not retroactive in its terms, and does not operate to give the right as against the heirs of a person whose estate was in administration before the passage of the statute, and whose heirs and devisees had already become vested with the interests to which they were entitled.—Van Fleet v. Van Fleet, 49 Mich. 610.

¶ 204. An administrator cannot bind the estate by signing a petition for the improvement of a street upon which his decedent's land abuts, and his signature to a petition for the improvement of a street which is the boundary line between the city and township cannot be counted upon as making a majority of the resident property holders.—Aplin, Auditor-General v. Fisher, 84 Mich. 128.

§ 62. ——Rents, issues and profits.

Right to rents and profits in course of management, see post § 131.

Right to crops of purchaser at representative's sale, see post § 247.

Accountability of representative for rents, profits and issues, see post § 278.

Collection of rents and profits and proceeds of land, see post § 92.

Evidence as to title to growing crop, see post ¶ 328.

Rents and current income as assets of estate, see post § 70.

Vested character of right of representative to have possession of lands and to take rents, etc., see Constitutional Law § 246, ¶ 1051.

Right to rents and profits where estate exceeds homestead exemption but is incapable of partition, see Homesteads, VII.

¶ 205. In proceedings to condemn a testator's land for railroad purposes, notice and payment of damages to the life tenant and executrix only, held sufficient under Rev. St. 1846, p. 288, § 7, providing that the executor or administrator during administration shall have a right to the possession of real estate, and may receive the rents, issues and profits thereof.—Barlage v. Detroit, G. H. & M. R. Co., 54 Mich. 564.

¶ 206. As between the heirs and the administrator, the latter is entitled to crops growing on lands of the deceased.—McGee v. Walker, 106 Mich. 521.

¶ 207. Trover lies against executors who unnecessarily enter land held by devisee and take crops that were growing thereon when testator died.—Rough v. Womer, 76 Mich. 375.

§ 63. Title to lands bought by representative.

¶ 208. An administrator who bids in land at a foreclosure sale to protect the lien of a second mortgage held by the estate acquires the same title against third parties as any other purchaser, and the fact that the land may be or is treated as personal estate in the distribution of the estate does not affect his holding; he acquires the fee, and can dispose of it by deed, which will convey the same title as that of any other purchaser.—Watson v. Grand Rapids & I. R. Co., 91 Mich. 198.

§ 64. Recognition and title of foreign representatives.

Mortgages and mortgage debts of other states, see post § 65.

Authority and status of foreign representative, see ante § 51.

Jurisdictional rights under foreign administration, see ante §§ 15-17.

Right of foreign representative to sell real estate, see Jud. Act, chap. LIX, § 35, Comp. L. 1915, § 14021.

¶ 209. A foreign administrator has no interest in the real or personal property of his intestate in this state.—Thayer v. Lane, W. 200.

¶ 210. Where a foreign executor is by terms of the will entitled to a claim against another estate, he may present such claim for payment even though ancillary letters in Michigan have not yet issued on a petition for them: since the ancillary probate could only furnish evidence of his title and did not confer it.—Feustmann v. Gott's Estate, 65 Mich. 592.

¶ 211. Michigan letters of administration cannot give administrators control over Illinois lands.—Sheldon v. Rice, 30 Mich. 296.

§ 65. ——Mortgages and mortgage debts of other state.

¶ 212. An assignment by a foreign executor of a mortgage upon Michigan land and of its accompanying note is ineffectual.—McIntire v. Conrad, 93 Mich. 526.

[Note. In the foregoing case the foreign executor was bequeathed the mortgagee's estate as residuary legatee and was also appointed executor in the domicile. He took out ancillary letters in Michigan and assigned the note and mortgage to himself as residuary legatee. Before that the foreign will was allowed in Michigan. The case is therefore authority that even a residuary legatee, who is also executor abroad cannot pass title to a mortgage debt.]

¶ 213. Where a mortgage upon Michigan lands belongs to one who dies in another state, title thereto belongs to the administrator appointed here, and no foreign administrator can sell the claim to strangers.—Reynolds v. McMullen, 55 Mich. 568.

¶ 214. Where a mortgage upon real property in Michigan belongs to a person who dies in another state, and whose estate is in course of regular and valid administration under a local administrator in Michigan, no foreign administrator can sell the mortgage claim to strangers; since by virtue of the statutes the title thereto is in the local administrator for purposes of administration, and only he can sue on it or assign or discharge it of record.—Reynolds v. McMullen, 55 Mich. 568.

¶ 215. The public administrator at St. Louis, Missouri, acting without the authority of the court, took possession of the personal assets of a resident bachelor who died there, leaving heirs in Michigan. Among the assets was a mortgage on Michigan land, which the administrator sold at considerable loss and which a subsequent holder released. An administrator previously appointed in Michigan proceeded, however, to foreclose the mortgage. Held, that even if the public administrator had had authority under the laws of Missouri to take possession of the assets, he had none to sell the mortgage.—Reynolds v. McMullen, 55 Mich. 568.

¶ 215a. A foreign administrator cannot assign a mortgage on Michigan land for the purpose of foreclosing it, nor can he discharge it; new letters must be taken out within the state before the mortgage can be foreclosed and the land sold; since a mortgage in Michigan is a conveyance (How. St., § 5689), and cannot be foreclosed under the power of sale until it is recorded (How. St., § 8948); and any assignment of it for the purpose of foreclosure must also be of record and so must the assignor's authority.—Reynolds v. McMullen, 55 Mich. 568.

§ 66. Title of residuary legatee as executor.

Effect of bond by residuary legatee as executor, see post § 220.

Obligation, breach and liability on bonds of residuary legatees to dispense with further administration, see post § 388.

Authority of residuary legatee as executor to mortgage property of estate, see post ¶ 800.

Necessity for inventory or account by residuary legatee as executor, see post ¶ 330.

Requisites and sufficiency of deed conveying title of executor as residuary legatee, see post ¶ 425.

Extension of time for payment of legacies by executor as residuary legatee where payment required under will, see post ¶ 1147.

Bond when executor is residuary legatee, see Jud. Act. chap. LII, § 37, Comp. L. 1915, § 13809.

¶ 216. The title of a residuary legatee and executor, who has given the statutory bond to pay debts and has taken possession of the estate, is not absolute but subject to the payment of debts; and he may as executor sell real estate for that purpose without license from the probate court; and if such residuary legatee is removed as executor the title revests in the estate as unadministered assets, while the administrator may cause the land on application to be sold for debts.—Lafferty v. People's Savings Bank, 76 Mich. 35.

V. PROPERTY AND ASSETS.

A. IN GENERAL; WHAT INCLUDED.

§ 67. Personal or real property in general.

Debts, claims and contracts owing decedent, see post § 68.
Money orders, bills, notes and deposits, see post § 69.
Rents, royalties and current income, see post § 70.
Contracts payable "to heirs" or "assigns," see post § 71.
Debt of representative as asset, see post § 72.
Share of decedent in another estate, see post § 73.
Life insurance and action for wrongful death, see post §§ 74, 75.
Right of action for tort to property, see post § 76.
Property right in occupational or business license, see post § 77.
Property in possession of others, see post § 78.
Property held by other spouse or jointly owned, see post § 79.
Equitable assets, see post § 80.
Goods held as agent, bailee or trustee, see post § 81.
Unadministered assets, see post § 82.
Rents, issues and profits of realty as assets, see also ante § 62.
Growing crops as assets of estate, see also ante ¶¶ 206, 207.
Authority and right to collect and sue for assets in general, see post, V, B.
Inventory and appraisal of assets, see post, V, C.
Management, custody and disposal of assets and property of estates see post, V, E.
Title and rights of representative in assets of estate, see ante §§ 57-66.
Possession and dealings with assets and property by person other than representative, see post, V, F.
Rule that real estate descends direct to heirs, see Descent § 20.
Right of survivorship in property owned jointly with decedent, see Tenants in Common, II.
Partnership property, see Partnership, III.
Nature of representative's interest in partnership assets pending payment of partnership debts, see Partnership, III.
Dissolution, settlement and accounting of partnership and effect of dissolution as to surviving and deceased partners, see Partnership, VII, D.
Rights of deceased partner in general, see Partnership, IV.
Whether dower interest is asset of estate of deceased husband or can be sold by or released to administrator for benefit of estate, see Dower ¶ 9.
Interest in mortgaged premises as personalty in hands of representative, see Jud. Act, chap. LIV, § 11, Comp. L. 1915, § 13855.

¶ 217. At common law lands were not assets in the hands of an administrator except as they were subjected to his authority by the order of a competent court.—Sheldon v. Rice's Estate, 30 Mich. 296; and see Manning v. Drake, 1 Mich. 34.

§ 68. Debts, claims and contracts owing decedent.

Contracts payable to "heirs or assigns," see post § 71.
Share in assets of old corporation as chose recoverable from new one which took them, see Corporations ¶¶ 1146, 1147.
Nature of interest of decedent in land contract, see also Descent § 7.

¶ 218. Additional salary to which a circuit judge was entitled under an amendment to the constitution and paid to his administrator under a statute passed after his death appropriating money for the payment of the increase, is assets of the estate.—Joslyn v. Joslyn, 117 Mich. 442.

¶ 219. Where a father executes a will devising a farm to his son as security for the making of permanent improvements, consisting of a barn and addition to the house, and, after the death of the son, revokes the will, the estate of the son is entitled, upon the death of the father, to an allowance for such improvements.—Montgomery v. Montgomery's Estate, 191 Mich. 398.

¶ 220. The holder of a promissory note given by an intestate in his lifetime, and secured by a mortgage on realty, but not presented and allowed as a claim, is liable to the estate for the repayment of interest moneys paid to him by the administrator out of the personal estate to induce him to defer sale under a decree of foreclosure, although the agreement was made in good faith, since an administrator has no authority to part with any part of the estate in payment of a claim not regularly proved before the commissioners.—Miner v. Raymond, 113 Mich. 28.

§ 69. Money orders, bills, notes and deposits.

Title to bank deposit of decedent against which unaccepted check is outstanding, see Banking § 12.

¶ 221. Where, in response to a letter requesting a loan, the person to whom it is written purchases and forwards to the writer, after indorsing it to him, an express money order for the sum asked for, and the order is received by the writer's wife whom he has constituted his agent to receive and disburse it, the title to the order passes, on its receipt and acceptance by the wife, and upon the husband's death it becomes the property of his estate; and the question whether the widow rightfully or wrongfully disposes of the order is a matter between her and the administrator, in which the party sending it has no concern.—Mills v. American Express Co., 98 Mich. 154.

§ 70. Rents, royalties and current income.

¶ 222. Royalties from mines which were earned previously to the death of a testatrix, but which were payable after her death, do not constitute part of the general assets of a trust estate, but, being unapportionable, pass to the life tenant of a portion of the estate.—Poole v. Union Trust Co., 191 Mich. 162.

§ 71. Contracts payable "to heirs" or "assigns."

¶ 223. The proceeds of a note payable to the "legal heirs" of a grantor four years after his death, which note as taken amounts to a gift of such proceeds by him to the said heirs, will belong to them and not to his administrator.—Love v. Francis, 63 Mich. 181.

¶ 224. The administrator of the obligee's estate can sue on a bond drawn to a named person, his heirs or assigns.—Rynearson v. Fredenburg, 42 Mich. 412.

§ 72. Debt of representative as asset.

Liability of representative on bond for his debts to estate when insolvent, see post ¶ 1213.

¶ 225. When a debtor is appointed executor of his creditor's will, and accepts the trust, the debt is presumed to have been paid, and is treated as an asset in the executor's hands.—Crow v. Conant, 90 Mich. 247.

§ 73. Share of decedent in another estate.

¶ 226. An order by residuary legatees authorizing persons appointed trustees of the testator's estate to pay to their mother the amount of an insurance policy belonging to the estate after all the debts of such estate had been paid, "provided she survived the payment of such debts," entitled the mother's executor to the payment of such proceeds, where she lived fifteen months after the order was given, and the trustees during such time had sufficient funds to pay all debts, and the will provided that they should be paid at once.—Sheley v. Brooks, 114 Mich. 11.

¶ 227. A will made testator's widow tenant for life, with power to encroach on the principal if necessary for her support, and with power to dispose of the personalty by her will to the extent of reimbursing herself for all necessary payments made by her on account of the estate. She was also nominated and was appointed executrix; and when her final account as such was settled, it showed a balance in her favor. She did not collect it and eight years later the real estate was intact. She had then recently obtained her discharge. Held, that the balance found due her as executrix belonged to the legatees of the residuary personalty, and not to her personal representatives, it not being shown that she had any separate estate of her own, or that, if she had, she had used any of it for the benefit of her husband's estate.—Smith v. Blindbury, 66 Mich. 319.

§ 74. Insurance on decedent's life.

¶ 228. A beneficiary fund payable on the death of a member of an association to persons named by him is not an asset of the estate subject to his debts, and does not go to the administrator, but should be paid directly to the beneficiaries or their guardian.—Catholic Mut. Ben. Ass'n v. Priest, 46 Mich. 429; Catholic Mut. Ben. Ass'n v. Firnane, 50 Mich. 82.

¶ 229. A widow named as payee in an insurance certificate issued to her husband, having suit thereon as administratrix, may waive her claim to the fund in favor of the estate.—Enright v. Standard Life & Accident Ins. Co., 91 Mich. 238.

§ 75. Right of action for wrongful death.

Establishing right of representative to sue for wrongful death, see ante ¶ 125.

Death by wrongful act in general, see Death by Wrongful Act.

Cause of action for death of parent by wrongful act as property sustaining guardianship in state, see Conflict of Laws ¶ 99.

Survival to representative of action for injuries resulting in lingering death, see Death by Wrongful Act § 4.

¶ 230. The right of action given to an administrator by How. St., §§ 8313, 8314, for negligently causing the death of his intestate, constitutes assets of the estate of the deceased, within the meaning of section 5848 authorizing administration in case of the death of a nonresident "leaving estate to be administered in this state."—Findlay v. Chicago & G. T. R. Co., 106 Mich. 700.

¶ 231. A right of action is as much property as is a corporeal possession, and under the Survival Act (Comp. Laws 1897, § 10117) this at once vests in the injured person upon the inflicting of the negligent injury, and upon his subsequent death becomes an asset of his estate to be collected and distributed in accordance with the administration statutes.—Love v. Detroit, J. & C. R. Co., 170 Mich. 1.

¶ 232. The defendant, an attorney, made an agreement with a widow to prosecute a suit for causing the death of her husband. The next of kin and the administrator, the complainant, consented that the suit should be brought in the name of the administrator. No one was dependent on the deceased but his widow. Defendant settled the suit, and paid over the money to the widow. Complainant, as administrator, brings a bill to demand an accounting. Held, that no case was shown for the intervention of equity.—Hackett v. McIlwain, 158 Mich. 265.

§ 76. Rights of action for tort to property.

Procedure for enforcing rights of action for tort to property, see post § 90.

Essential facts to make prima facie case of conversion for administrator against decedent's son for crops, see Conversion ¶ 135.

¶ 233. An executor may bring trover for a conversion of his testator's goods that occurred but was not sued on in testator's lifetime under Comp. L. 1871, § 5828.—Rogers v. Windoes, 48 Mich. 628.

¶ 234. An executor can maintain trover without previous demand against a legatee who collects a note belonging to the estate and appropriates the money collected.—Harris v. Cable, 104 Mich. 365.

§ 77. Occupational or business licenses.

¶ 235. One's right to carry on the business of selling spirituous liquors at retail after paying the tax does not pass on his death to the administrator of his estate; at least not without paying the tax and giving a new bond.—People v. Sykes, 96 Mich. 452.

§ 78. Property in possession of others.

Property in possession of other spouse, see post § 79.

Delivery and acceptance or other transfer requisite for gift, see Gifts, III.

¶ 236. The title to unindorsed notes payable to a decedent and after his death found in his house among his housekeeper's effects, is presumed to have remained in him, and a contrary presumption does not arise from their being in the possession of the housekeeper who was their proper custodian until an administrator was appointed.—Bellis v. Lyons, 97 Mich. 398.

§ 79. Property held by other spouse or jointly owned.

See also ante ¶ 221.

Right of property as between decedent and surviving spouse, see Husband and Wife, II.

Title to joint deposit with right of survivorship created by decedent, see Banking § 6.

¶ 237. Where a certificate of deposit standing in the name of a wife at the time of her death, is shown to be the property of her husband, it is not necessary that it go through the hands of the administrator of her estate.—Mains v. Webber's Estate, 131 Mich. 213.

¶ 238. The title to a wife's interest in a mortgage executed to herself and husband jointly passes, at her death, to her executor, for the benefit of her creditors and heirs at law.—Luttermoser v. Zeuner, 110 Mich. 186.

§ 80. Equitable assets.

See also post ¶ 286.

Property held by decedent as trustee, see post § 81.

¶ 239. If the owner of the equity of redemption dies before foreclosure sale, the surplus moneys are assets of the estate.—Smith v. Smith, 13 Mich. 258.

¶ 240. The equity of redemption owned by a mortgagor does not become an asset of the mortgagee's estate by the mortgagor's appointment as executor, and acceptance.—Crow v. Conant, 90 Mich. 247.

¶ 241. The amount received by a wife as consideration for a separation agreement is not an equitable asset of the estate of the husband where the agreement was avoided by a reconciliation with the wife before the husband's death.—Knapp v. Knapp, 95 Mich. 474.

§ 81. Goods held as agent or bailee or trustee.

Surrender of trusts, pledges and property of others, see post § 124.

¶ 242. The administrator may recover as goods of the estate such as were held by the decedent on commission and which passed without authority of the administrator or payment to him to defendant, where the decedent's consignors have proved claims for such goods against the estate.—Brennan v. Pardridge, 67 Mich. 449.

¶ 243. Where a receiver dies without having rendered a final account, his executor may recover from a bank trust funds deposited by such receiver, though the bank, as creditor, may have an interest in the fund, the executor's purpose presumably being to turn the money over to the new receiver.—Avery v. Preston Nat. Bank, 132 Mich. 445.

§ 82. Unadministered assets.

¶ 244. After the inventory of an estate was filed, one of the distributees guaranteed the payment of a debt due the estate by a written instrument, reciting that such obligation was owned by the estate. It was orally agreed that the debt should be paid to the administrator, who should make an appropriate division of the proceeds among the other distributees. The debt was not collected, nor its proceeds distributed by the administrator as such, and subsequently, the guarantor having died, the administrator, who had in the meantime been discharged, procured an appointment as administrator de bonis non, and filed a claim for the amount of the debt against the estate of the guarantor. Held, that such debt had never ceased to be a part of the original estate, and was subject to collection and administration de bonis non.—Spring v. Perkins, 156 Mich. 327.

B. COLLECTION AND REDUCTION TO POSSESSION.

§ 83. Authority and primary right to collect or sue for assets.

Refusal or neglect by representative, see post § 84.
Administrators de bonis non and special administrators, see post § 85.
Suits by agents of representative, see post § 86.
Suing in individual or representative name, when permissible, see post § 87.
Suit before letters, see post § 88.
Collection of debts due from heirs or distributees, see post § 89.
Actions for conversion, implied contract, and contracts running to heirs, see post §§ 90, 91.
Claims for rents, profits and proceeds of land, see post § 92.
Claims for insurance, see post § 93.
Right to recover real property, see post §§ 96-101, 126 et seq.
Right and authority to sue in general, see post, XI, A.
Right of representative to possession of personalty and duty to obtain, see also ante § 59.
Possessory actions for lands, see post § 308.
Actions for trespass or waste, see post § 309.
Suits to remove clouds or perfect title, see post § 310.
Representative's right to management, custody and disposal of personalty, see post §§ 116-124.
Right of representative to compromise with debtor, see post § 317.
What are assets and property of estate, see ante, V, A.
Right of defendants in action by representative to set-off claims against estate, see also post § 316.
Right to sue for possession of chattels on death of life tenant thereof, see Life Estates, II.
Right to recover as representative despite estoppel as widow of decedent, see also Estoppel ¶ 240.
Nonestoppel as representative to sue for fund by reason of dealing with it as individual, see also Estoppel ¶ 239.
Demand for savings deposit of decedent without production of pass book, see Banking § 28, ¶ 89.
Right of representative to compound with debtor, see Jud. Act, chap. LIV, § 10, Comp. L. 1915, § 13854.

¶ 245. The administrator, not the next of kin or heir at law, represents decedent's personal estate, and he is the only proper person to prosecute a claim on its behalf.—Hollowell v. Cole, 25 Mich. 345.

¶ 246. An administrator has no power as such to invade at pleasure the premises of a person in peaceable possession of the personal property of the estate and take it therefrom without process.—Waldo v. Waldo, 52 Mich. 94.

¶ 247. Until the probate court has adjudged in whom is the title or possession the general administrator only can bring suit for personal property in the intestate's possession and control.—Palmer v. Palmer, 55 Mich. 293.

¶ 248. Except under exceptional circumstances the personal representative of a decedent, as the holder of the legal title to the personal property of such decedent, is alone authorized to bring an action for the recovery of a debt due the estate.—Brobst v. Brobst, 190 Mich. 63.

¶ 249. The bare fact that there are probably no creditors of a decedent to whom a chose in action belongs does not create an exception to the rule that the personal representative of the decedent is alone authorized to enforce the chose in action.—Brobst v. Brobst, 190 Mich. 63.

¶ 250. Heirs and legatees of a decedent have no authority to enforce the payment of debts owing to the estate.—Brobst v. Brobst, 190 Mich. 63.

§ 84. ——Refusal or neglect by representative.

Authority in general to sue on refusal or neglect of representative, see post §§ 311, 312.
Liability of representative for loss from failure to collect assets, rents or profits, see post §§ 282, 283.

¶ 251. If the executor neglects his duty in collecting or obtaining possession of the assets of the estate the law gives the devisees and legatees a remedy, but does not permit a devisee or legatee to represent the estate in the prosecution or defense of suits.—Hillman v. Schwenk, 68 Mich. 297.

¶ 252. Act No. 326, Pub. Acts 1905, conferring upon a creditor of an estate the right, upon the refusal of the executor or administrator to bring suit, to bring it himself in the name of such executor or administrator, is broad enough to include a case where the executor or administrator claims title to the property.—McFarlan v. McFarlan, 155 Mich. 652.

¶ 253. Where the creditors of an estate have notice that the decedent held a mortgage which has only partly matured, they should inquire into the matter in the probate court if they wish to have it applied to their benefit.—Dickinson v. Seaver, 44 Mich. 624.

¶ 254. Fifteen years' unexplained delay by creditors of an estate in bringing suit to have applied in aid of administration and subjected to satisfaction of debts a mortgage to the intestate, of the ownership whereof by him they had notice, held too great.—Dickinson v. Seaver, 44 Mich. 624.

§ 85. ——Administrators de bonis non and special administrators.

See also ante ¶ 244.

Necessity and occasion for special administration, see ante § 5.

Necessity and occasion for appointment of administrator de bonis non, see ante § 6.

Status and authority of special administrator in general, see ante § 49.

Authority and status in general of administrator de bonis non, see ante § 49.

Petition for special or other limited letters, see ante § 26.

Equity jurisdiction over special administrator on bill for recovery of assets, see also ante ¶ 49.

Authority of special administrator to rescind transfers fraudulently obtained from decedent, see also post ¶ 284.

Authority of administrator de bonis non to set aside mortgage, see also post ¶ 308.

Authority of special representative to sue to set aside fraudulent conveyances of decedent, see also post ¶ 311.

Ejectment by administrator de bonis non, see also post ¶ 991.

¶ 255. The powers of a special administrator under Comp. Laws 1897, sections 9326-9330 do not give him the authority to sue in equity to cancel a conveyance of real estate alleged to have been obtained from deceased by fraud.—Union Trust Co. v. Kirchberg, 174 Mich. 161.

§ 86. ——Suits by agents of representative.

¶ 256. A party who loaned money to an administratrix and received from her a note indorsed to him as security, and who agreed to collect the note and bring suit thereon if necessary and after deducting the amount coming to him, account to her for the balance, is the agent of the administratrix to collect, and may sue on the note in his own name.—Benjamin v. Early, 123 Mich. 93.

§ 87. Suing in individual or representative name, when permissible.

Suing in representative or individual capacity in general, see post § 321.

¶ 257. An administrator may sue in either his individual or his representative character for money had and received after the death of his intestate for the use of the estate, but to recover for money received in the lifetime of the intestate he must sue in his representative character, and allege that it was received to the use of the intestate.—Barnum v. Stone, 27 Mich. 332.

¶ 258. A foreign executor can sue in his own name on a note belonging to the estate and payable to bearer; and any claim held by the defendant against the estate can be presented as set-off. But if the note were non-negotiable, or payable to order and not indorsed, the executor should sue in his official character.—Knapp v. Lee, 42 Mich. 41.

¶ 259. Where an administrator sues a mutual benefit association as such upon a certificate of insurance, recovery should be permitted if he is shown to be the only person entitled to participate in the fund, even though the action ought to have been brought by him in his individual capacity.—Peet v. Great Camp of Knights of Maccabees, 83 Mich. 92; Enright v. Standard Life & Accident Ins. Co., 91 Mich. 238.

¶ 260. Where the heirs of a deceased member of a mutual benefit association are the persons, if any, entitled to recover on his beneficiary certificate, action thereon cannot be objected to because brought in the name of his administrator who is also his sole heir.—Peet v. Great Camp of Knights of Maccabees, 83 Mich. 92.

¶ 261. An executrix who is also the sole legatee and devisee may, after the payment of all debts, turn over to herself a claim due the testator, and seek to enforce it in her individual capacity.—Ewers v. White's Estate, 114 Mich. 266.

§ 88. Maturity of right, suit before letters.

Acts or disposals before letters, see post § 116.

¶ 262. A foreclosure suit begun by foreign executors before the will is probated in Michigan is made good by subsequent probate before the hearing.—Gray v. Franks, 86 Mich. 382.

§ 89. Collection of debts due from heirs or distributees.

Collection of guaranty due from distributee, see also ante ¶ 244.

¶ 263. The distributive share of the real estate of an heir, debtor to the estate of his ancestor, is not chargeable with such indebtedness either as against the land or the proceeds of the sale thereof in the hands of the administrator; such indebtedness is to be collected by proceedings brought the same as for collecting any other indebtedness due the estate.—Marvin v. Bowlby, 142 Mich. 245.

§ 90. Action for conversion or on implied promise for value.

Rights of action for tort to property as assets, see ante § 76.

Denial of right to sue in trover as collateral attack on letters, see ante ¶ 130.

Taking and withholding goods claimed by decedent as a conversion against true owner, see Conversion § 3, ¶ 8.

¶ 264. The possessor of personal property of an intestate may maintain trover for its conversion against a wrongdoer, or one having no better right than himself; and if the possessor die, his administrator may also bring trover for a conversion of the property taking place after his intestate's death, and prior to his own appointment as administrator.—Cullen v. O'Hara, 4 Mich. 132.

¶ 265. An executor may bring trover for a conversion of the estate's goods that occurred but was not sued on in testator's lifetime, under Comp. L. 1871, § 5828.—Rogers v. Windoes, 48 Mich. 628.

¶ 266. The collection by a legatee of a note which belongs to the estate, and the appropriation by her of the moneys collected, amount to a conversion, and the executor can maintain trover against her without demand.—Harris v. Cable, 104 Mich. 365.

¶ 267. An administratrix is not estopped from bringing trover for conversion of stock belonging to the estate by her action before appointment in indorsing the certificate of such stock.—Morton v. Preston, 18 Mich. 60.

¶ 268. Proof that plaintiff's intestate transferred funds to defendant when she was mentally incompetent and was subjected to undue influence by defendant, will sustain an action by the administratrix for money had and received; a bill in chancery to set aside the transfer being unnecessary where no real estate is involved.—Harty v. Teagan, 150 Mich. 75.

¶ 269. In trover by an administrator against a son of the deceased, who had carried on the latter's farm, for certain grain, stock and tools on the farm claimed to belong to the estate and to have been converted by defendant, evidence that intestate, years before, owned a horse and wagon, which he sold and with the proceeds bought a farm, and afterwards (but nearly twenty years before suit) sold that farm and purchased the farm on which this personalty belonged, in his wife's name, and to avoid the payment of his debts, is impertinent and immaterial, at least in the absence of any showing that suit was in the interest of creditors or that there were creditors.—Hill v. Chambers, 30 Mich. 422.

§ 91. Suits on contracts running to "heirs and assigns."

¶ 270. Where a bond is drawn to the obligee, "his heirs and assigns," his administrator can bring suit upon it, and the bond need not contain formal words giving him the right to sue.—Rynearson v. Fredenburg, 42 Mich. 412.

§ 92. Claims for proceeds of land or rents and profits.

Collection of condemnation award as "issues and profits of land," see also ante ¶ 205.
Collection of awards in condemnation proceedings, see Eminent Domain § 119.

¶ 271. An award in condemnation proceedings against a testator's estate should be paid to the executor for distribution in the probate court according to the rights of the legatees.—City of Detroit v. Schilling, 42 Mich. 429.

§ 93. Claims for insurance.

Name of capacity in which suit for insurance to be brought, see also ante ¶¶ 259, 260

¶ 272. An administrator of the mortgagor can sue on an insurance policy for the use and benefit of a mortgagee to whom it was payable.—Westchester Fire Ins. Co. v. Dodge 44 Mich. 420.

¶ 273. The administrator may sue for death benefit in a firemen's mutual benefit and relief society organized under How. St. chap. 165, where person designated to receive it for wife and children declines to act. —Neville v. Detroit Firemen's Fund Ass'n, 104 Mich. 149.

¶ 274. An executor is entitled to incur all reasonable expense necessary to prosecute suits to recover funds due from the insurance companies on the testator's policies, despite the fact that a large portion of the money when collected will go to the heirs and legatees.—In re Bender's Estate, 154 Mich. 44.

§ 94. Statutory probate proceedings to discover assets.

Failure to seek discovery in probate court as laches, see also Equity ¶ 179.
Pendency of probate proceedings for discovery as affecting right to sue in equity for winding up partnership, see also Equity ¶ 101.
Order on demurrer to application as nonappealable interlocutory decree, see Probate Courts, III.
Appeals to circuit court from orders in statutory probate proceedings to discover assets, see Probate Courts, III.
Writ of error from circuit judgment on appeal to supreme court, see Appeal.
Proceedings to discover assets concealed or embezzled, see Jud. Act, chap. LIV, §§ 7-9, Comp. L. 1915, §§ 13851-13853.

¶ 275. A probate order under Comp. L. 1871, § 4408, How. St., § 5876, requiring the respondent to furnish such information as will enable an administrator to know the condition and resources of his decedent's estate, is merely ancillary to such action as may be had in any court where such information is needed; it is not a final accounting and may be issued against strangers to the record.—Perrin v. Calhoun Circuit Judge, 49 Mich. 342.

¶ 276. Comp. L. 1871, § 4408, How. St., § 5876, in providing that any person interested in a decedent's estate may bring before the judge of probate for examination any one whom he suspects of possessing writings which tend to disclose the interest of the deceased in any property, entitles an administrator de bonis non to cite the executor of a previous administrator to produce the books of a partnership composed of the deceased and the previous administrator. And the proceeding is not barred by the pendency of a suit in equity for final relief.—Perrin v. Calhoun Circuit Judge, 49 Mich. 342.

¶ 277. The representative of a deceased executor can be compelled by the probate court to give information to parties in interest, but such inquiries should be so carried on as not to interfere needlessly with the place of custody of books in daily use, and the right of access to them.—Perrin v. Calhoun Circuit Judge, 49 Mich. 342.

¶ 278. A person cited to appear before the probate court for examination touching his possession of effects belonging to the estate of a deceased person, under How. St., § 5876, cannot be forced to submit to an oral examination, but the same must be made upon written interrogatories and answers, as provided by How. St., § 5877.—Palmer v. Jackson Circuit Judge, 90 Mich. 1.

¶ 279. The sole purpose of the statute (How. St., § 5876), which provides for the citation before the probate court and for the examination on oath of a person suspected of having in his possession or knowledge any deed, etc., containing any evidence of a decedent's right or title to any real or personal estate, etc., is to procure the production and examination of the documents specified in the statute; and when executors cited to appear for examination answer fairly, and tender full access to all documents called for, the labor and expense of preparing and furnishing a schedule of such property will not be imposed upon them.—Manly v. Washtenaw Probate Judge, 99 Mich. 441.

§ 95. Equitable remedies, procedure and relief.

Retention of bill to recover assets for complete relief by compensation to representative for chattels, see Equity § 222.

Retention of creditors' bill against administrator as bill by him for same purpose, see Creditors' Suits ¶ 139.

Proper form of bill to reach resulting trust for benefit of creditors, see Creditors' Suits § 5.

Averments of willingness to do equity in bill to cancel foreclosure under invalid mortgage and to reinstate prior valid mortgages made by decedent, see also Equity ¶ 339.

Remedy of accounting against surviving partner, see Partnership, VII, E.

Equitable remedy where employees operating farm for decedent at fixed wage appropriate income and refuse to account, see Master and Servant, II.

¶ 280. The complainant, who was administrator on his daughter's estate, filed a bill claiming the possession of a note signed by him and belonging to her estate, and which was in the hands of the defendant, her husband. Held, that though complainant, by proving that the wife owned the note against him at her decease, and that he was her administrator, could thereby establish a full defense in a suit at law thereon against him, yet this did not constitute a full and adequate remedy, and that he was also entitled to have it delivered up to him, and that a court of chancery had jurisdiction.—Wales v. Newbould, 9 Mich. 45.

¶ 281. Complainant's intestate had leased premises for the purpose of erecting a steam sawmill thereon, had placed upon them a frame for the building, ready for erection, and had contracted and partly paid for an engine for the same. After his death the land was sold by the lessor, and the purchaser, together with the contractor for the engine, put up the frame, and completed and commenced operating the mill. Complainant, as administrator, filed his bill against them to compel payment of the value of the mill frame, and of the moneys paid towards the engine, and to have the amount declared a lien on the premises. Held, that his claims were not of equitable jurisdiction, and his remedy was at law.—Bennett v. Nichols, 12 Mich. 22.

¶ 282. Where a bill is brought by an administrator to impress a trust on certain property held by defendant, and claimed by her under an alleged gift inter vivos by the deceased, equity has jurisdiction, and the bill should not be dismissed on the ground that there is an adequate remedy at law.—Chamberlain v. Eddy, 154 Mich. 593.

¶ 283. Whether the heirs are necessary parties in a suit by a mortgagor's administrator to redeem or to compel the release of a satisfied mortgage, quære; but an objection to their nonjoinder should be taken before hearing.—Enos v. Sutherland, 11 Mich. 538.

§ 96. Suits to rescind transfers and recover property.

[Note. Since ordinarily the real estate does not come into administration except when the administrator assumes possession (see post, V, E, 2), or sues under the statute to annul fraudulent conveyances (see post § 97 et seq.), or petitions to sell for debts (see post, VII, A), the rights of the heirs to sue for recovery of the realty are determined by the fact and consequences of their being heirs (see post, XV; also Descent) and by the law applicable generally to real actions, e. g., Ejectment; Quieting Title; Trespass. The right to sue for relief from fraud practiced on a deceased grantor depends further on the law of Fraud, which see, and that of Rescission and Cancellation, which see.]

Suits to annul decedent's fraudulent conveyances, see post § 97.

Laches of heirs or distributees to sue to annul conveyances obtained in fraud of decedent, see also Equity, IV.

Procedure in general for rescission, see Rescission and Cancellation, VI.
Appeals to circuit court from decrees rescinding fraudulent transfers, see Probate Courts, III.
Writ of error from circuit judgment on appeal to supreme court, see Appeal.
Delay in suing to rescind grant by incompetent decedent until after right matures by his death, as excusable delay, see also Equity ¶ 183.
Validity of voluntary deed as against personal representative, see Deeds § 3.

¶ 284. Where a third party has obtained title to real estate from deceased by fraud, the heirs, and not the special administrator, have the right to sue in equity to cancel the conveyance.—Union Trust Co. v. Kirchberg, 174 Mich. 161.

¶ 285. To recover money fraudulently obtained from a person in his lifetime and secretly withheld from his administrator, an accounting may be required in equity and the fund pursued, or an action maintained at law.—Powell v. Pennock, 181 Mich. 588.

¶ 285a. A bill filed by an administrator on behalf of the estate for the cancellation of a deed given by his intestate and for an accounting, must be considered as attacking the conveyance for the benefit of all persons interested in the estate though not parties to the suit.—Travis v. Parks, 130 Mich. 15.

§ 97. Suits to annul decedent's fraudulent conveyances.

Suits by creditors, see post § 98.
Existence of debts and of fraud on claimants, see post § 99.
Bill and procedure thereunder, decree and relief, see post § 100.
Parties affected by setting aside, see post § 101.
Suits to rescind or recover property fraudulently obtained from decedent, see ante § 96.
Bill in aid of execution against lands of decedent designed to annul decedent's fraudulent conveyance, see also post ¶ 594.
Purchase of farm in wife's name with proceeds of sale of land to avoid debts, see also ante ¶ 269.
Proof of authority to sue to annul decedent's fraudulent conveyances, see ante ¶ 177.
Petitioner's intention on appointment to sue to annul decedent's fraudulent conveyance as ground for denial of letters, see ante ¶ 110.
What constitutes fraud, see Fraudulent Conveyances, I.
Procedure in general on setting aside fraudulent conveyances, see Fraudulent Conveyances, V.
Assignability of administrator's right to institute proceedings to set aside intestate's fraudulent transfers, see also Fraud and Deceit, III, A.
Venue in general, see Venue, I.
Suit for recovery of lands fraudulently conveyed by decedent, see Jud. Act, chap. LIV, §§ 15-17, Comp. L. 1915, §§ 13859-13861.

¶ 286. Equitable assets, including land fraudulently conveyed, or held in trust for creditors, may be recovered by the administrator of the debtor, and are assets in his hands.—Beith v. Porter, 119 Mich. 365.

¶ 287. How. St., § 5884, authorizing and making it the duty of administrators, when there is a deficiency in assets, to take steps to secure so much as shall be necessary to pay the debts of the estate from any property which the deceased shall have conveyed in fraud of creditors, is not in derogation of the common law and should be liberally construed; and therefore an administrator may file a bill to set aside a conveyance of land bought and paid for by the deceased and deeded by him to his wife.—Beith v. Porter, 119 Mich. 365.

¶ 288. Where there is a deficiency of assets to pay claims allowed, lands conveyed by the decedent for a nominal consideration and subject to the payment of his debts may be recovered from the grantee for the benefit of the estate's creditors under How. St., § 5884.—Farrand v. Caton, 69 Mich. 235.

¶ 289. Under Comp. Laws 1897, § 9363, where there is a deficiency of assets in the hands of an executor or administrator and deceased has in his lifetime conveyed any real estate with intent to defraud his creditors, the executor or administrator may sue to recover such real estate for the benefit of the creditors.—Union Trust Co. v. Kirchberg, 174 Mich. 161.

¶ 290. An administrator is entitled to seek relief in equity for an accounting and to set aside a deed given by the decedent to his son, reserving a life interest in himself, the son having controlled the property under a parol agreement for a period of several years.—Griffin v. Hovey, 179 Mich. 104.

¶ 291. Where an administrator brings suit to set aside a deed delivered as ordered after the grantor's death, and to sell the premises to pay debts the attitude of the widow, who is one of the grantees, is not important and the fact that she happens to be the principal creditor has no bearing on the rights and duties of such administrator.—Barris v. Emmons, 173 Mich. 590.

¶ 292. An administrator cannot maintain a bill in equity under How. St., § 5884, to set aside a deed of his intestate as in fraud of creditors, for the sole purpose of reaching the proceeds of crops growing upon the land at the time of the conveyance. The remedy in such case is in an action at law.—Bresnahan v. Nugent, 106 Mich. 459.

¶ 293. Quære, whether an administrator of a deceased partner may file a bill to reach property of the partnership transferred to the wife of the deceased, to evade the payment of partnership debts.—Murdoch v. Walls, 121 Mich. 164.

¶ 294. The right which the statute confers upon an administrator, in case of a deficiency of assets, to institute proceedings to avoid fraudulent dispositions of property by the intestate, cannot be assigned by him.—Morris v. Morris, 5 Mich. 171.

§ 98. ——Suits by creditors.

¶ 295. Where the administrator of an insolvent estate of a decedent refused to institute proceedings to set aside a conveyance by the decedent as in fraud of a certain creditor whose obligation was contracted prior to such conveyance and who obtained judgment against the estate upon the obligation, held that the judgment creditor might institute such suit.—Allen v. Powers, 106 Mich. 622.

¶ 296. A bill filed by a creditor against the administrators of his deceased debtor and others, to set aside a conveyance made by the deceased as fraudulent, and subject the land to the payment of debts, is not within R. S. 1838, p. 288, § 10, prohibiting the commencement of suits against administrators within one year after their appointment, etc.—Manning v. Drake, 1 Mich. 34.

¶ 297. Where a bill is brought by a creditor in the name of the administrator of an estate, to set aside the conveyance of certain real estate by the deceased, in fraud of creditors, and no evidence is introduced by the defendant to show that the administrator intended to bring the suit, and all the subsequent proceedings show clearly he did not intend so to do, the bill will not be dismissed for being prematurely brought.—Mette v. Mette, 154 Mich. 662.

§ 99. ——Existence of debts and of fraud on the claimants.

Necessity of deficiency of assets to pay debts, see also ante ¶¶ 288-294.

Necessity of showing of creditors' interest in conversion, see ante ¶ 269.

What constitutes fraud, see Fraudulent Conveyances, I.

¶ 298. General claims against an estate must be adjudicated by the commissioners thereon or by the probate court, or on an appeal, before they become a charge against the estate which will warrant the executor in filing a bill to set aside a conveyance made by his decedent in order to obtain assets for their payment.—O'Connor v. Boylan, 49 Mich. 209.

¶ 299. How. St., § 5884, authorizing an administrator to recover any lands conveyed in fraud of creditors by decedent in his lifetime, does not, it seems, authorize the subjecting to the payment of debts incurred by decedent to purchase land deeded to defendant, his wife, by a stranger at a time when decedent had no creditors who could complain of such deed.—White v. Newhall, 68 Mich. 641.

¶ 300. A father's settlement with his son for services rendered after the latter had reached his majority, and the transfer of property made in satisfaction, will not be disturbed in favor of the father's administrator, when there is no proof of fraud or undue advantage. Such settlements are not to be discouraged.—Bowen v. Lockwood, 26 Mich. 441.

¶ 301. Relief cannot be granted under §§ 9363, 9364, C. L. 1897, How. St., 2nd ed., §§ 11074, 11075, in an action by an administrator for the benefit of creditors, to set aside an alleged fraudulent conveyance, where a portion of them did not extend credit on reliance on the debtor's apparent ownership.—Cowan v. Anderson, 184 Mich. 649.

¶ 302. Lands conveyed by a husband to his wife under stress of debts and without adequate consideration, they constituting a large part of his life long savings, and his debts exceeding the value of his remaining property, will be subjected to claims allowed against his estate.—Blue v. Schurtz, 115 Mich. 690.

¶ 303. The granting of time within which to move for a new trial on a claim and judgment against the estate of a deceased person does not suspend the right of the administrator to file a bill under How. St., § 5884, to set aside a conveyance made by the decedent on the ground that it was void as to the claim of the judgment creditor.—Walker v. Cady, 106 Mich. 21.

¶ 304. Testimony of the administrator and a son of the deceased that they know of no property belonging to the estate except the land in controversy, alleged to have been conveyed in hindrance of creditors, and another parcel claimed to have been conveyed under like circumstances, establishes a prima facie case of deficiency of assets.—Walker v. Cady, 106 Mich. 21.

¶ 305. The fact that a person died in another state, where he had lived for about two years previous to his death, creates no presumption that he left property there, so as to rebut an otherwise sufficient showing of a deficiency of assets in a suit by his administrator to set aside a conveyance by the decedent as in fraud of creditors.—Walker v. Cady, 106 Mich. 21.

¶ 306. On a bill by an executor to set aside a deed and to reach assets disposed of in fraud of creditors the allowance of claims by the commissioners not shown on their face to have accrued after the testator's death is prima facie evidence of their existence before that period.—Chapoton v. Prentis, 144 Mich. 283.

§ 100. ——Bill and procedure thereon, decree, and relief.

Duty of representative to attack fraudulent conveyance for benefit of all persons interested in estate, see ante ¶ 285a.

¶ 307. A bill filed by an administrator to subject property once owned by his intestate to the payment of demands against the estate will not lie where the bill itself tends to show that the property was disposed of without fraud as against creditors; as where deeds were given in escrow for the purpose of distributing the property among the grantor's heirs without will or administration, and with the reservation of a power to destroy the papers at any time.—Crittenden v. Basom, 46 Mich. 33.

¶ 308. An administrator de bonis non cannot bring suit to set aside a mortgage made by his decedent without averring a deficiency of assets in his hands and in those of his predecessors in the trust to satisfy the obligations existing against the estate (How. St., §§ 5884, 5885).—Kellogg v. Beeson, 58 Mich. 340.

¶ 309. Where a bill to set aside a conveyance as in fraud of the creditors of a deceased person sets forth the probate proceedings, the appointment of complainant as administrator, the allowance of a claim against the estate, and a deficiency of assets, it sufficiently appears that the bill is filed by the complainant in his capacity of administrator, under How. St., § 5884, although there is no specific allegation to that effect.—Walker v. Cady, 106 Mich. 21.

¶ 310. Where the bill alleges that there is a deficiency of assets in the hands of an executor through the allowance of claims which became a charge upon the estate an executor or administrator may institute proceedings under Comp. L. 1897, § 9363 et seq., without either an order of the probate court or an application by creditors.—Chapoton v. Prentis, 144 Mich. 283.

¶ 311. Where there is no allegation of creditors' claims, a special administrator cannot maintain a bill to set aside conveyances of realty by the deceased, on the ground of undue influence and fraud exercised by the grantee, and the mental incapacity of the grantor.—Pratt v. Millard, 154 Mich. 112.

¶ 312. Where an administrator seeks to have deeds made by his intestate declared void as to creditors, decedent's immediate grantee should be made a party to the bill, although he does not now own or have possession of the premises sought to b subjected to the payment of the debts of th estate—he being interested because of hi warranty to his own grantees.—Fraser v Passage, 63 Mich. 551.

¶ 313. In a suit by an executor to set asid a deed and to reach assets disposed of i fraud of creditors because of a deficienc in assets due to the allowance of claims i person who has been paid in full and ha parted with his interest is neither a neces sary nor a proper party.—Chapoton v. Pren tis, 144 Mich. 283.

¶ 314. An answer to a bill to set aside decedent's conveyance in order to pay de frauded creditors, which answer assails the foundation of the bill by denying the regular and legal allowance of the claims, must state wherein they were illegally allowed, as that a sufficient number of commissioners did not allow them.—Reed v. Jourdan, 109 Mich. 128.

¶ 315. An old man gave a warranty deed of his land in consideration of a life lease back to him and of his support during life. His executor filed a bill, under Comp. L. 1871, § 4416, How. St., § 5884, to set this aside as fraudulent in respect to his creditors. Held, that the objection could not be made, especially if not set up in the answer, that the transfer was of a homestead and not the subject of such a bill. It was in effect the conveyance of the expectant remainder after the extinguishment of the homestead.—O'Connor v. Boylan, 49 Mich. 209.

¶ 316. Since defendant, the fraudulent transferee, is not harmed by it, an administrator's bill to set aside intestate's conveyances as in fraud of creditors cannot be defended on ground that creditors' claims were assigned to complainant.—Howd v. Breckenridge, 97 Mich. 65.

¶¶ 317-318. In an action by a special administrator to recover real estate alleged to belong to deceased where it appears that complainant has no interest in the subject-matter and no authority to institute or conduct the suit, the bill is properly dismissed on motion of defendant.—Union Trust Co. v. Kirchberg, 174 Mich. 161.

¶ 319. An executor's bill under Comp. L. 1871, § 4416, How. St., § 5884, to set aside a conveyance made by his decedent as fraudulent in respect to creditors, will lie though the title has been passed to innocent purchasers, and it will reach the proceeds of such transfer. But the amount recoverable is so much only as will satisfy the deficiency in decedent's assets below the amount required to pay his debts.—O'Connor v. Boylan, 49 Mich. 209.

¶ 320. In a suit by an executor to set aside a deed and to reach assets disposed of in fraud of creditors begun under a statute permitting such proceedings where there is a deficiency of assets due to the allowance of claims a decree, annulling the deed and ordering a reconveyance to the executor and ordering the executor to reduce the land into money by sale thereof as if the deceased had died possessed thereof, is too broad, and may be modified so as to provide for the payment by the grantee of the claims allowed and the costs of the proceedings in the probate and circuit courts, and for the sale of the land only in case of his failure to comply therewith.—Chapoton v. Prentis, 144 Mich. 283.

¶ 321. An administrator who sues to recover the value of goods conveyed by his decedent in fraud of creditors, cannot recover interest thereon from the time of transfer.—Bresnahan v. Nugent, 97 Mich. 359.

¶ 322. In a suit by an administrator under How. St., § 5884, to set aside a deed executed by decedent as in fraud of creditors, the court entered a decree vacating and setting aside the deed. Held, that defendant should have been permitted, upon the payment of the claims against the estate and of the costs of the proceedings in the probate and circuit courts, to retain the land, subject to the widow's dower interest therein.—Reed v. Jourdan, 109 Mich. 128.

¶ 323. On setting aside a deed by a debtor to his wife because it was in constructive fraud of creditors, he being since deceased and the relief being sought by his administrator on behalf of creditors, decree was entered with leave to the grantee to discharge the lien of the decree by paying to the administrator a sum sufficient to satisfy creditors.—Blue v. Schurtz, 115 Mich. 690.

§ 101. ——Parties affected by setting aside.

¶ 324. In a suit by the administrator to set aside a deed delivered as ordered after the grantor's death, and to sell the premises to pay debts, the widow who is a grantee thereunder and is the principal creditor is neither asserting nor denying the validity of the deed.—Barris v. Emmons, 173 Mich. 590.

¶ 325. Where a decedent granted his estate to his wife and to others by a deed delivered after his death, the wife who is a creditor of the estate, has a legal right as against her cograntees to repudiate the deed and to stand on her rights as a creditor and as a widow entitled to her statutory rights, on the deeds being set aside at suit of the administrator under the statute as in fraud of creditors.—Barris v. Emmons, 173 Mich. 590.

§ 102. Evidence and presumptions as to assets and title of decedent.

Presumption of assets in foreign state from fact that decedent died a resident thereof, see also ante ¶ 305.

Evidence and burden of proof in general in actions by or against representative, see post § 324.

Evidence in actions on claims against estate, see post §§ 205-207.

Presumption as to ownership of tax sale certificate in one's possession originally issued to decedent, see Evidence ¶ 285.

Petition by claimant for surrender of property by executor as admission against claimant's interest, see Evidence ¶ 2053.

Evidence as to ownership of property in trover by personal representative, see also Conversion §§ 31, 36, 37.

Rebuttal on question of ownership in trover by representative, see also Evidence ¶ 444.

Conclusion of witness as to ownership by gift, see Evidence ¶ 1272.

¶ 326. On an issue as to ownership by decedent of personalty on a farm cultivated by a son, the claimant, evidence having any tendency to show what the understanding was between the father in his lifetime and the son, regarding the ownership, should be liberally received.—Chambers v. Hill, 34 Mich. 523.

¶ 327. On an issue as to ownership of grain, live stock and tools on a farm occupied by decedent, evidence showing the understanding between husband and wife as to the ownership of the stock, etc., and the general sense and expression on the subject in the family, is pertinent.—Hill v. Chambers, 30 Mich. 422.

¶ 328. Where, in a suit by an administrator to recover from his intestate's widow the value of certain crops growing upon a farm owned by her and her husband in the entirety at the time of his death, and which she afterwards converted to her own use, plaintiff claims to recover upon the theory that there was an arrangement between the husband and wife by which the husband was to own the crops, an objection that title to the crops can only be shown by showing the record title to the farm is untenable, as, if plaintiff's theory is substantiated by the evidence, it suffices and he can recover for the whole crop.—Parks v. Norris, 101 Mich. 71.

¶ 329. In an action by the administrator of the estate of a grantor in a certain deed, which reserved to the grantor a life estate in the premises conveyed, to recover rent claimed to be due from the tenant of the grantor, where the rent had been paid to a date subsequent to the grantor's death, such deed held admissible, as relevant and material to show that the grantor's title had been extinguished.—Harrington v. Sheldon, 196 Mich. 388.

C. INVENTORY AND APPRAISAL.

§ 103. In general.

Partnership or trust properties, see post § 104.

Variance in account from inventory, see post § 343.
Filing of inventory as condition precedent to presentation or hearing of claims, see post ¶ 508.
Effect and conclusiveness of inventory on representative, see post ¶ 830.
Effect of failure to inventory mortgage note with mortgage, see post ¶ 1200.
Effect of joint inventory, see also post ¶ 965.
Making and return of inventory, see Jud. Act, chap. LIV, § 1, Comp. L. 1915, § 13845.
Necessity and procedure for appraisal, see Jud. Act, chap. LIV, §§ 2-4, Comp. L. 1915, §§ 13846-13848.

¶ 330. An executor who has given the bond provided for in Comp. L. 1871, § 4366 (How. St., § 5836), need return into court no inventory nor account whatever.—Durfee v. Abbott, 50 Mich. 278.

¶ 331. A fund appraised as the individual property of the executrix and referred to as her property in the affidavits of her daughter and her son-in-law may properly be held to belong to her personally and not as executrix, on an issue arising out of a claim against the estate for services relating to such fund.—Bullock v. Tompkins' Estate, 125 Mich. 17.

§ 104. Partnership or trust properties.

Accountability for surviving partner's acts and omissions, see post § 302.
Purchase by representative of interest of decedent's partner, see post ¶ 382.
Variance in account from inventory of partnership properties, see post ¶ 1091.

¶ 332. An inventory by the administrator of a deceased partner should only refer to the interest as a partnership one, giving its location; it should not undertake to give the items of the partnership property.—Loomis v. Armstrong, 63 Mich. 355.

¶ 333. Where an inventory was filed by an executor showing a large quantity of unmanufactured timber as being embraced in a contract held by a partnership of which the executor was the surviving member and such surviving partner thereafter had a scale made resulting in a large shortage for which the partnership failed to account; held, if the scale was a short one and was purposely so made by the surviving partner, it should not control, and that if a mistake was made in the inventory, the executor should not be bound thereby.—Porter v. Long, 124 Mich. 584.

D. ALLOWANCE TO WIDOW AND CHILDREN.

§ 105. In general; nature of right.

Amount allowable or proper, see post § 106.
Amount allowable in estates under $150, see post § 107.
Household furniture and property allowances, see post § 108.
Allowance from insolvent estates, see post § 109.
Bar or release or right, see post § 110.
Effect of will or other provision, see post § 111.
Commencement and duration of allowance or payment, see post § 112.
Statutory allowances to widow and children out of personalty and for support, see Jud. Act, chap. LVII, § 1; Comp. L. 1915, § 13913.
Allowance for widow and family, see also Jud. Act, chap. LII, § 22; Comp. L. 1915, § 13794.

¶ 334. How. St., § 5755, which provides that a widow may remain in the dwelling house of her husband one year after his death, without being chargeable with rent therefor, and shall have her reasonable sustenance out of his estate for one year, gives her the absolute right to such sustenance for one year from her husband's death.—Bacon v. Kent Probate Judge, 100 Mich. 183.

¶ 335. Widow held entitled to remain in possession of premises belonging to her husband without accounting for rents and profits.—Kitchell v. Mudgett, 37 Mich. 81.

¶ 336. The right of a widow to an allowance for her support during the pendency of a suit over her husband's will is a personal right, and not assignable, therefore an assignment to her attorney of all her right, title, and interest in the estate, to secure advances made by him to her, does not assign her right to the allowance; and if under such circumstances the allowance is paid in fact, but not in form, to him, and is credited by him to her account, it constitutes a payment to her.—In re Service's Estate, 155 Mich. 179.

¶ 337. A widow's right to an allowance for support is not assignable.—Hackley v. Muskegon Circuit Judge, 58 Mich. 454.

§ 106. Amount allowable or proper.

Allowance in estates below $150, see post § 107.
Power of executors under will to fix amount of allowance, see also post ¶ 360.

¶ 338. It is for the probate court to determine, upon proper showing, the allowance to be made for the proper support of the widow and minor children during the progress of the settlement of an estate which is specifically devised and bequeathed, and the proportion each part of the estate shall contribute to the payment of such allowance.—North v. Tuscola Probate Judge, 84 Mich. 69.

¶ 339. A widow's allowance of $800 by the probate court pending settlement of an estate, it including $300 additional made on ascertaining that she must account for rents of the homestead, was not disturbed on appeal in the absence of proof that such allowance was an abuse of discretion.—In re Estate of Power, 92 Mich. 106.

¶ 340. An allowance to a widow, out of an estate consisting of $9,000 in cash, of $15 per week during the twenty-two months of her widowhood, is held not to have been excessive.—Bacon v. Kent Probate Judge, 100 Mich. 183.

¶ 341. The amount allowed from the estate of intestate for the care, maintenance and support of one of the minor wards, was not excessive, where in settlement between such ward and her guardian, it appeared that such amount was proportionate to the amounts spent for the support and maintenance of intestate's other minor children.—Alexander v. Hillebrand, 140 Mich. 490.

§ 107. ——Estates below $150.

¶ 342. Under Comp. L. 1897, § 9322, subd. 4, providing that if the entire estate of a decedent does not exceed $150 over and above the allowance of wearing apparel and household furniture to the widow provided by section 9322, subd. 1, the probate court may assign the entire estate to the widow and children, the widow acquires no property under said subdivision, except by order of the probate court.—Stanton v. Foster, 122 Mich. 219.

§ 108. Household furniture and property allowances.

Right of widow to household furniture and specific property, see Jud. Act, chap. LVII, § 1, ¶ 1; Comp. L. 1915, § 13913, ¶ 1.

¶ 343. Whether the intestate's widow is entitled to the possession of any particular part of his household furniture and property without an order of the probate court setting apart the same to her, quære.—Howard v. Patrick, 38 Mich. 795.

§ 109. From insolvent estates.

See also post ¶ 370.

¶ 344. The allowance to a widow and children out of the personal estate of a deceased person which may be allowed by the probate court under Comp. L. 1897, § 9322, subd. 2, providing for such allowance "which, in the case of an insolvent estate, shall not be longer than one year after granting administration, nor for any time after the dower and personal estate shall be assigned to the widow," continues until the estate is distributed, as the words, "nor for any time after the dower and personal estate shall be assigned to the widow," are not a limitation affecting all cases, but refer only to estates which are insolvent.—Marskey v. Lawrence, 121 Mich. 577.

¶ 345. A probate judge has no authority to grant a widow an allowance beyond the period of one year where the estate is insolvent.—McDonald v. Hollywood's Estate, 130 Mich. 691.

¶ 346. Decedent's widow and children will not be compelled in a court of equity, as a condition to their being allowed an injunction restraining the application of the general assets to the payment of the trade debts for which trade assets were deficient, to refund amounts which had been allowed to them for their support out of the funds of the estate when the same was solvent.—Frey v. Eisenhardt, 116 Mich. 160.

§ 110. Bar or release of right.

Effect of will or other provision, see post § 111.

Effect of provision for widow in agreements of settlement, see ante ¶¶ 4, 6.

¶ 347. A widow who has wrongfully converted the entire estate of her husband is not entitled to an additional widow's allowance after the sum of $1,000 has been set aside for that purpose under Comp. L. 1897, § 9322, subdivision 2.—Maney v. Casserly, 134 Mich. 252.

¶ 348. An antenuptial agreement, releasing dower and all right to share in husband's estate, does not exclude statutory allowances for support pending administration.—Pulling v. Durfee, 85 Mich. 34.

¶ 349. A contract between husband and wife wherein they mutually agree to separate and live apart, and a property settlement between them wherein he agrees to give her cash and notes "which shall be in full claim to and right for dower, support and of all claims of every name, nature and description," and the wife agrees to transfer her interest in the furniture and to execute a deed releasing her right of dower, will prevent the wife from enforcing any claims against the husband's estate as his widow when the contract has been fully executed.—Bechtel v. Barton, 147 Mich. 318.

¶ 350. A wife is not barred of her statutory allowance under Comp. L. 1897, § 8940, providing for her support out of the estate during administration, by a postnuptial agreement by which she was to receive certain property "in full satisfaction of all my dower rights or interests in the lands and property of the said H. B. * * * intending to bar myself of all rights and interest in any and all of the property of said H. B. to which I might become entitled by reason of being the wife of the said H. B. except the right of support and maintenance out of said property during the lifetime of said H. B."—Bliss v. Livingston Probate Judge, 149 Mich. 271.

§ 111. ——Effect of will or other provision.

Validity, operation and effect of will in general, see Will, VII.

¶ 351. A will disposing of all the testator's estate, and making no provision for the widow, cannot affect her right to allowances under Comp. L. 1871, § 4377, How St., § 5847, subd. 1.—Miller v. Stepper, 32 Mich. 194.

¶ 352. Comp. L. 1871, § 4350, How. St., § 5813, authorizes the probate court to make a reasonable allowance for the support of a testator's widow and minor children while the estate is being settled. Held, that such allowance may be proper where there are no children and the widow has a legacy.—Moore v. Moore, 48 Mich. 271.

¶ 353. Under Comp. L. 1897, § 9289, authorizing the probate court to make allowances for the widow and minor children during the settlement of an estate, it is within the discretion of the probate court to allow the widow a weekly sum for one year, notwithstanding her written election to take under the will which provides that a devise shall be in lieu of all other rights, claims and demands.—Hill v. Kalamazoo Probate Judge, 128 Mich. 77.

¶ 354. A widow who accepts a year's allowance for her support from her deceased husband's estate, is not entitled to receive also the income for that period from his real estate although devised to her for life.—In re Stetson's Appeal, 184 Mich. 402.

§ 112. Commencement and duration of allowance or payments.

See also post ¶ 365.

¶ 355. Under How. St., § 5755, a widow is entitled as a matter of right to her reasonable sustenance out of the estate of her deceased husband for one year after his death; and where he died testate the probate judge may use discretion as to continuing the allowance during the progress of the settlement of the estate, but never for a longer period than until the widow's share is assigned to her.—Pulling v. Wayne Probate Judge, 88 Mich. 387.

¶ 356. Where no assets come into the hands of the administrator until after the remarriage of the widow, which occurs about twenty-two months after the husband's death, the probate court has power, upon her application made after her remarriage, to grant her an allowance covering the entire period of her widowhood.—Bacon v. Kent Probate Judge, 100 Mich. 183.

¶ 357. An order of distribution, does not operate as a settlement of an estate, so as to terminate an allowance to a widow and children under Comp. L. 1897, § 9322, subd. 2, providing for such allowance during the progress of the settlement of the estate, as the allowance continues until the estate is in fact distributed, there being an appeal allowed from the order of distribution to the circuit court.—Marskey v. Lawrence, 121 Mich. 577.

¶ 358. The rule that an allowance for support to a widow and children, under Comp. L. 1897, § 9322, subd. 2, is not terminated by the making of an order of distribution, but continues until the actual distribution, is not unreasonable as allowing an appeal from the order of distribution whereby a widow through collusion might continue her allowance for an unreasonable length of time, as the order for allowance is subject to rescission or modification at any time.—Marskey v. Lawrence, 121 Mich. 577.

§ 113. Petition, notice and procedure to secure allowance.

Hearing, issues and orders or decrees, see post § 114.
Right to further allowance, see post § 115.
Actions for the assignment of dower, see Dower § 40.
Waiver of notice by representative on hearing for widow's allowance, see Prob. Ct. Rule 9.
Service of notice of hearing on petition for widow's allowance on representative, see Prob. Ct. Rule 9.

¶ 359. No formal or sworn petition is required to be presented by a widow to the probate court to obtain an order for an allowance for her support, under How. St., § 5847.—Freeman v. Washtenaw Probate Judge, 79 Mich. 390.

¶ 360. Although a will gives the executors discretion in fixing the amount of the allowance for the widow and children of a deceased son of the testator, a petition alleging the refusal and neglect on the part of the executors to pay any allowances shows facts sufficient to give the Probate Court jurisdiction under Pub. Acts of 1899, No. 253, to determine the amount of the allowance and decree its payment.—Cole v. Cole's Estate, 125 Mich. 655.

¶ 361. An administrator is entitled to notice of the application of the widow for an allowance for her support pending the settlement of the estate, under How. St., § 5847, and to be heard on such allowance, and an order made without such notice is void.—Freeman v. Washtenaw Probate Judge, 79 Mich. 390.

¶ 362. There is no statute requiring written notice to be given to an administrator of the application of the widow for an allowance for her support pending the settlement of the estate.—Bacon v. Kent Probate Judge, 100 Mich. 183.

¶ 363. Where, in response to an oral notice of an application for a widow's allowance the administrator appears, and is consulted by the court, and furnishes the information upon which the order for an allowance is based, the probate court acquires jurisdiction to act.—Bacon v. Kent Probate Judge, 100 Mich. 183.

§ 114. ——Hearing, issues and orders or decrees.

Note relating to appeals from orders of probate court, see post § 197.

Appeals from order for allowance to circuit court, see Probate Courts, III.

Writ of error from circuit judgment on appeal to supreme court, see Appeal.

¶ 364. In a proceeding to administer an estate where a widow makes a claim against the estate and the representative of the estate denies the validity of her marriage to the intestate the probate court may determine the issue of whether there was a marriage.—Bechtel v. Barton, 147 Mich. 318.

¶ 365. The statute (see How. St., § 5813) contemplates that there shall be no unnecessary delay in setting off to the widow the statutory allowances to which she is entitled as matter of right from the property of her deceased husband; and where on appeal the action of the probate judge in denying allowances has been reversed in the circuit court, the fact that a motion has been made and is pending in the circuit court to set aside its order is no valid reason for any further delay by the probate judge in setting off these allowances.—People ex rel. Curtis v. Cass County Probate Judge, 35 Mich. 220.

¶ 366. An entry in the probate judge's docket under the word "Remarks," to the effect that "widow allowed net income for support" made pursuant to a petition of the widow for support pending settlement of the estate, did not assume the form of an order and was not considered on appeal from a decree approving payments to the widow by the executor and trustee.—Dickinson v. Henderson, 122 Mich. 583.

¶ 367. A probate decree allowing a sum certain to the widow for family expenses for the first year will not be construed by the circuit court as having been a consent decree, designed to become a substitute for a provision in the will making an allowance annually of an equal sum as a bequest to the widow, where the probate decree was based on a petition which reserved the widow's right to elect for or against the will, and where there is not strong proof that the parties so intended to substitute the allowance for the testamentary provision, the presumption being in favor of an allowance in addition to the one made by the will.—Houghteling v. Stockbridge, 136 Mich. 544.

¶ 368. Orders for allowances to widows, under How. St., § 5847, are in the discretion of the probate judge, and he may modify or rescind them at any time, and appellate courts will not interfere, except where there has been an abuse of discretion.—Freeman v. Washtenaw Probate Judge, 79 Mich. 390.

¶ 369. The entry of an inoperative order closing an estate will not prevent the probate judge from entertaining a petition for the maintenance of the widow and minor children under How. St., § 5813 during the progress of the settlement of the estate, the year for the settlement of the estate not having elapsed when the order was made.—North v. Van Tassel, Judge, 84 Mich. 69.

¶ 370. An order of a probate judge granting a widow an allowance for more than a year may be rescinded where it appears that the estate is insolvent and allowance for more than one year forbidden under Comp. L. 1897, § 9322, subd. 2, and upon such rescission the court may make such modification as may seem proper with reference to instalments due but not yet paid.—McDonald v. Hollywood's Estate, 130 Mich. 691.

§ 115. Further allowances.

¶ 371. Where an allowance for one year has been made to a widow out of her husband's estate the probate court may require her to show her circumstances before a further allowance is made.—Pulling v. Wayne Probate Judge, 88 Mich. 387.

E. MANAGEMENT, CUSTODY AND DISPOSAL.

1. In General.

§ 116. Acts or disposals before letters.

See also ante ¶ 267.

Acts without letters, see also ante ¶ 174.

Effect of acts before appointment, see also ante ¶ 182.

Suit before letters, see ante § 88.

Liability of representative for acts or disposals before letters, see Jud. Act, chap. LIII, § 9, Comp. L. 1915, § 13827.

¶ 372. Where one interferes with the property of a deceased person, and sells a portion of it without right, and is afterwards appointed administrator on such person's estate, he is not estopped by his prior acts from recovering the property for the estate.—Gilkey v. Hamilton, 22 Mich. 283.

¶ 373. The widow and heirs of a shareholder in a corporation, thinking to avoid the expense of administration, took his certificate of shares and indorsed their names upon it, and then left it with one of their number to be sold for the benefit of all. He, instead of selling it, pledged it for his own debt, and the pledgee was recognized by the corporation as the owner of the stock, and disposed of it as owner. The widow was subsequently appointed administratrix of the shareholder's estate, and brought trover against the pledgee for converting the stock. Held, that she could recover.—Morton v. Preston, 18 Mich. 60.

§ 117. Management, use or application of properties.

Separate fund and management of same, see post § 118.
Continuing business or completing contracts, see post § 119.
Speculating or engaging in new enterprises, see post § 120.
Discharge of incumbrances on land, redemption, see post § 121.
Sales or disposal of personalty, see post § 122.
Release, waiver or compromise of rights, see post § 123.
Surrender of trusts, pledges and property of others, see post § 124.
Representative's rights and title in property of estate, see ante, IV, C.
Representative's authority to contract and deal for estate in general, see ante §§ 55, 56.
Representative's dealings with shares and properties, see post, X, A.
Accountability of representative for rents, profits and interest, and losses or depreciation, see post, X, C.
Power of representative to compromise continuing claim for rent under lease by purchase of leased property, see ante ¶ 7.
Directions in will as to management, construction of such directions and implications therefrom, see Wills, VI, F.

¶ 374. An administrator has no authority to convert the assets to his private use, or to speculate with the moneys of the estate, or to invest them in trade or manufacturing business, either upon his own account or that of the estate.—Ward v. Tinkham, 65 Mich. 695.

¶ 375. An administrator cannot, by misapplying trust funds belonging to the estate in the purchase of a homestead, obtain a right superior to that of the creditors who have been injured by such application.—Pierce v. Holzer, 65 Mich. 263.

§ 118. Separate funds and management of same.

Liability for interest on money or property held in management of funds and assets, see post § 286.

¶ 376. Where the testator provides for the creation of separate funds, the executor is not entitled to use one fund to augment the other.—Draper v. Brown, 153 Mich. 120.

¶ 377. Where the testator provides for the creation of a trust with respect to certain realty, and also for the creation of a residuary fund, the executor is entitled to use the income from the residuary estate without the consent of the beneficiary thereof for the purpose of keeping down interest charges upon the real estate and preventing foreclosure.—Draper v. Brown, 153 Mich. 120.

§ 119. Continuing business or completing contracts.

Representative's authority to contract for estate, see ante §§ 55, 56.
Liability of representative for losses in conduct of business, see post § 279.

¶ 378. The duty of administrators is to settle estates, and divide them among the heirs. They cannot carry on the business in which the deceased was engaged, except at their peril.—Brush v. Beecher, 110 Mich. 597.

¶ 379. Where an executor or administrator, instead of closing out decedent's business with reasonable promptness, assumes, with the consent of the parties interested, to conduct the same as a going concern for a series of years, contracting extensive debts and sustaining heavy losses, only the trade assets—i. e., the property employed in the business or resulting from it—can be subjected to the payment of such debts.—Frey v. Eisenhardt, 116 Mich. 160.

¶ 380. A surviving partner cannot, by will, confer upon his executor a right to continue the business for any longer period than he himself might lawfully have continued the same, which is limited to such time as is necessary to close out the business without sacrificing it.—Frey v. Eisenhardt, 116 Mich. 160.

§ 120. Speculating or engaging in new enterprises.

Liability of representative for losses incurred in speculation or conduct of business, see post § 279.

¶ 381. An administrator has no authority to convert the assets to his private use, nor to speculate with the moneys of the estate, nor to invest them in trade or manufacturing business, either upon his own account or that of the estate.—Ward v. Tinkham, 65 Mich. 695.

¶ 382. A purchase by an administrator of an undivided interest in pine lands from his decedent's partner and an arrangement for the working up and selling of timber will be upheld where the arrangement was in good faith and for the best interests of the estate.—Loomis v. Armstrong, 63 Mich. 355.

§ 121. Discharge of incumbrances on land, redemption.

Authority of representative to borrow money to discharge incumbrance, see also ante ¶ 181.
Mortgage of lands under statutes for payment of debts, see post §§ 222-257.
Realty purchased by representative on execution sale for debt due estate or on foreclosure of mortgage held by estate, see Jud. Act, chap. LIV, § 13, Comp. L. 1915, § 13857.

Right of representative to receive and receipt for money from redemption of mortgage or mortgage sale, see Jud. Act, chap. LIV, § 12, Comp. L. 1915, § 13856.

¶ 383. An administrator entitled under the statute to the possession of his intestate's lands has such an interest as entitles him to redeem, or to compel a release of a satisfied mortgage.—Enos v. Sutherland, 11 Mich. 538.

¶ 384. Where the payment of mortgages is not a duty devolved upon the executor by will, he has no authority to pay them.—Draper v. Brown, 153 Mich. 120.

¶ 385. In the absence of any proof that the condition of an estate did not warrant an administrator in redeeming from a mortgage, it will be presumed that in redeeming he acted in the discharge of his duty.—Goodrich v. Leland, 18 Mich. 110.

§ 122. Sales or disposal of personalty.

Power to sell or dispose of realty, see post § 128.

Appealability of order of probate court for sale of perishable personalty, see Probate Courts, III.

Verified report of sale of personal property to be filed by representative, see Prob. Ct. Rule 7.

¶ 386. An administrator, as the holder of the legal title to the personal property of his intestate, has the right to take possession of and sell such parts of the personal estate as may be necessary, regardless of any division or disposition made by the heirs or distributees.—Brobst v. Brobst, 190 Mich. 63.

¶ 387. An administrator may lawfully sell at private sale, and assign to the purchaser, his interest in a mortgage and the accompanying notes held by the decedent as pledgee at the time of his death, without first demanding payment of the pledgor, whose rights are not affected by such transfer.—Drake v. Cloonan, 99 Mich. 121.

¶ 388. It is within the power of an administrator to warrant the soundness of personal property belonging to the estate upon disposing of the same at private sale.—Boltwood v. Miller, 112 Mich. 657.

§ 123. Release, waiver or compromise of rights.

Waiver or release of rights or equities in management or disposal of realty, see post § 135.

Compromises in actions and suits, see post § 317.

¶ 389. An executor has no power, on receiving from one of two residuary legatees a note which in fact belongs to the estate, but which the legatee claims to own as a gift from the testator, to authorize the legatee to collect the note and convert the proceeds to her own use.—Harris v. Cable, 104 Mich. 365.

§ 124. Surrender of trusts, pledges and property of others.

Goods held by decedent as agent, bailee or trustee, see ante § 81.

Power of representative to sell pledges, see ante ¶ 387.

¶ 390. Equity will require an executor to deliver up a certificate of stock to its true owner, where the debt for which it came into the decedent's control as collateral security was paid him in his lifetime, notwithstanding the certificate was issued in the name of and was in the possession of the deceased at his death.—Strong v. Chaney, 182 Mich. 37.

¶ 391. One who has been appointed receiver as successor to a receiver who has died, may demand and recover from his executors trust funds belonging to the receivership, and where the fund is capable of identification, may follow it and claim it.—Avery v. Preston Nat. Bank, 132 Mich. 445.

2. Real Property.

§ 125. In general.

Acts before letters, see ante § 116.

Discharge of incumbrances on land and redemption, see ante § 121.

Right and authority of representative to petition for street improvement, see ante ¶ 204.

¶ 392. An executor has no power to dispose of lands by virtue of his office, and whenever he undertakes to meddle with lands without authority, he cannot bind them any more than a stranger. The owner, whether devisee or otherwise, is in no way affected by his action, which is void for all purposes.—Frost v. Atwood, 73 Mich. 67.

§ 126. Possessory rights and control over lands.

Surrender or loss of possession, see post § 127.

Power to sell or dispose, see post § 128.

Completion of contracts for conveyance of land, see post § 129.

Power to lease lands in possession, see post § 130.

Rights to rents and profits, see post § 131.

Payment of taxes and current charges, see post § 132.

Chattel interests in land and mortgages, see post §§ 133, 134.

Waiver or release of rights or equities, see post § 135.

Requisites and sufficiency of deeds, see post § 136.

Title and rights of representative in realty, see ante §§ 61-63.

Right to ejectment and possessory actions for land, see post § 308.
Right to possession of lands before recourse for debts, see post § 226.
Right to possession of land by person other than representative, see post, V, F.
Right of devisees to possession of devised lands, see also post ¶¶ 1151, 1152.

¶ 393. The law, as it stood in R. S. 1846 (Comp. L. 1857, § 2904), did not require the administrator to take possession of the real estate, but gave him the right to do so when necessary for the payment of debts, etc. It left the right of possession in the heirs until the executor or administrator took possession or otherwise claimed that right under the statute. Until such possession was so taken or claimed the heirs could enter upon the land without awaiting the final settlement of the estate; or in their own names could bring ejectment, or maintain summary proceedings for its recovery against all persons except the administrator or those holding under him.—Streeter v. Paton, 7 Mich. 341; Marvin v. Schilling, 12 Mich. 356; Campau v. Campau, 19 Mich. 116; Howard v. Patrick, 38 Mich. 795; and see also Brown v. Forsche, 43 Mich. 492, as to the effect of the amendment in Comp. L. 1871.

¶ 394. Comp. L. 1857, § 2904, did not contemplate that the administrator would exercise his right of possession unless necessary; if, without any necessity, he should take possession, or should exercise his powers arbitrarily or oppressively, equity would restrain him.—Holbrook v. Campau, 22 Mich. 288.

¶ 395. An executor's right under How. St., § 5875, to possession of decedent's real estate is only to be exercised for the purposes of the administration and settlement of the estate; and where an executor holding sufficient personalty to pay all claims against the estate enters upon land peaceably held by a devisee, and carries away wheat growing thereon at the time of testator's death, he is liable to the devisee in trover.—Rough v. Womer, 76 Mich. 375.

¶ 396. An administrator's forcible ouster of a guardian from the possession of the real estate of heirs who are his wards cannot be legalized by facts occurring after the proceedings were begun.—Carpenter v. Harris, 51 Mich. 223.

¶ 397. On the death or removal of the administrator, his possessory right, and the rents and profits connected with it, pass to his successor, who may maintain ejectment to recover possession from one claiming under the first administrator. And this notwithstanding the first administrator was one of several heirs, and had made a contract in his own name to sell the lands to the person in possession.—Kline v. Moulton, 11 Mich. 370.

§ 127. ——Surrender or loss of possession.

Loss of possession by representative, see also ante ¶ 199.

¶ 398. The power conferred upon executors and administrators to take possession of the decedent's realty is purely statutory, and may be taken away as well after as before the administrator has taken possession.—Campau v. Campau, 25 Mich. 127.

¶ 399. A proceeding by the administrator to have the lands partitioned is a recognition of the fact that his further possession is unnecessary, and should be treated as a surrender of the discretionary right to such possession.—Holbrook v. Campau, 22 Mich. 288.

¶ 400. An heir at law may recover in ejectment his undivided interest in lands whereof his ancestor died seized, as against the administrator of such ancestor's estate, in the absence of any showing of authority in the administrator from the probate court to take possession of such lands.—Warren v. Tobey, 32 Mich. 45.

§ 128. Power to sell or dispose.

Sale or disposal of personalty, see ante § 122.
Sales to pay debts and charges on estate, see post, VII.
Effect of representative's unauthorized disposal of lands, see also ante ¶ 392.
Statutory power of chancery to direct and authorize sale or disposal of lands held by executors on trust, see Jud. Act, chap. XIX, §§ 55-57; Comp. L. 1915, §§ 12709-12711.
Sale of real estate by representative to preserve the estate, see Jud. Act, chap. LIX, § 1, ¶ 2; Comp. L. 1915, § 13987, ¶ 2.
Petition for sale of real estate, see Jud. Act, chap. LIX, § 3; Comp. L. 1915, § 13989.
Notice and hearing on petition for sale of realty, see Jud. Act, chap. LIX, §§ 3-7; Comp. L. 1915, §§ 13989-13993.
Order for sale of realty, see Jud. Act, chap. LIX, §§ 12, 13; Comp. L. 1915, §§ 13998, 13999.

¶ 401. Property conveyed to an administrator for the estate's benefit and not taken on execution or mortgage sale can be sold without license.—Little v. Lesia, 5 Mich. 119; Williams v. Towl, 65 Mich. 204.

¶ 402. A testator by his will directed his executors or administrators to sell his real estate to the best advantage and invest the proceeds. Held, that this was a general power in trust, and that the executors or administrators were authorized to sell and convey such real estate without a license from the probate court.—Battelle v. Parks, 2 Mich. 531; King v. Merritt, 67 Mich. 194.

¶ 403. On a bill filed by tenants in common, an administrator, who was proceeding to sell under a probate license a larger interest in the lands than the estate had, was enjoined from making the sale until the interest of the intestate was ascertained and settled.—Thayer v. Lane, H. 247.

¶ 404. An administrator cannot make a public plat of his intestate's lands under a probate license to sell them.—People ex rel. Lothrop v. Board of Public Works, 41 Mich. 724.

¶ 405. An administrator is in no sense the owner of his intestate's land. The only authority he has is such as his license gives him, and it is in the nature of a power, and not a proprietary interest. He cannot make a statutory plat.—People ex rel. Lothrop v. Board of Public Works, 41 Mich. 724.

¶ 406. Chapter 244, Comp. Laws 1897, limited the authority of the probate judge to authorize sales of real estate to a value of five hundred dollars where necessary to preserve said estate. Act No. 261, Pub. Acts 1905, amended the former statute, and gave him power to authorize unlimited sales. Held, that Act No. 209, Pub. Acts 1909, referred to the Act of 1897 as amended by the Act of 1905, and under it the probate judge was not limited to authorize sales of only the value of five hundred dollars.—Klatt v. Wayne Probate Judge, 159 Mich. 203.

¶ 407. Under Pub. Acts 1909, No. 209, § 1, as amended by Act No. 162, Pub. Acts 1911, How. 2nd Ed., § 11287, authorizing the probate court to order the sale of a decedent's real estate, or any interest therein, upon petition of the executor, when such a sale is necessary to preserve the estate or prevent a sacrifice, or is for the best interests of the persons interested as devisees, the majority in interest approving the application, held that the probate court had jurisdiction to order the sale of the interest of the estate of a deceased person in certain real estate for the purpose of preserving the same on petition by the executrix of the estate, who was also the life tenant of such interest, one of three legatees of the proceeds of the interest after the expiration of the life estate having assented to such sale.—In re Rodgers' Estate, 192 Mich. 156.

¶ 408. The power given the probate court by Pub. Acts 1909, No. 209, How. 2nd Ed., § 11287, as amended by Pub. Acts 1911, No. 162, to sell land belonging to an estate of a deceased person on petition of the executor, is in no wise or in any degree impaired by Comp. Laws 1897, § 9234 et seq., How. 2nd Ed., § 10977, which gives the owner of a life estate the privilege of procuring a sale and distribution in the chancery court, even where the executor petitioning for such sale in the probate court is also life tenant in the land sought to be sold.—In re Rodgers' Estate, 192 Mich. 156.

¶ 409. Laws 1840, Act No. 88, § 4, giving the probate court power to license executors and administrators to make conveyances for the purpose of carrying out contracts of their decedent, did not require that such deeds should be confirmed by the court, and if it did such confirmation would be presumed after a lapse of forty years.—King v. Merritt, 67 Mich. 194.

§ 129. Completion of contracts for conveyance of land.

Authority of representative to contract for estate in general, see ante §§ 55, 56.

Suits for completion of contracts by assignees of foreign representative, see also ante ¶ 68.

Pleading, proof and procedure in specific performance suit, see Specific Performance, IV.

Right to specific performance of decedent's contract for conveyance of land, see Jud. Act, chap. LX, § 1; Comp. L. 1915, § 14038.

Procedure for enforcement of specific performance of decedent's contract to convey land, see Jud. Act, chap. LX, §§ 2-10; Comp. L. 1915, §§ 14039-14047.

§ 130. Power to lease lands in possession.

¶ 410. A two-year lease from executors whose authority to lease is derived from How. St., § 5875, creates a tenancy from year to year only, since the executor taking possession under that statute may only lease from "year to year", and is terminable, under How. St., § 5774, at the expiration of one year from the time of service of notice to quit.—Grady v. Warrell, 105 Mich. 310.

¶ 411. It cannot be presumed that either executors or trustees have power to bind their estate by a lease for five years, or by oral representations concerning its condition which result in large unliquidated damages.—Weise v. Rich, 77 Mich. 325.

§ 131. Right to rents and profits.

Title and interest of representative in rents and profits, see ante § 62.

Representative's accountability for rents and profits, see post § 278.

Right of widow to share of rents and profits of land in which she is dowable, see Dower § 57.

¶ 412. The right of an administrator, under said Comp. L. 1857, § 2904, to the possession of the real estate of his intestate, and the rents and profits thereof, pending the settlement of the estate, was a mere statute power for the benefit of creditors, and not an estate or right of property, nor a chattel interest which the administrator could dispose of as such.—Kline v. Moulton, 11 Mich. 370; Campau v. Campau, 25 Mich. 127; Campau v. Campau, 19 Mich. 116.

¶ 413. Having a right to the possession the heirs and devisees would not be liable to the executor or administrator for the rents and profits during their occupancy, prior to his claiming possession, unless they were needed for the payment of debts, etc.—Howard v. Patrick, 38 Mich. 795.

§ 132. Payment of taxes and current charges.

¶ 414. An executor of an estate is bound to pay taxes upon the real estate of the decedent and to prevent the property from being sold for taxes.—Long v. Landman, 118 Mich. 174.

§ 133. Chattel interests and equities in lands.

¶ 415. An administrator has power to assign, without order from probate court, a chattel interest—such as a mere right of decedent to acquire an interest in land.—Gustin v. Union School District of Bay City, 94 Mich. 502.

¶ 416. An administrator cannot sell the interest of the estate in an executory contract for the purchase of lands except as real estate and after license.—Baxter v. Robinson, 11 Mich. 520.

¶ 417. A lease of land for years, signed by both parties, contained a provision whereby the lessor agreed to execute to the lessee or his assigns a deed of the premises at the expiration of the lease upon payment of a certain sum, provided the lessor or his assigns should in writing ask for such deed at any time during the three months before the expiration of the lease. The lessee's assignee dying before the term expired, his administrator assigned the lease to complainant, who paid the required sum during the three months. Held, that as decedent had merely a right to acquire an interest in the land, his rights passed to his administrator, not to his heir, and that complainant by making the payment became entitled to a deed.—Gustin v. Union School District of Bay City, 94 Mich. 502.

¶ 418. Comp. Laws 1897, § 9361 (How. Ann. St., 2nd Ed., § 11072), relating to the approval by the judge of probate of a sale of land by an executor or administrator, applies only where the representative has taken title to real estate, and has no application to a transfer by the representative, before the expiration of the period of redemption, of equitable interests as purchaser at a foreclosure sale.—Roff v. Miller, 189 Mich. 558; McCreery v. Roff, Id.

¶ 419. An administrator cannot be held liable for not receiving and accounting for funds arising from the sale of his intestate's partnership interest in real estate, when the whole property was needed to satisfy the debts of the firm, and the sale was made to the surviving partner in order to transfer to him the legal title to be used in settling the business.—Merritt v. Dickey, 38 Mich. 41.

§ 134. Mortgages and securities belonging to estate.

Mortgages to pay debts or charges on estate, see post, VII.

Mortgages as incidents of the debt for purpose of descent, see also Descent § 8.

¶ 420. An administrator may properly sell a mortgage security of an estate at a discount in order to obtain necessary funds for the use of the estate.—In re Thompson's Estate, 183 Mich. 618.

¶ 421. It being competent for the administrator to dispose of a mortgage belonging to his intestate, the mortgagor has a right to rely upon the administrator's statements as to the present ownership of such mortgage, and if he makes payment in good faith to the person to whom the administrator says it belongs he cannot be held liable upon it afterwards.—Reynolds v. Smith, 57 Mich. 194.

§ 135. Waiver or release of rights and equities.

Release or waiver of rights in management or disposal of personalty, see ante § 123.

Surrender or loss of possession, see ante § 127.

¶ 422. An administrator, as such, has no authority to waive or release a contract made by his intestate for the purchase of lands, unless the personal property is insufficient to pay the debts; and then only by order of the probate court, duly obtained.—Hunt v. Thorn, 2 Mich. 213.

¶ 423. An administrator cannot waive a conveyance made to his decedent, either directly or indirectly; and if it is not avoided by the heirs who have the title by descent, he cannot sue the grantor to recover the consideration as if the transaction had been void. And if any of the heirs have reconveyed their interest to the grantor, the administrator is not concerned with the fairness of the latter's dealings towards them, but it is for the heirs to seek redress on their own complaint.—Campbell v. Kuhn, 45 Mich. 513.

§ 136. Requisites and sufficiency of deeds or other instruments.

Deeds by representatives as such as basis for estoppels, see Estoppel § 11.

¶ 424. Where a special statute authorized a named executor to sell lands, provided the approval of the probate judge is indorsed on the deed, no approval or record of approval need appear elsewhere than on the deed.—King v. Merritt, 67 Mich. 194.

¶ 425. The authority of an executor, who has given a bond under the statute, he being also residuary legatee, to sell the real estate is derived from his letters testamentary and the statute, and in selling he must act officially, the same as if acting under a license from the probate court; and his individual deed will only convey the land subject to the lien of creditors on the land.—Lafferty v. People's Sav. Bank, 76 Mich. 35.

F. POSSESSION OR DEALINGS BY PERSONS OTHER THAN REPRESENTATIVES.

§ 137. In general.

Right to follow property for creditors or heirs, see post § 138.

Purchase of property of estate, see post § 140.

Right of broker to sell out where representatives of deceased principal decline to supply margins, see Brokers ¶ 41.

¶ 426. Whoever, on the death of an intestate, takes possession and assumes control of any of his personal property, thereby becomes responsible for it to the administrator when appointed. He cannot safely deliver it to any one except the administrator or some one else who shows a better right to it than himself. This mere possession of such property, and consequent duty to preserve it, entitles the possessor to the ordinary legal remedies for its protection against any one who interferes with it without better right; and the administrator of such possessor succeeds to all his rights and remedies respecting such possession, until administration on the death of the owner.—Cullen v. O'Hara, 1 Mich. 132.

¶ 427. One lawfully in possession of a decedent's personalty prior to the appointment of an administrator is entitled to retain possession as against the decedent's vendee who has made part payment, and who has tendered the rest of the price to decedent's widow and to the person in possession.—Burke v. Dunn, 117 Mich. 430.

¶ 428. Devisee in possession before devisor's death and remaining therein need not apply to probate court for possession, his right being undisputed, and rents and profits not being needed for purposes of administration.—Rough v. Warner, 76 Mich. 375.

¶ 429. Under How. St., § 5744, an heir's right to participate in the rents and profits does not begin to run until proper steps have been taken for an assignment of dower or partition of the estate; so held where the widow, who was also administratrix, continued in the possession of the lands without ousting any heir.—Benedict v. Beurmann, 90 Mich. 396.

§ 138. Right to follow property for creditors or heirs.

Subjection of land charged with legacies, see post § 260.

Lands in hands of heirs' grantees, as assets for payment, see post § 215.

¶ 430. The personal creditors of an executrix who without the knowledge of the heirs has bought real property with moneys belonging to the estate and has taken conveyance thereof with habendum to herself, her heirs and assigns, cannot, on execution against her, acquire title to such real estate as against the heirs, especially if there is enough in the deed to the executrix to put them on inquiry as to the nature of her title.—Alterauge v. Christiansen, 48 Mich. 60.

¶ 431. In equity creditors can follow the funds liable for their debts into the hands of persons who know or have notice that the disposition by the administrator is fraudulent, or is for the purpose of the misapplication of the assets, as investing funds in a homestead, so long as the fund can be identified, and the sale will be avoided, or the person will be held as a trustee.—Pierce v. Holzer, 65 Mich. 263.

§ 139. Purchase of property of estate.

Purchase of property of estate by representative or in his behalf, see post §§ 271-274.

¶ 432. Any one, except the executor, may lawfully buy property at executor's sale for what it will bring.—Owen v. Potter, 115 Mich. 556.

¶ 433. The action of testator's widow and her two brothers in forming a partnership to buy at a discount claims against the estate, which was generally believed to be insolvent, and to apply them at their full value to the purchase of property belonging to the estate (an order of the probate court permitting them to be so applied to the amount of 40 per cent of the purchase price), thereby acquiring the bulk of the property of the estate at a large profit to themselves, was not fraudulent as to legatees and creditors whose claims remained unsatisfied.—Owen v. Potter, 115 Mich. 556.

VI. DEBTS AND LIABILITIES OF DECEDENT AND CLAIMS AGAINST ESTATE.

A. IN GENERAL; WHAT CONSIDERED DEBTS; DEFENSES.

[Note. In so far as a claim rests on a contract or a tort by decedent or imputable to him, the general law of contracts or torts is involved. Such law is treated in Contracts; Sales; Negotiable Instruments; Implied Contracts; Torts; Conversion; Fraud; and the like. It is not intended to encroach on such topics with this one, which treats of "claims" against the estate rather than of the causes of action out of which they arise.]

Presentment, establishment and enforcement of claims, see post, VI, C.

Debts and liabilities primarily resting on heirs or representative, see post, VI, B.

Liability of heirs, devisees and distributees for debts of estate, see post, VIII.

Liability of representative personally for debts of estate, see post, IX.

Payment and satisfaction of claims, see post, VI, D.

Recourse to land for payment of debts, see post, VII.
Claims against estate by representative as creditor, see post, X, B.

§ 140. Contract liabilities in general.

Of married women's estates, see post § 141.
Contracts payable at death or by share in estate, see post § 142.
Performance or breach occurring after death, see post § 143.
Preferred claims and rank and priorities of claims, see post § 213.
Negotiable instruments out of possession of claimant, see also post § 164.
Claim for fixed sum due from trustee, see also post ¶ 487.
Implied contract for rent by decedent's continued occupancy of premises after conveyance, see also post ¶ 606.
Liability of estate for disbursements of intermeddler made in good faith to benefit estate, see also post ¶ 972.
Occasion and grounds for implying a contract by decedent to pay for services or benefits received, see Implied Contracts, II; Payment, VI.
Right to claim reasonable value for services rendered under agreement for fixed sum, see also Contracts ¶ 1058.
Liability of grantee's estate on covenant to pay debt on transfer of mortgagor's title, see Mortgages, VII, B.
Partnership and individual debts and application of partnership assets, see Partnership, IV, C.
Contract rights and liabilities of wife in general, see Husband and Wife, IV.
Contracts for work or services in general, see Master and Servant, II.
Considerations for promises by decedent, see Contracts, V.
Validity of forbearance until death as consideration, see Contracts § 113, ¶ 473.
Liability of estate of nonresident stockholder for debts of bank, and enforcement of such liability, see also Banking ¶ 256.
Liability of estate for debts contracted when using partnership name which included name of deceased, see Pub. Acts 1917, No. 72, § 41, ¶ 10.

¶ 434. There must be either an express or an implied contract between the deceased and the claimant before there can be any recovery against the estate for services rendered the deceased.—Decker v. Kanous' Estate, 129 Mich. 146.

§ 141. ——Of married woman's estate.

¶ 435. Claimant made a contract with his wife and her father by which he agreed to pay the premiums on a life insurance policy written on the life of the father on the condition that claimant be reimbursed for the amount so advanced from the proceeds of the policy. Held, the contract related to the separate property of the deceased wife so as to entitle claimant to present his claims against her estate for the premiums advanced by him.—In re Reid's Estate, 170 Mich. 476.

¶ 436. A wife's estate is not liable for her funeral expenses where her husband is able to pay them.—Galloway v. McPherson's Estate, 67 Mich. 546.

§ 142. ——Contracts payable at death, or by share in estate.

Services rendered under terms of will for family, see also post § 152.

¶ 437. An agreement to pay for services at death is valid, and may be enforced against the estate of the promisor.—Sammon v. Wood, 107 Mich. 506.

¶ 438. Services rendered upon a decedent's promise to reward the same by provision in his will, or, in case of his death without a will, to give an interest in a farm, or a certain sum of money, held sufficient ground for a valid claim against his estate.—Sword v. Keith, 31 Mich. 247.

¶ 439. Where a promise is made to compensate for services by will, and the promisor dies without so providing, the value of the services may be recovered as a claim against the estate.—In re Williams' Estate, 106 Mich. 490.

¶ 440. A son is entitled to recover from his father's estate the value of his services in working his father's farm and in taking care of his parents until their death if his father applied to him to do these things and promised that he should have pay for his services, and, also, that after his death he should have the farm, and if the value of the support and services exceeded the value of all he obtained from the farm, and no arrangement was made by which it really became his property.—Dickerson v. Dickerson, 50 Mich. 37.

§ 143. ——Performance or breach occurring after death.

¶ 441. The estate of a decedent is liable on his contract, if carried out by the other party according to its terms, although not completed until after his death.—McKeown v. Harvey, 40 Mich. 226.

¶ 442. A claim for damages arising from the breach of a warranty as to an animal delivered by an intestate to the claimant under a contract providing that, if the animal should not be returned within a given time, a specified amount would be charged to the claimant as the cost of the animal, is a claim against the estate, which must be presented to the commissioners, if any are appointed therein, as required by How. St., § 5901, although the intestate died before the time mentioned, and the title did not pass to the claimant until after his failure to return the animal at such time.—Boltwood v. Miller, 112 Mich. 657.

¶ 443. Where one agrees for himself and his administrator to compensate another for taking care of a third person during the latter's life, and the administrator refuses to carry out the agreement after the promisor's death, the fact that the person to be taken care of is still living does not affect the promisee's right of action against the administrator for the breach.—Buell v. Adams, 157 Mich. 248.

¶ 444. A woman bought land for which she agreed to pay out of her dower interest in the estate of a former husband, and she placed the dower interest in trust in the hands of a friend to apply the proceeds of it upon the purchase. She died before full payment was made and before the dower interest was entirely consumed. Held, that the sum remaining unpaid was a lawful claim against her estate.—Probasco v. Cook, 39 Mich. 714.

§ 144. Contingent and immature claims.

Presentment, hearing and enforcement of contingent and immature claims, see post § 196.

¶ 445. Notes past due and unpaid may be allowed as absolute claims in favor of the holders against the estate of a deceased indorser.—Owen v. Potter, 115 Mich. 556.

¶ 446. A bond given by directors and stockholders of a corporation to a bank to secure negotiable paper issued or to be issued and discounted in the business of such corporation during a period of one year up to a fixed sum, contemplated that the business should continue for the entire time fixed by the bond, and was a continuing guaranty, giving the right to the bank to discount and renew the company's paper up to the time of the expiration, and was not revoked upon the death of one of the obligors within the year, and therefore his estate remained liable the same as he would have been had he lived.—Home Sav. Bank v. Hosie, 119 Mich. 116.

¶ 447. Where one who has leased a piano with an option to purchase at the expiration of the term of the lease dies before the end of the lease without exercising such option, having, however, given the article to his wife, his estate is not bound to make, for the widow's benefit, the payment required for purchase.—Powell v. Eckler, 96 Mich. 538.

§ 145. Joint obligations and contribution.

Claim for contribution by surviving partner for payment of firm debts in excess of his proportion, see also post ¶ 488.

Liabilities of deceased and surviving partners in general, see Partnership, IV.

¶ 448. A claim against a surety upon his joint liability in a bond is a proper demand against his estate under Comp. L. 1871, § 4438, How. St., § 5906.—In re Stewart v. Bruen's Estate, 39 Mich. 619.

¶ 449. The fact that a note presented against an estate was signed by decedent's wife as surety would not discharge the estate; her liability is unimportant, as in the probate court no obligation but the decedent's could be established.—Johnson v. Johnson's Estate, 66 Mich. 525.

¶ 450. When one of two mortgagors, or his administrator or devisee, pays the mortgage, or redeems from it, he may maintain a claim for contribution against the estate of the other mortgagor.—Goodrich v. Leland, 18 Mich. 110.

¶ 451. A claim by a surviving partner for money advanced in excess of his proportion, on account of the debts of the firm, after its dissolution, is a proper demand for adjustment by the commissioners on the deceased partner's estate.—Wheeler v. Arnold, 30 Mich. 304.

§ 146. Taxes and insurance on real property.

¶ 452. Equity will not require the administrator of a mortgagor's estate to reimburse the holder of the first mortgage on the real property of such estate for sums advanced for insurance and taxes on the mortgaged property, where such mortgagor, for the purpose of defrauding his creditors, while insolvent furnished his daughter money with which she secured to herself the assignment of such mortgage, and where the funds in the hands of such administrator were insufficient to pay the general creditors of such decedent. Such payment if made would inure for the benefit of the holder of a second mortgage on such property, only.—Hatch v. Daugherty, 145 Mich. 569.

§ 147. Mortgage debts and other secured debts.

Effect of grant or devise subject to mortgage, see post § 148.

Mortgage of lands under statutes for payment of debts of estate, see post, VII, A.

Presentment, hearing and enforcement of mortgages and secured claims, see post § 194.

¶ 453. A mortgagor's estate is liable for any deficiency arising on the foreclosure sale, where such mortgagor, if he had lived, would have been subject to a decree both personal and for foreclosure.—Shelden v. Warner's Estate, 59 Mich. 444.

¶ 454. A personal covenant in a mortgage to pay certain debts charged on the land will bind the mortgagor's personal estate after his death.—Dennis v. Sharer, 56 Mich. 224.

§ 148. ——Effect of grant or devise subject to mortgage.

¶ 455. One owning the fee in lands which were subject to a mortgage granted the lands subject to the mortgage, reserving a life estate to himself, and by will bearing date the next day, but delivered to the grantee with the deed, devised the land to the grantee. Held, that on the death of the grantor the estate granted was immediately reduced to possession in the grantee, leaving nothing for the will to operate upon, but leaving the land charged with the mortgage, and that the grantee had no claim against the estate of the grantor to have the mortgage paid off for his benefit.—In re Wisner's Estate, 20 Mich. 442.

¶ 456. Where land descending to the heir at law of an intestate is mortgaged for the payment of a note, the burden of the payment cannot be shifted to the personalty unless the note has been proved as a claim against the estate by the mortgagee, or as a contingent claim by the heir.—Clark v. Davis, 32 Mich. 154.

¶ 457. A devisee of land mortgaged for its purchase price is not bound to pay the amounts remaining unpaid therefor unless the will so provides; it is a charge against the estate.—Enders v. Enders, 49 Mich. 182.

§ 149. Expenses of administration and attorney fees.

Reimbursement of representative for expenses of administration and attorney fees, see post § 296.

¶ 458. A probate court has no power to direct an executor to pay an attorney for services rendered the estate.—In re Bender's Estate, 154 Mich. 44.

§ 150. Expenses of last sickness and funeral.

See also post ¶ 668.

Liability of husband's estate for funeral expenses of his widow, see post ¶ 464.

¶ 459. Commissioners may properly allow claims for funeral expenses, they being made a statutory charge on the estate.—Booth v. Radford, 57 Mich. 357.

§ 151. Sustenance and expenses of decedent's family.

Rendered or changed by terms of will, see post § 152.

¶ 460. The estate of a father is not chargeable with the support of his indigent adult son.—Clinton v. Laning, 61 Mich. 355.

§ 152. ——Rendered under or charged by terms of will.

¶ 461. A mother provided in her will for the support of her daughter, who died a minor. Held, that claims for care, nursing and medical attendance for the daughter were against the mother's estate, and the daughter's administrator had nothing to do with them.—Plant v. Weeks, 39 Mich. 117.

¶ 462. There was no privity between the physicians of a widow and the executors under the husband's will, although a life estate was given to the wife, and therefore the claims of such physicians were not allowed against the husband's estate for services rendered fifteen months after the husband's death.—Gray v. Seeley's Estate, 133 Mich. 319.

¶ 463. Under a will giving possession and control of all personal property to the widow during her widowhood, with an implied right to use of the principal, a charge by the executor for care of the widow who lived with him is properly allowed in his account as a charge against the estate in question rather than against her estate.—Gee v. Hasbrouck, 128 Mich. 509.

¶ 464. The unclosed estate of a testator is chargeable with the expenses of the burial of his widow when made a charge thereon by will.—Walsh v. Backus, 183 Mich. 527.

§ 153. Alimony, current and accrued.

Enforcement of claim for alimony, see post ¶ 594.

Duty of administrator as to paying alimony pending appeal taken after decedent's death, see Divorce § 179.

¶ 465. An administrator will not be required to pay alimony or an allowance to a wife who, after her husband's death, appeals from a decree of divorce obtained by him.—Shafer v. Shafer, 30 Mich. 163.

¶ 466. Where, after a decree of divorce awarding alimony in favor of the wife, the husband made no attempt to have it modified during his lifetime, and there is no showing why such alimony as accrued between the date of the decree and the subsequent remarriage of the wife should not be paid, this amount may be allowed as a claim against the estate of the former husband.—Martin v. Thison's Estate, 153 Mich. 516.

¶ 467. A wife living apart from her husband pending a decree for divorce, and receiving from him a stated allowance, fixed by the court, for her support, without objection to the amount, cannot maintain a claim against the estate for an additional sum on the ground that the alimony was not sufficient for her necessities during the same time. The commissioners cannot review the action of the court of chancery in fixing the amount, nor can a jury, on appeal from them, do so.—Crittenden v. Schermerhorn, 39 Mich. 661.

§ 154. Claims by wife for property or money used.

Widow electing to take under will in lieu of dower as creditor of the estate, see Dower § 38.

¶ 468. A wife has no legal right to compensation from her husband's estate for personal property which, at marriage, she brought into the household for use there, and which they together have used and enjoyed in the family without agreement that she should be paid therefor.—Cranson v. Cranson, 4 Mich. 230.

§ 155. Decedent's torts.

Torts and frauds of representative, see post § 156.

¶ 469. A suit for personal injuries based on alleged negligence of an intestate, is within the jurisdiction of the claim commissioners of the probate court under Comp. Laws 1897, §§ 9378, 9381.—In re Sullivan's Estate, 165 Mich. 585; Staniszewski v. Lane, Id.

§ 156. Torts and frauds of representatives.

Liabilities resting primarily on representative, see post, VI, B.

Torts of decedent, see ante § 155.

¶ 470. No recovery can be had against an estate for a negligent injury occurring after the death of the deceased, but the representative is personally liable.—Bannigan v. Woodbury, 158 Mich. 206.

§ 157. Set-offs and defenses.

Set-off and recoupment in general, see post § 316.

Equitable defenses in suits on claims, see post § 201.

Mode and requisites in general in presentment of set-offs, see post § 165.

Time for presenting set-offs and delay as bar, see post § 175.

Liability of joint obligor as defense to claim against estate, see also ante ¶ 449.

Defenses open in action based on allowance, see post § 203.

Objections to claims at hearing before commission, see post § 184.

Set-off as mode or medium of payment of distributive share, see post § 364.

Pleading and proof of payment, see Payment, V.

Insanity of decedent as defense against claim, see Insanity, I.

Manner of pleading and proving former adjudication as defense, see Former Adjudication, VII.

Causes, claims and defenses barred by former adjudication, see Former Adjudication, IV.

Estoppel of claimant in privity to husband to make claim by having failed to make objection when wife also claimed, see also Estoppel ¶ 100.

Estoppel of former claimant as affecting right of successor to assert claim, see also Estoppel ¶ 243.

Defense to action on contingent claim, see Jud. Act, chap. LVI, § 21, Comp. L. 1915, § 13903.

Set-offs against claims, see Jud. Act, chap. LV, § 9, Comp. L. 1915, § 13872.

¶ 471. The provisions of Comp. L. 1871, § 4428, How. St., § 5896, are not limited by the general set-off law, but are broad enough to allow a proper set-off in all cases. Unliquidated claims and unsecured demands may be set off as well as others.—Willard v. Fralick, 31 Mich. 431.

¶ 472. Offsets that under Comp. L. 1871, § 4428, How. St., § 5896, may be allowed against claims upon the estate of a deceased person are confined to claims of the deceased, and cannot include demands that never belonged to him, but have been purchased after his death by the administrator. —Willard v. Fralick, 31 Mich. 431.

¶ 473. Proceedings for the examination and allowance of claims against an estate are equitable in their nature, and governed by equitable principles; and the administrator is entitled to avail himself of any equitable or legal defense existing against the claim presented for allowance.—Foote v. Foote, 61 Mich. 181.

¶ 474. When an action is commenced against an administrator de bonis non for nonpayment of claims proved against the estate, the defense of plene administravit may be set up, and judgment shall only be rendered for so much as the assets, including real as well as personal, will warrant. (How. St., §§ 5936, 5938, 5939.)—Peckham v. Hoag, 57 Mich. 289.

¶ 475. The filing of a will for probate was not inconsistent with the claim of a son against the estate and does not discharge that obligation.—Laird v. Laird's Estate, 127 Mich. 24.

§ 158. Interest for delay in payment.

¶ 476. A mortgagor filed a claim against the mortgagee's estate for one-half of certain crops grown upon the mortgaged premises, and which the mortgagee, after bidding in the land on foreclosure, had sold to the mortgagor's tenant. Held, that the claimant is entitled to interest on his claim, if allowed, though not specifically mentioned in the claim, upon the principle that interest may be allowed on money illegally withheld, or property converted, without proof of special damages.—Dayton v. Dakin's Estate, 103 Mich. 65.

¶ 477. Where a claimant against an estate had not only neglected to procure administration but had delayed it, interest was refused on his claims as damages for delay in payment.—O'Connor v. Beckwith, 41 Mich. 657.

§ 159. Assignment or purchase of claims.

Liability of representative for failure to buy in claims at discount, see post § 285.

Assignment of claims for compensation of representative, see post § 294.

¶ 478. Any one but the personal representative may buy obligations of the estate at a discount and enforce them at face value.—Owen v. Potter, 115 Mich. 556.

B. DEBTS AND LIABILITIES RESTING ON HEIRS OR REPRESENTATIVE.

§ 160. In general.

[Note. The liability herein treated is the primary liability resting on the heirs or the representative for acts done in the course of administration; the liability for debts of the decedent which for any cause becomes secondarily the liability of the heirs or distributees is found post, VIII; and the liability secondarily resting on the representative for the decedent's debts is covered in post, IX.]

Liability of heirs, devisees and distributees for debts of estate, see post, VIII.

Liability of representative personally for debts of estate, see post, IX.

Liability of estate for torts and frauds of representative, see ante § 156.

Implied contract of representative for services rendered estate, see Implied Contracts, II.

¶ 479. Liability cannot be made out against executors and trustees, as such, for damages arising by reason of alleged leakage from the roof of a store leased by them to the plaintiff, without proof of the precise character of the powers granted to them by the will of the testator.—Weise v. Rich, 77 Mich. 325.

¶ 480. Where an administrator is lawfully in possession of the real estate of the intestate, it is his duty to keep it in a safe condition, so as to protect travelers along the streets.—Bannigan v. Woodbury, 158 Mich. 206.

¶ 481. An administrator in possession and control of a building of the deceased is personally liable for leasing it with a window in a defective condition, so as to cause injury from falling glass to a person on the adjacent street.—Bannigan v. Woodbury, 158 Mich. 206.

C. PRESENTMENT, HEARING AND DECISION ON CLAIMS, AND ENFORCEMENT OF ALLOWANCE OR JUDGMENT.

1. Mode and Requisites in General; Notices.

§ 161. Procedure in general.

Notice to creditors to present claims, see post § 162.

Claims provable on presentment or requiring suit, see post §§ 163, 164.

Presentment of set-offs, see post § 165.

Stating claim and petition for allowance, see post § 166.

Filing and notice of claim, see post § 167.

Notice of hearing on claims, see post § 168.

Notice of claim presented or made by representative, see post § 169.

Nature and requisites of probate procedure in general, see ante § 7.

Procedure on claims against residuary legatee bonded to pay debts, see post § 195.

Presentation of claim against estate of deceased partner as abandonment of suit against firm, see Partnership, VI, A.

¶ 482. Where a decedent's debts are not secured on property, they must be enforced under the probate laws.—Shannon v. Shannon, 48 Mich. 182.

¶ 483. How. St., chap. 229, provides the only methods by which claims against decedents' estates and the expenses of administration can be allowed and collected.—Armstrong v. Loomis, 97 Mich. 577.

¶ 484. It is not material whether a claim by an executrix against the estate of one indebted to her testator was presented before or after letters of administration were granted to her in Michigan. Probate here only furnished the evidence of her rights already existing and it was enough if this was shown on the trial.—Feustmann v. Gott's Estate, 65 Mich. 592.

§ 162. Notice to creditors to present claims.

Notice to creditors of time limited for payment of debts, see Jud. Act, chap. LVI, § 13, Comp. L. 1915, § 13895.

¶ 485. Claims against the estate of a deceased person can only be enforced by statutory proceedings in the probate court; and in such proceedings all concerned are bound by the proper publication of notice.—Aldrich v. Annin, 54 Mich. 230.

¶ 486. The entry of an order by the probate court closing an estate does not operate to close the estate where the notice to be given to creditors required by the statute has not been given.—North v. Tuscola Probate Judge, 84 Mich. 69.

§ 163. Claims provable on presentment or requiring suit.

Negotiable instrument out of creditor's possession, see post § 164.

¶ 487. Where a fixed sum is due from the estate of a trustee to one to whom he had agreed to make payment at a certain time a suit in equity is unnecessary, and a claim may be filed against the trustee's estate.—Pitcher v. Rogers' Estate, 199 Mich. 114.

¶ 488. Under the statute permitting any merely pecuniary claim against the estate of a deceased person, and involving no complication between more than two contending interests, to be established before commissioners on claims, a demand for contribution by a surviving partner, who, after dissolution of the firm, had advanced more than his share of the firm's debts, would be provable against the estate of his deceased partner without resort to equity.—Wheeler v. Arnold, 30 Mich. 304.

§ 164. ——Negotiable instrument out of creditor's possession.

¶ 489. One whose claim against an estate consists in a negotiable instrument which had passed out of his control cannot have it allowed until in some direct controversy with the person holding it he has negatived such person's right to it so as to protect the estate from further vexation on account of it.—McKinney v. Hamilton's Estate, 53 Mich. 497.

¶ 490. One who seeks to obtain against an estate the allowance of the amount for which decedent had given a negotiable instrument must be prepared to produce it, if possible, before the court on the trial of his claim, so that it may be identified with the judgment and surrendered, if satisfied. If he cannot produce it he must sue as on a lost note and bring himself within the statutory rule (How. St., §§ 7518, 7519), or the rule of equity which by order of the court dispenses with its production on giving full indemnity.—McKinney v. Hamilton's Estate, 53 Mich. 497.

§ 165. Presentment of set-offs.

Set-offs in general, see ante § 157.

Time for presenting set-offs, see post § 175.

¶ 491. Claims and set-offs must be investigated and settled in probate court.—Clark v. Davis, 32 Mich. 154; Shelden v. Walbridge, 44 Mich. 251; Dickinson v. Seaver, 44 Mich. 624; Cole v. McFall, 48 Mich. 227; Willard v. Van Leeuwen, 56 Mich. 15.

¶ 492. A claim against a decedent which was not presented to the probate judge who acted as commissioner of claims, within the required time, cannot be set off by the defendant in an action on a note given by him to such decedent; and testimony that such judge told defendant that it was not necessary to file the claim with him as it could be so used as a set-off, will not be admitted.—Benjamin v. Early, 123 Mich. 93.

§ 166. Stating claim and petition for allowance.

Sufficiency and form of claim and pleadings in actions, suits and hearing on appeal, see post § 202.

¶ 493. Rules governing the sufficiency of pleadings are not to be applied to claims filed in probate court, and great latitude as to the form and the amendment of claims should be permitted before commissioners on claims.—Luizzi v. Brady's Estate, 140 Mich. 73.

¶ 494. It is not required that a claim filed before commissioners should have the formal elements of a declaration.—Grimm v. Taylor's Estate, 96 Mich. 5.

¶ 495. It is not necessary that the petition for the allowance of a claim against an estate or the declaration on appeal, should state that the evidence of the claim is in writing; written evidence can be introduced under the petition, and a failure to introduce it does not prove that the litigation in the two courts is upon different claims.—Comstock v. Smith, 26 Mich. 306.

¶ 496. There are no technical rules regulating the form for exhibiting claims in the probate court, or for framing issues for their trial on appeal; the simpler the statement the better, if sufficient to apprise the court and parties interested of the real claim. It is sufficient, therefore, if a petition in the probate court for the allowance of a claim against an estate, and the declaration in the circuit court in framing the same issue on appeal, clearly point to the same transaction and demand.—Comstock v. Smith, 26 Mich. 306.

¶ 497. A claim against a decedent's estate based upon an open account should give the items of which it is composed, with the dates when they accrued, and the respective amounts.—McHugh v. Dowd's Estate, 86 Mich. 412.

§ 167. Filing and notice of claim.

¶ 498. Under the probate statute, notice to the executor of the filing of a claim against the estate is not required.—In re Sullivan's Estate, 165 Mich. 585; Staniszewski v. Lane, Id.

§ 168. Notice of hearing on claims.

Notice of hearing as requisite to jurisdiction of commissioners on claims, see post § 181.

Sufficiency of notice of hearing before commissioners, see also post ¶ 534.

Notice of revival of commission for hearing of claims, see post ¶ 563.

¶ 499. Where notice of their meeting has, in fact, been published, the commissioners on claims may proceed to a hearing. Their jurisdiction does not depend on the production before them of proof of publication.—Wilkinson v. Conaty, 65 Mich. 614.

¶ 500. Notice by publication is insufficient in any except the ordinary proceedings to adjust claims against an estate; if such adjustment is attempted by the probate court after the executor has given bond as residuary legatee, the notice, which, in such cases, is to the executor and his sureties, must be personally served.—Durfee v. Abbott, 50 Mich. 278.

§ 169. Notice of claim presented or made by representative.

Claims against estate presented by representative, see post, X, B.

Time for presentment of representative's claim, see post § 173.

Claim presented by representative of deceased claimant, see ante ¶ 484.

¶ 501. An executor of an estate stands in a trustee relation to the devisees and legatees, and must give them notice of a claim filed by himself and wife against the estate for board and care furnished the deceased. —Lapham v. Lacy, 161 Mich. 176.

¶ 502. Whether an administrator who is also a claimant against the estate is not bound to give notice to other persons interested in the estate in order that they may have an opportunity to test his claim before the commissioners, and whether an allowance of his claim in the absence of any impartial representative of the estate and of other persons interested therein has any binding effect quære.—Johnson v. Powers, 139 U. S. 156, 35 L. ed. 112, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 525.

¶ 503. The defendant, a nephew of the deceased, and his wife, went to live at the home of the deceased. For many years the deceased paid them five dollars a week for board. Financial reverses overtaking him, he stopped making such payments, and continued to live with defendant and his wife for many years. In his will he gave defendant and his wife a large portion of his estate. To complainants, the other legatees and devisees, the defendant expressed satisfaction with the will. Defendant, who was made executor, filed a claim against the estate for board and care furnished the deceased without giving notice of such claim to the complainants. Held, a bill would lie to enjoin the payment of such claim.—Lapham v. Lacy, 161 Mich. 176.

2. Time for Presentment and Delay as Bar.

§ 170. In general; state or completion of administration.

Time limitations and claims affected, see post § 171.

Claims accruing during administration, see post § 172.

Claims by representative, see post § 173.

Claims by infants, see post § 174.

Time for presenting set-offs, see post § 175.

Extension of time for presentment or waiver of bar, see post § 176.

Extension by death of party or vacancy in administration, see post § 177.

Reopening administration, newly discovered assets, see post § 178.

Time for suing and effect of delay or vacancy in administration, see post § 315.

Time for accounting, delay, laches and estoppel, see post § 336.

Time within which representative may declare estate insolvent, see post ¶ 667.

Time during which creditors have lien on realty for debts, see also post ¶ 691.

¶ 504. Where a claimant against an estate neglects to take advantage of the means provided by statute for satisfying his claim he has no remedy at law or in equity.—Winegar v. Newland, 44 Mich. 367.

¶ 505. Claims against a decedent's estate can be presented until its distribution unless the time for their presentation is limited by the appointment of commissioners, or by the probate court when no commissioners are appointed.—Willard v. Van Leeuwen, 56 Mich. 15; explaining what had been said in Pratt v. Houghtaling, 45 Mich. 457.

¶ 506. Comp. L. 1871, §§ 4462, 4463, How. St., §§ 5930, 5931, providing for notice to creditors of the settlement of the estate of a deceased person, and two years in which to present claims, was not meant to extend the time in which claims should remain valid against the estate, but to fix a limitation upon the personal liability to which the executor or administrator is subjected by the preceding section.—Hoffman v. Beard, 32 Mich. 218.

¶ 507. Prior to the passage of Pub. Acts 1915, No. 256, barring claims against decedents after the lapse of a certain length of time in the absence of the appointment of commissioners on claims, or the substitute therefor—a hearing of claims before a probate judge, and a closing of the estate—the only method by which claims against an estate could be barred was by an appointment of commissioners, or a hearing of claims by the probate judge and the closing of the estate.—Ogooshevitz v. Arnold, 197 Mich. 203.

¶ 508. The presentation of claims is not conditional upon the filing of an inventory showing property that can be devoted to the payment of debts, nor does the statute require that the inventory precede the hearing of claims.—First Nat. Bank v. Sherman's Estate, 117 Mich. 602.

¶ 509. Where a creditor against a decedent's estate has failed to present his claim to the commissioners thereon while in commission, he is entitled at any time before the estate is closed to have it heard by the probate judge or have the commission revived, the only discretion in the probate court being to determine whether the court or commission will hear it, and within what time, inside of three months, it must be heard (How. St., §§ 5893, 5894, 5895). And mandamus lies to enforce the right to a hearing.—Hart v. Shiawassee Circuit Judge, 56 Mich. 592.

§ 171. Time limitations, claims affected.

Presentment of immature, contingent and secondary liabilities, see post § 196.

Bar on liability for claim as bar to action on bond given to secure claim, see post ¶ 1216.
Power of court to license sale of realty after claim is barred for delay in presentment, see also post ¶¶ 692, 693.
Time within which sale may be had after license has been granted, see post ¶ 723.
Limitation on right or cause of action on which claims are based, see Limitation of Actions, I.
Loss of right through laches to subject homestead to payment of debts, see Homesteads, IX.
Claims barred for failure to present, see Jud. Act, chap. LV, § 14, Comp. L. 1915, § 13877.
Time allowed for creditors to present claims, see Jud. Act, chap. LV, § 5, Comp. L. 1915, § 13868.
Claims barred for failure to demand debt from representative within time limited for payment after notice, see Jud. Act, chap. LVI, § 14, Comp. L. 1915, § 13896.
Claims against unprobated estate barred for failure to present, see Pub. Acts 1917, No. 348.

¶ 510. All statutes relating to the settlement of estates of decedents must be construed together, and harmonized so far as possible. Where limitations of time are imposed they must yield to the consideration that they cannot be held to apply if their application would defeat the general purpose of devoting the estate to the payment of debts.—In re Emmons' Estate, 142 Mich. 299.

¶ 511. It is only claims absolutely payable and which the executor or administrator would be bound to pay to the extent of the assets that are barred by Comp. L. 1897, § 9380, How. St., 2nd ed., § 11091, providing that every person having a claim against a deceased person, proper to be allowed by the commissioners of claims, who shall not, after the publication of notice, exhibit his claim to the commissioners within the time limited by the court for that purpose, shall be forever barred from recovering such demand or from setting off the same in any action whatever.—Rankin v. City of Big Rapids, 133 F. 670.

¶ 512. Under Comp. L. 1897, § 9380, How. St., 2nd ed., § 11091, providing that claims which are proper to be allowed by the commissioners and are not presented within the time limited shall be barred and section 9411 et seq., Comp. L. 1897, How. St., 2nd ed., § 11122 et seq., relating to the proof of contingent claims before the probate court and also authorizing the commissioners to take proof in relation thereto and make report to the probate court, and providing for the allowance of contingent claims within the period of two years of the time limited for presenting of claims by other creditors, and that if the claim of any person shall accrue or become absolute at any time after the time limited for creditors to present their claims the person having such claim may present it to the probate court and prove it within one year after it shall become absolute, only claims which are absolute and so capable of being established are barred, and such provisions do not operate to bar a recovery by a receiver of a bank against an heir of intestate of an assessment levied upon stock of deceased more than one year after death of intestate and nine months after the estate had been closed, the administrator discharged, and the property turned over to the heir.—Rankin v. Herod, 140 F. 661.

§ 172. Claims accruing during administration.

Expenses of administration as items for reimbursement of representative, see post § 296.

¶ 513. Where a will provides that as the testator's children become of age the executors shall set off to them their shares of the estate, and it is obviously the intent that the executors shall receive and pay out moneys in managing the estate and supporting, maintaining and educating the children, any resulting indebtedness incurred by the estate to the executors in the strict discharge of what they believe to be their duty will not stand on the same footing with debts contracted by the deceased in his lifetime, nor be subject to the statutory limitation requiring claims against the estate to be presented and allowed within four years and a half.—Church v. Holcomb, 45 Mich. 29.

¶ 514. A claim against the estate of a deceased surety on a bond "accrues" at the time when suit might be brought against the surety if living, and need not be deferred until time of the rendition of judgment against the principal and a surviving surety, within the meaning of How. St., § 5936, providing that, if the claim of any person shall accrue or become absolute after the expiration of the time limited for creditors to present their claims, such claim may be presented to the probate court for allowance at any time within one year after it shall have so accrued or become absolute. —John Hancock Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Hill's Estate, 108 Mich. 126.

§ 173. Claims by representative.

Notice of claim presented by representative, see ante § 169.

¶ 515. Section 9380, Comp. Laws 1897, provides that persons failing to present their claims against the estate of a decedent within a certain time shall be forever barred from recovering such demand, or from setting off the same in any action whatever. Section 9373, as amended by Act No. 70, Pub. Acts 1901, authorizes a revival of the commission on claims, and further time for the presentation of claims on application made before the estate is closed. Held, that these provisions make no exception of the claims of administrators individually, hence such a claim not being presented within the statutory period, is barred, and cannot be allowed as a part of the final account of the administrator. In re Hodges' Estate (Appeal of Ardiel), 157 Mich. 198.

§ 174. Claims by infants.

Statutory limitations on cause of action on which infant's claim is based, see Limitation of Actions, III, B.

¶ 516. An infant is bound by Comp. Laws 1897, § 9380, requiring the filing of claims against estates of decedents, and where such claim is not filed, it becomes barred. in the absence of fraud, ignorance or mistake, and the infant cannot maintain a suit in equity therefor.—Van Haaren v. Tierney, 180 Mich. 192.

§ 175. Time for presenting set-offs.

See also ante ¶ 492.

Set-offs in general, see ante § 157.

Mode and requisites in general in presentment of set-offs, see ante § 165.

¶ 517. Any set-off against the demands of creditors upon a decedent's estate must be presented on the hearing of the claims, unless there is reason to the contrary, and when once asserted it cannot be withdrawn. —Green v. McCutcheon, 40 Mich. 244.

¶ 518. How. St., § 5905, allowing set-off by a defendant sued by a personal representative "instead of presenting" the claim to the commissioners, has reference to that portion of section 5904, which authorizes the personal representative to prosecute "any action commenced by deceased in his lifetime," and thus limited is harmonious with section 5901, which bars all claims if not presented to the commissioners in time; hence defendant in an action begun by a decedent's administrator after time for presenting claims has expired cannot set-off a claim not presented.—Quinn v. McGovern, 97 Mich. 114.

¶ 519. The failure to present a claim arising against an intestate in his lifetime, to the commissioners of his estate, does not prevent the owner from availing himself thereof as a set-off in a suit against him by the assignee of the administrator of the estate, under How. St., § 5901, providing that every person having a claim against deceased, proper to be allowed by commissioners, who shall not exhibit his claim to them within the time limited for that purpose, shall be barred from recovering the same, or from setting it off in any action whatever, where it does not appear that commissioners have ever been appointed.—Boltwood v. Miller, 112 Mich. 657.

¶ 520. A claim of set-off against an estate is barred where it is not presented to the commissioners on claims within the time limited by Comp. Laws 1897, § 9380.—Thurber v. Aldrich, 167 Mich. 656.

§ 176. Extension of time for presentment or waiver of bar.

By death of party or vacancy in administration, see post § 177.

Revival of commission on claims, see post §§ 190-193.

Disability of representatives and fiduciaries to waive limitations or revive barred debt, see Limitations, VI.

Extension of time for creditors to present claims, see Jud. Act, chap. LV, § 6, Comp. L. 1915, § 13869.

¶ 521. An extension of time for the presentation of claims rests in the discretion of the probate court and cannot be compelled by mandamus.—People ex rel. United States Attorney v. Monroe County Probate Judge, 16 Mich. 204.

§ 177. ——By death of party and vacancy in administration.

Effect of death or vacancy in administration on right to sue, see post § 315.

Extension of statute of limitations by death or vacancy in administration, see Limitation of Actions, VI, C.

¶ 522. Where a widow, after being made executrix, remarries and an administrator de bonis non is appointed, the interim between her disqualification and the new appointment may be added to the four years and six months allowed by law for the payment of claims against the estate.—Pratt v. Houghtaling, 45 Mich. 457.

§ 178. Reopening administration; newly discovered assets.

Revival of commission, see post § 190.

¶ 523. After the settlement of an estate is once closed, and the statute Comp. L. 1871, §§ 4462, 4463, How. St., §§ 5930, 5931. has barred personal claims against the administrator, a probate court cannot reopen the matter on a mere statement that land has been found which belonged, at the time of the death of the intestate, to a person of his name, but is now claimed by third persons, who refuse to show the evidences of their title.—Hoffman v. Beard, 32 Mich. 218.

3. Hearing, Proof and Determination; Report of Commissioners.

§ 179. In general; hearing by commission or by court.

Appointment, compensation and jurisdiction of commissioners, and nature of their office, see post §§ 180, 181.

Stay or postponing of hearing, see post § 182.

Parties in hearing, see post § 183.

Issues, proof and objections, see post § 184.

Admissions or stipulations for allowance, see post § 185.
Decision and order on hearing, see post §§ 186-188.
Commissioners' report and return, see post § 189.
Revival of commission and proceedings thereof, see post §§ 190-193.
Necessity of hearing on claims against residuary legatee bonded to pay debts, see post § 195.
Necessity of proof of claims in probate court, see ante ¶ 74.
Equitable nature of proceedings for examination of claims, see also ante ¶ 473.
Procedure to enforce claims against estate by representative as creditor, see post § 277.
Effect and scope of stipulations in general, see Stipulations.
Disqualification of party to transaction with deceased as witness, see Witnesses, IV.
Participation by heirs in hearing of claims before probate judge as estoppel of them and also administrator to require hearing before commissioners, see also Estoppel ¶ 236.
Propriety of mandamus to compel court to hear and adjudicate claims, see Mandamus, II.
Examination and allowance of claims by probate judge, see Jud. Act, chap. LV, § 8, Comp. L. 1915, § 13871.
Notice and hearing of claims before commissioners, see Jud. Act, chap. LV, § 2, Comp. L. 1915, § 13865.
Allowance of claim for funeral expenses before general hearing of claims, see Jud. Act, chap. LV, § 8, Comp. L. 1915, § 13871.

¶ 524. The general idea underlying How. St. §§ 5888-5906, is that all claims against the estates of deceased persons shall be duly proved before commissioners appointed to hear them, or before the probate court when no commissioners are appointed.—Johnson v. Powers, 139 U. S. 156, 35 L. ed. 112, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 525.

¶ 525. A probate order, providing for the adjustment by the court of a claim against a decedent, contained the recital "the attorney for the executor of the last will and testament of said deceased being present in court and consenting thereto." Held insufficient in itself, and without at least identifying the attorney, to give the court jurisdiction.—Durfee v. Abbott, 50 Mich. 278.

¶ 526. A decedent's heirs having participated without objection in hearing of claims before probate judge prior to appointment of general administrator and having appealed from his decision on a claim, cannot question regularity of such hearing, or insist on appointment of commissioners on claims after such administrator has been appointed.—Jenks v. St. Clair Probate Judge, 96 Mich. 122.

§ 180. Appointment and compensation of commissioners.

Waiver of right to appointment of third commissioner by appeal from commissioners' decision, see Probate Courts, III.
Appointment of commissioners of claims, see Jud. Act, chap. LV, § 1, Comp. L. 1915, § 13864.
Appointment of commissioner on death, removal or incapacity of commissioner or disagreement, see Jud. Act, chap. LV, § 4, Comp. L. 1915, § 13867.

¶ 527. Commissioners for the allowance of claims are not themselves a court; and the statute authorizing probate courts to appoint them is valid.—Shurbun v. Hooper, 40 Mich. 503.

¶ 528. The appointment of a third commissioner on claims against the estate of a deceased person, under How. St., § 5891, is a proceeding directly affecting both claimant and the estate, and both have a right to be heard; and an ex parte appointment made on the application of a claimant, who has appealed from the rejection of his claim, is void, unless accepted by the administrator.—Smith v. Lloyd's Estate, 76 Mich. 619.

¶ 529. An executor or administrator who consents in open court to the appointment of two referees instead of one or three, as provided by the statute, and who appears before them and submits the matter in controversy, is estopped from questioning afterwards the court's jurisdiction to make such appointment, the doctrine that such officer cannot waive any of the rights of the estate having no application to such a case.—Shepherd v. Shepherd's Estate, 108 Mich. 82.

¶ 530. The supreme court will not overturn fees allowed by the probate court under Comp. Laws 1897, § 11228, to commissioners for services in hearing contested claims, where the evidence given in the circuit court tends to show that the amount allowed was not unreasonable.—In re McNamara's Estate, 166 Mich. 451; McNamara v. Michigan Trust Co., Id.

§ 181. Functions, jurisdiction and nature of commissioners' office.

See also post ¶ 583.
Jurisdiction of claims commissioners over secured claims and mortgages, see post ¶¶ 569, 570.
Effect of proceedings for removal of commissioner on jurisdiction and functions of commission, see post ¶ 559.
Commissioners on claims as a "court," see Constitutional Law § 34.
Commissioners on claims as "officers," see Officers, I.
Propriety of mandamus to compel commissioners to return evidence into probate court, see Mandamus, II.

Commissioner's oath, see Jud. Act, chap. LV, § 10, Comp. L. 1915, § 13873.

¶ 531. Commissioners for the allowance of claims against the estate of a decedent are not a part of the probate court: that court has no control over their actions.—Streeter v. Paton, 7 Mich. 341.

¶ 532. All claims for or against a decedent's estate must be passed upon by the commissioners on the estate, and cannot be withdrawn for adjudication elsewhere.—Shurbun v. Hooper, 40 Mich. 503.

¶ 533. Commissioners for the allowance of claims act judicially in the allowance of claims against estates, and where they are appointed, the probate court has no authority over the claims further than to order dividends from time to time among those whose claims are allowed, until all are paid.—Clark v. Davis, 32 Mich. 154.

¶ 534. Where notice of their meeting has, in fact, been published, the commissioners on claims may proceed to a hearing. Their jurisdiction does not depend on the production before them of proof of publication.—Wilkinson v. Conaty, 65 Mich. 614.

¶ 535. Under How. St., §§ 5907-5917, commissioners appointed to hear claims against an estate become a special tribunal, which for most purposes is independent of the probate court.—Johnson v. Powers, 139 U. S. 156, 35 L. Ed. 112, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 525.

¶ 536. Commissioners on claims against the estate of a deceased are not authorized to pass on a contingent claim.—Crosby v. Montcalm Circuit Judge, 125 Mich. 24.

¶ 537. The duty of commissioners on claims to report the proof of a contingent claim presented to them is not judicial but ministerial, and its omission cannot be remedied, rectified or redressed by appeal; its observance must be enforced by warrant (Comp. L. 1871, § 5200, How. St., § 6763) or by mandamus, or by attachment, or the proof must be supplied, if necessary, in some special way.—Buchoz v. Pray, 36 Mich. 429.

¶ 538. A claim not presented to and allowed by the commissioners before filing their report cannot afterwards be considered by them and included in such report after their commission has expired.—McGee v. McDonald's Estate, 66 Mich. 628.

§ 182. Stay or postponement of hearing.

¶ 539. Commissioners for the allowance of claims are a special tribunal which for most purposes is independent of the probate court. Their proceedings are not stayed nor affected by the pendency of an appeal from the order appointing the administrator, though it may temporarily suspend the hearing and disposal of claims unless there is a special administrator.—Lothrop v. Conely, 39 Mich. 757.

§ 183. Parties in the hearing.

¶ 540. No one can, under the statutes, be recognized in proceedings to prove claims except the administrator and the creditor.—Daniels v. Stevens, 60 Mich. 219.

¶ 541. If there is a special administrator pending an appeal from an order appointing an administrator, he should represent the estate on the hearing.—Lothrop v. Conely, 39 Mich. 757.

¶ 542. Under How. St., §§ 5907-5917, as against an adverse claimant, the administrator, general or special, represents the estate before commissioners appointed to hear claims and on appeal.—Johnson v. Powers, 139 U. S. 156, 35 L. Ed. 112, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 525.

§ 184. Issues, proof, and objections.

Issues before court on application for revival of claims commission, see post ¶ 564.

Defenses and set-offs to claim, see ante § 157.

Equitable defenses in suits on claims, see post § 201.

Presumptions and evidence as to implied promises, see generally Implied Contracts, II; Contracts, X, B, § 313.

Value of services or benefits received, measure and proof of their reasonable worth, see Values.

Failure of representative to inventory chose in action as working estoppel to present it as a claim against another estate, see also Estoppel ¶ 103.

Manner of pleading and proving former adjudication, see Former Adjudication, VII.

Issues and matters triable by commissioners, see Jud. Act, chap. LV, § 12, Comp. L. 1915, § 13875.

¶ 543. No formal issue is required to be taken on a hearing before commissioners on claims against the estate of a deceased person, nor need objection be made before them to their allowance of the claim.—Winter v. Winter, 90 Mich. 197.

¶ 544. As no obligation but decedent's can be established in the probate court, the liability of decedent's wife, who signed as surety the note presented against the estate, is unimportant.—Johnson v. Johnson's Estate, 66 Mich. 525.

§ 185. Admissions or stipulations for allowance.

Disability of representative to waive defenses, see also post ¶ 1033.

Right and authority of representative to make compromises, arbitrations and confessions, see also post § 317.

Effect of stipulations to bind estate or objecting heir as to validity of claim, see Stipulations.

Public policy as to agreements not to resist or object to claims, see Contracts § 63.

¶ 545. All claims against the personalty of an estate must be duly proved in the probate court or before commissioners before they can be allowed; they cannot be established by the admission of the administrator. —Clark v. Davis, 32 Mich. 154; White v. Ledyard, 48 Mich. 264.

¶ 546. An executor or administrator cannot bind the estate, by an arrangement with one having a demand against it and also one against a third party, to submit the question of liability and the amount thereof on both demands directly to the circuit court in a single suit.—Barry v. Davis, 33 Mich. 515.

¶ 547. An executor under ordinary bonds must defend the estate against claims, and can pay none that have not been judicially approved; he cannot dispense with proof, or bind himself or the estate by admissions. But an executor who has given bond as residuary legatee can settle claims at his discretion; no one can question his acts but his sureties, nor can they, except when it is sought to charge them personally on his default in making payment.—Durfee v. Abbott, 50 Mich. 278.

¶ 548. All claims against the estate of a decedent, when commissioners have been appointed, must be presented to and be allowed by them; the estate is not bound by any account stated by the administrator. —Fish v. Morse, 8 Mich. 34.

¶ 549. The commissioners, in acting under How. St., §§ 5907-5917, act judicially in the allowance of claims against an estate and the administrator cannot bind the estate by admitting their correctness, but must leave them to be proved in the usual mode.—Johnson v. Powers, 139 U. S. 156, 35 L. ed. 112, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 525.

§ 186. Decision and order on hearing.

Conclusiveness and effect, see post § 187.
Collateral attack, see post § 188.
Necessity of adjudication of claims before suits to annul decedent's fraudulent transfers, see ante ¶ 298.
Necessity for decision and finding by commission as to indebtedness before granting of license to sell realty, see post ¶ 713.
Appeals to circuit court from order allowing or rejecting claim, see Probate Courts, III; see also note, post § 197.
Writ of error from circuit judgment on appeal to supreme court, see Appeal.

¶ 550. Funeral expenses, like the expenses of the last sickness, rank as a preferred claim against the estate, and may properly be allowed by commissioners; and the allowance of both as one item, though irregular, will not be invalid if the whole is to be paid to one claimant.—Booth v. Radford, 57 Mich. 357.

¶ 551. The decision of the commissioners appointed to hear claims, or of the circuit court on appeal, should properly be only an allowance or disallowance of a claim, and not in the form of a judgment at common law.—Johnson v. Powers, 139 U. S. 156, 35 L. ed. 112, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 525.

§ 187. ——Conclusiveness and effect.

Allowance of commissioners as conclusive adjudication, see Former Adjudication, II.
Necessity that adjudication be on the merits to be a bar to subsequent suit, see also Former Adjudication ¶ 83.
Decrees and orders of probate court in general, see Probate Courts, III.
Disagreement of commissioners as an appealable order, see Probate Courts, III.

¶ 552. The conclusion reached by the claims commissioners, if within their power, and not appealed from, is final.—Shurbun v. Hooper, 40 Mich. 503.

¶ 553. The unappealed decision of commissioners allowing a claim at a certain sum is a final judicial decision.—Flynn v. Lorimer's Estate, 141 Mich. 707.

¶ 554. The allowance of claims against an estate conveys no title to the claimants in the land subject to sale to pay the debts of decedent.—Hunt v. Rabitoay, 125 Mich. 137.

¶ 555. The count on an account stated with an administrator is bad in a suit against the estate, where commissioners have been appointed to hear and adjust such claims.—Fish v. Morse, 8 Mich. 34.

¶ 555a. The allowance of claims by the commissioners who had jurisdiction to pass on them, in the absence of fraud is conclusive against the estate and all persons who had an opportunity to be heard.—Chapoton v. Prentis, 144 Mich. 283.

¶ 555b. Where a claimant against an estate has taken all the statutory steps required to bind the resident and nonresident heirs, and has had his claim allowed, the matter is res adjudicata, and cannot be opened except for fraud.—Andrews v. Osborn, 159 Mich. 77.

§ 188. ——Collateral attack.

Collateral attack on letters, see ante § 32.

¶ 556. The validity of a claim allowed by the probate court cannot be attacked in a subsequent proceedings to set aside a deed and for an accounting.—Griffin v. Hovey, 179 Mich. 104.

¶ 557. The allowance of claims against an estate by a court of competent jurisdiction cannot be impeached in a collateral proceeding if there was no fraud in allowing them and no appeal was taken.—In re Palm's Appeal, 44 Mich. 637.

§ 189. Commissioners' report and return.

Allowance of claim by commissioners after filing report and expiration of commission, see ante ¶ 538.

Report of commissioners, see Jud. Act, chap. LV, § 11, Comp. L. 1915, § 13874.

¶ 558. Comp. L. 1897, §§ 9377-9411, requiring a report from the commissioners on the hearing of claims, do not require that report to state the character of the claims passed on, whether absolute or contingent. —Flynn v. Lorimer's Estate, 141 Mich. 707.

¶ 559. Section 9386, Comp. Laws 1897, provides for the returning of the reports of commissioners of claims in the probate court. A report was lodged with the probate judge until he should dispose of an application of a claimant for the removal of the commissioners. Held, the return was not made until the judge had finally made a decision of the matter of the application.—In re McLaughlin's Estate (Appeal of Hinckley), 160 Mich. 284.

¶ 560. A premature return by the commissioners cannot be objected to by any one connected with the estate, where their allowance of the claim presented to them was appealed from.—Johnson v. Johnson's Estate, 66 Mich. 525.

§ 190. Revival of commission.

See also ante ¶ 509.

Application for revivor, see post § 191.

Proceedings of revived commission, see post § 192.

Second revival and proceedings thereunder, see post § 193.

Extension of time for presentment of claims, see ante §§ 176, 177.

Re-opening administration on discovery of new assets, see ante § 178.

¶ 561. Until an estate has been formally closed, the commission on claims may be revived.—Draper v. Brown, 153 Mich. 120.

§ 191. ——Application for revivor.

¶ 562. Under Comp. Laws 1897, § 9373, as amended by Act No. 70, Public Acts of 1901, a revival of the commission on claims at any time before the estate is closed is not a matter of discretion but of right, and all that is necessary to be shown in the petition is that the petitioner is a creditor whose claim has not been presented and passed upon by the commission, and that the estate is not yet closed.—In re Reid's Estate, 170 Mich. 476.

¶ 563. The revival of the commission for the examination of claims against a decedent's estate under How. St., § 5894, at any time before the estate is closed, upon the payment of costs by the creditor making the application, is a matter not of discretion, but of right, and hence the probate court may enter the order without giving notice of the application to the administrator, heirs, or creditors.—Heavenrich v. Nichols' Estate, 113 Mich. 508.

¶ 564. The merits of a claim against an estate are not open upon an application to the probate court for the revivor of a commission to hear it; nor are they upon an application for mandamus to compel such revivor.—Hart v. Shiawassee Circuit Judge, 56 Mich. 592.

§ 192. Proceedings of revived commission.

Procedure and costs on revival of commission, see Jud. Act, chap. LV, § 7, Comp. L. 1915, § 13870.

¶ 565. The fact that the meeting of the commissioners was delayed without the fault of the creditor, two days beyond the time provided in the order reviving the commission, will not defeat the claim.—Heavenrich v. Nichols' Estate, 113 Mich. 508.

¶ 566. So long as the estate remains open, the statute (Comp. Laws 1897, § 9373) permits a creditor to present to a revived commission any claim not previously presented. —Bresler v. Wayne Probate Judge, 152 Mich. 167.

§ 193. Second revival and proceedings thereunder.

¶ 567. Although a creditor against an estate in probate has once before secured an order of court to revive a commission on claims, he is entitled as a matter of right to an order for a second revival on a newly discovered claim, and such order of the probate judge is not appealable.—Bresler v. Wayne Probate Judge, 152 Mich. 167.

4. Contingent, Immature and Secured Claims.

§ 194. Secured claims and mortgages.

Mortgages and secured claims as debts of estate, see ante § 147.

Claims secured by bond of residuary legatee, see post § 195.

¶ 568. Claims secured by mortgage or otherwise are no exception to the rule that all personal demands against estates must be regularly presented and proved, and that all not proved are barred.—Clark v. Davis, 32 Mich. 154.

¶ 569. A mortgagee who means to hold the estate of his deceased mortgagor for any deficiency on foreclosure should present his claim for allowance to the commissioners on the estate, if any are appointed, or to the probate court, if not; and if he does not do so the executor may disregard the contingency that such a claim may thereafter be made and can proceed voluntarily or even be compelled to proceed to make final distribution of the estate upon the expiration of the time limited for the payment of claims against it.—Willard v. Van Leeuwen, 56 Mich. 15.

¶ 570. A mortgage debt secured on land is an absolute claim against the estate of the maker of the note; and as such the commissioners are authorized to try and decide it under Comp. L. 1897, § 9378, providing that they shall have power to try and decide all claims which by law survive against or in favor of executors and administrators, except claims for the possession or title of real estate.—Flynn v. Lorimer's Estate, 141 Mich. 707.

¶ 571. Mortgage debts not included in claims against an estate and not allowed by the probate court but valid and enforceable against the land owned by the deceased may be paid by the administratrix and allowed in final settlement.—Russell v. Wheeler, 129 Mich. 41.

¶ 572. The decedent's note secured by mortgage may be proved as a claim against his estate, and the realty may, if necessary, be sold to satisfy it, notwithstanding the holder may have lost his mortgage lien by the prior recording of a subsequent conveyance.—Burns v. Berry, 42 Mich. 176.

§ 195. Claims against residuary legatee bonded to pay debts.

See also ante ¶ 547.

Sufficiency of notice of hearing on claims where residuary legatee has given bond, see ante ¶ 500.

Effect of bond of residuary legatee as executor on rights and lien of creditors for payment, see post § 220.

¶ 573. Where an executor, as residuary legatee, has given bond to pay the debts and legacies, no commission need be issued to consider claims against the estate, nor need they be proved in the customary way to make them a valid debt.—Durfee v. Abbott, 50 Mich. 278; Wheeler v. Hatheway, 58 Mich. 77.

§ 196. Immature, contingent and secondary liabilities.

Contingent and immature claims as debts of estate, see ante § 144.

Authority of commissioners to pass on contingent claims, see ante ¶ 536.

Duty of commissioners to report proof of contingent claim, see ante ¶ 537.

Evidence as to contingent character of claim, see also post ¶ 1109.

Contingent claims, see Jud. Act, chap. LVI, §§ 15-30, Comp. L. 1915, §§ 13897-13912.

Immature claims, see Jud. Act, chap. LV, § 13, Comp. L. 1915, § 13876.

When court may order sufficient estate retained for payment of contingent claim, see Jud. Act, chap. LVI, § 16, Comp. L. 1915, § 13898.

When contingent claim may be presented, see Jud. Act, chap. LVI, § 17, Comp. L. 1915, § 13899.

Contingent claims becoming absolute after time limited for presentation of claims, see Jud. Act, chap. LVI, § 19, Comp. L. 1915, § 13901.

When contingent claim payable, see Jud. Act, chap. LVI, § 18, Comp. L. 1915, § 13900.

¶ 574. Commissioners on claims cannot allow contingent claims; they can only receive and report the evidence relating thereto, and such claims are not definitely adjudicated until they are supposed to have become absolute.—Buchoz v. Pray, 36 Mich. 429; Campau v. Miller, 46 Mich. 148.

¶ 575. A note payable absolutely, secured by a real estate mortgage, is not, as between the holder and the estate of the maker, a contingent claim, within How. St., § 5932, providing that "if any person shall be liable as security for the deceased, or have any other contingent claim against his estate, which cannot be proved as a debt before the commissioners, or allowed by them, the same may be presented, with the proper proof, to the probate court or to the commissioners, who shall state the same in their report."—Osmun v. Oakland Circuit Judge, 107 Mich. 27.

¶ 576. The purpose of Comp. L. 1897, § 9411, How. St., 2nd Ed., § 11122, providing that any person having a contingent claim against an estate, which shall not be proved before the commissioners or be allowed by them, may present the same to the probate court, or to the commissioners, who shall state the same in their report, if such claim was presented to them, and section 9412, How. St., 2nd Ed., § 11123, providing for an order by the court that the administrator retain in his hands sufficient estate to pay such contingent claim when it becomes absolute, or the proper proportion equal to the dividends of other creditors, if the estate is insolvent, and section 9413, How. St., 2nd Ed., § 11124, providing that if such contingent claim shall become absolute, and shall be presented to the probate court, or to the executor or administrator within two years from the time limited for other creditors to present their claims to the commissioners, it may be allowed by the court upon due proof, or it may be proved by the commissioners already appointed or by others appointed for that purpose, in the same manner as if presented before the commissioners made their report, and section 9414, How. St., 2nd Ed., § 11125, providing that if such contingent claim shall be allowed, as mentioned in the preceding section, or established on appeal, the creditor shall be entitled to receive payment to the same extent as other creditors, if the estate retained by the executor or administrator shall be sufficient for that purpose, but if the claim shall not be finally established, or if the assets retained in the hands of the executor or administrator shall not be wholly exhausted in the payment of such claims, such assets, or the residue of them, shall be disposed of by order of court to the persons entitled to the same, was to hold the estate open for a limited time to enable a creditor having a contingent claim which might become absolute within that period to come in and share with other creditors before the administration should be closed, and if it did not become absolute, the estate should be closed without further regard to such claim.—Rankin v. City of Big Rapids, 133 F. 670.

¶ 577. Comp. L. 1897, § 9415, How. St., 2nd Ed., § 11126, providing that if the claim of any person against an estate shall accrue or become absolute, at any time limited for creditors to present their claims, the person having such claim may present it to the probate court and prove the same at any time within one year after it shall accrue or become absolute, and if established in the manner prescribed in the chapter, the executor or administrator shall be required to pay it, if he shall have sufficient assets for that purpose, and shall be required to pay such part as he shall have assets to pay, and, if estate shall afterwards come to his possession he shall be required to pay such claim, or such part as he may have assets sufficient to pay, not exceeding the proportion of the other creditors, in such time as the probate court may prescribe, and section 9416, How. St., 2nd Ed., § 11127, providing that when a claim shall be presented within one year from the time when it shall accrue, and be established, as mentioned in the preceding section, and the executor or administrator shall not have sufficient assets to pay the claim the creditor shall have a right of recovery for any balance not paid him from the heirs, devisees or legatees receiving a sufficient portion of the estate, require as a condition that the estate has not been closed and no provision is made for a claim which does not become absolute until the jurisdiction of the probate court over the estate has ceased.—Rankin v. City of Big Rapids, 133 F. 670.

5. Actions, Suits and Hearings on Appeals on Claims; Judgment and Execution.

§ 197. Original jurisdiction and appellate hearings.

[Note. The general law of evidence and procedure in actions on contracts has been treated in Contracts, X. In this connection it is not designed to cover the same ground but to collate merely those decisions on the procedure which distinctively pertain to the proving of contract claims in the probate court or in the circuit court in trying the matter de novo on an appeal. For the general law of pleading, proof and procedure in actions on contracts, see Contracts, X; and see also Sales, VIII, IX; Negotiable Instruments, XIV; Vendors and Purchasers, XII.

The practice on appeals from the probate court or from the report of the commissioners on claims will be treated in Probate Courts, III. Matters of substantive law and evidence in proof of the claim only will be retained in this division, when they are raised on a retrial of the issues on appeal in the circuit court.]

Jurisdiction and remedies in equity, see post §§ 199-201.

Form and sufficiency of claims and pleadings, see post § 202.

Issues, defenses and variance on appellate trial, see post §§ 203, 204.

Presumptions and evidence, see post §§ 205-207.

Jury trial and questions for jury, see post § 208.

Directed verdict and instructions, see post §§ 209, 210.

Verdict and findings, see post § 211.

Execution and attachment, see post § 212.

Procedure to determine and enforce personal liability of representative for debts, see post § 268.

Replevin against representative, see also post ¶ 984.

Remedy and procedure on representative's bond for enforcement of claims, see post § 391, ¶ 1236.

Nature of right of appeal from probate court, see Probate Courts, III.

Appeals from the probate court in general and appellate procedure thereon, see Probate Courts, III.

Time for appeal to circuit court and jurisdiction for extension of time, see Probate Courts, III.

Record on appeal, see Probate Courts, III.

Sufficiency of notice and bond on appeal, see Probate Courts, III.

Costs on appeal to circuit court, see Probate Courts, III.

Right of special representative to appeal from allowance of commissioners, see Probate Courts, III.

Proper mode of reviewing judgment on appeal from allowance of claim, see Appeal, I, III; Certiorari § 14.

Review of decision of circuit court on appeal in proceedings on claims, see Appeal § 28.

Lack of jurisdiction in superior courts to entertain appeals from allowances, see Municipal Courts, II.

Right of subrogation to claim against estate, see Subrogation, I.

Trial on appeal in circuit court, see Jud. Act, chap. LXV, § 11, Comp. L. 1915, § 14155.

Powers of circuit court on appellate hearing, see Jud. Act, chap. LXV, § 19, Comp. L. 1915, § 14163.
Suits not to be brought against representative after appointment of commissioners, see Jud. Act, chap. LV, § 15, Comp. L. 1915, § 13878.

¶ 578. The circuit courts have no original jurisdiction over claims against estates.—Patrick v. Howard, 47 Mich. 40.

¶ 579. The probate court is the proper court to settle the rights of a widow's estate in a sum due from the husband's estate which one of the children claims as compensation for support furnished by agreement to the widow in which agreement the other children and the representative of the husband's estate joined; since there must be a hearing of claims against the widow's estate before any claimant is entitled to a share of it.—Morse v. Allen's Estate, 99 Mich. 308.

§ 198. Jurisdiction and remedies in equity.

Relief from fraudulent claims, see post § 199.
Enforcement of allowance order or subjection of assets, see post § 200.
Laches and equitable defenses, see post § 201.
Garnishment, bill or other remedy to reach shares of distributees for creditors, see post § 382.
Propriety of injunction against appeal from allowance of claim, see Injunction, II.
Jurisdiction of equity in suit for reformation of instrument to determine claims against estate, see Reformation of Instruments, III.
Creditors' suit by surety against estate of cosurety for contribution, see Creditors' Suits ¶ 34.
Bill against personal representative of defrauding corporate officer, see also Corporations § 177, ¶ 660.

¶ 580. Under Comp. Laws 1897, §§ 6759, 6760, How. 2nd Ed., §§ 12098, 12099, a probate court has exclusive jurisdiction in the matter of allowance of claims except as a court in chancery may, in exceptional cases, render them aid and assistance by means of such auxiliary remedies as may be useful to prevent wrong and injustice before the probate jurisdiction can be effectual.—Buck v. Lockwood, 193 Mich. 242.

¶ 581. The probate laws do not afford the only remedy a creditor may have in Michigan for the recovery of a claim against the estate of a deceased person, and when those laws do not avail to protect equities arising from special circumstances, its equity courts will give relief by applying the principles and remedies peculiar to that jurisdiction.—Rankin v. City of Big Rapids, 133 F. 670; Rankin v. Herod, 140 F. 661.

¶ 582. A court of equity will not allow or disallow claims against estates of deceased persons, or administer estates, especially after the subject has been entered upon in the probate court.—Draper v. Brown, 153 Mich. 120.

¶ 583. A claim for money due upon a decedent's written agreement can properly be submitted to the commissioners upon his estate, and if disallowed the only remedy is by appeal from them; a bill in chancery is not a proper proceeding.—Patton v. Bostwick, 39 Mich. 218.

¶ 584. The remedy in the probate court and on appeal in the circuit court for investigating and settling claims and set-offs is not only sufficient, but is imperative when the controversy has been opened; and a resort to equity cannot be had to examine into the subject.—Sheldon v. Walbridge, 44 Mich. 251.

¶ 585. A court of equity cannot examine into the question of the rights of an estate against the widow or of her claims against the estate, where it has already been passed upon by commissioners on the estate and is still in litigation on an appeal.—Shelden v. Walbridge, 44 Mich. 251.

¶ 586. A man cannot maintain a bill in equity against his brother's estate, after the estate has been closed by distribution, to recover the share for which his brother would have been liable, had he lived, upon a mutual contract to support their mother. It is not a case for specific performance, and there is no authority to decree payments from distributees in favor of a creditor at large.—Shannon v. Shannon, 48 Mich. 182.

¶ 587. Inasmuch as a court of equity has jurisdiction to enforce the performance of a contract to pay the taxes on land until the timber has been removed therefrom, it may also make a binding decree upon the estate of the original, but since deceased, defendant where the administrator of the estate by his pleading and conduct has made the obligations of the contract those of the estate, and no claim was made that the administrator and heirs were not proper parties.—Michigan Iron & Land Co. v. Nester, 147 Mich. 599.

¶ 588. In cases in which the relation between the deceased and the defendants resembles a partnership, and all the evidence of the dealings of the parties is in the possession of the defendants, it is impossible for the commissioners on claims to adjust the equities of the parties.—Graham v. Graham, 171 Mich. 307.

¶ 589. Under How. St., § 5902, providing that no "action shall be commenced against the executor or administrator, except actions of ejectment, or other actions to recover the seizin or possession of real estate, and actions of replevin," a bill in aid of execution lies in form of a judgment creditor against the executors and trustees of the estate of a deceased wife of a deceased debtor to subject property held by defendants as the property of the estate of the deceased wife under authority and direction of a probate court prior to attachment of the land by the creditor, but which land it was claimed had been fraudulently conveyed by the debtor to his wife, since such statute permits suits to try title or possession of property during the progress of the settlement of the estate.—Lant v. Manley, 75 Fed. 627.

¶ 590. A bill in equity for contribution from the representatives of a surety on a bond will lie in the circuit court if the case involves an inquiry into the liability and solvency of the other sureties that cannot be settled before the probate court of commissioners.—Rynearson v. Turner, 52 Mich. 7.

¶ 591. Chancery is the proper forum in which to litigate a claim for damages against a decedent's estate for the nonperformance of a contract providing for the sale by the decedent of certain lands conveyed to him in trust to secure advances made to the claimant, or the manufacture and sale of the timber thereon, and that, after the repayment of said advances and interest, the remainder of the lands should be owned in common by the parties to the contract; it not being claimed that there was any breach of the contract or default on the part of the decedent in his lifetime, but claimant relying upon a breach by the administrator.—Nester v. Ross' Estate, 98 Mich. 200.

¶ 592. On a bill by the widow of a testator against the administrator of the estate of his former wife, the administrator of estate of decedent, and the heirs of decedent by the former wife to set aside assignments of insurance policies by decedent to heirs and a release of a claim of decedent against the estate of the former wife in favor of the heirs, and to set aside an allowance of a claim in favor of the heirs against the estate of decedent, a court of chancery, upon decreeing relief, inasmuch as it has all the parties before it, may, when the amount of a claim against the estate of the former wife in favor of decedent is undisputed, properly allow such claim.—Yalomstein v. Yalomstein, 190 Mich. 615. (Ostrander and Kuhn, JJ., dissenting.)

§ 199. ——Relief from fraudulent claims.

Remedies and rights for fraud generally, see Fraud, III.

¶ 593. The rightful owner of a promissory note executed by a decedent and allowed as a valid claim against the estate in favor of one who got possession of it by fraud and deceit, may, having been denied an opportunity to prove title thereto before the commissioners on the estate, sue in equity to have such note decreed to be his property and to enjoin payment by the administrator to the fraudulent holder.—McKinney v. Curtiss, 60 Mich. 611.

¶ 594. A bill in aid of execution against lands of the decedent based on a judgment for alimony, designed to set aside a fraudulent conveyance by decedent to defendant his brother, and to enjoin the brother from presenting and proving a claim collusively against the estate of the decedent to the end that all of decedent's lands may be applied to a fictitious debt and complainant's execution thereby defeated, is not objectionable as reviewing a probate decision in chancery.—Babcock v. Babcock, 150 Mich. 558.

§ 200. ——Enforcement of allowance order or subjection of assets.

Assets available for payment of claims, see post, VI, D, 1.

Subjection of land to payment of claims, see post, VII.

¶ 595. A father obtained the allowance of a claim against his son's estate, but the son's widow, who was his executrix, refused to pay it, and conveyed away the property out of which it should have been satisfied, and the estate remained unsettled. Held, that his remedy was not in equity, but, if not lost by neglect, was in the probate court, where, in spite of the conveyances, the land was liable in due course of administration and for a limited period to the claims of creditors, and after the arrival of the time of payment the executor was liable personally or on his bond.—Winegar v. Newland, 44 Mich. 367.

¶ 596. An equitable lien upon assets that are subject to the payment of debts in the hands of the administrator arises in favor of creditors, which may be enforced in a court of equity, after distribution by the probate court, to reach assets misapplied by the administrator.—Pierce v. Holzer, 65 Mich. 263.

§ 201. ——Laches and equitable defenses.

Defenses to claims in general, see ante § 157.

Defenses open in action based on allowance, see post § 203.

¶ 597. Where in a bill by nonresident heirs to set aside a claim allowed against an estate, the complainants were not ignorant of the death of the deceased nor of the fact that she owned personalty and realty, failure to bring suit for several years constitutes laches.—Andrews v. Osborn, 159 Mich. 77.

§ 202. Form and sufficiency of claim; pleadings.

Method of stating claim and petition for allowance by commission or probate court, see ante § 166.

Variance from form of claim on appellate hearing, see also post § 204.

General rules of pleading on appeals from probate, see Probate Courts, III.

¶ 598. On appeal a claim for "services in the care and aiding and supporting" decedent's sister and her minor children is broad enough to include aid and support by the contribution of money.—Grimm v. Taylor's Estate, 96 Mich. 5.

¶ 599. A claim in the probate court referring to a mortgage to the deceased, stating the amount and interest as $1343.78, and followed by the words "my claim, due March 25, $343.78." is erroneously denied by the court, on the ground that it would not support any proof, and that it is not clear that it was the same claim tried before commissioners, when it appears that the defendant made no objection to the form of the claim when it was tried before the commissioners, and later by a jury. Claims in a probate court are not governed by technical rules, and substance is more regarded than form.—King v. Brewer, 121 Mich. 339.

§ 203. Issues and defenses open in action based on allowance.

Issues on appellate hearing of claims, see post § 204.
Objections and issues as to claims on hearing before commission, see ante § 184.
Defenses to claims in general, see ante § 157.
Equitable defenses in suits on claims, see ante § 201.
Admissibility of defense evidence, see post ¶ 611.
When appeals from commissioners at issue, see Probate Courts, III.

¶ 600. The objection that a claim is barred by the statute of limitations should be raised before the commissioners on the estate or on appeal; it cannot properly be considered in an action for the amount found due by the commissioners.—Shurbun v. Hooper, 40 Mich. 503.

¶ 601. Any objection growing out of the statute of limitations to the validity of claims against an estate must be raised before the commissioners or on appeal, and cannot be presented later in a bill to set aside the claim.—Andrews v. Osborn, 159 Mich. 77.

§ 204. Issues and variance on appellate trial.

Issues in action or suit based on claim, see ante § 203.

¶ 602. In a claim for services against an estate, items not presented to the probate commissioners cannot for the first time be presented on appeal to the circuit court.—In re De Haan's Estate, 169 Mich. 146.

¶ 603. Upon an appeal from the disallowance by commissioners of a claim against an estate, it appeared by their testimony that the issue before the commissioners was whether the estate was indebted to claimant upon an accounting as trustee. The claim upon its face was equally consistent with the theory that it was based on an absolute sale of property. Held, that the claimant could not present his claim in the circuit upon the latter theory.—Raub v. Nesbett, 111 Mich. 38.

¶ 604. Claimant was not entitled, on appeal to the circuit court, to enlarge a written claim against decedent's estate, filed in probate court, for "attendance and services rendered decedent during her lifetime and last sickness," so as to cover demands for bedding belonging to claimant, which, it is alleged, was required to be destroyed, on account of the nature of decedent's illness, and for loss sustained by claimant as a boarding house keeper, resulting from the dismissal of her boarders in the interest of quiet and proper nursing of decedent.—Luizzi v. Brady's Estate, 140 Mich. 73.

¶ 605. Proceedings upon a claim against an estate are in the nature of an action at law, where questions of fact are triable by a jury; and this forum is not the proper one to litigate the question whether a valid trust in claimant's favor was not created by an agreement made by her brother (the decedent) with their father, in consideration of the father's revoking a devise previously made in her favor and devising the same property to the son, to pay her a certain sum per month as long as she shall live.—Linneman v. Moross' Estate, 98 Mich. 178.

§ 205. Presumptions and burden of proof.

Admissibility of evidence, see post § 206.
Sufficiency of evidence, see post § 207.
As to burden of proof, see also post ¶ 659.
Presumptions as to assets and title of decedent, see ante § 102.
Presumption of validity of judgment after twenty years, see Judgments, VII; Probate Courts, III.
Presumptions as to payment, discharge or satisfaction of debts and demands, see Evidence § 52; Payment, V.
Presumption as to payment from lapse of time, see Payment, V.
Presumption as to gratuitousness of services rendered in family relation, see Implied Contracts, II; Parent and Child, IV.
General law of evidence, including competency of particular kinds or means of proof, see Evidence.
Presumption from failure of representative to take stand and testify, admissibility of presumption as against estate, see Evidence ¶ 336.

¶ 606. A claim against an estate for rent cannot be allowed unless the facts tend to show an agreement, express or implied, therefor with decedent. And the claimant has the burden of proof. But an agreement is not necessarily implied from decedent's continued occupancy of the premises after having deeded them to claimant.—Stevens v. Hulin, 53 Mich. 93.

¶ 607. It is the duty of courts to protect a decedent's estate from claims for board and care furnished merely in discharge of filial duty, and substantial proof establishing such claims should be required before allowing a jury to speculate as to the existence of the contract necessary to support them.—Wright v. Senn's Estate, 85 Mich 191.

¶ 608. Presumptions both of law and fact are that services rendered decedent by a friend during her last illness, her board, room rent, the board and rent of nurses, if furnished, are in no sense gratuities, but are to be paid for, and no proof is required of contract other than the law implies, to enforce against the estate such claim.—Luizzi v. Brady's Estate, 140 Mich. 73.

¶ 609. Where one who seeks to recover against a decedent's estate upon a promissory note was the business manager of decedent's affairs during her lifetime, it is not incumbent upon him to show that in all his dealings with her while he was he agent he properly accounted to her. Tha' is matter of defense.—Blakley v. Cochran, 117 Mich. 394.

¶ 610. Burden of proof of the execution of a note made the basis of a claim in the probate court against a decedent's estate and appealed to the circuit court, held to be all the time on the claimant.—Hampton v. Van Nest's Estate, 196 Mich. 404.

§ 206. Admissibility of evidence.

[Note. The admissibility and sufficiency of evidence to prove a claim ex contractu or ex delicto is in substantive aspects the same as would be required in an action on the same cause against the decedent. It has therefore been deemed better digesting to place all of the cases in such topics as Contracts; Sales: Implied Contracts; Conversion; etc. Where the question is upon Agency, or the mutual rights of Husband and Wife, the existence of Trusts, the existence of Fraud or of Mistake or Duress, the making of Payment or Releases or Accord and Satisfaction, or other particular issues, the topics treating of such issues, like those just mentioned, should be consulted. It is not intended to treat here any of the substantive or evidential law of specific causes of action or defenses.]

Sufficiency of evidence, see post § 207.

Evidence as to assets and title of decedent, see ante § 102.

Evidence and proof on hearing for license to sell realty, see post § 231.

Validity of claim on appellate hearing after having been established before commission by incompetent evidence, see post ¶ 621.

Allowance of claims commissioners as prima facie evidence of indebtedness, see also ante ¶ 306.

Admissible evidence as to existence of contract with decedent, see also Contracts § 312.

Admissibility of evidence to show decedent was party to contract, see also Contracts §§ 310, 311.

Admissibility of parol evidence to contradict or vary receipt acknowledging payment, see Evidence, V.

Admissibility and sufficiency of evidence as to payment of debt, see Payment, V.

Admissibility of declarations and admissions made out of court by decedent or by others in general, see Evidence, VII.

Presentment of claim to commissioners at lower sum as an admission against claimant's interest, see also Evidence ¶ 2077.

Parol evidence that judgment assigned to decedent and collected by him was for real benefit of claimants of proceeds, see Evidence ¶ 1070.

Use on appeal of deposition used before commissioners on claims, see Depositions ¶ 98.

Declarations of intent to compensate by legacy as admissions of decedent binding on estate, see Evidence § 398.

Qualifications of experts as to value of services rendered, see Evidence § 288.

Evidence as to consideration or contract being for benefit of married woman's separate estate or property, see Husband and Wife, IV, D.

Evidence as to claim's being the separate property of married woman claimant, see Husband and Wife, IV, D.

Evidence to rebut claim based on given note, see also Evidence ¶ 439.

Self-serving declarations by decedent rebutting claim or debt, see Evidence § 488.

Harmless error in admission of evidence, see Harmless Error, II, B.

¶ 610a. On the hearing on appeal of a claim presented against an estate, where the question in dispute is whether the deceased had, just before his death, borrowed the amount of two notes produced, or whether, on the other hand, one of them represented a sum which was afterwards included in the other, much latitude of examination is allowable, within the discretion of the trial court, into circumstances that would tend to throw light upon the controversy, such as the amount of money the deceased received, or had, at about the time alleged.—Anderson v. Russell, 34 Mich. 109.

¶ 611. Where a claim on quantum merult was brought against an estate for the value of services and boarding rendered to decedent for support in claimant's home, the defense was entitled to give evidence in offset of contributions by decedent to the support of claimant as well as of himself; both on the theory of mutual gratuities and as bearing on the value of what was rendered and such proofs could not be excluded on the ground that they were not specific as to particulars.—Ludlow v. Pearl's Estate, 55 Mich. 312.

¶ 612. In an action for board and lodging a note given by a daughter to her aged and infirm father, to whom she has furnished board and care for nine months, tends to show that at the time of its execution no claim was made against him for board, etc., and that there was no intention to make such claim.—Wright v. Senn's Estate, 85 Mich. 191.

¶ 612a. Evidence as to the value of services rendered a decedent is admissible in an action against the estate for the value of such services.—In re Wigent's Estate, 187 Mich. 507.

¶ 612b. To rebut the claim that a decedent offered to settle an alleged debt, thus recognizing it, decedent's son may testify that his father, upon being informed of the claim, denied its existence.—Passmore v. Passmore's Estate, 60 Mich. 463.

¶ 613. In a claim by a husband against his wife's estate for money advanced by him to pay premiums on a policy written on the life of the wife's father, evidence as to the relations between the claimant and his deceased wife, whether pleasant or unpleasant, harmonious or otherwise, is immaterial.—In re Reid's Estate, 170 Mich. 476.

¶ 614. Where collusion in the presentation of her claim between an administrator and his wife, a claimant against the estate, was charged, evidence of a sale by the administrator and of a purchase at such sale by the claimant was admissible as bearing on the good faith of the claim and upon their credibility as witnesses.—Stackable v. Stackable's Estate, 65 Mich. 515.

¶ 614a. A decedent's reputation for solvency and a claimant's reputation for insolvency were admissible upon the trial of a claim against an estate, as having some bearing upon the probability of the claimant's lending decedent large sums of money.—Wilson v. Estate of Hotchkiss, 81 Mich. 172.

¶ 615. Claimant presented a claim against the estate of the deceased for services. A witness was asked by defendant whether she knew of the deceased doing any acts of kindness to the claimant and her husband. Held, it was not error to exclude this question as being colorless on the question of claimant's expectation of reward.—In re Johnson's Estate, 160 Mich. 585; Beecham v. Wetherbee, Id.

¶ 616. In a proceeding to enforce a claim against an estate for services rendered the deceased, testimony of the deceased's statements showing animosity towards his other children and abuse by them is objectionable as tending to prejudice the jury in favor of the claimant and against the other children.—Laird v. Laird's Estate, 127 Mich. 24.

¶ 617. The owner of land on which there was a mortgage agreed with a railroad company to leave to arbitrators the sum the company was to pay him for the right of way over his land, but before the amount was paid the mortgage was foreclosed, and he could not give title. The title was transferred from the purchaser at the sale to one who had advanced the amount to redeem the land as security for the amount advanced, and the owner never sought to redeem from him, but after his death an assignee of the landowner filed a claim in the probate court against his estate. The person who had taken the title brought ejectment against the railroad company which thereupon sought to enjoin the suit, and enforce the original agreement with the result that it was successful and a decree was entered and the amount agreed by the arbitrators paid to the plaintiff. Held, in the action on the claim against his estate the decree and records of the chancery case were admissible to prove the origin of the fund, since taking the fund was an admission of the source.—Rapley v. McKinney's Estate, 143 Mich. 508.

¶ 618. In a suit against an estate to recover the value of a mortgage which the decedent, by mistake or otherwise, had appropriated and sold without the owner's consent or ratification, testimony is admissible to show the difference between the amount called for by the mortgage and the sum which the decedent had received for it; since liability is not limited to what was received. —Ward v. Ward, 37 Mich. 253.

¶ 618a. Where, in a suit by an administrator to recover moneys paid to defendant upon policies of insurance held by defendant as security for loans made to the decedent (her son), defendant seeks to set off a claim for the rent of part of a house which decedent occupied in his lifetime,—the remainder being occupied by decedent's father up to the time of his death, and afterwards by defendant,—it is competent for plaintiff, as tending to establish his claim that the occupancy of the house by decedent was rent free, to show that decedent had contributed largely to the construction of the house, and had, both before and after the death of his father, made expensive improvements and paid taxes upon the entire property, and that during the entire time of such occupancy the decedent paid no rent, nor was any claim for rent ever made upon him.—Maybury v. Berkery, 102 Mich. 126.

§ 207. Sufficiency of evidence.

See also note under preceding section.

Evidence of representative authority, see ante § 54.

Sufficiency of proof of loss of original contract to admit secondary evidence of contract, see Evidence § 150.
Weight and sufficiency of evidence of making of contract, see also Contracts § 323.
Conclusiveness, weight and effect of receipts acknowledging payment, see Evidence, X; Payment, V.
Conclusiveness of alimony award in proceedings to enforce claim for amount due, see Divorce § 175.
Books of account as evidence in proof of claim, see Evidence, VIII, B.

¶ 619. In all cases where by reason of the death of a party a claim must be disposed of upon the testimony of disinterested parties and circumstances, courts should not be too strict in the admission of testimony. Any and all circumstances that have a bearing, however slight, upon the questions at issue, should be permitted to go to the jury for their consideration in arriving at the truth of the disputed matters before them.—Seligman v. Ten Eyck's Estate, 74 Mich. 525.

¶ 620. On appeal from commissioners, testimony should be offered from which the jury may find the value of the services performed, and whether they remain unpaid for, to entitle a claimant to enforce a claim on a quantum meruit against decedent's estate for attendance and services to decedent.—Luizzi v. Brady's Estate, 140 Mich. 73.

¶ 620a. A valuation by decedent is not shown to have been placed upon claimant's services by testimony that decedent stated that she wanted to execute a codicil to her will to add a bequest to claimant, that claimant had been the best friend she ever had, that she wanted to repay her, that claimant was a hard working woman, and that she wanted to leave her money for a home.—Luizzi v. Brady's Estate, 140 Mich. 73.

¶ 621. When a claim is heard by the circuit after it has been prima facie established by the allowance by the commissioners, the issue being its invalidity against the estate, the award will be sustained if there is no evidence of invalidity, regardless of the fact that the claimant's testimony in support of the claim was incompetent for that purpose.—Warren v. Sheehan, 156 Mich. 432.

¶ 622. Where neither a deceased debtor nor his executors have been misled by the failure of the executrix of the creditor's estate to schedule and inventory the claim in the debtor's lifetime, the elements of an estoppel from asserting the claim against his estate are wanting; and the force of the omission as evidence against the claim is but slight, where it appears that the executrix supposed that the claim was merged in a collateral agreement, which the debtor failed to carry out.—Ewers v. White's Estate, 114 Mich. 266.

¶ 622a. Particularly strong and convincing proof is required to establish an implied contract to pay for services in an action against an estate for services rendered by a son-in-law of decedent when the claim is stale, and the services extended over a considerable period, and no demand for compensation was made during lifetime of deceased.—Vandecar v. Nowland's Estate, 188 Mich. 429.

¶ 623. Testimony of witnesses that decedent, an uncle of claimant, had stated that he "hired" claimant to remain at home with his mother and help her, and that he meant to "leave" claimant $1000, is insufficient to warrant submission to the jury of the question whether there was a distinct contract to pay claimant such a specified sum of money for services rendered decedent.—Grimm v. Taylor's Estate, 96 Mich. 5.

¶ 624. The right to recover against an estate for services rendered in caring for the deceased is not made out by evidence that the claimant stayed home and cared for the deceased in the absence of any evidence of express or implied contract or even knowledge by the claimant of the deceased's intention to compensate for such services.—Decker v. Kanous' Estate, 129 Mich. 146.

¶ 625. Testimony of the interested parties alone, as to an obligation that rests entirely in parol, and which, in fact, does not sustain the claim, is not sufficient to show that the relation of debtor and creditors existed between mother and daughters such as to give them a claim upon her estate.—Winter v. Winter, 90 Mich. 197.

¶ 626. In proof of the right of a claimant against the estate of a husband for the value of property of the wife's estate left in his hands, where the claimant is sole legatee of the wife's estate and executrix thereof and took without any commission to hear claims and on a family agreement with the husband waiving full administration, the fact that no debts were outstanding against the wife's estate was shown prima facie by the claimant's testimony given twenty-six months after probate of the wife's will that there were no debts of the wife.—Ewers v. White's Estate, 114 Mich. 266.

¶ 627. In an action against an estate to recover on a claim for money received by decedent from his wife, plaintiff's mother, under an alleged arrangement whereby deceased was to pay the money to plaintiff on his wife's death, evidence held sufficient to sustain a verdict for plaintiff.—Pitcher v. Rogers' Estate, 199 Mich. 114.

¶ 628. Evidence tending to show that the decedent had promised to increase the claimant's salary after a certain date, but not showing an actual agreement so to do, will not support a claim for additional wages.—Marsh v. Tunis, 39 Mich. 100.

¶ 629. A claim against a decedent's estate by the administrator of a deceased son-in-law for the value of support for the father-in-law and his wife for the later part of their life is not proved by controverted testimony as to the making of an oral contract 32 years before, whereby the father-in-law agreed to convey an 80-acre farm for such support, where there is other testimony that a son was to pay for the support, and 3 years after the alleged agreement the father-in-law made a will leaving the farm to a son, the contents of which will was known to the son-in-law at the time.—Clancy v. Leach's Estate, 125 Mich. 630.

¶ 630. Entries made by decedent's bookkeeper in his books, at his express direction, showed that notes were discounted by decedent, and the proceeds credited to "Bills Payable"; that in the journal entries of the notes there was a memorandum "for me to pay," and in a separate book, on a page headed "Bills Payable," the notes were entered, with a descriptive memorandum, showing when and where they were due. Held, that the notes and the entries are so connected as to leave no room for doubt, that they were for accommodation of decedent though in form indorsed to him and, in connection with the other proofs, are sufficient to warrant a judgment against the estate.—Bliss v. Plummer's Estate, 103 Mich. 181.

¶ 631. A claim against an estate for a loan is not made out by a canceled check, payable to the deceased five years before his death, and testimony of the deceased's brother that he and his brother several times loaned money to each other but never borrowed from strangers, where the evidence also shows that both the deceased and claimant were in excellent financial condition at the time of the alleged loan and the deceased who was a business man had made no record of the transaction.—Bernard v. Fee's Estate, 129 Mich. 429.

¶ 632. Evidence of an understanding between a deceased person and a claimant, based on declarations by the former to the effect that payment for board and care furnished by the claimant was to be settled out of her estate after her death, is such evidence as to charge her estate with payment of the entire claim, including the amount claimed for support prior to the earliest of these declarations.—Coleman v. McGowan's Estate, 149 Mich. 624.

¶ 633. The fact that a father at about the same time paid off a debt of about the same amount does not tend to show that he, rather than the mother of the lender, was the real borrower, the claim being against the mother's estate by the lender and disputed by the representative.—McGregor v. McGregor's Estate, 156 Mich. 487.

¶ 634. In a proceeding for the allowance of a claim for services against the estate of a deceased person, evidence that decedent asked a witness whether it would not be better to have given claimant a certain farm from which she would always have an income, does not refute the claimant's contention of a contract made between herself and the decedent, prior to such statement, contemplating a different remuneration.—In re Thompson's Estate, 157 Mich. 669; Forsythe v. Thompson's Estate, Id.

¶ 635. In an action against decedent's estate for services rendered in loaning money for decedent, it appeared that decedent had stated to a brother of claimant that he would pay claimant "handsomely and more than any percentage would amount to." Held, that the contract was established by the evidence of claimant's brother as a contract to pay reasonable value.—In re Mitchell's Estate, 178 Mich. 493.

¶ 636. A finding and judgment for $2,000 for services in placing loans for decedent is sustained on testimony that decedent promised to pay "handsomely and more than any percentage would amount to," that according to the customary rates as proved by a money lender on the amount of interest realized the percentage and interest on it would exceed $2,000, to which amount the claim was limited by its terms, there being testimony also that decedent proposing to pay after his death declined to give $2,000 on a certain occasion, saying that it "would not be a drop in the bucket" to what he expected to pay.—In re Mitchell's Estate, 178 Mich. 493.

¶ 636a. Statements of parents which are equally consistent with the purpose to give a gratuitous preference to a son on their decease, are not sufficient to show a binding promise to compensate him for services which are presumably gratuitous.—In re Colburn's Estate (More v. Luther), 153 Mich. 206.

§ 208. Jury trial and questions for jury.

Directing verdict, see post § 209.
Instructions, see post § 210.
Court and jury questions as to existence, terms and liability on contract with decedent, see also Contracts, X, C.
Disqualification of party to transaction with deceased as witness, see Witnesses, IV.

¶ 637. A testator gave to his daughter the use of his real and personal property during the lifetime of his widow, conditioned upon the daughter's supporting the widow. The daughter filed a claim against the estate for expenditures made and services rendered in excess of the income from the property. Held, that under Comp. Laws 1897, § 6731, and Act No. 253, Pub. Acts 1899, the suit on appeal to the circuit court was properly treated as an action at law and the case properly submitted to a jury.—In re Howard's Estate, 163 Mich. 556; Linton v. Howard, Id.

¶ 638. An old man went to live at the house of a poor woman not related to him, and after his death she presented a claim for the value of his board and for his care. No agreement was shown to have existed between them, and it appeared that both had continuously contributed to the joint support, without, so far as known, keeping any mutual accounts. Held, that the defense was entitled to have the case submitted to the jury on the theory that the understanding between them may have been that neither was to charge for what was furnished for the benefit of both.—Ludlow v. Pearl's Estate, 55 Mich. 312.

¶ 639. A man brought a claim against the estate of his sister-in-law for board, lodging and services during her last sickness. Held, that it was for the jury to determine, in view of the relationship, wealth and social position of the parties, the nature of the services, and other circumstances, whether there was a promise to pay.—In re Young's Estate, 39 Mich. 429.

¶ 640. Where, in an action against an estate for services rendered to decedent by way of attendance and companionship, there was evidence of statements made by the deceased indicating that such services were performed and received upon an understanding that they should be well paid for, and that they were requested by decedent as a matter of right, it was proper to submit to the jury the question whether claimant was entitled to recover, under instructions that the amount of a bequest accepted by claimant under decedent's will should be deducted from the amount of the verdict.—Lathrop v. Sinclair, 110 Mich. 329.

¶ 641. On appeal from the allowance of an heir's claim against the estate of an administrator who died without filing an account, it is proper to submit to the jury the questions how much came into the administrator's hands, what disbursements he made, and what is claimant's share of the balance, if any.—Bitely v. Bitely, 85 Mich. 227.

¶ 642. Claimant was entitled to submit to the jury proof of attentions to decedent extending over a period of some two years, in an appeal to the circuit court from a decision of the commissioners disallowing a claim against decedent's estate for services rendered decedent during her lifetime and last illness, where there is evidence that such attentions were rendered in accordance with a mutual understanding of the parties that they were to be paid for.—Luizzi v. Brady's Estate, 140 Mich. 73.

¶ 643. A testator gave to his daughter the use of his real and personal property during the lifetime of his widow, conditioned upon the daughter's supporting the widow. Held, that in a claim against the estate by the daughter for care of the widow, it was proper to submit to the jury the question of fact as to the items of expenditure and the value of services rendered the widow.—In re Howard's Estate, 163 Mich. 556; Linton v. Howard, Id.

¶ 644. On a claim by a son against the estate of his father for labor and services on a farm after he became of age, there was evidence that the father agreed to pay him for his service, that he had willed him a tract of land, that he had executed a note in the son's favor payable after death that was not delivered, that he had destroyed the will and made a new one not giving the land to the son, and that thereupon he had executed another similar note of larger amount reciting it was in payment for services. The son did not claim on the notes but on the value of his services, and introduced the notes as evidence of such value. Held, the question whether recovery could be had for the amount of the former note in addition to the amount of the latter note was properly submitted to the jury.—Abel v. Roosenraad, 173 Mich. 93.

§ 209. Directing verdict.

Instructions, see post § 210.

Directing verdict for want of proof of agreement, see Contracts § 348.

¶ 645. In an action of assumpsit against the representative where the report of the commissioners upon an estate had been burned, but evidence showed that their proceedings in adjusting claims had been irregular, and their records illegally tampered with, and implied that the claim had been allowed and reported within the life of the commission, it was error to direct a verdict for defendants without submitting to the jury the question whether it had been allowed and reported.—Hardwick v. Richardson, 28 Mich. 508.

¶ 646. Claimant was the wife of the tenant of the deceased. There was evidence that she rendered services to the deceased; that the deceased often said she expected to see claimant paid for them; and that claimant was no relation to the deceased. Held, in a suit for compensation the court properly refused to instruct a verdict for defendant.—In re Johnson's Estate, 160 Mich. 585; Beecham v. Wetherbee, Id.

¶ 647. Where decedent executed a note to his daughter on the day before his death, it was error to direct a verdict in favor of the estate, evidence that the note was executed on Sunday and was without consideration making an issue for the jury.—McQuillan v. Eckerson, 178 Mich. 281.

¶ 648. Claimant filed a claim against decedent's estate for services rendered decedent during his lifetime. There was evidence that claimant from 1879 to 1896 performed services for decedent. In 1890 claimant dropped a suit and took a payment of fifty dollars from decedent. Whether he was paid at all, or how much he was paid otherwise, did not appear. There was no evidence that decedent ever agreed to pay for services, except testimony that several years before his death decedent stated that claimant was a good fellow, that there was no need of a settlement of accounts with him, as he intended to take care of him in his will. Held, the court properly directed a verdict in favor of the estate.—In re Gibson's Estate (Appeal of Davidson), 163 Mich. 502.

§ 210. Instructions.

¶ 649. A charge intimating to the jury that they should disallow plaintiff's claim, there being evidence to support it, is erroneous.—Buell v. Adams, 157 Mich. 248.

¶ 650. A claimant against an estate must not be allowed a larger sum than he claims: and a charge that leaves the jury to allow more is erroneous.—Weyburn v. Kipp's Estate, 63 Mich. 79.

¶ 651. On a claim for services against the decedent's estate, where a few months prior to her death she had transferred by deed to claimant certain property in escrow to be delivered after death, which property was accepted, it was error of the trial court to instruct that the burden of proof as to whether this property was intended as payment or was a gift was on the contestant, since it was prima facie a payment.—In re McNamara's Estate, 148 Mich. 346.

¶ 652. A claim was presented against an estate for services rendered under an alleged promise by deceased to "pay the claimant well and liberally for all her services out of her estate at the time of her death." Deceased, shortly before her death, had signed and acknowledged a deed to claimant of certain property, and in claimant's presence had stated that the property was in compensation for claimant's services, and had delivered the deed to a third party to be delivered to claimant upon the grantor's death. Held, that the jury were properly instructed to deduct the value of the property from what they found due for services, notwithstanding the fact that there was evidence that deceased had said just before her death that she had never paid claimant anything for her services.—In re McNamara's Estate, 155 Mich. 585; McNamara v. Michigan Trust Co., Id.

¶ 653. In a suit by a claimant against an estate for services rendered the deceased, an instruction is correct which states that the mere rendering of the services does not create a liability, but they must have been given in expectation of being paid for.—In re Johnson's Estate, 160 Mich. 585; Beecham v. Wetherbee, Id.

¶ 654. On the trial of an appeal from the allowance of a claim filed by a husband against the estate of his deceased wife for materials furnished and work done in improving her land, the court, after instructing the jury at claimant's request that they might find that the improvements were made under an implied contract between the parties, defined express and implied contracts, and added that, as between husband and wife, the law does not imply any agreement on the part of one to pay for labor performed or money expended for his or her benefit by the other, without any agreement or understanding that such services should be paid for or expenditures repaid; but that, if they found that the claimant did the work and furnished the materials upon an understanding with his wife that he should be paid for the same, he would be entitled to recover, even though the very words of the bargain between them might not be proved or be susceptible of proof; and that this was all that was meant by the word "implied," as used in the instruction first given. Held, that while the request, standing alone, was clearly erroneous, with the explanation given, the jury could not have failed to understand the law applicable to the case.—Westra v. Westra's Estate, 101 Mich. 526.

¶ 655. In a claim against an estate for services, for which it was claimed that the decedent agreed that the claimant would be well paid in the end, an instruction stating that if the services were rendered under an agreement that they were to be paid for out of the estate of the decedent after his death, such agreement was binding on the estate, and that the statute of limitations would not begin to run until after the death of the decedent, held to have fairly presented the issue.—Allen v. Fields' Estate, 124 Mich. 466.

¶ 656. In an action by the estate of a wife against the estate of her husband upon a claim that certain property was her personal estate, it is not error for the court to state that the fact that no claim was made during the ten years that the husband survived her might be taken into consideration in determining the probabilities of the justness of the claim.—Mains v. Webber's Estate, 131 Mich. 213.

¶ 657. Undisputed testimony that deceased had stated to witness that she had purchased certain notes and given hers in payment sufficiently established that fact and justifies the court in so stating to the jury, when claim is founded on her notes so given.—Crampton v. Newton's Estate, 132 Mich. 149.

¶ 658. In an action of a claim against an estate for services a request to charge reciting the mere facts that decedent lived two years after the last services were performed, that a settlement whereby claimant had released certain rights was effected, and that no demand for services was made, without making a request for the application of the facts in the charge, is properly refused because such facts were not controlling of a motion to direct a verdict for the estate.—In re Barclay's Estate, 146 Mich. 650.

¶ 659. On a claim for the proceeds collected by him, it appearing that a father assigned two mortgages to his daughter, reciting that the same were for her individual use, to be hers over and above any part of the father's estate which he might leave at his death, and where the securities were retained by the father and the amount of the same was collected by him and not turned over to the daughter, and where by his will the father made provision for this daughter, but did not refer to the gift of such two mortgages, an instruction that a trust was created in favor of the daughter and that the burden of showing a contrary intention was upon the estate, was not error.—Hilton v. Woodman's Estate, 124 Mich. 326.

§ 211. Verdict and findings.

Costs in actions and suits, see post, XI, C.
Invalidity against estate of judgment rendered in action against representative for personal liability, see post ¶ 843.
Findings in actions against representative to establish his personal liability, see post ¶¶ 841-842.
Measure of damages for breach of agreement to pay for services by devise or bequest, see Damages § 84.
Right to new trial on ground of newly discovered evidence, see New Trial, II, H.
Determination of values in general, see Values.

¶ 660. The verdict of a jury on appeal from the allowance of an heir's claim against an administrator's estate must be set aside if it does not show how much the administrator received or disbursed, or what items of claimant's claim were disallowed.—Bitely v. Bitely, 85 Mich. 227.

¶ 661. Where it is not sought to enforce a lien for a claim for an annuity but a claim is presented against the estate of a deceased the question as to the extent to which the property made security for the payment of the annuity is chargeable with it need not be determined.—Stringer v. Stevens' Estate, 146 Mich. 181.

¶ 662. A son filed two claims against his father's estate, and appealed to the circuit court from the disallowance of certain items of one of the claims, and the verdict of the jury included the amount of the claim allowed in addition to the previously rejected items of the other claim. The record in the supreme court made no mention of the allowed claim, other than that contained in the charge to the jury. It was not urged that the claim was unjust, and the record of the probate court, referred to by stipulation, showed it has been allowed. Held, under the circumstances, the verdict for the amount of both the claims was proper.—Abel v. Roosenraad, 173 Mich. 93.

§ 212. Execution and attachment.

Execution for costs, see post § 331.
Statutory provision for execution as to devised lands or lands assigned to heirs, see post § 225.
Garnishment of representative before distribution, see also post ¶ 1037.
Right to action, attachment and execution to enforce contingent claims, see Jud. Act. chap. LVI, §§ 29, 30, Comp. L. 1915, §§ 13911, 13912.

¶ 663. Execution cannot issue against assets of a decedent's estate for collection of an ordinary money judgment.—Peckham v. Berrien Circuit Judge, 74 Mich. 287.

¶ 664. How. St., § 5902, which forbids actions against estate when commissioners are appointed, except for realty or in replevin, and declares that no attachment nor execution shall issue against an estate before the time limited for the payment of debts, creates no liability to execution or attachment, and cannot recognize any that is not authorized by some other provision of law.—Peckham v. Berrien Circuit Judge, 74 Mich. 287.

¶ 665. Where, under R. S. 1838, relating to discontinuing or staying actions against representatives of insolvent estates, an estate had been represented insolvent by an administrator de bonis non, a motion was granted staying proceedings on executions for balances due on mortgage foreclosures which had been levied before such representation of insolvency.—Quackenbush v. Campbell, W. 525.

¶ 666. It is immaterial whether the estate be represented insolvent by the original administrator or the administrator de bonis non; the provisions of the statutes relating to discontinuing or staying actions against representatives of insolvent estates which apply to the former apply also to the latter, where there was no express provision to the contrary.—Quackenbush v. Campbell, W. 525.

¶ 667. No time was limited by the statute within which an estate must be declared insolvent by an administrator or executor.—Quackenbush v. Campbell, W. 525.

D. PAYMENT AND SATISFACTION OF CLAIMS.

1. Assets and Securities for Payment; Rank and Priorities of Claims.

§ 213. In general; liens, rank and priorities.

Land as an asset for payment, see post § 214.
Lands in hands of heirs' grantees, see post § 215.
Lands occupied as homestead, see post § 216.

Primary exhaustion of personalty, see post § 217.
Election between general claim and lien, see post § 218.
Payment and discharge of claims, see post, VI, D, 2.
Right of creditors to follow property liable for debts, see ante § 138.
Right of creditor to petition for administration, see ante ¶ 24.
Right of creditors to administer estate, see ante § 19, ¶¶ 82-85.
Right of representative to borrow money to pay debts, see ante § 56.
Sufficiency of creditor's petition for administration, see ante ¶¶ 104-108.
Right of creditors to petition removal of representative, see ante § 42, ¶ 151.
Priority of funeral expenses and expenses of last sickness, see also ante ¶ 550.
Right of representative to invest funds of estate in homestead to injury of creditors, see ante ¶ 375.
Payment of shares in the estate, see post, XIII.
Priority of lien attached by creditors' bill over rights of representative, see Creditors' Suits § 31.
Presentment of claim to estate as releasing lien held by pending creditors' bill, see Creditors' Suits, § 31.
Payment of debts as limiting right and subjects of disposal by will, see Wills, I.
Rank and priority of claims and order of payment, see Jud. Act. chap. LVI, §§ 6, 7, Comp. L. 1915, §§ 13888, 13889.
Liability of estate for payment of debts and expenses of administration, see Jud. Act. chap. LII, § 22, Comp. L. 1915, § 13794.

¶ 668. Funeral expenses and the expenses of the last sickness rank as preferred claims next after expenses of administration.—Booth v. Radford, 57 Mich. 357.

¶ 669. A widow's relinquishment of her dower and acceptance of a legacy do not place her in the position of a purchaser for a valuable consideration so far as to entitle her claim as legatee to priority over the claims of creditors of the estate; she is placed on the same footing with other creditors, and if the estate is insufficient is entitled to share pro rata with them.—Tracy v. Murray, 44 Mich. 109.

¶ 670. A ward's claim against the estate of her guardian for his neglect to collect money belonging to her stands upon the same footing with the claims of the general creditors, and is to be paid ratably there with.—Dodson v. McKelvey, 93 Mich. 263.

¶ 671. Land having been devised by A. to his widow, B., for her life, with remainder to two children, a third child, C. presented after B.'s death against A.'s estate a claim based upon an agreement between B., the other children, and the executors of A.'s will, that she should receive from the accumulated income of B.'s life estate due from A.'s executors, compensation for supporting B. Held, that all of B.'s creditors were equally entitled to share in the amount so due to B.; that the claims against B.'s estate must be allowed before any claimant is entitled to a share of it.—Morse v. Allen's Estate, 99 Mich. 303.

§ 214. Land as an asset for payment.

Land in hands of heirs' grantees, see post § 215.
Lands occupied as homestead, see post § 216.
Liability of land for claims allowed against estate, see also ante ¶ 595.
Recourse to lands for payment, see post, VII.

¶ 672. Subject to the homestead right the lands of a decedent are assets of his estate when needed for the payment of debts.—Brown v. Keiser, 182 Mich. 432.

¶ 673. Real estate is not assets in the hands of a personal representative, and, unless otherwise charged by the terms of the will, is subject only to the contingency of a sale of so much thereof as may be necessary to pay the debts of the estate in case of an insufficiency of personalty.—Marvin v. Bowlby, 142 Mich. 245.

¶ 674. Where the personal assets left by a testator exceed debts and expenses of administration the income from a trust estate in favor of a life tenant is not liable to a charge for this purpose, and should go intact to one entitled thereto under the will.—Poole v. Union Trust Co., 191 Mich. 162.

¶ 675. Where a father desiring to make provision for his son and family conveyed land to him as his agent, really as trustee, with no intention of conveying the title in fee, the creditors of the son after his death cannot reach the land.—Fleming v. Wood, 147 Mich. 513.

§ 215. Lands in hands of heirs' grantees.

See also post ¶ 817.
Right to follow property for creditors or heirs which may be exercised by persons other than representative, see ante § 138.
Procedure against heirs' grantees on recourse to land for payment of claims, see post § 228.
Right and title of heirs' grantees or transferees, see post § 358.

¶ 676. Real estate descends to heirs subject to the payment of decedent's debts; and conveyances made by the heirs before administration, or before claims against the estate are paid or barred, are also subject to his debts.—Burns v. Berry, 42 Mich. 176.

¶ 677. Purchasers of land from the heirs of an estate, before administration has been had and closed, take the land subject to debts and expenses of administration.—Armstrong v. Loomis, 97 Mich. 577; Flood v. Strong, 108 Mich. 561; In re Norton's Estate, 169 Mich. 531.

¶ 678. Purchasers of lands from heirs before the estate is closed take subject to the debts and administration expenses, and the heirs are not liable to refund, for the satisfaction of claims against the estate, the money paid them by their vendees.—Armstrong v. Loomis, 97 Mich. 577.

¶ 679. The grantees of certain realty conveyed by the heir at law of the intestate were allowed an injunction against the administrator and their grantor to restrain them from attempting to dispose of the land to satisfy claims against the estate when the personalty was sufficient to meet them.—Hill v. Mitchell, 40 Mich. 389.

§ 216. Lands occupied as homestead.

Investment in homestead by representative to defeat creditors, see also ante ¶ 375.
Exception of homestead lands, see also ante ¶ 672.
Sale of homestead lands, see post ¶ 702.
Sale of homestead for payment of debts, see Jud. Act, chap. LIX, § 45, Comp. L. 1915, § 14031.

¶ 680. Lands occupied as a homestead are, subject to the homestead right, assets when needed for the payment of demands against the estate.—Drake v. Kinsell, 38 Mich. 232.

¶ 681. Homestead property conveyed for a nominal consideration, the grantee agreeing, orally, to pay the grantor's debts, is properly subjected, on the grantor's death, to decedent's debts.—Farrand v. Caton, 69 Mich. 235.

§ 217. Primary exhaustion of personalty.

See also post ¶ 697.
Insufficiency of personalty to pay debts as condition precedent, see also ante ¶ 673.
Exhaustion of personalty for payment of debts, see Jud. Act, chap. LIV, § 5, Comp. L. 1915, § 13849.

¶ 682. In satisfying the debts of an intestate who has left realty and personalty, the personal estate must first be exhausted, and then so much of the real estate as may be necessary may be applied.—Marvin v. Bowlby, 142 Mich. 245.

§ 218. Election between general claim and lien.

Law as to election of remedies in general, see Election and Waiver.

¶ 683. Prior to the issue of letters of administration, an heir at law of the decedent, who was also a general creditor of the estate, paid the balance due on a contract for the purchase of the homestead occupied by the decedent at the time of his death, and the same was conveyed to all of the heirs, some of whom were minors. Said heir then filed a claim against the estate, made up of the money so paid, and moneys claimed to have been loaned to the decedent to pay on the contract and for other purposes. The claim was allowed, after which the claimant filed a bill to declare the same a lien upon the homestead, and for its sale to satisfy said lien. The bill failed to show that there was no personal property belonging to the estate, or that the rents were insufficient to take care of complainant's claim. Held, that complainant, having voluntarily submitted his claim to the jurisdiction of the probate court, and having rested content with such jurisdiction until after the time for appeal had expired, has elected his remedy, and will not be allowed to put either the estate or the other heirs to an expensive suit in chancery to enforce the claim for the moneys paid on the contract.—Kraft v. Kraft, 102 Mich. 439.

¶ 684. Plaintiff in attachment, after the death of the defendant, revived the suit against his administrator and obtained judgment. He thereafter released the property levied upon and proved his claim as an absolute claim against the estate in probate court with nothing to indicate any intention to retain the lien. The estate proved insolvent and the probate court certified the judgment back to the circuit court and a new writ of execution was issued and levy made. Held that plaintiff had abandoned the attachment levy, since permitting him to retain the lien would give him an unfair advantage over other creditors.—Lafferty v. Lafferty, 139 Mich. 176.

2. Payment or Discharge, Shares and Distribution Among Creditors.

§ 219. In general.

See also ante ¶¶ 651, 652.
Assets and securities for payment and rank and priorities of claims, see ante, VI, D, 1.
Garnishment, bill or other remedy to reach shares of distributees for creditors, see post § 382.
Payment of debts of estate as prerequisite to distribution, see post ¶¶ 1142, 1143.
Payment and distribution of shares in the estate, see post, XIII.
Absence of creditors as prerequisite to family settlement without administration, see ante § 2.
Legacy as payment of debt, see Wills, VI.
Settlement of claim by accord, where it was carried along by decedent's official successor, see Accord and Satisfaction ¶ 51.
Public policy as to agreements of representative and creditors consenting to action taken or for advantage, see Contracts § 63.
When representative to pay debts in full, see Jud. Act, chap. LVI, § 5, Comp. L. 1915, § 13887.
Allowance of time to representative for payment of debts, see Jud. Act, chap. LVI, § 1, Comp. L. 1915, § 13883.

Extension of time to representative for payment of debts and procedure to obtain, see Jud. Act, chap. LVI, §§ 2-4, Comp. L. 1915, §§ 13884-13886.
When special administrator to pay claims, see Jud. Act, chap. LIII, § 6, Comp. L. 1915, § 13824.

¶ 685. Under a contract to compensate claimant for personal services out of the estate of the decedent, a conveyance of realty to claimant deposited in escrow to be delivered after death of the grantor must be considered a transfer in kind and prima facie payment pro tanto.—In re McNamara's Estate, 148 Mich. 346.

¶ 686. An agreement between a member of a mutual benefit association and his mother, to whom his certificate is payable, that the amount thereof, when received, shall be applied upon, and shall pro tanto extinguish, an existing indebtedness of his to her, is valid.—Maybury v. Berkery, 102 Mich. 126.

¶ 687. An executor under a will who owed an indebtedness to the testator's estate, was guilty of no wrong where he paid a note of testator's without its having been allowed by the commissioners on claims, and secured the collateral which had been given for such note and sold it at par, and duly accounted for the proceeds of such sale and the balance of his own indebtedness.—Houghteling v. Stockbridge, 136 Mich. 544.

§ 220. Effect of bond by residuary legatee as executor.
Title of residuary legatee as executor, see ante § 66.
Obligation, breach and liability on bond of residuary legatee as executor, see post § 388.
Remedy on bond of residuary legatee as executor, see post § 392.
Requisites and sufficiency of deed of executor as residuary legatee, see ante ¶ 425.
Presentment and establishment of claim against residuary legatee as executor, see ante § 195.
Effect of bond of residuary legatee on right of creditor to sale of lands, see also post ¶ 696.
Authority of residuary legatee as executor to mortgage property of estate, see post ¶ 800.
Bond of executor as residuary legatee, see Jud. Act, chap. LII, § 37, Comp. L. 1915, § 13809.

¶ 688. Filing of a residuary legatee's bond by an executrix under Comp. L. 1897, § 9312, does not have the effect of vesting the title to the property in such executrix and making her liable personally for the debts, and closing the estate, but on the contrary the probate court retains jurisdiction with power to compel application of the assets to the payment of debts and will prohibit the giving of a preference by the executrix to one creditor over another.—In re Vedders' Estate, 122 Mich. 439.

¶ 689. The lien created in favor of creditors by the statutes declaring that all of a testator's property shall be chargeable with the payment of all his debts, remains unaffected by the giving of a bond by an executor who is also residuary legatee to take the estate free from inventory on condition of paying debts.—Lafferty v. People's Savings Bank, 76 Mich. 35.

§ 221. Shares or dividends, and distribution.
Order of payment and distribution to creditors and procedure thereon, see Jud. Act, chap. LVI, §§ 8-11, Comp. L. 1915, §§ 13890-13893.

¶ 690. An agreement by two children, remaindermen after the widow's devise for life, with a third child and with the executors that the third child should receive from the accumulations of the widow's life estate compensation for supporting the widow is not equivalent to an equitable assignment of the amount due from the estate to the widow, such as to subrogate the third child to that sum.—Morse v. Allen's Estate, 99 Mich. 303.

VII. RECOURSE TO LAND FOR PAYMENT OF DEBTS, CHARGES AND EXPENSES.

A. SALE OR MORTGAGE UNDER THE STATUTES.

1. Occasion and Propriety.

§ 222. In general.
Prerequisites to the proceedings, see post § 223.
Estates and interests liable, see post § 224.
Mode of recourse to lands devised or assigned to heirs, see post § 225.
Right to possession before recourse, see post § 226.
Sale under power or license for purpose other than to pay debts, see ante § 128.
Right and title of representative in realty in general, see ante §§ 61, 62.
Jurisdiction and remedies to subject assets to payment of claims, see ante § 200.
Exhaustion of personalty before resort to lands, see ante § 217.
Lands as assets for payment, see ante §§ 214-216.
Sale or mortgage under terms of will, see post, VII, B.
Power to sell or dispose of realty in course of management for purposes other than payment of debts, see ante § 128.
Discharge of incumbrances on land and redemption, see ante § 121.
Validity of statute providing for sale of lands by representative (Pub. Acts 1909, No. 209), see Statutes, V.

Validity of statute authorizing sale of lands for payment of debts (Pub. Acts 1897, No. 121), see Statutes, III.
Sale of real estate by representative, see Jud. Act, chap. LIX, § 1, Comp. L. 1915, § 13987.
Purposes for which representative may mortgage estate, see Jud. Act, chap. LIX, § 49, Comp. L. 1915, § 14035.
Compensation of representative for services in sale of realty, see post § 290.
Lands descend subject to debts, see Comp. L. 1915, § 11795.

¶ 691. The time within which an administrator is required to close up an estate cannot be extended beyond four and a half years, during which period creditors have a lien on the realty belonging to the estate; the provisions of statutes in this regard operate, in effect, as a limitation of this lien. —Hoffman v. Beard, 32 Mich. 218.

¶ 692. After the lapse of the period beyond which the probate court is not authorized to extend time for the payment of debts and the settlement of the estate, that court has no longer any authority to license the sale of lands belonging to the estate for the payment of the debts which have been proved against it, and which, by the statute, have in the meantime become barred.—Hoffman v. Beard, 32 Mich. 218.

¶ 693. If the creditors have lost their remedy against the executor or administrator by lapse of time, the courts will not license a sale of the real estate for the amount of claims thus barred.—In re Godfrey's Estate, 4 Mich. 308.

¶ 694. Where the administrator, seventeen years after the estate was reported insolvent, petitioned for license to sell lands to pay debts, held, that the license should be refused whether the action of creditors against the administrator was barred by the statute or not.—Brooks v. McIntyre, 4 Mich. 316.

¶ 695. The mere failure of a creditor of a decedent's estate, upon which no administration has been had, to assert his claim for a period of five years after the death of the deceased, does not constitute such laches as will preclude him from enforcing the claim against land of the decedent in the possession of a purchaser from the sole heir, where the personal property of the decedent was in the possession of the surviving member of a firm to which he belonged, and the interest on the claim continued to be paid until a defalcation by the survivor, and the creditor had no knowledge that the property was being misused by the latter.—Flood v Strong, 108 Mich. 561.

¶ 696. The giving, by an executor who is also the residuary legatee, of bond conditioned to pay debts and legacies (How. St., § 5836, as amended Laws 1887, Act No. 169), does not destroy creditors' right to have realty of estate sold for payment of their claims by proceedings in probate court.—Lafferty v. People's Savings Bank, 76 Mich. 35.

¶ 697. Before R. S. 1846 an administrator had no interest in or authority over real estate unless the personal property of the intestate was insufficient to pay his debts; and then he could only dispose of it as empowered by the probate court. — Thayer v. Lane, W. 200; In re Campbell, 2 D. 141.

§ 223. Prerequisites to the proceeding.

See also ante ¶ 697.
Exhaustion of personalty as prerequisite to subjection of land to payment of claims, see ante § 217.
Insufficiency of personalty to pay debts as ground for sale of real estate, see Jud. Act, chap. LIX, § 1, ¶ 1, Comp. L. 1915, § 13987, ¶ 1.

¶ 698. No other requisites to the jurisdiction of a county court of proceedings by an administrator under the Act of July 27, 1818, to sell land to pay debts of the estate are presented than the death of the deceased, the insufficiency of his personal estate to pay his debts, and a representation thereof to the county court where deceased lived or his real estate was situated, making these facts appear to the court, and its decision is the exercise of jurisdiction as conferred by the representation.—Lessee of Grignon v. Astor, 2 How. (U. S.) 319, 11 L. ed. 283.

§ 224. Estates and interests liable.

Subjection of homestead lands to payment of debts, see ante § 216.
Liability of lands conveyed by representative for claims allowed against estate, see also ante ¶ 595.
Liability of homesteads for payment of debts, see Homesteads, IV.

¶ 699. The probate court cannot authorize an executor to sell, in order to satisfy debts of the estate, decedent's land incumbered by mortgages placed thereon after his death or by interests created by the will; the sale must be of the interest whereof he died seized.—Hewitt v. Durant, 78 Mich. 186.

¶ 700. An executor cannot be empowered by the probate court to sell an undivided interest in lands of which the testator owned the complete title.—Eberstein v. Oswalt, 47 Mich. 254.

¶ 701. An administrator who has bought in an undivided interest of the heirs in certain real property, and for his own personal advantage has withdrawn it from the estate, cannot be licensed to sell the parcel for the payment of his own claims as administrator, because the law only permits him to sell the whole interest of which the intestate was seized.—Daly's Appeal, 47 Mich. 443.

¶ 702. Whether lands can rightfully be sold to pay debts of a decedent, subject to a homestead right, quære.—Showers v. Robinson, 43 Mich. 502.

§ 225. Statutory provision as to lands devised or assigned to heirs.

Statutory liability of devised lands for payment of debts and expenses of administration, see Jud. Act, chap. LII, § 25 et seq.; Comp. L. 1915, § 13797 et seq.

Jurisdiction of probate court to settle amount of liabilities of devisees and to issue execution to enforce contribution, see Jud. Act, chap. LII, §§ 27-29; Comp. L. 1915, §§ 13799-13801.

¶ 703. An executor cannot be empowered by the probate court to sell devised land of which the devisee has taken possession for the purpose of satisfying debts of the estate: contribution must be enforced by execution (How. St., §§ 5816-5820).—Atwood v. Frost, 51 Mich. 360; Atwood v. Frost, 59 Mich. 409.

§ 226. Right to possession before recourse.

Authority of representative with respect to realty and right to possession, see ante § 61.

Right to possession of realty in general in course of administration, see ante § 126.

Right of surviving spouse, children or heirs to possession of homestead, see Homesteads, VII.

¶ 704. A widow whose husband died seized of land, leaving neither parents nor children, has a life estate, and is entitled to possession until a superior right is shown, and accordingly neither she nor her grantee is to be disturbed by creditors on the possibility that an administrator may be appointed who may be empowered to sell the land to pay debts.—Finch v. Rhodes, 49 Mich. 33.

2. Procedure, Pleading and Proof.

§ 227. In general.

Procedure against heir's grantee, see post § 228.

Petition for license, see post § 229.

Notice and hearing on petition, see post § 230.

Evidence and proofs, see post § 231.

Special bonds and oaths, see post § 232.

Order, license and sale of mortgage thereunder, see post, VII, A, 3.

Character of the proceeding to sell, in personam or in rem, see also Courts ¶ 134.

Sale of interest of decedent in contract for purchase of land and procedure thereon, see Jud. Act, chap. LIX, §§ 28-32; Comp. L. 1915, §§ 14014-14018.

Sale of lands subject to incumbrances and bond of purchasers for protection of estate, see Jud. Act, chap. LIX, § 33; Comp. L. 1915, § 14019.

Procedure for mortgaging estate, see Jud. Act, chap. LIX, §§ 50, 51; Comp. L. 1915, §§ 14036, 14037.

License to representative to sell at private sale and procedure thereunder, see Jud. Act, chap. LIX, § 42; Comp. L. 1915, § 14028.

Procedure for sale of homestead to pay debts, see Jud. Act, chap. LIX, §§ 45-48; Comp. L. 1915, §§ 14031-14034.

¶ 705. The proceedings for the sale of an equitable title in lands should be the same as in case of a legal.—Woods v. Monroe, 17 Mich. 238.

¶ 706. It seems that it is not necessary that the indebtedness of a decedent should be found by commissioners in this state before a petition for the sale of land to pay his debts and expenses of administration is filed.—Cahill v. Bassett, 66 Mich. 407, affirming by equal division on other points the judgment of the lower court.

§ 228. Procedure against heir's grantee.

Right and title of heirs' grantees in general, see post § 358.

¶ 707. The administrator of an intestate, claiming that the realty was needed to satisfy claims against the estate, complained that a deed of the realty had been obtained from the heir at law by fraud, and filed a bill to have that and subsequent conveyances decreed void and the land declared the property of the estate. Held, that as it did not concern the administrator whether the deeds were void or not, and as the conveyance from the heir at law, in stating the heirship, assumed that the land belonged to the estate, the proceeding was idle and the bill ought to have been demurred to and dismissed.—Hill v. Mitchell, 40 Mich. 389.

§ 229. Petition for license.

Notice and hearing on petition, see post § 230.

Effect of irregularity in petition, see post ¶ 761.

Petition for sale of real estate, see Jud. Act, chap. LIX, § 3; Comp. L. 1915, § 13989.

¶ 708. A petition for leave to sell land to pay debts, claims and charges is not vitiated by the unnecessary averment that petitioner has in view "the distribution of the balance over and above the amount necessary to pay the debts."—Norman v. Olney, 64 Mich. 553.

¶ 709. Where on the original administrator's removal an administrator de bonis non has been appointed, his petition for license to sell realty to pay debts is sufficient if it alleges that there are just debts and charges against the estate, and that the personalty came into the hands of the administrator de bonis non; it need not also allege an insufficiency of personal assets in the hands of the original administrator.—In re Beniteau's Estate (Beniteau v. Dodsley), 88 Mich. 152.

¶ 710. Proceedings in probate court for the sale of real estate to pay debts and administration expenses do not become void because the executors' petition embraces the widow's account for maintenance of minor children.—Egan v. Grece, 79 Mich. 629.

§ 230. Notice and hearing on petition.

Notice and hearing on petition for sale of real estate, see Jud. Act, chap. LIX, §§ 3-7; Comp. L. 1915, §§ 13989-13993.

¶ 711. Where the court order for the hearing of an administrator's petition for leave to sell real estate gave the session of court at which issued as January 26, 1897, and by a clerical error in publishing the order the date was given as January 26, 1896, the variance was merely a clerical one, and did not invalidate the proceedings under the order.—Brown v. Hannah, 152 Mich. 33.

¶ 712. Under Comp. L. 1857, § 3090, How. St., § 6076, a failure to publish the application for license the full statutory period will not avoid the proceedings.—Woods v. Monroe, 17 Mich. 238.

§ 231. Evidence and proofs.

Evidence on establishing claims, see ante §§ 205-207.

Evidence to rebut presumption or impeach title under sale, see post § 253.

Admissibility of parol proof of mistake in date of report of sale, see Evidence § 158, ¶ 815.

Admissibility of parol evidence of matters, including representations as to title, anterior to sale in action on bid, see Evidence ¶ 1038.

¶ 713. It seems that it is not necessary that the indebtedness of a decedent should be found by commissioners in this state before a petition for the sale of land to pay his debts and expenses of administration is filed; proof of the indebtedness may be made by other evidence.—Cahill v. Bassett, 66 Mich. 407, affirming decision below by equal division on other points.

§ 232. Special bonds and oaths.

Sufficiency of bond for general administration, see ante §§ 35, 36.

Obligation, breach and liability of special bond for sale of real estate, see post § 387.

Remedy and procedure on bonds for sale of real estate, see post § 391.

Failure to give special bond on sale as defect in proceedings, see post ¶ 765.

Effect on purchaser's title where not special bond was required of representative by court, see post ¶ 780.

Sufficiency of evidence as to execution of special bond, see post § 253, ¶ 790.

Bond of representative on sale of realty, see Jud. Act, chap. LIX, § 15; Comp. L. 1915, § 14001.

Oath of representative on sale of realty, see Jud. Act, chap. LIX, § 14; Comp. L. 1915, § 14000.

Effect of bond to pay debts on license to sell, see Jud. Act, chap. LIX, § 10; Comp. L. 1915, § 13996.

¶ 714. An administrator licensed to mortgage the property of his intestate is not required to take a special oath before acting.—Griffin v. Johnson, 37 Mich. 87.

¶ 715. Where the bond required by Comp. L. 1871, § 4627, How. St., § 6107, of an administrator upon granting him a license to mortgage his intestate's property is given before the acknowledgment of the mortgage, and is approved by the court, the statute is satisfied.—Griffin v. Johnson, 37 Mich. 87.

3. Order and License and Sale or Mortgage Thereunder.

§ 233. Order or decree and license.

Recordation of license, see post § 234.

Notice of sale, see post §§ 235, 236.

Conduct of sale, time, place and manner, see post § 237.

Terms of sale, credit, default of purchaser, see post §§ 238, 239.

Report of sale and confirmation, see post § 240.

Setting aside sale and persons entitled to object, see post §§ 242, 243.

Collateral attack, see post §§ 244, 245.

Title and rights of purchaser, see post §§ 246-248.

Recovery back of bid on avoidance of sale, see post §§ 249, 250.

Statutory force and effect of sale, see post §§ 251-253.

Validity and effect of mortgage by representative, see post §§ 254-257.

Invalidity of sale by representative appointed without proper notice, see ante ¶ 114.

Note relating to appeals from orders of probate court, see ante § 197.

Appeals to circuit court from order of probate court for sale or mortgage, see Probate Courts, III.

Writ of error from circuit judgment on appeal to supreme court, see Appeal.

Review of proceedings in circuit respecting sale of lands to pay debts, see Appeal § 28.

Final judgment on appeal or remand to probate court as proper practice, see Probate Courts, III.

Presumption on appeal to supreme court that sale was made after enactment of statute affecting it, see Appeal ¶ 1574.

Order for sale of real estate, see Jud. Act, chap. LIX, §§ 12, 13; Comp. L. 1915, §§ 13998, 13999.

¶ 716. Without lawful license, a valid sale of real estate cannot be made by executor, administrator, or guardian.—Houlihan v. Fogarty, 162 Mich. 492.

¶ 717. The petition for license to sell did not describe any lands, but as it was followed by a license fully and properly describing the lands, except one lot, as to which a supplemental order was made and appended to the original license, authorizing and directing the administrator to sell it, the license was held good as to all lands.—Woods v. Monroe, 17 Mich. 238.

¶ 718. Whether, where the probate judge refused an administrator's petition to sell real estate to pay debts, but authorized a mortgage, the petition containing facts essential to either decree, that court afterwards, upon the administrator's failure to effect a mortgage, could, after continuances without a new petition and notice, act upon the prayer it had before denied, and grant a license to sell, quære.—Cahill v. Bassett, 66 Mich. 407. [The lower court's judgment that the sale was valid was affirmed by equal division.]

¶ 719. Where license to sell real estate for debts was granted by the county court, and after license but before sale the law giving that court jurisdiction was repealed, it was held that the repeal of the law was a revocation of the license, and a sale subsequently made was void.—Campau v. Gillett, 1 Mich. 416.

§ 234. Recordation of license.

¶ 720. The recording of a license to sell lands to pay debts, etc., is not a prerequisite to the sale, nor is its record at any stage of the proceedings necessary to sustain the jurisdiction of the probate court.—Egan v. Grece, 79 Mich. 629.

§ 235. Notice of sale and adjourned sale.

Proof of notice, see post § 236.

Duty of representative to adjourn sale, see also post ¶ 724.

Notice of sale of realty, see Jud. Act, chap. LIX, § 18; Comp. L. 1915, § 14004.

Adjournment of sale and notice of adjournment, see Jud. Act, chap. LIX, §§ 19, 20; Comp. L. 1915, §§ 14005, 14006.

¶ 721. Whether a notice of an administrator's sale of lands that is defective in having too short a time of publication can be cured by adjournment of the sale and further publication containing an underwritten notice of adjournment, quære; the court being equally divided and so affirming decision that it was cured.—Cahill v. Bassett, 66 Mich. 407.

§ 236. ——Proof of notice.

Affidavit of notice of sale of realty, see Jud. Act, chap. LIX, § 21; Comp. L. 1915, § 14007.

¶ 722. Where no affidavit of posting notices of sale was filed, but the report of the administrator showed such posting, and there was proof of the publication in a newspaper, it was held sufficient. But affidavits made ten years after the sale are not evidence of the fact of posting.—Woods v. Monroe, 17 Mich. 238.

§ 237. Time, place, manner, and conduct of sale.

Place, manner and time of sale of realty, see Jud. Act, chap. LIX, § 24; Comp. L. 1915, § 14010.

Duty of representative to sell on receipt of copy of order of sale, see Jud. Act, chap. LIX, § 16; Comp. L. 1915, § 14002.

¶ 723. A sale under a license granted under the territorial statute of July 27, 1818, was held void where it was made more than four years after the license was granted—the statute of limitations then in force barring all claims against the estate after four years.—Campau v. Gillett, 1 Mich. 416.

¶ 724. Where the day appointed for an administrator's sale is rainy and inclement, and but few persons appear and bid, and the bids do not exceed half the value of the property, it is the duty of the administrator to adjourn the sale.—Beaubien v. Poupard, H. 206.

¶ 725. An administrator cannot make a public plat of his intestate's lands under a probate license to sell them; but a sale of lands not platted may be made, with the probate court's approval, by boundaries running with the centers of streets and conforming to streets and alleys to be opened by public authority, so far as they can be ascertained. —People ex rel. Lothrop v. Detroit Board of Public Works, 41 Mich. 724.

¶ 726. The fact that an executor before the sale secured an agreement to bid does not bear against the good faith of the purchasers. Such an agreement would not prevent higher bids.—Norman v. Olney, 64 Mich. 553.

§ 238. Terms of sale and sale on credit.

Default of purchaser and resale, see post § 239.

Right of representative to give credit on sale of realty, see Jud. Act, chap. LIX, § 26; Comp. L. 1915, § 14012.

¶ 727. Whether, under the Code of 1833, an administrator was authorized, in any case, to give credit upon a sale of real estate of the intestate for the payment of his debts under a license of the probate court, and whether, if he did so, he was not chargeable with the price as money in his hands, quære. —In re Palmer, 1 D. 422.

§ 239. Default of purchaser and resale.

Default of purchaser as irregularity affecting title, see post ¶ 769.

Resale after sale set aside, see post ¶ 734.

¶ 728. A purchaser of land at an administrator's sale cannot be said to be legally in default in neglecting or refusing to pay the purchase price until after the service upon him of the notice required to be given by How. St., § 6045 (C. L., § 9098).—Peirson v. Fisk, 99 Mich. 43.

¶ 729. Under How. St., § 6045, providing for confirmation of sale by an administrator and for revocation and resale on failure of the purchaser to pay within 20 days upon "such notice to the purchaser as the probate court may direct," notice may be either that the purchaser pay the amount of his bid within a certain time, or, in default thereof, that a resale be had, and he held for the deficiency, if any, arising on such resale, or that he appear and show cause why he should not pay his bid and complete the sale.—Peirson v. Fisk, 99 Mich. 43.

§ 240. Report of sale and confirmation.

Failure to make report of sale as irregularity, see post ¶ 764.

Confirmation by court of sale of realty, see Jud. Act, chap. LIX, §§ 22, 23; Comp. L. 1915, §§ 14008, 14009.

Return of proceedings under order of sale, see Jud. Act, chap. LIX, § 27; Comp. L. 1915, § 14013.

Confirmation of sale of real property by representative, see Prob. Ct. Rule 8.

Procedure on objection to confirmation of sale of real estate by representative, see Prob. Ct. Rule 8.

¶ 730. An administrator who makes a sale of real estate under a license from the probate court must report the sale to that court, which alone has power to determine what further proceedings shall be had; and he cannot himself declare the sale off, and proceed to a resale.—Peirson v. Fisk, 99 Mich. 43.

§ 241. Deeds and other instruments of transfer.

Effect of deed as representative to create estoppels and matters estopped thereby, see Estoppel § 11.

¶ 731. The purchaser at an administrator's sale agreed with the administrator that the amount of any incumbrance against the parcels should be deducted from the face of any nominal bid therefor. Held, that this was in accordance with the statute which requires a purchaser to take the title as it stands, and that a deed stating the consideration to be the unincumbered value having been corrected according to this understanding at the instance of the purchaser's counsel, the purchaser could not object to the deed on the ground that it stated a smaller consideration than the nominal bid.—Stebbins v. Field, 43 Mich. 333.

¶ 732. That one authorized to sell real estate deeds as administrator instead of as executor is a mere irregularity which cannot affect the purchaser's title.—Norman v. Olney, 64 Mich. 553.

¶ 733. An administrator who has, under license from the probate court under How. St., § 5347, sold, for the payment of the intestate's debts, a part-paid swamp-land certificate left by him, and his interest in the lands therein described, may, after confirmation of such sale, properly assign such certificate to the purchaser thereon, such assignment being necessary to meet the requirements of the land office.—Louden v. Martindale, 109 Mich. 235.

§ 242. Setting aside sale or deed.

Setting aside sale where representative is purchaser or benefited by purchase, see post §§ 271-274.

Sufficiency of allegations of fraud in bill to cancel sale, see also Fraud § 96.

Vacation of sale of realty, see Jud. Act, chap. LIX, § 27, Comp. L. 1915, § 14013.

¶ 734. Where a sale of real estate was ordered by a judge of probate, and it appeared that he himself became interested in the purchase, the sale was set aside and a resale ordered under the direction of the court.—Walton v. Torrey, H. 259.

¶ 735. Courts recognize the fact that the records in probate courts are often carelessly and imperfectly kept, and refuse to set aside titles of long standing on account of defects in the record.—Egan v. Grece, 79 Mich. 629.

¶ 736. An administrator's sale of real estate will not be set aside for fraud on evidence that the administrator's stepfather purchased the property a little below appraised value and afterwards conveyed it to the administrator where the sale was advertised and many bidders were present and the price is not shown to be inadequate.—Kammerer v. Morlock, 125 Mich. 320.

¶ 737. A sale of land by an administrator will not be set aside where the evidence shows that the consideration received was adequate.—In re Thompson's Estate, 183 Mich. 618.

¶ 738. The value of the land in an estate was uncertain because of outstanding tax titles. The attorney of complainant administratrix advised a sale for one hundred dollars, and also advised defendants to purchase for that sum. The price proved afterwards to have been very inadequate, but there was no evidence of collusion or bad faith on the part of defendants. Held, in a bill by the administratrix to set aside the deed, the evidence of fraud was inadequate.—Turnbull v. Leavitt, 158 Mich. 545.

§ 243. Persons entitled to urge objections; estoppel.

¶ 739. Where within four years and six months after the original administrator's appointment a license for sale of realty has been obtained by the administrator de bonis non, the fact that the sale will not take place until after the expiration of the four years and six months cannot be raised as an objection by the original administrator, who was decedent's sole heir at law and who was removed for failing to pay debts.—In re Beniteau's Estate (Beniteau v. Dodsley), 88 Mich. 152.

¶ 740. Where an administrator's sale under How. St., § 6050, has been duly confirmed by the probate court and conveyance made thereunder to a bona fide purchaser, it cannot be set aside at the instance of a minor heir whose general guardian has acquiesced in the sale and received from the proceeds thereof the share due such minor.—Wheelock v. Lake, 117 Mich. 11.

¶ 741. Under How. St., § 6075 (Comp. Laws 1897, § 9128), an erroneous administrator's sale of real estate can be opened only as to those complainants who have not rested on their rights more than five years after coming of age.—Kammerer v. Morlock, 125 Mich. 320.

¶ 742. Complainant in a bill to quiet title had been induced through the representations of her brother, to permit the administratrix of a former owner of the property in question to sell such property at an administratrix's sale, under an agreement that the property should be bid in by another brother, and then deeded to complainant. Held, that since complainant acted in ignorance of her legal rights, she was not estopped from asserting that the title to the premises was not in the estate of the former owner.—Blount v. Eames, 150 Mich. 35.

§ 244. Collateral attack and impeachment.

Loss of jurisdiction by delay, see post § 245.
Effect of irregularities on rights or title of purchasers, see post § 248.
Collateral attack on mortgage, see post § 256.

¶ 743. The finding of the probate judge as to the existence or amount of debts against the estate cannot be examined in a collateral attack upon an executor's sale.—Norman v. Olney, 64 Mich. 553.

¶ 744. The determination of the probate judge that there were debts owing by a decedent's estate which justified a sale of land cannot be reviewed in a collateral proceeding wherein it appears that third parties have in good faith acquired rights which cannot be protected in such proceedings.—King v. Nunn, 99 Mich. 590.

¶ 745. Whether an order allowing an administrator to sell lands to pay for the support of the intestate's children as a lawful claim against the estate can be assailed collaterally, quære.—Toll v. Wright, 37 Mich. 93.

¶ 746. Whether an administrator's sale to pay debts can or cannot rightfully be subject to a homestead right, such sale, if ordered and made, is voidable only on appeal and not subject to collateral attack in ejectment.—Showers v. Robinson, 43 Mich. 502.

¶ 747. The proviso in How. St., § 6076, that a sale of land by an administrator, etc., shall not be avoided if it appears, among other things, that he gave a bond, "in case a bond was required," means in case the probate judge required it, and the judge's neglect to require a bond cannot, in a collateral suit, affect an innocent purchaser's rights under an executor's sale confirmed by the probate court.—Norman v. Olney, 64 Mich. 553; settling a point raised but not decided in Drake v. Kinsell, 38 Mich. 232.

¶ 748. An administrator's sale, duly confirmed by the probate court, will not be set aside in a collateral proceeding because the notices of sale, instead of being posted in three public places in the ward in which the property was situated, as provided by How. St., § 6040, were posted in three public places just outside of the ward.—Averill v. Jackson City Bank, 114 Mich. 20.

¶ 749. Sale by an administrator of two parcels of real estate at one bid is not void. The omission to sell in parcels is a mere irregularity, that cannot be set up to destroy the title in a collateral proceeding, like an action of ejectment between a grantee of the purchaser and an heir of the deceased.—Osman v. Traphagen, 23 Mich. 80.

¶ 750. Where an administrator sells several lots subject to the widow's homestead rights in all of them, when in fact she has such rights in one of them only, this is at most a mere irregularity in the sale, which cannot be collaterally attacked.—Brown v. Hannah, 152 Mich. 33.

¶ 751. Where an administrator was directed to sell certain lots in numerical order, and he sold them instead all in one parcel, this mere irregularity did not invalidate the sale so as to subject it to collateral attack.—Brown v. Hannah, 152 Mich. 33.

§ 245. ——Loss of jurisdiction by delay.

Effect of delay in giving deed after license and sale, see post ¶ 766.

¶ 752. The probate court does not lose its jurisdiction to order a sale of real estate if the settlement of the estate is delayed beyond the statutory period by causes beyond its control and that of the administrator.—Larzelere v. Starkweather, 38 Mich. 96; Norman v. Olney, 64 Mich. 553.

¶ 753. A probate court does not lose jurisdiction to license the sale of real estate for the payment of debts if the order is made within the period to which the time may properly be extended, even if the extension is not actually made.—Pratt v. Houghtaling, 45 Mich. 457.

¶ 754. A probate license to sell or mortgage real estate is not necessarily void for being granted after the expiration of the statutory time allowed for closing up the estate, if it has not been closed up in fact, and if the will contemplates that it shall remain in the hands of the executors for a longer period.—Church v. Holcomb, 45 Mich. 29.

¶ 755. It seems that a probate license to sell real estate for the payment of debts will not necessarily be held invalid for having been granted after the period allowed therefor by statute when inquired into collaterally, as in an action of ejectment against the purchaser.—Pratt v. Houghtaling, 45 Mich. 457.

¶ 756. Jurisdiction to administer an estate and to sell the real estate for payment of debts is not lost by lapse of time where the estate has not been closed.—Peckham v. Hoag, 92 Mich. 423.

§ 246. Title and rights of purchasers.

Rights to crops on lands, see post § 247.
Effect of irregularities in deed or proceedings, see post § 248.
Purchase of property by representative, see post §§ 270-274.
Right of purchaser not to look back of license, see also post ¶ 777.
Claim of adverse possession founded on right of administrator's grantee as against heirs, see Adverse Possession ¶ 30.

¶ 757. A purchaser at an administrator's sale has all the title the intestate had if the transfer was duly made by deed under a probate license to sell (Comp. L., 1871, §4598, How. St., § 6078).—Curtis v. Campbell, 54 Mich. 340.

¶ 758. Every one is bound to satisfy himself of the authority under which a judicial sale—e. g., one by an executor to enforce a decree of the probate court—is made, and buys at his peril.—Frost v. Atwood, 73 Mich. 67.

§ 247. ——Right to crops on land.

Taking crops under purchase at probate sale as a conversion, see Conversion § 6.

¶ 759. Under L. 1877, Act No. 138 (see How. St., § 5875), an intestate's estate is subject to sale for his debts for six years after his death, but except for this, and for the jurisdiction of equity to restrain waste, the heir's right of enjoyment during that time is absolute. Held, that an heir who had sown a portion of the estate before a probate order for its sale was asked for, was entitled after the sale to cut and carry the crop away, and could maintain trespass against the purchaser and the administrator for interfering with his right of possession.—McDaniels v. Walker, 44 Mich. 83.

§ 248. ——Effect of irregularities in deed or proceedings.

Collateral attack and impeachment for irregularities, see ante § 244.
Effect of irregularities in sale proceedings, see Jud. Act, chap. LIX, §§ 38, 39, Comp. L. 1915, §§ 14024, 14025.

¶ 760. Irregularities in the proceedings by an administrator for the sale of real estate of the decedent will not affect the title of the purchaser, where there has been a compliance with so much as the statute makes essential to the validity of the sale, and the good faith of the purchaser is not questioned.—Howard v. Moore, 2 Mich. 226; Coon v. Fry, 6 Mich. 506; Marvin v. Schilling, 12 Mich. 356; Woods v. Monroe, 17 Mich. 238; Osman v. Traphagen, 23 Mich. 80.

¶ 761. An executor's sale is not to be defeated by a mere technicality of expression or a want of it in the petition or license when the ends really worked out by the action of the probate court come clearly within the statute.—Norman v. Olney, 64 Mich. 553.

¶ 762. A purchaser has a right to presume that the sale is conducted under the provisions of the general law; and if it is good according to that law, he will be protected notwithstanding the existence of a private statute authorizing the sale, of which he had no knowledge, and the provisions of which were not regarded.—Browning v. Howard, 19 Mich. 323.

¶ 763. A sale made by an administrator de facto is not to be assailed by questions concerning the regularity of his appointment.—Woods v. Monroe, 17 Mich. 238.

¶ 764. Where the application of the administrator for license to sell was not verified by oath, guardians were not appointed for the infant heirs, and the administrator's report of the sale to the probate court omitted to show the price at which the land was sold, it was held that none of the omissions affected the title of the purchaser.—Coon v. Fry, 6 Mich. 506.

¶ 765. Where land that is subject to a homestead right is sold to pay charges against the estate and brings no more than is needed for that purpose, it is not a fatal defect in the proceedings that, on receiving license to sell, the administrator gave no bond to account for surplus moneys.—Drake v. Kinsell, 38 Mich. 232.

¶ 766. The omission to give an administrator's deed within a year from the granting of the license to sell cannot be urged against the title.—Howard v. Moore, 2 Mich. 226; Osman v. Traphagen, 23 Mich. 80.

¶ 767. The fact that a lot of land sold at an administrator's sale was deeded by the purchaser to the judge of probate is not such notice of fraud or wrong as would preclude any other person becoming purchaser in good faith, even though the deed was by mistake made to bear date before the confirmation of the sale.—Woods v. Monroe, 17 Mich. 238.

¶ 768. That one authorized to sell real estate deeds as administrator instead of as executor is a mere irregularity which cannot affect the purchaser's title—Norman v. Olney, 64 Mich. 553.

¶ 769. The fact that the purchase money was not all paid before an administrator's deed was given does not invalidate the title of a subsequent bona fide purchaser of the lands.—Osman v. Traphagen, 23 Mich. 80.

¶ 770. Where an administrator and administratrix had together applied for and obtained a license to sell real estate of the deceased, the subsequent refusal of the administratrix to join in the sale, her objection to it, and her omission to qualify and afterwards to unite in the deed—the administrator alone having regularly conveyed the premises, and the probate court having confirmed the sale—did not avoid the sale nor invalidate the title of a subsequent purchaser in good faith as against an heir of the deceased.—Osman v. Traphagen, 23 Mich. 80.

¶ 771. Where the widow becomes a purchaser at an executors' sale under license of the probate court, adult children cannot question the validity of the deed on the ground of her being at the time guardian of a minor heir who does not complain.—Egan v. Grece, 79 Mich. 629.

§ 249. Recovery back of bid on avoidance of sale.

Lien for price on avoidance of sale, see post § 250.

¶ 772. Money paid by a bidder at an administrator's sale, and to be forfeited should he for any cause whatever fail to pay his bid, may be recovered back where the parties learn for the first time after the sale that a building which they believed stood entirely on the land sold is partially upon adjoining land not belonging to the estate.—McKay v. Coleman, 85 Mich. 60.

¶ 773. It is no defense to an action to recover money paid by a bidder at an administrator's sale under a mutual mistake of fact as to the property that the money has been accounted for by the administrator to the probate court as belonging to the estate, he having been informed before doing so of plaintiff's claim, who demanded the repayment of the money.—McKay v. Coleman, 85 Mich. 60.

§ 250. ——Lien for price on avoidance of sale.

¶ 774. Where an executor's sale under order of the probate court of specifically devised land has been held void in ejectment brought by the devisee's grantee, the vendee cannot claim a lien for the price, nor will equity charge the land therewith, though the executor has used the proceeds for the estate's benefit.—Frost v. Atwood, 73 Mich. 67.

§ 251. Statutory force and effect of sale and deed.

Effect of lapse of time without question, see post § 252.

Evidence to rebut presumption or impeach title, see post § 253.

¶ 775. How. St., § 6074, barring in five years any action for recovery of any estate sold by an executor, etc., for fraud alleged, applies to a sale on petition not to pay debts but to provide support for minor children.—Toll v. Wright, 37 Mich. 93; Egan v. Grece, 79 Mich. 629.

¶ 776. Laws 1867, Act No. 20 (How. St., § 5678), providing that deed by executor, etc., or record thereof, or certified copy of record, shall be prima facie evidence of regularity of all anterior proceedings, applies to records existing at time of its passage.—Sauers v. Giddings, 90 Mich. 50.

¶ 777. An administrator's petition for a license to sell real estate to pay debts did not specify the amount of debts due from the decedent, or the amount of the charges of administration, or the value of the personal estate, as required by the statute. License was granted. Held, under R. S. 1838, p. 318, § 36 (see How. St., § 6076), that the purchaser was not bound to look behind the license for any other purpose than to see that it was granted by the probate court of the proper county, and that the person to whom it was granted was the administrator.—Howard v. Moore, 2 Mich. 226.

¶ 778. Comp. L. 1871, § 4596 (How. St., § 6076), providing that sales by executors, etc., shall not be avoided on account of any irregularity in the proceedings, provided certain things appear, does not validate such a sale as no statute has empowered the court to license; e. g., a sale of an undivided interest where testator held the whole title.—Eberstein v. Oswalt, 47 Mich. 254.

¶ 779. The action of the administrator under the license, whether open to legal objections or not, was at most an irregularity only, that was shielded from attack in a collateral action by the confirmation of the court.—Osman v. Traphagen, 23 Mich. 80.

¶ 780. The proviso in How. St., § 6076, that a sale of land by an administrator, etc., shall not be avoided if it appears, among other things, that he gave a bond, "in case a bond was required," means in case the probate judge required it (this point was raised but not decided in Drake v. Kinsell, 38 Mich. 232); and accordingly the judge's neglect to require a bond called for by section 6032 cannot, in a collateral suit, affect an innocent purchaser's rights under an executor's sale confirmed by the probate court.—Norman v. Olney, 64 Mich. 553.

¶ 781. The truth or falsity of the averments in an executor's petition for license to sell real estate is for the determination of the probate court; and it will be presumed that the judge performed his duty, and that there was a full investigation and determination thereupon.—Norman v. Olney, 64 Mich. 553; Egan v. Grece, 79 Mich. 629.

¶ 782. An order of the probate court licensing the executor to sell land "for the purpose of paying debts, claims, interest, and charges" and further reciting that "it would be for the best interest of all persons interested in the estate to have all the same sold," will not be regarded as an order beyond the probate court's jurisdiction to sell for distribution; but, the land being burdened with a charge of a legacy which was paid out of the proceeds and the balance having been distributed and accounted for and all parties consenting thereto, will be regarded on a record showing such facts as made under How. St., § 6031 (Comp. L. 1871, § 4551), as ordered where it was necessary to sell part of the real estate and because of injury to the residue it was necessary to sell the whole of it.—Norman v. Olney, 64 Mich. 553.

¶ 783. How. St., § 6076, which provides that an administrator's sale of land shall not be void, provided certain things appear, protects the purchaser's subsequent grantee by deed, which though absolute in form was intended as security merely of the purchaser's debt.—King v. Nunn, 99 Mich. 590.

¶ 784. Under Comp. L. 1897, § 9129, an administrator's deed under which the defendant in ejectment was in possession, afforded him full protection, when it met statutory requirements.—Upton v. Gerber, 136 Mich. 72.

¶ 785. An administrator advertised lands of an estate by insertions in a newspaper from June 9, 1888, to September 1, 1888. The probate record showed no order for hearing the petition for a license to sell the land, nor any proof of publication, nor any order granting a license to sell the land. The files contained a purported license to sell. This paper had been dated Saturday the eighth day of September, 1888. The words eighth and September had been crossed out and the words twenty-fifth and July substituted. The paper was not signed by the judge, but the certificate therein was signed by him and dated September 8, 1888. The sale was reported September 8, 1888, and deeds were issued September 14, 1888. Held, that on the face of the papers the license was issued September 8th, and not July 25th, and the sale was therefore void as not complying with the provisions relating to such license contained in § 9129, Comp. Laws 1897.—Houlihan v. Fogarty, 162 Mich. 492.

§ 252. ——Effect of lapse of time without question.

¶ 786. Under How. St., § 6076, an executor's deed is not after ten years have passed, to be declared void because apparently the license to sell is not of record, where the deed and papers in the record of the probate court recite such license.—Egan v. Grece, 79 Mich. 629.

¶ 787. The validity of an executor's sale to the testator's widow cannot be questioned by reason of her fiduciary relation to the testator's children when acquiesced in for twenty-six years, and the widow's possession had throughout been open, notorious and exclusive.—Egan v. Grece, 79 Mich. 629.

¶ 788. An administrator's sale, when void for want of jurisdiction to order it, is not within Comp. L. 1871, § 7137, How. St., § 8698, protecting one who holds land thereunder from an action for its recovery after five years from the origin of a right of action.—Toll v. Wright, 37 Mich. 93.

¶ 789. When a purchaser's title under an administrator's sale has been perfected by lapse of five years, under How. St., § 6074, it is not to be questioned. The sales protected are those purporting to be made under How. St., chap. 229, and in pursuance of orders professedly based thereon; it is not necessary that the sale should have been a valid one.—Toll v. Wright, 37 Mich. 93; Watson v. Lion Brewing Co., 61 Mich. 595.

§ 253. ——Evidence to rebut presumption or impeach title.

¶ 790. By his license to sell lands an administrator was required to give bond. In a suit to quiet title derived through the sale, no bond was found in the probate files, but the administrator and the probate judge testified that they had no doubt one was given, and there was independent evidence that one was drafted. But a person, who, as the probate judge testified, was one of the sureties, denied having signed any such bond. Whether there was proof that the bond required by statute was given, quære.—Woods v. Monroe, 17 Mich. 238.

§ 254. Validity and effect of mortgage by representative.

Variance between mortgage and authority, see post § 255.

Objections available collaterally or on foreclosure, see post § 256.

Subrogation under void mortgage, see post § 257.

Purposes for which representative may mortgage estate, see ante, VII, A, 1.

Procedure for mortgaging estate, see ante, VII, A, 2.

Authority to mortgage estate, see Jud. Act, chap. LIX, § 49, Comp. L. 1915, § 14035.

¶ 791. An administrator's mortgage is not avoided for mere irregularities.—Griffin v. Johnson, 37 Mich. 87.

¶ 792. Parties claiming under a mortgage made in pursuance of a license duly granted are protected by the license without investigating the truth of the facts upon which it was granted.—Griffin v. Johnson, 37 Mich. 87.

¶ 793. Where an administrator mortgages the homestead of his intestate, and the widow joins, no rights are involved but those of minor heirs, and so much of the land as remains beyond the amount and value of the statutory homestead is not affected.—Griffin v. Johnson, 37 Mich. 87.

¶ 794. Where a presumptively legal claim, approved by the probate court, exists against an estate, which still remains unsettled after the time limited for that purpose, and is still, for some purpose, in the hands of the probate court, it is within the jurisdiction of that court to license the giving of a mortgage on the estate to meet the expenses of administration; and if no appeal is taken and the probate order is confirmed the mortgage becomes a valid claim.—Church v. Holcomb, 45 Mich. 29.

¶ 795. An administrator's mortgage given upon the estate to raise money to pay its debts is invalid if the order allowing it and the proceedings thereon do not comply with Comp. L. 1871, § 4626, How. St., § 6106, and specify the time for which it may run, and the rate per cent at which it shall be given; and the good faith of the parties will not save it.—Detroit Fire & Marine Ins. Co. v. Aspinall, 45 Mich. 330.

¶ 796. The holder of a mortgage made by an administrator to raise money for the payment of debts, but invalid for want of compliance with the statutes, may be subrogated to a mortgage made by the decedent and senior, which was paid with the proceeds of the mortgage made by the administrator.—Detroit Fire & Marine Ins. Co. v. Aspinall, 48 Mich. 238, settling the question left open for want of facts in Detroit Fire & Marine Ins. Co. v. Aspinall, 45 Mich. 330.

¶ 797. Where an administrator gives a mortgage on the testator's estate to meet the needs thereof under authority of the probate court and with the written consent of the beneficiaries under the will, the mortgage is a valid subsisting lien on the realty covered by it so far as the mortgagee is concerned and the matter of the contribution is between the beneficiaries.—Stroh v. O'Hearn, 176 Mich. 164.

§ 255. ——Variance between mortgage and authority.

¶ 798. A license granted to an administrator to mortgage the property of his intestate made the interest thereon payable annually on the 15th of October. The mortgage being dated in February, the first instalment fell due within a year. Held to be no departure from the terms of the license.—Griffin v. Johnson, 37 Mich. 87.

¶ 799. The insertion of an attorney's fee clause does not invalidate an administrator's mortgage, even if unauthorized by the license under which the mortgage was made; it could only support a claim for the reduction of the amount due.—Griffin v. Johnson, 37 Mich. 87.

¶ 800. A mortgage given pursuant to license, by an executrix who had filed a residuary legatee's bond, which failed to comply with requirements in the license as to amount, as to interest payments and that it be made subject to all incumbrances, was so materially variant from the license that its confirmation was refused.—In re Vedders' Estate, 122 Mich. 439.

¶ 801. A mortgage for $3000 made by the administratrix under authority of the probate court based on a petition for leave to make a mortgage of $1500 is not valid although the facts show that the mortgage for $1500 could not be made while prior mortgages were unpaid and that the mortgage allowed was made to pay off the prior mortgages and leave a balance for purposes specified in the petition.—Russell v. Wheeler, 129 Mich. 41.

§ 256. ——Objections available collaterally or on foreclosure.

Collateral attack on sale, see ante § 244.

¶ 802. If the facts upon which a court of competent jurisdiction licenses an administrator to mortgage real estate are sufficient to support the license, their truth cannot be questioned in a merely collateral action.—Griffin v. Johnson, 37 Mich. 87.

¶ 803. An order of the probate court authorizing an executor to mortgage property in order to realize money to pay assessments and taxes cannot be attacked in a collateral proceeding to foreclose the mortgage where the petition is sufficient to confer jurisdiction upon probate court, as the general doctrine is that parties claiming under a mortgage made in pursuance of a license are not required to investigate the truth of those facts but have a right to assume that the court acted correctly, it having jurisdiction.—Long v. Landman, 118 Mich. 174.

¶ 804. An order of the probate court authorizing an executor to mortgage property in order to realize money to pay assessments and taxes cannot be attacked in a collateral proceeding to foreclose the mortgage where the petition is sufficient to confer jurisdiction upon probate court, as the statute (How. St., § 6105), provides that the probate court may authorize the giving of a mortgage for the purpose of paying the debts against the estate of any deceased person.—Long v. Landman, 118 Mich. 174.

¶ 805. A mortgage by an executor to pay taxes cannot be objected to in a suit to foreclose the mortgage, because of money being expended needlessly and without authority, by the executor, as the probate court is entirely competent to deal with such questions. —Long v. Landman, 118 Mich. 174.

¶ 806. A mortgage by an executor to pay taxes cannot be objected to in a suit to foreclose the mortgage, because of money being retained improperly by the executor in the way of compensation, as the probate court is entirely competent to deal with such questions.—Long v. Landman, 118 Mich. 174.

¶ 807. On foreclosure a mortgage by an executor to pay taxes and assessments cannot be objected to on the ground that the estate should have been closed at the time of mortgaging where it appears that such estate was not closed, and that none of the heirs had asked for a partition, and the statute (How. St., § 5875) gives an executor possession of real estate until the estate is settled or delivered over by order of the probate court.—Long v. Landman, 118 Mich. 174.

¶ 808. The terms of an administrator's mortgage being prescribed in the license allowing it to be made, and nothing being left to the administrator's discretion, it was held that his action might be confirmed nunc pro tunc even after foreclosure.—Griffin v. Johnson, 37 Mich. 87.

§ 257. ——Subrogation under void mortgage.

See also ante ¶ 796.

¶ 809. An administrator having contracted in writing with his intestate's widow for the purchase, for the heirs' benefit, of her interest in the estate, mortgaged under a license from court part of the land of the estate, and paid the proceeds to the widow, who relinquished possession but did not formally release dower. Upon the mortgagee's foreclosure bill the mortgage was declared to be void, but a valid claim or lien upon the widow's dower interest, while the heirs were given the right to pay complainant the amount due on the mortgage and thereupon to require the widow to release dower, or, on their failure to elect to make such payment, complainant was given the right to apply for commissioners to assign the dower interest, which was then to be sold and the proceeds applied to pay costs and expenses, and complainant's claim, the surplus, if any, to go to the administrator. Held, that defendants could not complain of subrogation of the mortgagee to their rights under the contract.—Campbell v. Smith, 103 Mich. 427.

B. UNDER TERMS OF WILL.

§ 258. In general.

Sale by administrator with will annexed, see post § 259.
Sale or subjection to legacies charged, see post § 260.
Remedy in equity, see post § 261.
Right of executor to purchase where will confers power to do so, see post ¶ 851.
Estoppel of heir to set up adverse claim against sale after receiving benefits therefrom, see Estoppel, III.
Estoppel of witness to deed by representative to assert want of disposing power under will, see Estoppel § 34, ¶ 147.
Interpretation and construction of will as to powers conferred, see Wills, VI, F.

¶ 810. A testator devised property in trust to three executors empowering them or the survivor or survivors of them to pay or compromise incumbrances. One of the executors died before probate, another failed to qualify, and letters testamentary issued to a third, who as sole executor conveyed certain land in satisfaction of a mortgage. Held, that such deed was valid.—Herrick v. Carpenter, 92 Mich. 440.

¶ 811. A private sale of timberlands by executors under power given by the will should not be set aside for fraud merely on account of a delay in perfecting the sale after contract made, where such delay was agreed to when payment was in default and because no more profitable use of the money was attainable, as the contract rate of interest was high, and where a claim of inadequate consideration is not convincingly made out as of time of contract.—Brown v. Brown, 64 Mich. 75.

¶ 812. A sale by executors under a power is not shown to be unfair by the mere fact that the purchaser some months afterwards sells the land at a great advance, it not appearing that the executor had reason to assume the land was worth more than he received for it, and the dealings in such lands at the time being largely speculative. —Brown v. Brown, 64 Mich. 75.

¶ 813. Where the executors are given by a will no power to transfer real estate, a deed from them to a purchaser of certain tax titles to the land is void.—Vincent v. Evans, 165 Mich. 695.

¶ 814. In ejectment by an heir, testimony that the executor who conveyed in excess of authority under a will, received full value for the premises, and that the money so received was distributed for the benefit of the heirs, including plaintiff, was not available to defeat plaintiff's title.—Petit v. Flint & P. M. R. Co., 119 Mich. 492.

¶ 815. Heirs who have taken a release from an executor to lands which he had discharged from mortgages made by such heirs with others, and who have thereafter caused lands including such lands to be partitioned, must be regarded as having acquiesced in the sale by the executor under power to sell for debts of a parcel intended to have been included in the release, the proceeds of which parcel were used to discharge the mortgages. —Cleland v. Casgrain, 92 Mich. 139.

§ 259. Sale by administrator with will annexed.

¶ 816. An administrator with the will annexed has the same power to sell without order from the probate court that the executor named in the will had where the power of sale given the executor was not of a personal nature.—Green v. Russell, 103 Mich. 638.

§ 260. Sale or subjection to legacies charged.

Remedy in equity, see post § 261.

¶ 817. Where, upon a bill filed to restrain executors of a will from selling certain lands to pay debts and legacies, it appeared that complainant derived title from some of the devisees, that the estate was charged with certain legacies, that the executors had made no accounting until twelve years after their appointment, that no account had been approved, that there was a large quantity of other real estate and personal property, and that the probate court had ordered complainant's land to be sold first, contrary to How. St. § 6037, equity had jurisdiction to interfere and to direct the real estate to be sold in the inverse ratio of its alienation by the devisees.—Ireland v. Miller, 71 Mich. 119.

¶ 818. Where an estate was charged with a legacy, land sold without order of court by a devisee who was also the executor, and who failed to pay a balance found due against him on his accounting, was subjected, the personalty being insufficient, to the legacy; but lands sold by order of the court, being presumably sold for the lawful purpose of paying debts and legacies, were not charged.—In re Moores' Appeal, 84 Mich. 474.

§ 261. ——Remedy in equity.

¶ 819. Where lands devised subject to a legacy have all been sold by leave of court to pay debts, etc., except one parcel which has been sold by the devisees, the probate court has power to order sale of such parcel to pay the legacy, and a resort to chancery is unnecessary.—In re Moores' Appeal, 84 Mich. 474.

¶ 820. A court of chancery is the proper forum in which to enforce a lien upon real estate given to secure the payment of a legacy.—Smith v. Jackman, 115 Mich. 192.

¶ 821. A bill to subject land to the payment of a legacy is not demurrable on the ground that other legatees, similarly situated, are not made parties, where the bill avers that defendant has assumed and agreed to pay all other legacies, thus opening the way for proof of a novation sufficient to relieve the land from the lien of such legacies. —Chase v. Warner, 106 Mich. 695.

VIII. LIABILITY OF HEIRS, DEVISEES AND DISTRIBUTEES FOR DEBTS.

§ 262. In general.

Primary liability of heirs, devisees and distributees arising in course of administration, see ante, VI, B.

Collection of debts due to estate from heirs and distributees, see ante § 89.

Remedy to enforce liability, see post § 263.

Garnishment, bill or other remedy to reach shares of distributees for creditors, see post § 382.

Liability of the land to be resorted to for payment, see ante, VI, D, 1, VII, A, 1.

Right of ward against distributees for amount due for fraudulent misappropriation of decedent as guardian, see Guardianship, V.

Subjection of heir's interest to payment of debts, see also Descent ¶ 39.

Liability of heirs, devisees and distributees for contingent claims, see Jud. Act, chap. LVI, § 23, Comp. L. 1915, § 13905.

¶ 822. Heirs as such are not responsible for their ancestor's debts.—Rynearson v. Turner, 52 Mich. 7.

¶ 823. There is no authority to decree payments from distributees in favor of a creditor at large.—Shannon v. Shannon, 48 Mich. 182.

§ 263. Remedy to enforce liability.

¶ 824. Decree for contribution by devisees and legatees to pay debts, etc., is to be enforced by personal proceedings.—Frost v. Atwood, 73 Mich. 67.

¶ 825. A creditor of decedent who is entitled by the terms of the will to look to a fund in the hands of a legatee as a trust for his security need not proceed in probate but may enforce the trust in equity.—Woodruff v. Tilman, 112 Mich. 188.

IX. LIABILITY OF REPRESENTATIVE PERSONALLY TO CREDITORS.

§ 264. In general.

Nature and limit of liability, see post § 265.

Liability imposed by delay, fraud, waste or misappropriation, see §§ 266, 267.

Procedure to determine and enforce, see post § 268.

Primary liability of representative arising in course of administration, see ante, VI, B.

Accountability of representative to estate and distributees for income received and losses suffered, see post, X, C.
Personal liability of representative for costs on forced or needless litigation, see post § 329.
Bill by representative for exoneration from distributees who had assumed payment. see Indemnity, III.
Administrator's personal liability for broker's commission, see Brokers ¶ 55.
Right of surety to subrogation on payment to creditors, see Subrogation, I.
Personal liability of representative after order for distribution of assets among creditors, see Jud. Act, chap. LVI, § 12, Comp. L. 1915, § 13894.

¶ 826. An executor is not personally liable for the amount of the deficiency on foreclosure of a mortgage given by his decedent on the ground that he did not apply for the appointment of claim commissioners, so long as the mortgagee has never established his claim in the probate court or before commissioners, and never sought to enforce it until after the final distribution made by the executor at the expiration of the time limited for the payment of debts.—Willard v. Van Leeuwen, 56 Mich. 15.

¶ 827. The liability of an administrator to the creditors is to be tested by equitable rules, regardless of mere technicalities; and this on appeal as well as in the probate court.—Brown v. Forsche, 43 Mich. 492.

¶ 828. A creditor of an estate who delays the presentation of his demand until he can bring it in as matter of favor only must take all risks of being able to collect it in the condition in which he finds the estate. He cannot hold the administrator personally responsible, except upon the ground of some personal wrong or default.—Brown v. Forsche, 43 Mich. 492.

¶ 829. Where an administrator had turned over property to the distributees after paying all claims that had been allowed against the estate, and after the time for presenting claims had expired, but had neglected to file his final account, and some time afterwards another claim was presented and allowed by the probate judge, at which time the property had been used up by the distributees, held, that notwithstanding his final account was not settled, the administrator was not responsible for the claim, or for the use made by the distributees of the property.—Brown v. Forsche, 43 Mich. 492.

¶ 830. An administrator is not conclusively bound by the inventory he files of the decedent's estate so as to impose a personal liability to pay the creditors of the estate, but he may explain and correct it; he may show, e. g., that property inventoried did not belong to decedent, but to a firm in which he was a member.—Hilton v. Briggs, 54 Mich. 265.

§ 265. Nature and limit of liability.

¶ 831. The executor's personal liability to creditors of the estate is limited to the amount of assets in his hands; and it is to be satisfied from the assets, and not as if it were his individual debt.—Basom v. Taylor, 39 Mich. 682.

¶ 832. Where claims against an estate are made a personal charge against the administrator it is presumed that he retains sufficient assets to extinguish them, which assets, if he does not pay the debts, pass after he dies to his representatives, who remain liable for the debts.—In re Palm's Appeal, 44 Mich. 637.

¶ 833. When an administrator's statutory liability for claims against the decedent's estate has once attached, the creditor's right becomes absolute against him and his estate, whether the claim could or could not have been enforced against the decedent's estate.—In re Palm's Appeal, 44 Mich. 637.

§ 266. Liability imposed by delay.

By fraud, waste or misappropriation, see post § 267.
Personal liability of representative for failure to pay claims allowed against estate, see also ante ¶ 595.

¶ 834. An administrator should hasten the payment of claims against the decedent's estate, and if he allows payment to be delayed, so that he becomes personally liable, he cannot claim to be prejudiced.—In re Palm's Appeal, 44 Mich. 637.

¶ 835. Where the probate court had delayed for nearly eight years to order the payment of claims allowed against an estate, and had then directed them to be paid within a fixed time, after which they would become a personal claim against the administrator, and he neglected to pay them, and died within six years thereafter, it was held that they became a valid claim against the administrator's estate.—In re Palm's Appeal, 44 Mich. 637.

§ 267. ——By fraud, waste or misappropriation.

¶ 836. An administratrix withdrew from the custody of the court a fund belonging to the estate, and on the same day was relieved, by her own request, from her position as administratrix. It seems that the court still retains power to recall the fund on a satisfactory showing that it had been imposed on, and that the fund had been withdrawn in fraud of the solicitor of the estate, who had a lien on it.—Dennis v. Kent Circuit Judge, 42 Mich. 249.

¶ 837. If an executor has wasted the estate or has so appropriated the personal property, profits and income as to be indebted to the estate, he becomes personally liable to the estate, and it would be inequitable to sell it to reimburse a person who has furnished necessaries to minor devisees at the executor's instance and compel the minors to look to the latter for the amount.—Roscoe v. McDonald, 91 Mich. 270.

¶ 838. Executors accept not only the trusts imposed by the will under which they act, but also all the trusts with which their testator was charged in respect to the assets which come into their hands; and where the executors of a deceased attorney in fact who had defrauded his principals and coclaimants in a settlement, were informed of the facts, but nevertheless caused to be discounted a note for $10,000 that had been received by their testator upon the settlement, they were held liable to the defrauded parties for the proceeds notwithstanding their final accounting had been had in the probate court.—Richardson v. Richardson, 100 Mich. 364.

§ 268. Procedure to determine and enforce.

Commitment of executor for default as imprisonment for debt, see Constitutional Law, § 194.

Effect of justice court's judgment against representative for creditor's distributive share, see Former Adjudication, II.

¶ 839. An order that an administrator shall pay the claims against the estate in a given time will not bind him if made as of course on a showing merely that all claims are in, and that they amount to less than the estate as appraised; it will at most oblige him in a later proceeding to show cause for not doing so. And on his default an order permitting his bond to be prosecuted determines only the right to sue on it; it does not fix the administrator's liability.—Hilton v. Briggs, 54 Mich. 265.

¶ 840. In an action by the creditor of an estate against an executor or administrator to recover his distributive share of the assets under Comp. L. 1871, § 4461, How. St. § 5929, facts must be alleged and proved showing that the defendant has been acting as executor or administrator, and had thus become liable upon the claim.—Basom v. Taylor, 39 Mich. 682.

¶ 841. It seems that in a proceeding against an administrator for not paying a claim against the estate there should be some finding of fact as to whether defendant is responsible for the failure to sell lands as ordered to pay debts.—Peckham v. Hoag, 57 Mich. 289.

¶ 842. A finding that does not show the actual value of assets in the hands of an administrator is insufficient to sustain judgment and causes a mistrial where suit is brought against him for not paying a claim against the estate.—Peckham v. Hoag, 57 Mich. 289.

¶ 843. A judgment against a decedent's estate rendered in a suit against the administratrix for her personal liability under How. St., § 5929, on her failure to pay a claim allowed against the estate after being ordered to do so by the probate court, is void.—Peckham v. Berrien Circuit Judge, 74 Mich. 287.

X. RIGHTS AND LIABILITIES OF REPRESENTATIVES AND DISTRIBUTEES IN THE ESTATE OR TOWARDS EACH OTHER.

A. IN GENERAL; DEALINGS RESPECTING SHARES AND PROPERTIES.

§ 269. In general.

Management, custody and disposal of properties of estate, see ante, V, E.

Accountability for corepresentatives, predecessors and surviving partner's acts and omissions, see post, X, E.

Liability of representative for bequest improperly delivered or paid, see post § 368.

Right of representative to invest estate property upon his own account or that of estate, see ante ¶ 374.

Personal liability of representative for use of one fund for benefit of another, see also post ¶¶ 930-931.

Settlements by agreement dispensing with administration, see ante, I.

[Note. Because of the great diversity of rights, duties and liabilities of the parties within the estate it would be impossible to collect the matter in one place without ignoring established principles of classification. Therefore such matter has been placed and should be sought in that portion of this topic treating of the stage of administration or the administrative act out of which the duty, right or liability arises. Rights and liabilities not involving the law of administration but merely involving a party to an estate collaterally or involving the general law of trusts will be treated in other appropriate topics. Construction of wills to ascertain what rights are created thereby is treated in Wills, VI. See generally cross-references which follow.]

Construction of directions in will as to expenses and charges on estate, see Wills, VI, G.

Family settlements of rights under wills, see Wills, VII.

Administrator taking title contrary to decedent's trust for others as trustee instead of decedent, see Trusts, IV, VIII.

Embezzlement by personal representative refusing to pay over funds, see Crimes § 68.

Rescission and cancellation of unauthorized or fraudulent contracts or transfers of representative, see Rescission and Cancellation, VI.

Liability for embezzlement or disposition of personalty before letters granted, see Jud. Act, chap. LIII, § 9; Comp. L. 1915, § 13827.

§ 270. Dealings of representatives in general.

Purchase of property, see post § 271.
Purchase through agents or intermediaries, see post § 272.
By or for benefit of representative's children, see post § 273.
Lands out of state, see post § 274.
Marketability of title affected by representatives' dealings with sale of the land, see Vendors and Purchasers, III.
Liability of representative for neglect or misconduct in sale proceedings, see Jud. Act, chap. LIX, § 40, Comp. L. 1915, § 14026.
Liability of representative for fraudulent or illegal sale, see Jud. Act, chap. LIX, § 41, Comp. L. 1915, § 14027.

¶ 844. The liability of an administrator to the estate is to be tested by equitable rules, regardless of mere technicalities; and this on appeal as well as in the probate court.—Brown v. Forsche, 43 Mich. 492.

¶ 845. An executor will not be held liable to the heirs or legatees in a court of equity merely because all of his acts in the management and disposition of the estate were not technically legal, where they met with the approval of the probate court at the time, and were apparently for the best interests of the estate.—Owen v. Potter, 115 Mich. 556.

¶ 846. An administrator or executor has no right to speculate with or use the funds of the estate in his own business; and, if he does so, he and his sureties will be liable for any loss, unless such use is with the assent of the parties interested in the estate, and he must show that he has acted in entire good faith, and that he obtained such assent upon full and fair representations and information communicated to his cestuis que trust of all the facts and circumstances attending the risk to the fund and of the proposed investment.—Ward v. Tinkham, 65 Mich. 695.

¶ 847. An agreement by one claiming title to land that the land shall be sold by the administratrix of a former owner in order to clear the title from a claim of the estate, and that the purchaser shall convey the title back to claimant, is not unconscionable. Blount v. Eames, 150 Mich. 35.

¶ 848. An executor on final account cannot claim that lands, conveyed to him and others, in trust, to secure debts to them and to the estate, are a part of the estate where he has treated the land as his own.—Cheever v. Ellis, 134 Mich. 645.

§ 271. ——Purchase of property.

Through agents or intermediaries, see post § 272.
Setting aside sale, see ante § 242.
Purchase of property of estate by person other than representative, see ante § 139.
Intent of representative as affecting validity of sale at which he is purchaser, see also post ¶ 872.
Right of representative to purchase claims of legatees, see also post ¶ 1135.
Disability of representative making sale to purchase realty, see Jud. Act, chap. LIX, § 25, Comp. L. 1915, § 14011.

¶ 849. An administrator occupies such a fiduciary relation towards heirs that he is prohibited from acquiring rights in real estate antagonistic to those whom he represents.—Parks v. Brooks, 188 Mich. 645.

¶ 850. An administrator cannot become the purchaser of the estate or effects of his intestate. And where two administrators made sale of lands of the intestate to one of the two, and executed a deed therefor, the deed was held void, notwithstanding the sale and conveyance were under the order of the probate court. The question of intent or fairness cannot be considered in such a case. —Dwight & Pierce v. Blackmar, 2 Mich. 330.

¶ 851. One of the executors is not prevented by Comp. L. 1897, § 9095, from purchasing land sold by the other executors where testatrix in her will has conferred the power upon such executors to sell to one of their number. Curtis v. Brewer, 140 Mich. 139.

¶ 852. A sale of land by an executor under license from the probate court, made indirectly in his own interest, is voidable only, and not absolutely void, under How. St., § 6042, and will therefore be sustained as to a subsequent purchaser in good faith and for a valuable consideration.—Otis v. Kennedy, 107 Mich. 312.

¶ 853. Fraud does not appear from the fact that on sale the widow, formerly a coexecutor, made an apparently absolute purchase, though she made declarations tending to show she had a life-interest only; or because that after the sale she conveyed the land to her sister without consideration and received back the land by a subsequent reconveyance.—Egan v. Grece, 79 Mich. 629.

§ 272. ——Through agents or intermediaries.

See also ante ¶ 736.

¶ 854. A sale by an administratrix upon an agreement that the purchaser should hold the land in trust, to be conveyed to whomsoever the administratrix should direct, is void under How. St., § 6042, which forbids the purchase by an administrator, directly or indirectly, of the real estate belonging to the estate, and avoids all sales made contrary to such section.—McGraw v. Daly, 82 Mich. 500.

¶ 855. Whether a sale made by an administrator, with the understanding that the purchaser shall hold for the administrator's benefit, is void under Comp. L. 1871, § 4562, How St., § 6042, and that, too, as against subsequent bona fide purchasers, at least when the administrator's deed has never been recorded, or whether said section is a merely legislative adoption of previous judicial rulings, and subject, like them, to qualifications in favor of bona fide purchasers, quære.—Hoffman v. Harrington, 28 Mich. 90.

¶ 856. There is no rule of law precluding an executor from purchasing land previously sold by him in good faith under license from the probate court. Hence, the fact, as disclosed by the records, that the purchaser at such sale reconveyed to the executor one month thereafter, is insufficient to charge a subsequent purchaser with notice of bad faith on the part of the executor, especially where the consideration recited in the deed to the latter is greater than that named in the first deed; and this is so although the first deed was not recorded until the time of the reconveyance.—Otis v. Kennedy, 107 Mich. 312.

¶ 857. Where an executrix obtains title to a homestead by a deed from the purchaser executed one day after the order confirming the sale of the property, it may be argued that this was notice to subsequent purchasers as to the validity of her title as How. St., § 6042, provides that an executor or administrator selling property shall not be directly or indirectly interested in the sale, and sales contrary to the statute are void.—Litchfield v. Tunnicliff, 118 Mich. 383.

¶ 858. Where an administrator procured his brother-in-law to become the purchaser, and immediately afterwards took a conveyance of the premises so purchased to himself, the court of chancery, on bill filed by the heirs, set aside the sale, ordered the deed delivered up to be canceled, and directed a new sale.—Beaubien v. Poupard, H. 206.

¶ 859. The fact that an administratrix sells to her husband at public sale, for an amount much less than its actual value, land belonging to the estate, and the further fact that the husband, after the lapse of eighteen months, deeds the property to his wife, do not, where all the proceedings to sell were full, fair, and open, and some of the land was subject to homestead rights and incumbrances, invalidate the administratrix's sale, as being indirectly a sale to herself, so as to defeat the title of third parties claiming through a bona fide purchase from the wife taken on advice of counsel four years later, defendant claimants holding for eleven years more.—Louden v. Martindale, 109 Mich. 235.

¶ 860. That an administratrix of her husband's estate joins with her mother to raise money to pay debts of the estate does not show that she was interested in a sale of realty to the mother who reconveyed the same day for an expressed nominal consideration.—Ketchum v. Ketchum, 177 Mich. 100.

¶ 861. Any presumption of fraud arising from C. L. 1897, § 9095, How. 2nd Ed., § 11248, by an administratrix acquiring realty by a sale to her mother and a reconveyance the same day for an expressed nominal consideration is not conclusive and is met by evidence that the sale was made at the fair appraised and inventoried value at that time, that the property in that locality has since increased in value and that the mother had sufficient sentimental reasons for not keeping the property.—Ketchum v. Ketchum, 177 Mich. 100.

¶ 862. An administratrix kept her aged mother's accounts, and by reason of such fact swore to her mother's claim against the estate for money loaned. The realty was sold to the mother under a proper order of court to obtain money to pay debts and was reconveyed to the administratrix the same day for an expressed nominal consideration. Two years later the property was sold at a greatly increased price. Held, there was no fraud or collusion.—Ketchum v. Ketchum, 177 Mich. 100.

§ 273. ——By or for benefit of representatives' children.

¶ 863. An administratrix of her husband sold real estate under an arrangement that the purchaser was to protect the property from trespassers and hold the title until the decedent's children came of age, when he was to reconvey to them. He died before they came of age and his heirs reconveyed to the administratrix for the benefit of the children, but in her own name, in order that she might mortgage the property to pay off certain charges against it. Held, that the administratrix's sale could not be held void on the ground that she was interested in its purchase within the meaning of Comp. L. 1871, § 4562, How. St., § 6042.—Larzelere v. Starkweather, 38 Mich. 96.

¶ 864. Fraud is not to be imputed to an executors' sale under license from the probate court by reason of the purchaser having been a daughter of one of the executors.—Egan v. Grece, 79 Mich. 629.

§ 274. ——Lands out of state.

Jurisdiction over property beyond state, see also ante § 17.

¶ 865. Since letters of administration can have no such extraterritorial force as to give

Michigan administrators control over Illinois lands, an agreement between a Michigan administrator and another party to buy for their joint benefit, and at a price agreed on, the claim of the estate to lands in Illinois, is not, therefore, necessarily fraudulent and void on the ground that it places the administrator in a relation where his self-interest conflicts with his duty.—Sheldon v. Rice, 30 Mich. 296.

B. CLAIMS BY REPRESENTATIVES AS CREDITORS, AND SET-OFF OR RETENTION.

§ 275. In general.

Representative as stockholder in creditor corporation, see post § 276.
Procedure to enforce rights, see post § 277.
Necessity of notice to all persons interested in estate of claim of representative, see ante § 169.
Time for presentment of claim by representative and delay as bar, see ante § 173.
Right of representative to recourse to lands to pay his own claim against estate, see also ante ¶ 701.

§ 276. Representative as stockholder in creditor corporation.

¶ 866. The executor is not culpable in sharing as a stockholder in the proceeds of the sale by his corporation of a claim against the estate, though the corporation's transferee ultimately profited by it.—Owen v. Potter, 115 Mich. 556.

§ 277. Procedure to enforce rights.

¶ 867. An executor cannot use his office to enforce payment of an obligation running to himself.—DeCoo v. Woodworth, 96 Mich. 362.

¶ 868. Where an administratrix promptly paid the debts of the estate out of her own funds and later filed an account which was allowed by the probate court wherein total indebtedness of the estate to her was stated, and no appeal was taken from the order allowing her the amount, and for nearly five years nothing is done to enforce her claim, except to file a petition to sell the real estate, and no more done for more than ten years more, her claim is barred by the statute of limitations.—In re Young's Estate, 144 Mich. 663.

¶ 869. On a bill by an executrix to set aside the assignment of certain mortgages by deceased, a claim by executrix in her individual capacity for an equitable lien on certain real estate claimed to have been purchased by deceased with her money, cannot be litigated, since as executrix she can obtain relief for the grievances of the estate only.—Peirson v. McNeil, 137 Mich. 158.

¶ 870. An executor who, in the lifetime of his decedent, took an equitable assignment of a mortgage owned by the latter, may file a bill in his own name to have the mortgage revived, where, under a mistake of fact as to the existence of another lien on the property, the mortgage was discharged, and replaced by another mortgage, which was recorded subsequent to such lien.—Densmore v. Savage, 110 Mich. 27.

C. ACCOUNTABILITY FOR RENTS, PROFITS AND INTEREST, AND LOSSES OR DEPRECIATION.

§ 278. Rents, issues and profits received.

Liability for losses or depreciation, see post §§ 279-281.
Loss from failure to collect assets, rents or profits, see post §§ 282, 283.
Improper disbursements or interest lost, see post § 284.
Failure to buy in claims at discount, see post § 285.
Liability for interest on money or property held, see post § 286.
Title and rights in property of estate, see ante, IV, C.
Management and custody of assets of estate, see ante, V, E.
Right and title of representative to rents, profits and issues, see ante § 62.
Accountability for corepresentatives, predecessors, and surviving partner's acts or omissions, see post, X, E.
Accountability of representative for rent of property occupied, see also post ¶ 936.
Accountability of intermeddler for rents and profits, see also post ¶ 973.
Accountability of representative for rents and income of realty in his possession, see Jud. Act, chap. LXII, § 6, Comp. L. 1915, § 14109.
Rights and liability of representative for profits and losses, see Jud. Act, chap. LXII, § 3, Comp. L. 1915, § 14106.

¶ 871. An administrator cannot retain any profits made out of assets belonging to his decedent's estate and sold by him, though he may have to account for more than he receives if he sells too low. He must at least account for actual proceeds.—Loomis v. Armtrong, 49 Mich. 521.

¶ 872. Although the intent or fairness of an administratrix who becomes the purchaser of the estate at administratrix's sale is not open to proof or discussion as affecting the validity of the sale, yet, in determining the right of a complaining heir to share in rents and profits, the situation of the estate and of the parties, and the motives, conduct and equities of the purchaser, should be considered.—Benedict v. Beurmann, 90 Mich. 396.

¶ 873. On suit for an accounting against the administrator and heirs of the widow who had wrongfully declared herself the only heir and thus obtained possession of real estate, the complainants, coheirs with the widow, being entitled to one-half, may recover one-half the rental value of real estate for the time since the suit was begun less the cost of repairs.—Maney v. Casserly, 134 Mich. 252.

§ 279. Liability for losses or depreciation.

See also post ¶ 1057.

Money deposited in bank which fails, see post § 280.

Depreciation in value of securities, see post § 281.

Continuing business, engaging in new enterprises and speculation in management of estate, see ante §§ 119, 120.

Losses incurred in carrying on business with consent of those interested in estate, see also ante ¶ 379.

Liability of representative for funds from sale of partnership property where used to satisfy firm debts, see also ante ¶ 419.

Liability of representative for loss occasioned by neglect, see Jud. Act, chap. LXII, § 7, Comp. L. 1915, § 14110.

¶ 874. Losses arising from an unauthorized sale of land on credit, or from taking insufficient security for part of the purchase price, must be charged to the administrator. —In re Palmer, 1 D. 422.

¶ 875. An administrator or executor has no right to speculate with or use the funds of the estate in his own business; and, if he does so, he and his sureties will be liable for any loss, unless such use is with the assent of the parties interested in the estate, and he must show that he has acted in entire good faith, and that he obtained such assent upon full and fair representations and information communicated to his cestuis que trust of all the facts and circumstances attending the risk to the fund and of the proposed investment.—Ward v. Tinkham, 65 Mich. 695.

¶ 876. Administrators are bound to liquidate estates without undue delay, and they must not leave the estates at the risk of business disaster by continuing without authority to operate business ventures in which the estates are invested when they come into their hands; and executors or administrators who violate the rule, even if acting with the utmost good faith, are held strictly liable for all losses incurred, and are not even permitted to offset the profits against the losses. —Swaine v. Hemphill, 165 Mich. 561.

¶ 877. Where the assets of an estate are hardly sufficient to meet its liabilities, and the administrator continues with the consent of all interested parties a malting business left by the deceased, in the hope of making the business a going one, he is not liable to the estate for losses suffered in the business through mistake in business judgment where he acts in good faith and the losses are due to unfavorable business conditions.—Swaine v. Hemphill, 165 Mich. 561.

¶ 878. When all those interested in an estate agree that a certain business left by the deceased shall be continued, the executor or administrator will be relieved from personal liability if business disaster follows. —Swaine v. Hemphill, 165 Mich. 561.

§ 280. ——Moneys deposited in bank which fails.

¶ 879. An administrator, as such, in the matter of selecting a depository for the funds of an estate, is required to use the care of an ordinarily prudent man, and such funds must be deposited by him in his fiduciary capacity, and not in his individual name without any designation of the trust.—In re Curtis' Estate, 162 Mich. 47.

¶ 880. An administrator who has deposited funds of an estate in a bank that has good credit and standing is not liable for the loss thereof by the subsequent failure of the bank, in the absence of negligence on his part.—In re Fishbeck's Estate, 146 Mich. 348.

¶ 881. An administrator is not liable for the loss of money received by him in payment of a mortgage and which he had deposited in a reputable bank which failed three months and seven days thereafter, where he had the right to retain the funds in his hands for the care of his mother, it being so understood by the heirs, for she might apply at any time for her share.—In re Fishbeck's Estate, 146 Mich. 348.

¶ 882. Where an administrator in remitting funds of the estate to an heir buys a draft in his individual name, and the bank fails, he is liable to the heir for the loss.— In re Curtis' Estate, 162 Mich. 47.

§ 281. ——Depreciation in value of securities.

¶ 883. An executor is not responsible for losses due to financial depression of securities, unless negligent in not collecting before such depression.—Cheever v. Ellis, 134 Mich. 645.

¶ 884. An executor of an estate placed certain stock of the estate in the vault of the bank of which the deceased and himself were partners. The stock had for many years been of good value and there was no evidence that it was necessary for the executor to sell the stock immediately in order to realize its value and to anticipate a possible decline in its value. After a lapse of two years the bank failed and the trustee in bankruptcy seized the stock. By the time the executor got the stock back from the trustee it had declined in value. Held, there was no ground for charging the executor for failure to sell the stock immediately after his appointment.—In re Choate's Estate, 165 Mich. 420; Bonine v. Gage, Id.

§ 282. Loss from failure to collect assets, rents or profits.

From forfeiture of equities in land, see post § 283.

Presumption of prompt collection of assets of estate by representative, see post ¶ 1106.

¶ 885. The contention that an executor was negligent with respect to certain notes, upon the decedent's indorsement of which the estate was held liable, for the reason that they were collectible from the maker, is disproved where it appears that the notes were left unpaid by the maker for several years, and were then disposed of by the holders at a heavy discount.—Owen v. Potter, 115 Mich. 556.

¶ 886. An executor is not responsible for loss in collecting mortgages taken prior to his appointment except in so far as the loss is due to his negligence.—Cheever v. Ellis, 134 Mich. 645.

¶ 887. An executor is negligent and liable for the amount of a mortgage which was foreclosed and purchased by his agent and the proceeds never paid over to the executor. —Cheever v. Ellis, 134 Mich. 645.

¶ 888. An executor is negligent and liable for the amount of a mortgage, a discharge of which he sent to his agent and left unsettled with him for more than a year when the agent became insolvent.—Cheever v. Ellis, 134 Mich. 645.

¶ 889. An administrator who negligently failed to collect rent was properly charged with it in his account and left to suffer the loss personally.—In re Saier's Estate (Appeal of Zimmer), 158 Mich. 170.

§ 283. ——From forfeiture of equities in land.

¶ 890. Where payments fell due on the intestate's executory contract for the purchase of lands, which the administrator had no funds in his hands to pay, but money for that purpose was promised by creditors of the estate, which he neglected to obtain, and the contract became forfeited, it was held that these facts did not render the administrator liable to the heirs for the value of their interest in the land thus forfeited. —Baxter v. Robinson, 11 Mich. 520.

§ 284. Improper disbursements or interest lost.

See also post ¶ 969.

Liability of representative for bequests improperly delivered or paid, see also post § 368.

¶ 891. An administrator negligently allowed interest to run on a claim he should have filed, and interest to accumulate on taxes neglected by him. He also negligently failed to gain interest on semiannual balances. Held, that he was properly charged with these items in his account.—In re Saier's Estate (Appeal of Zimmer), 158 Mich. 170.

§ 285. Failure to buy in claims at discount.

Purchase of claims in general, see ante § 159.

¶ 892. An executor cannot be required to account to the estate for the amount in which the sum awarded to a claimant against it exceeds the sum for which the claim was purchased by the claimant after the death of the deceased, even though the assignor of the claim, being a corporation in which the executor was a stockholder, would have sold it to the estate at the same discount allowed to the claimant.—Owen v. Potter, 115 Mich. 556.

§ 286. Liability for interest on money or property held.

Accountability of representative for interest, see also post ¶ 1088.

¶ 893. It was held no excuse for the neglect of an administrator to charge himself in his administration account with money belonging to the estate, that he supposed it belonged to the widow from whom he received it, and that he gave her security as for an individual loan, which security he had taken up before he had reason to believe that the money belonged to the estate. And where he had held such money for a long time and failed to close up his trust, and it had been found necessary to coerce him by legal proceedings to a settlement of the estate, it was held proper that he should be charged with interest.—Hall v. Grovier, 25 Mich. 428.

¶ 894. An executor is properly chargeable with interest upon the balance of money found in his hands on a final accounting, during the pendency of his appeal from an order disallowing his claim for moneys paid to decedent's husband to reimburse him for the payment of funeral expenses.—Galloway v. McPherson's Estate, 76 Mich. 318.

¶ 895. An administrator who deposits estate money, amounting to $36,000, in his own bank, subject to check instead of upon certificate, and allows it to remain in such account for three months and twelve days, is chargeable with interest thereon at bank rates.—In re Brewster's Estate, 113 Mich. 561.

¶ 896. The administrator is not relieved from liability for interest on a deposit made subject to check instead of on certificate because the question was not raised upon the first accounting after the distribution of the principal among the heirs, but it is a proper charge against him in his final account.—In re Brewster's Estate, 113 Mich. 561.

D. COMPENSATION, ALLOWANCES AND REIMBURSEMENT.

§ 287. Compensation in general.

Measure and amount, see post § 288.

Extra services and allowances, see post § 289.

Services in sale of realty, see post § 290.

Discretion of court, see post § 291.
Compensation of corepresentatives, see post § 292.
Compensation of foreign and domiciliary representatives, see post § 293.
Assignment of compensation claims, see post § 294.
Indemnification and reimbursement, see post §§ 295, 296.
Claim or procedure to obtain allowance, see post §§ 297-299.
Conclusiveness of annual acccount as to representative's compensation, see post ¶ 1125.

¶ 897. Under How. St., §§ 5959, 9015, an executor or administrator is entitled to a commission on the amount of personalty collected and real estate sold, or to $1 per day for actual services, as he may elect; but this is the limit of his right to compensation, except in cases of unusual difficulty or responsibility.—In re King's Estate, 110 Mich. 203.

¶ 898. Heirs cannot find fault with an allowance to the administrator of the statutory fees; and where he collected the funds of the estate, took care of a farm, looked after the care of their mother, and promptly divided among each of the heirs their share, the court might properly have allowed some extra compensation.—In re Fishbeck's Estate, 146 Mich. 348.

¶ 899. An executor's compensation for services in taking an inventory, in another state, of his testator's interest in a mercantile partnership, considered and fixed.—Wisner v. Mabley's Estate, 74 Mich. 143.

¶ 900. Where decedent's widow and residuary legatee is contesting with the guardian of infant legatees the disposition of certain funds, the executors can claim no compensation for persuading them to consent that pending the litigation the funds be deposited to their joint account.—Wisner v. Mabley's Estate, 74 Mich. 143.

¶ 901. Where a part of the assets of an estate consists of an interest in a mercantile partnership of which the executor is the managing partner, on a salary, and where the other services of the executor are perfunctory, he is not entitled to an allowance for services.—Gaskill v. Weeks, 154 Mich. 223.

¶ 902. An executor charged with the investment of an estate cannot claim pay for his services and put the entire responsibility of earning on the investment on an agent employed by him.—Cheever v. Ellis, 134 Mich. 645.

§ 288. ——Measure and amount.

¶ 903. Compensation for administration services, though performed by an attorney, should not be gauged by the prices asked by professional men for their services; good business ability, rather than professional skill, is the element required, and should be the test of value except in very unusual cases.—Wisner v. Mabley's Estate, 70 Mich. 271.

¶ 904. Under Comp. L. 1897, § 9438, providing for commissions to an executor "upon the amount of personal estate collected and accounted for by him," an executor is not entitled to commission on the estate as inventoried where many notes held by him have not been as yet collected, his commission being properly based on the amounts actually collected.—Webb v. Peck, 131 Mich. 579.

¶ 905. The allowance to an administrator of $150 as a gross sum, without a particular specification of the items, for time and services, covering a period of over three years, in obtaining possession of real estate, collecting rents, renting farms, etc., is not without precedent.—In re Nuckols' Appeal, 103 Mich. 297.

¶ 906. A charge by an administrator of $5 per day for nine days, for time and expenses, and on some occasions for the use of a horse and buggy, in looking after the estate, which consisted principally of real property situated some miles from his residence, is not an immoderate charge, it appearing that the services charged for covered a period of over ten months.—In re Nuckols' Appeal, 103 Mich. 297.

¶ 907. An allowance of $100 as compensation for administering an estate of $5,000 is justified by How. St., § 5959.—In re Power's Estate, 92 Mich. 106.

§ 289. ——Extra services and allowances.

See also ante ¶¶ 897, 898.
Procedure to obtain extra compensation, see post § 297, ¶¶ 946, 947.
Extra compensation as questions for jury, see post ¶¶ 952, 955.
Evidence on claim for extra compensation, see post ¶¶ 949-951.
Further allowance for extraordinary services and procedure to obtain, see Jud. Act, chap. LXII, § 15; Comp. L. 1915, § 14118.

¶ 908. The case is one of "unusual difficulty," within the meaning of How. St., § 9015, providing for an extra allowance to executors in cases of unusual difficulty or responsibility, in which the executor is obliged to perform services not required of an executor in the ordinary course of his employment.—In re King's Estate, 113 Mich. 606.

¶ 908a. An executor who is an attorney at law is entitled to special compensation for legal services rendered in litigation affecting the estate.—Wisner v. Mabley's Estate, 74 Mich. 143.

¶ 909. Services rendered by an executor in hunting up witnesses for proponents upon a contest of the will, in bringing them to counsel, and in assuming the responsibility of procuring their attendance at court, may properly be classed as extraordinary.—In re King's Estate, 113 Mich. 606.

¶ 910. Where shares of stock belonging to an estate are held as security by a creditor, and he, on being paid the amount of his debt by one of the executors and trustees, assigns the certificates in blank, and delivers them to said executor, without objection from the coexecutor and trustee, who is a witness to the transaction, the writing by such coexecutor of a letter to the corporation, requesting it to fill in the blanks in the assignments and issue new certificates to both of the executors and trustees, which is done, is not an extraordinary service, within the meaning of How. St., § 5959, which provides for the allowance of extra compensation for any extraordinary services, not required of an executor or administrator in the common course of his duty.—Lindsay v. Richardson's Estate, 98 Mich. 319.

¶ 911. The services of the administrator with the will annexed held to be of such character and extent as not to justify more than the statutory allowance. — In re O'Leary's Estate, 193 Mich. 282; Palmer v. Utica State Hospital, Id.

¶ 912. An executor is entitled to extra compensation for going out of the state to settle a partnership business in which the testator was engaged, and the contract relations between the estate and the surviving partner.—Wisner v. Mabley's Estate, 74 Mich. 143.

¶ 913. An executor is not entitled to special compensation for services in procuring, to expedite the settlement of the estate, the discount of notes given by a surviving partner for the testator's interest in the partnership.—Wisner v. Mabley's Estate, 74 Mich. 143.

¶ 914. An allowance of $380 to an administrator for extra services in addition to the statutory fee of $156.80, is proper where there is testimony tending to prove performance of unusual services.—In re McNamara's Estate, 166 Mich. 451; McNamara v. Michigan Trust Co., Id.

¶ 915. Where a trial court has allowed to an administrator a fee of seventy-five dollars for extra services in the administration of an estate of $1,900, the supreme court will not disturb this allowance on the ground that it is unreasonably small.—In re Crawford's Estate (Sutton's Appeal), 165 Mich. 527.

¶ 916. A promise of a probate judge to allow a person a greater compensation than that fixed by statute if he accepts the administration of an estate, is void.—In r Thompson's Estate, 183 Mich. 618.

§ 290. ——Services in sale of realty.

¶ 917. The compensation allowed b; § 9438, Comp. Laws 1897, How. St., 2nd. Ed § 11149, to administrators for the sale o real estate is the limit of their compensa tion therefor.—In re Thompson s Estate, 18 Mich. 618.

¶ 918. Since § 9438, Comp. Laws 1897 How. St., 2nd Ed., § 11149, limits the com pensation an administrator may receive fo selling real estate, he cannot be allowed i addition commissions or fees paid real estat agents for effecting a sale.—In re Thompson's Estate, 183 Mich. 618.

¶ 919. Where two unsuccessful attempts were made by the special administrator upon petition of the heirs, to sell real estate, and the heirs agreed that he should receive his fees for this service out of the estate, the court properly allowed the item in his final account.—Zimmer v. Saier, 155 Mich. 388.

§ 291. ——Discretion of court.

¶ 920. A claim by an executor or administrator to extra compensation (How. St., § 9015) rests in the discretion of the probate judge, or, on appeal, of the circuit judge.—In re Mower's Appeal, 48 Mich. 441; Loomis v. Armstrong, 49 Mich. 521; Loomis v. Armstrong, 63 Mich. 355; Wisner v. Mabley's Estate, 70 Mich. 271.

¶ 921. The discretion of the probate court under Comp. Laws 1897, § 9438, in fixing additional compensation for extra services by an administrator, will not be reviewed except when abused.—In re Fischer's Estate, (Appeal of Fischer), 158 Mich. 1.

¶ 922. The allowance of extra compensation to the representative cannot be overruled by the supreme court if there were facts which fairly called for the exercise of the discretion.—In re Mower's Appeal, 48 Mich. 441.

¶ 923. The amount of an allowance for extraordinary services is discretionary with the trial judge, if there is evidence to support the claim.—In re King's Estate, 113 Mich. 606.

¶ 924. On an appeal from the allowance of an administrator's account the circuit court cannot grant him compensation for extraordinary service where no order for such an allowance was made in the probate court. —In re Thompson's Estate, 183 Mich. 618.

¶ 925. The discretion to make extra allowances to an executor is a legal one, and must be based on the legal testimony before the court.—Wisner v. Mabley's Estate, 70 Mich. 271.

§ 292. Compensation of corepresentatives, joint representatives and successors.

Authority of joint representatives and mode of action, see ante § 50.

¶ 926. Coexecutors, without regard to the time spent, responsibility assumed, or services rendered, are not entitled to an equal pro rata share of the statutory fees.—Speirs v. Wisner, 88 Mich. 614.

§ 293. Compensation of foreign and domiciliary representatives.

Authority of foreign representatives, see ante § 51.

Jurisdiction of domiciliary and foreign representatives, see ante § 15.

¶ 927. An executor who improperly accounted for assets of a Michigan estate in another state and received larger commissions there than are allowed in this state and subsequently claimed no commission when the estate was closed in this state, was not entitled to any allowance for commissions as executor in this state, in a bill for accounting filed by the heirs.—Porter v. Long, 136 Mich. 150.

§ 294. Assignment or transfer of compensation or claim.

Public policy as to agreement to assign commissions, see Contracts § 60.

¶ 928. An assignment by an executor, to whom letters testamentary have been duly granted, of all claims for compensation to be earned in defending against an appeal from the probate of the will, is void as against public policy.—In re King's Estate, 110 Mich. 203.

§ 295. Indemnification, reimbursement and liens for disbursements.

Expenses of administration and attorney fees, see post § 296.

Disbursements properly included in account, see post § 342.

Reimbursement of representative for expense in preparing records required in probate proceedings to discover assets, see also ante ¶ 279.

¶ 929. An administrator cannot, as matter of law, recover from an estate the sum he has paid the widow to release her right of dower in lands sold by him under a probate license; the statute does not empower him to make any such arrangement, and under the license the purchaser can buy only the interest of the estate.—Needham v. Belote, 39 Mich. 487.

¶ 930. In case an executor has broken in upon one fund for the benefit of another, he will not be charged personally, if from the fund benefited there may be realized enough to restore the sum diverted.—Draper v. Brown, 153 Mich. 120.

¶ 931. Where an executor has diverted money from one fund to pay an incumbrance upon the corpus of another fund, he, upon being compelled to restore the amount diverted, will be given a lien upon the surplus, if any, remaining from the fund benefited, to the discharge of the incumbrance thereon.—Draper v. Brown, 153 Mich. 120.

¶ 932. Where an administrator of an estate pays debts of the estate out of his own funds he stands in the position of an equitable assignee of the creditors.—In re Young's Estate, 144 Mich. 663.

¶ 933. The price paid for a suitable tombstone for his testator is properly charged in an executor's final account.—Jackson v. Leech's Estate, 113 Mich. 391.

¶ 934. An executor who had in good faith advanced money from the funds of the estate in order to enable the widow to put up a suitable monument should have been allowed the amount on settling his accounts.—Pistorius' Appeal, 53 Mich. 350.

¶ 935. The allowance to an administrator of $450 for the construction and repairs of a vault for the deceased is a proper charge against the estate, even though the title to one of the lots whereon it was erected stood in the mother's name and the other in the son's name.—In re Fishbeck's Estate, 146 Mich. 348.

¶ 936. An administratrix who filed no account for 28 years, and during such period occupied rent free the land belonging to the estate, cannot charge for taxes and repairs, nor will she be allowed interest on items which by reason of the delay in the accounting more than doubles the original amount of such items.—In re Graff's Estate, 123 Mich. 456.

¶ 937. A payment by an administrator upon the advice of reputable counsel and the consent of the probate court, to obtain a quitclaim deed in order to remove a tax title acquired prior to the conveyance of land by his intestate, will be sustained, although no claim therefor is presented to or allowed by the commissioners on claims, nor any claim for a breach of warranty made by the grantee.—In re Thompson's Estate, 183 Mich. 618.

¶ 938. Testator gave to his wife a life estate in his real and personal property with instructions to his executors to sell and distribute same after her death. Said executors were given power to provide the wife with additional money out of the estate if the income from said life estate did not prove sufficient for her support. During the lifetime of the wife and with her consent the executors expended a substantial sum in rebuilding a barn badly in need of repairs, and the cost of said improvement was taken out of the corpus of the estate. A grantee

Liability for embezzlement or disposition of personalty before letters granted, see Jud. Act, chap. LIII, § 9; Comp. L. 1915, § 13827.

§ 270. Dealings of representatives in general.

Purchase of property, see post § 271.
Purchase through agents or intermediaries, see post § 272.
By or for benefit of representative's children, see post § 273.
Lands out of state, see post § 274.
Marketability of title affected by representatives' dealings with sale of the land, see Vendors and Purchasers, III.
Liability of representative for neglect or misconduct in sale proceedings, see Jud. Act, chap. LIX, § 40, Comp. L. 1915, § 14026.
Liability of representative for fraudulent or illegal sale, see Jud. Act, chap. LIX, § 41, Comp. L. 1915, § 14027.

¶ 844. The liability of an administrator to the estate is to be tested by equitable rules, regardless of mere technicalities; and this on appeal as well as in the probate court.—Brown v. Forsche, 43 Mich. 492.

¶ 845. An executor will not be held liable to the heirs or legatees in a court of equity merely because all of his acts in the management and disposition of the estate were not technically legal, where they met with the approval of the probate court at the time, and were apparently for the best interests of the estate.—Owen v. Potter, 115 Mich. 556.

¶ 846. An administrator or executor has no right to speculate with or use the funds of the estate in his own business: and, if he does so, he and his sureties will be liable for any loss, unless such use is with the assent of the parties interested in the estate, and he must show that he has acted in entire good faith, and that he obtained such assent upon full and fair representations and information communicated to his cestuis que trust of all the facts and circumstances attending the risk to the fund and of the proposed investment.—Ward v. Tinkham, 65 Mich. 695.

¶ 847. An agreement by one claiming title to land that the land shall be sold by the administratrix of a former owner in order to clear the title from a claim of the estate, and that the purchaser shall convey the title back to claimant, is not unconscionable. Blount v. Eames, 150 Mich. 35.

¶ 848. An executor on final account cannot claim that lands, conveyed to him and others, in trust, to secure debts to them and to the estate, are a part of the estate where he has treated the land as his own.—Cheever v. Ellis, 134 Mich. 645.

§ 271. ——Purchase of property.

Through agents or intermediaries, see post § 272.
Setting aside sale, see ante § 242.
Purchase of property of estate by person other than representative, see ante § 139.
Intent of representative as affecting validity of sale at which he is purchaser, see also post ¶ 872.
Right of representative to purchase claims of legatees, see also post ¶ 1135.
Disability of representative making sale to purchase realty, see Jud. Act, chap. LIX, § 25, Comp. L. 1915, § 14011.

¶ 849. An administrator occupies such a fiduciary relation towards heirs that he is prohibited from acquiring rights in real estate antagonistic to those whom he represents.—Parks v. Brooks, 188 Mich. 645.

¶ 850. An administrator cannot become the purchaser of the estate or effects of his intestate. And where two administrators made sale of lands of the intestate to one of the two, and executed a deed therefor, the deed was held void, notwithstanding the sale and conveyance were under the order of the probate court. The question of intent or fairness cannot be considered in such a case.—Dwight & Pierce v. Blackmar, 2 Mich. 330.

¶ 851. One of the executors is not prevented by Comp. L. 1897, § 9095, from purchasing land sold by the other executors where testatrix in her will has conferred the power upon such executors to sell to one of their number. Curtis v. Brewer, 140 Mich. 139.

¶ 852. A sale of land by an executor under license from the probate court, made indirectly in his own interest, is voidable only, and not absolutely void, under How. St., § 6042, and will therefore be sustained as to a subsequent purchaser in good faith and for a valuable consideration.—Otis v. Kennedy, 107 Mich. 312.

¶ 853. Fraud does not appear from the fact that on sale the widow, formerly a coexecutor, made an apparently absolute purchase, though she made declarations tending to show she had a life-interest only; or because that after the sale she conveyed the land to her sister without consideration and received back the land by a subsequent reconveyance.—Egan v. Grece, 79 Mich. 629.

§ 272. ——Through agents or intermediaries.

See also ante ¶ 736.

¶ 854. A sale by an administratrix upon an agreement that the purchaser should hold the land in trust, to be conveyed to whomsoever the administratrix should direct, is void under How. St., § 6042, which forbids the purchase by an administrator, directly or indirectly, of the real estate belonging to the estate, and avoids all sales made contrary to such section.—McGraw v. Daly, 82 Mich. 500.

¶ 855. Whether a sale made by an administrator, with the understanding that the purchaser shall hold for the administrator's benefit, is void under Comp. L. 1871, § 4562, How St., § 6042, and that, too, as against subsequent bona fide purchasers, at least when the administrator's deed has never been recorded, or whether said section is a merely legislative adoption of previous judicial rulings, and subject, like them, to qualifications in favor of bona fide purchasers, quære.—Hoffman v. Harrington, 28 Mich. 90.

¶ 856. There is no rule of law precluding an executor from purchasing land previously sold by him in good faith under license from the probate court. Hence, the fact, as disclosed by the records, that the purchaser at such sale reconveyed to the executor one month thereafter, is insufficient to charge a subsequent purchaser with notice of bad faith on the part of the executor, especially where the consideration recited in the deed to the latter is greater than that named in the first deed; and this is so although the first deed was not recorded until the time of the reconveyance.—Otis v. Kennedy, 107 Mich. 312.

¶ 857. Where an executrix obtains title to a homestead by a deed from the purchaser executed one day after the order confirming the sale of the property, it may be argued that this was notice to subsequent purchasers as to the validity of her title as How. St., § 6042, provides that an executor or administrator selling property shall not be directly or indirectly interested in the sale, and sales contrary to the statute are void.—Litchfield v. Tunnicliff, 118 Mich. 383.

¶ 858. Where an administrator procured his brother-in-law to become the purchaser, and immediately afterwards took a conveyance of the premises so purchased to himself, the court of chancery, on bill filed by the heirs, set aside the sale, ordered the deed delivered up to be canceled, and directed a new sale.—Beaubien v. Poupard, H. 206.

¶ 859. The fact that an administratrix sells to her husband at public sale, for an amount much less than its actual value, land belonging to the estate, and the further fact that the husband, after the lapse of eighteen months, deeds the property to his wife, do not, where all the proceedings to sell were full, fair, and open, and some of the land was subject to homestead rights and incumbrances, invalidate the administratrix's sale, as being indirectly a sale to herself, so as to defeat the title of third parties claiming through a bona fide purchase from the wife taken on advice of counsel four years later, defendant claimants holding for eleven years more.—Louden v. Martindale, 109 Mich. 235.

¶ 860. That an administratrix of her husband's estate joins with her mother to raise money to pay debts of the estate does not show that she was interested in a sale of realty to the mother who reconveyed the same day for an expressed nominal consideration.—Ketchum v. Ketchum, 177 Mich. 100.

¶ 861. Any presumption of fraud arising from C. L. 1897, § 9095, How. 2nd Ed., § 11248, by an administratrix acquiring realty by a sale to her mother and a reconveyance the same day for an expressed nominal consideration is not conclusive and is met by evidence that the sale was made at the fair appraised and inventoried value at that time, that the property in that locality has since increased in value and that the mother had sufficient sentimental reasons for not keeping the property.—Ketchum v. Ketchum, 177 Mich. 100.

¶ 862. An administratrix kept her aged mother's accounts, and by reason of such fact swore to her mother's claim against the estate for money loaned. The realty was sold to the mother under a proper order of court to obtain money to pay debts and was reconveyed to the administratrix the same day for an expressed nominal consideration. Two years later the property was sold at a greatly increased price. Held, there was no fraud or collusion.—Ketchum v. Ketchum, 177 Mich. 100.

§ 273. ——By or for benefit of representatives' children.

¶ 863. An administratrix of her husband sold real estate under an arrangement that the purchaser was to protect the property from trespassers and hold the title until the decedent's children came of age, when he was to reconvey to them. He died before they came of age and his heirs reconveyed to the administratrix for the benefit of the children, but in her own name, in order that she might mortgage the property to pay off certain charges against it. Held, that the administratrix's sale could not be held void on the ground that she was interested in its purchase within the meaning of Comp. L. 1871, § 4562, How. St., § 6042.—Larzelere v. Starkweather, 38 Mich. 96.

¶ 864. Fraud is not to be imputed to an executors' sale under license from the probate court by reason of the purchaser having been a daughter of one of the executors.—Egan v. Grece, 79 Mich. 629.

§ 274. ——Lands out of state.

Jurisdiction over property beyond state, see also ante § 17.

¶ 865. Since letters of administration can have no such extraterritorial force as to give

Michigan administrators control over Illinois lands, an agreement between a Michigan administrator and another party to buy for their joint benefit, and at a price agreed on, the claim of the estate to lands in Illinois, is not, therefore, necessarily fraudulent and void on the ground that it places the administrator in a relation where his self-interest conflicts with his duty.—Sheldon v. Rice, 30 Mich. 296.

B. CLAIMS BY REPRESENTATIVES AS CREDITORS, AND SET-OFF OR RETENTION.

§ 275. In general.

Representative as stockholder in creditor corporation, see post § 276.
Procedure to enforce rights, see post § 277.
Necessity of notice to all persons interested in estate of claim of representative, see ante § 169.
Time for presentment of claim by representative and delay as bar, see ante § 173.
Right of representative to recourse to lands to pay his own claim against estate, see also ante ¶ 701.

§ 276. Representative as stockholder in creditor corporation.

¶ 866. The executor is not culpable in sharing as a stockholder in the proceeds of the sale by his corporation of a claim against the estate, though the corporation's transferee ultimately profited by it.—Owen v. Potter, 115 Mich. 556.

§ 277. Procedure to enforce rights.

¶ 867. An executor cannot use his office to enforce payment of an obligation running to himself.—DeCoo v. Woodworth, 96 Mich. 362.

¶ 868. Where an administratrix promptly paid the debts of the estate out of her own funds and later filed an account which was allowed by the probate court wherein total indebtedness of the estate to her was stated, and no appeal was taken from the order allowing her the amount, and for nearly five years nothing is done to enforce her claim, except to file a petition to sell the real estate, and no more done for more than ten years more, her claim is barred by the statute of limitations.—In re Young's Estate, 144 Mich. 663.

¶ 869. On a bill by an executrix to set aside the assignment of certain mortgages by deceased, a claim by executrix in her individual capacity for an equitable lien on certain real estate claimed to have been purchased by deceased with her money, cannot be litigated, since as executrix she can obtain relief for the grievances of the estate only.—Peirson v. McNeil, 137 Mich. 158.

¶ 870. An executor who, in the lifetime of his decedent, took an equitable assignment of a mortgage owned by the latter, may file a bill in his own name to have the mortgage revived, where, under a mistake of fact as to the existence of another lien on the property, the mortgage was discharged, and replaced by another mortgage, which was recorded subsequent to such lien.—Densmore v. Savage, 110 Mich. 27.

C. ACCOUNTABILITY FOR RENTS, PROFITS AND INTEREST, AND LOSSES OR DEPRECIATION.

§ 278. Rents, issues and profits received.

Liability for losses or depreciation, see post §§ 279-281.
Loss from failure to collect assets, rents or profits, see post §§ 282, 283.
Improper disbursements or interest lost, see post § 284.
Failure to buy in claims at discount, see post § 285.
Liability for interest on money or property held, see post § 286.
Title and rights in property of estate, see ante, IV, C.
Management and custody of assets of estate, see ante, V, E.
Right and title of representative to rents, profits and issues, see ante § 62.
Accountability for corepresentatives, predecessors, and surviving partner's acts or omissions, see post, X, E.
Accountability of representative for rent of property occupied, see also post ¶ 936.
Accountability of intermeddler for rents and profits, see also post ¶ 973.
Accountability of representative for rents and income of realty in his possession, see Jud. Act, chap. LXII, § 6, Comp. L. 1915, § 14109.
Rights and liability of representative for profits and losses, see Jud. Act, chap. LXII, § 3, Comp. L. 1915, § 14106.

¶ 871. An administrator cannot retain any profits made out of assets belonging to his decedent's estate and sold by him, though he may have to account for more than he receives if he sells too low. He must at least account for actual proceeds.—Loomis v. Armtrong, 49 Mich. 521.

¶ 872. Although the intent or fairness of an administratrix who becomes the purchaser of the estate at administratrix's sale is not open to proof or discussion as affecting the validity of the sale, yet, in determining the right of a complaining heir to share in rents and profits, the situation of the estate and of the parties, and the motives, conduct and equities of the purchaser, should be considered.—Benedict v. Beurmann, 90 Mich. 396.

¶ 873. On suit for an accounting against the administrator and heirs of the widow who had wrongfully declared herself the only heir and thus obtained possession of real estate, the complainants, coheirs with the widow, being entitled to one-half, may recover one-half the rental value of real estate for the time since the suit was begun less the cost of repairs.—Maney v. Casserly, 134 Mich. 252.

§ 279. Liability for losses or depreciation.

See also post ¶ 1057.

Money deposited in bank which fails, see post § 280.

Depreciation in value of securities, see post § 281.

Continuing business, engaging in new enterprises and speculation in management of estate, see ante §§ 119, 120.

Losses incurred in carrying on business with consent of those interested in estate, see also ante ¶ 379.

Liability of representative for funds from sale of partnership property where used to satisfy firm debts, see also ante ¶ 419.

Liability of representative for loss occasioned by neglect, see Jud. Act, chap. LXII. § 7, Comp. L. 1915, § 14110.

¶ 874. Losses arising from an unauthorized sale of land on credit, or from taking insufficient security for part of the purchase price, must be charged to the administrator. —In re Palmer, 1 D. 422.

¶ 875. An administrator or executor has no right to speculate with or use the funds of the estate in his own business; and, if he does so, he and his sureties will be liable for any loss, unless such use is with the assent of the parties interested in the estate, and he must show that he has acted in entire good faith, and that he obtained such assent upon full and fair representations and information communicated to his cestuis que trust of all the facts and circumstances attending the risk to the fund and of the proposed investment.—Ward v. Tinkham, 65 Mich. 695.

¶ 876. Administrators are bound to liquidate estates without undue delay, and they must not leave the estates at the risk of business disaster by continuing without authority to operate business ventures in which the estates are invested when they come into their hands; and executors or administrators who violate the rule, even if acting with the utmost good faith, are held strictly liable for all losses incurred, and are not even permitted to offset the profits against the losses. —Swaine v. Hemphill, 165 Mich. 561.

¶ 877. Where the assets of an estate are hardly sufficient to meet its liabilities, and the administrator continues with the consent of all interested parties a malting business left by the deceased, in the hope of making the business a going one, he is not liable to the estate for losses suffered in the business through mistake in business judgment where he acts in good faith and the losses are due to unfavorable business conditions.—Swaine v. Hemphill, 165 Mich. 561.

¶ 878. When all those interested in an estate agree that a certain business left by the deceased shall be continued, the executor or administrator will be relieved from personal liability if business disaster follows. —Swaine v. Hemphill, 165 Mich. 561.

§ 280. ——Moneys deposited in bank which fails.

¶ 879. An administrator, as such, in the matter of selecting a depository for the funds of an estate, is required to use the care of an ordinarily prudent man, and such funds must be deposited by him in his fiduciary capacity, and not in his individual name without any designation of the trust.—In re Curtis' Estate, 162 Mich. 47.

¶ 880. An administrator who has deposited funds of an estate in a bank that has good credit and standing is not liable for the loss thereof by the subsequent failure of the bank, in the absence of negligence on his part.—In re Fishbeck's Estate, 146 Mich. 348.

¶ 881. An administrator is not liable for the loss of money received by him in payment of a mortgage and which he had deposited in a reputable bank which failed three months and seven days thereafter, where he had the right to retain the funds in his hands for the care of his mother, it being so understood by the heirs, for she might apply at any time for her share.—In re Fishbeck's Estate, 146 Mich. 348.

¶ 882. Where an administrator in remitting funds of the estate to an heir buys a draft in his individual name, and the bank fails, he is liable to the heir for the loss.— In re Curtis' Estate, 162 Mich. 47.

§ 281. ——Depreciation in value of securities.

¶ 883. An executor is not responsible for losses due to financial depression of securities, unless negligent in not collecting before such depression.—Cheever v. Ellis, 134 Mich. 645.

¶ 884. An executor of an estate placed certain stock of the estate in the vault of the bank of which the deceased and himself were partners. The stock had for many years been of good value and there was no evidence that it was necessary for the executor to sell the stock immediately in order to realize its value and to anticipate a possible decline in its value. After a lapse of two years the bank failed and the trustee in bankruptcy seized the stock. By the time the executor got the stock back from the trustee it had declined in value. Held, there was no ground for charging the executor for failure to sell the stock immediately after his appointment.—In re Choate's Estate, 165 Mich. 420; Bonine v. Gage, Id.

§ 282. Loss from failure to collect assets, rents or profits.

From forfeiture of equities in land, see post § 283.

Right to sue to annul decedent's fraudulent transfers, see ante §§ 97-101.
Suits against estate for claims, see ante, VI, C, 5.
Right of representative who is sole legatee and devisee to sue in individual capacity, see also ante ¶ 261.
Effect of agreement of settlement on right of representative to bring action, see ante ¶ 14.
Right of representative of obligee's estate to sue on bond drawn to decedent, his heirs or assigns, see also ante ¶ 224.
Bills for construction of wills, occasion for same, and practice thereon, see Wills, VI, J.
Right of representative to appear and answer after default judgment on published service, see Defaults § 29.
Right of representative of grantor to enforce vendor's lien, see Vendor and Purchaser, XI.

¶ 979. Personal actions do not descend to heirs, and they cannot sue on a contract made by their ancestor unless they have a cause of action on covenants running with the land.—Bourget v. Monroe, 58 Mich. 563.

¶ 980. The general administrator only can bring suit for personal property, to wit, choses in action, of which decedent died possessed, until the probate court has determined that the title or possession belongs to some one else.—Palmer v. Palmer, 55 Mich. 293.

¶ 981. Until distribution of the intestate's personalty an heir or next of kin cannot maintain any action in respect to it, unless it be founded upon his own actual possession, and against a mere wrongdoer.—Cullen v. O'Hara, 4 Mich. 132.

¶ 982. Where a bond is drawn to the obligee, "his heirs and assigns," his administrator can bring suit upon it, and the bond need not contain formal words giving him the right to sue.—Rynearson v. Fredenburg, 42 Mich. 412.

¶ 983. While an administrator may not dissipate the assets in litigation, yet injunction will not issue to forbid an administrator with the will annexed from litigating on appeal the right of a residuary legatee's estate to take the residue as against a claim of the heirs at law that the residuary legacy lapsed by reason of the death of the testator and said legatee in a common disaster; for the execution of the administrator's trust requires a correct and proper determination of the question who is entitled to receive the estate, and therefore the administrator has an interest and duty as such to defend such appeal against the heir at law.—Clifton v. Keeler, 158 Mich. 615.

§ 307. ——Replevin.

¶ 984. Replevin lies against an executor or administrator (How. St., § 5902), after the appointment of claims commissioners.—Singer Mfg. Co. v. Benjamin, 55 Mich. 330.

§ 308. ——Ejectment or possessory actions for land.

¶ 985. The heir of a decedent may maintain ejectment against third persons except where possession has been taken or demanded by the personal representative.—Marvin v. Schilling, 12 Mich. 356; and see Stewart v. Bailey, 28 Mich. 251; Ryder v. Flanders, 30 Mich. 336.

¶ 986. An executor by a will was given complete power to handle the property of the estate so as to put into effect the provisions of the will. Held, under section 9354, Comp. Laws 1897, giving an executor the right to possession of all real estate of the testator, the executor might bring an action of ejectment, since in any event the terms of the will were broad enough to put title in him.—Moody v. Macomber, 159 Mich. 657.

¶ 987. Under Comp. Laws 1897, § 9354, How. 2nd Ed., § 11065, providing that an administrator shall have the right of possession of the real estate, as well as the personal estate, but, whenever it appears, on application by the heirs, that there are no debts or liabilities outstanding and unpaid against the estate or that the personal estate is sufficient for the payment of all claims or liabilities, the probate court shall order the real estate delivered unto the possession of the heirs, the administrator has no interest in the real estate and no right of possession thereof so as to maintain an action of ejectment where there is no personal property and there are no debts or liabilities against the estate.—Howes v. Barney, 199 Mich. 569.

¶ 988. Questions of administration have no bearing in an action of ejectment for lands the right to which was in controversy before the passage of the statute which subjected real estate to administration and gave the administrator the right to hold land of which his intestate died seized.—Campau v. Dubois, 39 Mich. 274.

¶ 989. An administrator can bring ejectment for land which he has acquired by the foreclosure of a mortgage left by his intestate.—Kunzie v. Wixom, 39 Mich. 384.

¶ 990. A special administrator is without authority to defend an action for the possession of realty.—McLaulin v. Wayne Circuit Judge, 180 Mich. 96.

¶ 991. Where the statute gave an administrator the right of possession of his intestate's lands, on the death or removal of an administrator, his successor, or the administrator de bonis non, could bring ejectment to recover possession of such lands as against one claiming under the first administrator.—Kline v. Moulton, 11 Mich. 370.

¶ 992. An action of summary proceedings to obtain possession of land may be maintained by an administrator for the purpose of collecting the rents and profits with a view either to pass them over to the executor, if one is appointed, or to adjust and fair distribution of the estate if an executor is not appointed.—Wilmarth v. Reed, 83 Mich. 44.

¶ 993. The executrix and trustee of deceased can maintain summary proceedings for the possession of real property claimed to belong to the estate.—Parker v. Case, 155 Mich. 497.

§ 309. ——Waste and trespass.

¶ 994. The devisee of lands is the only person who has a right of action against a person unlawfully cutting timber therefrom after testator's death.—Newberry v. Chicago Lumbering Co., 154 Mich. 84.

¶ 995. Where timber upon an intestate's land is cut into cordwood under circumstances that made such cutting waste, the administrator cannot sue for the value as though the severance changed the timber into personalty belonging to the estate. The reversioner is the one to sue.—Howard v. Patrick, 38 Mich. 795.

¶ 996. Under a will giving the testator's wife a life estate in all his property and providing for a limitation over to others after her death, it is no concern of the personal representatives, in the absence of creditors, what use the wife makes of the property in her lifetime; that is a matter between her and those entitled to take after her, and if the estate is wasted by her they have their proper remedy.—Sutphen v. Ellis, 35 Mich. 467.

§ 310. ——Suits to remove clouds or perfect title.

Suit to remove clouds by creditor, see also post ¶ 1000.

¶ 997. It is the duty of an administrator, on his own motion, or that of a creditor under the statute, to take proper proceedings to remove a cloud from the title of land belonging to the estate which seriously interferes with its sale to pay the debts of the deceased.—Marshall v. Blass, 82 Mich. 518.

¶ 998. An administrator of a deceased purchaser of lands at tax sale has no authority as such, and without bringing in as parties the heirs on whom the title was cast at decedent's death, to maintain a bill to quiet title to the lands.—Jenkins v. Bacon, 30 Mich. 154.

§ 311. Suits by heirs or creditors on refusal or neglect of representative.

Suits in name of representative, see post § 312.

Authority and right to collect assets on refusal or neglect of representative, see ante § 84.

Suits by creditors to annul fraudulent conveyances, see ante § 98.

Suit by creditor on refusal of representative, see also ante ¶ 295.

¶ 999. If the executor neglects his duty in collecting or obtaining possession of the assets of the estate the law gives the devisees and legatees a remedy, but does not permit a devisee or legatee to represent the estate in the prosecution or defense of suits.—Hillman v. Schwenk, 68 Mich. 297.

¶ 1000. A creditor cannot sue to remove clouds to make land available for payment of debts unless by leave of the court after refusal of the representative to do so.—Marshall v. Blass, 82 Mich. 518.

§ 312. ——Suits in name of representative.

See also ante ¶ 297.

¶ 1001. A court of chancery cannot grant leave to the heirs and legatees of a decedent to use the name of an executor, without his consent, as complainant in a suit against him and a partnership of which the decedent was a member, for an accounting, since the petitioners could file a bill in their own behalf.—In re Sloman's Estate, 186 Mich. 440.

§ 313. Joint and several causes and actions.

Propriety of bringing in representative of deceased coparty to action, see also Abatement ¶ 6.

¶ 1002. Upon the death of one of two persons jointly entitled to sue in the people's name upon a sheriff's bond, action should be brought in such name for the survivor's use without joining the administrator of the deceased.—Jackson v. People, 6 Mich. 154.

¶ 1003. Ejectment cannot be revived against the legal representatives of a deceased defendant, but the action may be carried on against surviving defendants. The death of a sole defendant pending a real action abates it; defendant's right descends to his heirs, against whom a new cause of action arises.—People ex rel. Hoffman v. St. Clair Circuit Judge, 40 Mich. 351; and see Hoffman v. Harrington, 41 Mich. 223.

§ 314. Survival or abatement of cause of action.

See also ante ¶ 1003.

Revivor proceedings, see post § 320.

Actions which survive death of person, see Abatement §§ 16, 17.

Survival of action to personal representative of surviving coparty, see Abatement ¶ 5.

Effect of death on cause of action for ejectment, see Abatement § 16.

Abatement of suit by resignation and appointment of successor, see Abatement § 5.
Survival of attachment lien, see Attachment § 97.
Causes arising out of fatal injury which survive to injured person's administrator, see Death by Wrongful Act §§ 4, 12.
Devolution of cause of action on estate of plaintiff, see also Descent § 9.
Right to revive attachment against administrator of defendant, see Attachment § 90.
Prosecution of action pending against decedent at time of death, see Jud. Act, chap. LV, § 16; Comp. L. 1915, § 13879.

¶ 1004. A statutory provision that a cause of action shall survive is equivalent to declaring that an executor may sue upon it.—Rogers v. Windoes, 48 Mich. 628.

¶ 1005. The administrator of an intestate whose death resulted from injuries sustained from a defective highway may, under the general law (How. St., §§ 8313, 8314), bring an action against the municipality guilty of nonrepair; this is not forbidden by Laws 1887, Act No. 264, § 5 (How. St., § 1446g), relating to "bodily" injuries to the person suing and restricting the right of action.—Racho v. City of Detroit, 90 Mich. 92; Roberts v. City of Detroit, 102 Mich. 64.

¶ 1006. A cause of action against a widow for the destruction of unrecorded deeds of lands to her husband, title to which she subsequently secured in her own name abates at her death, both at common law and under How. St., § 7397, being in substance an action for fraud.—Stebbins v. Dean, 82 Mich. 385.

¶ 1006a. Where the garnishee has died without making disclosure and before being defaulted the proceedings cannot be revived against his administrator since he could make no disclosure.—White v. Ledyard, 48 Mich. 264.

§ 315. Time for suing and effect of delay or vacancy in administration.

Time for presentment of claims against estate, see ante, VI, C, 2.
Delay and laches in suing to restrain dissipation of estate, belated discovery of will as excuse, see Equity ¶ 184.

¶ 1007. An action by an administrator may be maintained though commenced nearly four years after his appointment, there being no plea to the jurisdiction and no showing that the estate was closed or that the administrator had been discharged.—Card v. Fowler, 120 Mich. 646.

¶ 1008. The statute fixing the period in which actions may be maintained by or against the representatives of decedents (section 9737, Comp. Laws 1897) at any time within two years after the granting of letters testamentary or of administration, does not apply to such causes of action as are not barred within two years after the granting of such letters.—Morse v. Hayes, 150 Mich. 597.

§ 316. Set-off and recoupment.

Set-offs against claims in general, see ante § 157.
Presentment of set-offs against claims, see ante § 165.
Necessity for representative to offer set-off to be entitled to costs, see post ¶ 1046.
Right of defendants in action by representative to set-off claims against estate, see Jud. Act, chap. LV, § 18; Comp. L. 1915, § 13881.

¶ 1009. Comp. Laws 1897, § 9375, which provides that the commissioners of an estate shall set-off the claims of the deceased against a creditor presenting his claim, and Comp. Laws 1897, § 9383, providing that nothing in the chapter shall be construed to prevent an action by an executor against any other person for a debt or claim, do not operate to compel the representative of the estate to sever a joint action which he has in order to set off a claim he has against one of the parties.—Graham v. Graham, 171 Mich. 307.

¶ 1010. One who purchases personal property from an administrator under an express warranty as to its quality may recoup damages arising from a breach of the warranty in an action for the purchase price since it is not a claim against decedent to go before commissioners.—Boltwood v. Miller, 112 Mich. 657.

§ 317. Arbitrations, compromises and confessions.

Admissions of rights against estate or stipulation for allowance of claim, see ante § 185.
Compromise, of rights by representative in management, or disposal of personal property, see ante § 123.
Consent to proceedings or action taken or waiver of objections as consideration for compromise, see Contracts § 117, ¶ 511.

¶ 1011. There is no statute expressly or impliedly preventing an administrator from compromising or adjusting a claim of the estate against a third person without suit, or compromising or settling such claim when a suit is pending.—Grece v. Helm, 91 Mich. 450.

¶ 1012. A compromise by a special administrator, under the sanction of the probate court, of the estate's claim against a third person for damages in litigation at the time of intestate's death, may be sustained where such claim is the only property of the estate and where there was no money to meet the expenses of suit.—Grece v. Helm, 91 Mich. 450.

¶ 1013. Where an administrator is empowered by the heirs to settle all claims and accounts, he has authority to compromise all claims for trespass in illegally cutting timber from the land in violation of the terms of a contract, and may waive all rights of forfeiture of the cut timber reserved by the heirs in the contract.—Newberry v. Chicago Lumbering Co., 154 Mich. 84.

¶ 1014. An administrator is not bound to defend against a just claim, and he may bind the estate by consenting to judgment when the suit is already pending.—Shelden v. Warner's Estate, 59 Mich. 444.

¶ 1015. One who has been appointed administrator upon a petition showing that he is a creditor and that the estate's property consists solely of a litigated claim cannot, where he has not objected to a compromise and settlement of such claim by a special administrator under order of probate court and has not made demand for the fund so obtained, contend afterwards that the settlement was fraudulent and proceed with litigation.—Grece v. Helm, 91 Mich. 450.

§ 318. Actions and suits against representative.

Actions against representative on claims, see ante, VI, C, 5.
Suits against representatives on their personal liability to creditors, see ante, IX.
Suits for accounting against representative, see post, XII, B.
Suits against representative for distribution or for shares in estate, see post, XIII, B.
Action against representative on bond, see post §§ 391-393.
Proceedings for removal of representative, see ante §§ 43-45.
Suits against representatives and others to annul decedent's fraudulent transfers, see ante §§ 97-101.
Replevin against representative, see also ante ¶ 984.
Trover against representative for taking crops, see also ante ¶ 207.
Suit of creditor against representative to annul fraudulent conveyance, see also ante ¶ 296.
Trover by devisee against representative for conversion of growing crops, see also ante ¶ 395.
Suits against representatives and others to annul fraudulent transfers to decedent, see Fraudulent Conveyances, V.
Representatives of deceased agent as proper defendants to accounting bill by principal, see Agency ¶ 557.
Actions incident to partnership settlements against representative of deceased partner, see also Partnership, VII.
Right of administrator to maintain interpleader, effect of taking sides, see Interpleader.

¶ 1016. Replevin may be brought against an executor who arbitrarily retakes specific bequests, having assented to the legatee's possession.—Eberstein v. Camp, 37 Mich. 176.

B. PLEADING AND PRACTICE.

§ 319. In general.

Revivor proceedings, see post § 320.
Representative or individual name or capacity as party, see post § 321.
Pleadings and averments, see post §§ 322, 323.
Evidence and burden of proof, see post § 324.
Judgments and decrees, see post § 325.
Necessary parties plaintiff in suit by heirs to annul transfers to an administrator, see also ante ¶ 977.
Enforcement of duty of executor or other person by contempt proceedings, power of probate courts, see Contempt § 19.
Appearance as administrator as waiver of objection that he is not joined as party, see Appearance § 11.

¶ 1017. An administrator is not to be treated as at all times before the court and bound at his peril to know of proceedings affecting him.—Hilton v. Briggs, 54 Mich. 265.

§ 320. Revivor proceedings.

Survival or abatement of cause of action, see ante § 314.
Practice under the statutes to substitute parties in abated suits, see Abatement §§ 19, 20.
Former chancery practice for revivor of suits, see Equity § 233 et seq.
Bills of revivor and supplement after decree in equity, see Equity, XI.
Revival and continuance of action under Survival Act, see Death by Wrongful Act § 16.
Filing proofs of death and appointment of administrator as prerequisite to revival, see Abatement § 19; and see Equity.
Continuation of suit against surviving codefendant without bringing in representative, see Abatement § 19.
Revivor in name of foreign executor, see Abatement ¶ 89.
Substitution of parties on appeal or on remand for revivor, see Appeal §§ 515, 523.
Necessity of additional or new pleadings on revival, see Abatement § 20.
Amendments or new pleadings on revival of suit or decree in equity, see also Equity § 236.
Amendments permissible on revival of suit, see Abatement ¶ 99.
Amendment of specific performance bill by administrator on appeal to substitute heirs of purchaser, see also Equity ¶ 559.
Personal representative as proper party on revival of foreclosure suit, see Abatement ¶ 103.
Revival and new parties on divorce appeal after death of party, see Divorce ¶ 390.
Right to revive garnishment proceedings against personal representative of garnishee, see Garnishment, VII.

¶ 1018. The proceedings for revivor after plaintiff's death are statutory and ex parte; but proof should be filed of the death and of the administrator's appointment.—Vickery v. Beir, 16 Mich. 50.

¶ 1019. On a nonresident defendant's death after entry of judgment suit may be revived and writ of error sued out in the name of executor appointed on Michigan probate of his will, even though it does not appear that testator had any property in this state.—Hubbell v. Blandy, 87 Mich. 209.

§ 321. Representative or individual name or capacity as party.

Suit for collection of assets in individual or representative capacity, see ante § 87.
Suits by creditors and distributees in name of representative, see ante § 312.
Suing in name of representative without his consent, see ante § 312.
Pleading representative capacity, see post ¶¶ 1024, 1025, 1027, 1028.
Right to sue in individual name for revival of mortgage assigned to representative by decedent, see ante ¶ 870.
Effect of admissions in personal or representative capacity to bind person in other capacity, see Evidence § 372.
Suing or defending in representative and also in individual capacity in same action, see Parties.
Necessity of bond in both capacities where representative appeals as such and as individual, see Appeal § 86, ¶ 382.
Power of executor or administrator to sue in own name without joining persons represented, see Jud. Act, chap. XII, § 2; Comp. L. 1915, § 12352.

¶ 1020. An administrator may sue either in his individual or his representative character for money had and received after the death of his intestate for the use of the estate, but for money received in the intestate's lifetime he must sue in his representative character.—Barnum v. Stone, 27 Mich. 332.

§ 322. Pleadings and averments.

Traverse and admissions of right and capacity, see post § 323.

¶ 1021. Declaration by administratrix counting upon lease by intestate of sheep to defendant, and alleging breach and resultant damage to intestate or his personal representative, and defendant's failure to deliver to plaintiff as such administratrix wool and sheep belonging to intestate, states a cause of action to plaintiff in her representative capacity.—Wolscheid v. Thome, 76 Mich. 265.

¶ 1022. A declaration by executors must allege the promise to have been made to the testator in his lifetime to admit proof of that fact.—Merritt v. Keeler, 75 Mich. 314.

¶ 1023. In assumpsit by executors, evidence of a promise express or implied made to testator in his lifetime is inadmissible unless such promise is alleged in the declaration.—Merritt v. Keeler, 75 Mich. 314.

¶ 1024. The addition "administratrix upon the estate of ——, deceased," to the plaintiff's name in the beginning of a declaration, does not affect the substance of the pleading or the essential rights of the parties unless the representative relation is otherwise set forth in the declaration.—Barnum v. Stone, 27 Mich. 332.

¶ 1025. An averment that A. and B. were appointed and acted as administrators, without alleging that they accepted the trust, is sufficient.—Manning v. Drake, 1 Mich. 34.

¶ 1026. A bill to foreclose a mortgage in which complainants describe themselves as executors of the last will and testament of the mortgagee, but without setting out his death and in no way alluding to the probate of the will, shows no right of action in complainants.—Middlesworth v. Nixon, 2 Mich. 425.

¶ 1027. In a suit for personal injuries, an allegation that defendant is an administrator does not necessarily preclude his personal liability, since such allegation may be treated as descriptio personæ.—Bannigan v. Woodbury, 158 Mich. 206.

¶ 1028. When a plaintiff, as administratrix, declares on the common counts in assumpsit, and states an indebtedness to the plaintiff, without showing any indebtedness to the intestate, and does not, except by the addition of the words "administratrix upon the estate," etc., at the commencement of the declaration, show that the plaintiff brings suit as administratrix, the several counts must be construed as causes of action accruing to the plaintiff in her individual character.—Barnum v. Stone, 27 Mich. 332.

§ 323. ——Traverse or admission of right and capacity.

Plea that plaintiff is not executor, whether in abatement or in bar, see Pleading, III, B.

¶ 1029. Plea of the general issue in an action by an administrator or executor admits plaintiff's representative character.—Vickery v. Beir, 16 Mich. 50; Bachelder v. Brown, 47 Mich. 366.

¶ 1030. The rule that the plea of the general issue admits the representative character of the plaintiff does not apply to a case of the revival of a suit in the name of an administrator after plea filed, and in such a case the representative character is in issue.—Vickery v. Beir, 16 Mich. 50.

¶ 1031. After a plea of the general issue the plaintiff's death was suggested of record and the cause revived in the name of an administrator. Held, that defendant could show that the administration was granted in another state.—Vickery v. Beir, 16 Mich. 50.

¶ 1032. In a suit for personal injuries against an administrator, a demurrer to the declaration alleging that the administrator was in possession of real estate is held to admit a lawful possession.—Bannigan v. Woodbury, 158 Mich. 206.

§ 324. Evidence and burden of proof.

Evidence and presumptions as to assets and title of decedent in suits to collect assets, see ante § 102.
Necessity and sufficiency of objection to evidence, see Trial, V.
Saving questions for review on admissibility of evidence, see Saving Questions.
General law of evidence, including competency of particular kinds or means of proof, see Evidence.
Best evidence as to matters of administration, probate and settlement, see Evidence §§ 126, 134.
Persons who may waive privilege against testimony about transactions with decedent or against other privileged communications, see Witnesses, IV, V.

¶ 1033. An administrator defending in a suit on a claim against the estate, must regard the rules of law which regulate the practice in court and the burden of proof, though he cannot waive defenses.—Farnsworth v. Fraser, 137 Mich. 296.

¶ 1034. Executors cannot prove their office by general reputation in an action brought by them.—Middlesworth v. Nixon, 2 Mich. 425.

¶ 1035. An administrator suing to collect a claim need not go back of his letters to show his title to the office.—Farrand v. Caton, 69 Mich. 235.

¶ 1036. In a suit by an administratrix upon an oral contract made by her decedent, an objection to the admission in evidence of the letters of administration on the ground that no such facts and circumstances were shown to the probate court as to authorize the appointment of the plaintiff as special administratrix was held untenable; the regularity of the appointment was not open to inquiry on the trial of such an issue. Evidence of the probate order permitting the plaintiff to prosecute the suit being objected to on the ground of irregularity in the probate proceedings, this objection was also held untenable.—Cook v. Stevenson, 30 Mich. 242.

§ 325. Judgments and decrees.

Invalidity against estate of judgment rendered in action against representative for personal liability, see ante ¶ 843.
Effect of judgment for or against personal representative to bar or conclude heirs or distributees, see Former Adjudication, V.
Appeals to circuit court from orders and decrees setting aside fraudulent transfers, see Probate Courts, III.
Writ of error from circuit judgment on appeal to supreme court, see Appeal.

¶ 1037. Where a defendant dies pending the trial, and the suit is revived against his executor, a judgment for plaintiff therein does not, although the executor admits having the funds on hand with which to pay the same, render the executor directly and absolutely accountable to plaintiff for the amount, so as to enable a creditor of the latter to maintain garnishment proceedings against the executor before distribution of the estate is ordered by the probate court. Whether garnishment would lie under such circumstances after an order of distribution, quære.—Hudson v. Saginaw Circuit Judge, 114 Mich. 116.

C. COSTS AND ALLOWANCES.

§ 326. In general.

Contested cases, see post § 327.
Denial to representative for neglect or default, see post § 328.
Needless or forced litigation, see post § 329.
Amount and items allowable, see post § 330.
Award, order and enforcement of cost judgment, see post § 331.
Reimbursement or charge on accounting for expenses of litigation, see ante, X, D.
Costs on bills for construction of wills, see Wills, VI, J.
Costs on probate or contest of will or bill or proceeding to revoke probate, see Wills, V.
Costs on error from allowance or denial of claim, see Costs, V.
Denial of costs in supreme court for mutual errors, see Costs ¶ 377.
Charging appeal or chancery costs on fund involved, see Costs §§ 39, 134.
Costs against administrator individually on appeal in partition suit, see also Costs ¶ 542.
Allowance of costs out of fund in mandamus to compel order of payment of widow's allowance, see Costs § 48.
Costs in contested matters in probate and circuit court, see Jud. Act, chap. LXV, § 20, Comp. L. 1915, § 14164.
Allowance to representative in his account for costs awarded against him in estate litigation, see Jud. Act, chap. LXII, § 12, Comp. L. 1915, § 14115.

¶ 1038. The discretion of the court in allowing costs against an executor personally will not be interfered with on appeal in the absence of a showing of abuse of such discretion.—Webb v. Peck, 131 Mich. 579.

¶ 1039. The heirs of a widow, who through litigation with her administrator, discovers several thousand dollars which augmented her estate, and which she should have included in the estate of the deceased widow's husband, are entitled to an allowance for the expense of litigation in an accounting between the heirs of the husband and the estate of the widow, the result being that all were enabled to share in the fund ultimately. Maney v. Casserly, 134 Mich. 252.

¶ 1040. On the ground that the mortgagor had fulfilled the conditions of the mortgage costs were allowed against an administratrix on dismissal of her bill to foreclose a mortgage.—Daniels v. Eisenlord, 10 Mich. 454.

¶ 1041. Costs may be paid out of the estate where a finding as to a distribution under a will has been set aside on the appeal of one of the legatees.—McClintock's Appeal, 58 Mich. 152.

¶ 1042. In the case of a bill to establish an equitable title in lands belonging to the estate of a deceased person, it appearing to have been prosecuted in good faith, the taxable costs were decreed to be a charge upon the estate, as part of the necessary expenses in its administration, though the relief asked by the bill was denied.—Van Wert v. Chidester, 31 Mich. 207.

§ 327. Contested cases.

¶ 1043. A case is "contested" within Comp. L. 1897, § 681, giving the circuit court power in its discretion to award costs to either party to be paid by the other or out of the estate, as justice and equity shall require on appeal from probate, where an order to pay over residue was appealed to the circuit, and there reversed, followed by reversal of the judgment of the circuit court in the supreme court and a dismissal of the appeal in the circuit court after remand; it is not necessary that the case go to final determination before it can be regarded as "contested."—Universalist General Convention v. Van Buren Circuit Judge, 141 Mich. 64.

§ 328. Denial to representative for neglect or default.

¶ 1044. Costs were denied to a representative in a foreclosure suit, where he might have set off the mortgage debt against a claim presented by the mortgage debtor as a creditor of decedent and forbore to do so.—George v. Ludlow, 66 Mich. 176.

¶ 1045. Costs were allowed against a mortgagee's executor who unsuccessfully defended on the merits of a bill to compel discharge of an outlawed mortgage.—Kingman v. Sinclair, 80 Mich. 427.

¶ 1046. An administrator failing to offer set-offs should be denied subsequent costs.—George v. Ludlow, 66 Mich. 176.

¶ 1047. Where it is sought to charge an executor for failure properly to retain in his possession and sell certain stock of an estate, and he fails to attempt to get the hearing continued until he can get the stock back from a trustee in bankruptcy who has wrongfully seized it, the executor is not entitled to costs on winning his case on appeal.—In re Choate's Estate, 165 Mich. 420; Bonine v. Gage, Id.

§ 329. Needless or forced litigation.

¶ 1048. Costs are allowed as against an administrator individually where he has vexatiously appealed.—Showers' Estate v. Morrill, 41 Mich. 700.

¶ 1049. Where the administrator of an intestate brought useless litigation in respect to the estate, costs allowed to the opposite party were made a charge against him personally and not against the estate.—Hill v. Mitchell, 40 Mich. 389.

¶ 1050. Where an executor resisted a claim against the testator in the circuit court, and, after decision by the court allowing it, removed the case to the supreme court, and that court was of opinion that there was no reasonable ground for resisting the claim, costs of the supreme court were awarded to the claimant.—Dodge v. Stanton, 12 Mich. 408.

¶ 1051. Where a petition was filed for a writ of possession under the decree in a partition suit, and the persons who were acting as administrators of the common ancestor were made defendants in their individual capacity, and claimed the right to possession only as such administrators, notwithstanding the repeal of the statute conferring that right, it was held that if it appeared that they did not take and hold the possession in good faith, or for any legitimate purpose of administration, costs would be awarded against them individually, and they would not be entitled to charge the same against the estate.—Campau v. Campau, 25 Mich. 127.

¶ 1052. On dismissal of an appeal from an allowance made by the probate court for the support of a widow of a decedent, costs will be granted against the executor who has appealed, personally, and will not be charged to the estate, it having been held repeatedly that such an order is not appealable.—In re Koch's Estate, 121 Mich. 667.

¶ 1053. Costs were denied to defendant on a bill brought by executor as such and also as individual with another to determine who were the heirs of plaintiffs' decedent and for a construction of the will, where the bill was necessitated by defendant's claim, as an adopted child of the sister of decedent, to inherit through said sister a portion alleged to have lapsed into intestacy, and where it was decided that even if it did so lapse defendant could not by adoption inherit from another's estate by representation through the adopting parent.—Van Derlyn v. Mack, 137 Mich. 146.

§ 330. Amount and items allowable.

¶ 1054. Courts of equity have no power to charge decedents' estates with expenses (services of counsel) beyond taxable costs of proceedings for the construction of wills; the making of allowances is the province of the probate court.—Toms v. Williams, 41 Mich. 552; Waldron v. Waldron, 45 Mich. 350.

¶ 1055. The discretion of the circuit judge, in causes contested in the circuit court upon appeal from the probate court, to allow to either or both parties their costs to be paid out of the estate in controversy, is limited to the awarding of taxable costs, and an award to an executor of his actual expenses incurred upon the trial is unauthorized.—Brilliant v. Wayne Circuit Judges, 110 Mich. 68.

§ 331. Award, order and enforcement of cost judgment.

Execution for costs, see Jud. Act, chap. LXV, § 21, Comp. L. 1915, § 14165.

¶ 1056. An execution for costs properly issues against an excutor or administrator where, in the exercise of its discretion, the court makes no special order as to costs.—In re Colburn's Estate, 153 Mich. 206.

XII. ACCOUNTING AND SETTLEMENT OF ESTATE.

A. IN GENERAL; RIGHT, DUTY AND TIME.

§ 332. Nature and scope.

Right and duty in general, see post §§ 333-335.

Time for accounting, delay, laches and estoppel, see post § 336.

Procedure and practice and stating the account, see post, XII, B.

Exceptions, contests, hearings, surcharge and falsification, see post, XII, C.

Decree and its effect and supplemental accounting, see post, XII, D.

Accountability for corepresentatives, predecessors and surviving partner's acts and omissions, see ante, X, E.

Accounting of testamentary trustee, see Trusts, XI.

¶ 1057. Proceedings to obtain and close an administrator's account are for the purpose of placing on record an exact showing of the assets which he has had and of their disposal, and the resulting balance; and the charges against him must include such sums as the estate has lost through his misconduct or default.—Loomis v. Armstrong, 49 Mich. 521.

¶ 1058. The statute relating to the accounting of executors and administrators contemplates two distinct things, the rendering and the settlement of account. The settlement is not merely to ascertain what items should be placed on the debit side of the account, subject to proof, on a subsequent proceeding, that as between him and the estate the administrator ought not to be charged therewith, but rather to judicially liquidate and settle the affairs of the trust and determine the relative rights of the estate and the administrator; and the proceeding involves an adjudication upon each item.—Hall v. Grovier, 25 Mich. 428.

§ 333. Right and duty in general.

Accounting for deceased representative, guardian or trustee, see post § 334.

Accounting between corepresentatives, see post § 335.

Necessity for original administrator filing final account before appointment of administrator de bonis non, see ante ¶¶ 23, 24.

Estoppel to deny necessity for accounting, see ante ¶ 174.

Failure of attorney as executor to account as ground for disbarment, see Attorneys ¶¶ 21-26.

Duty of representative to render annual account, see Jud. Act, chap. LXII, § 8, Comp. L. 1915, § 14111.

¶ 1059. A cestui que trust, who received property on a final settlement with an administrator with the will annexed, is not estopped to require an accounting from the trustee and executor who had resigned.—Wooden v. Kerr, 91 Mich. 188.

¶ 1060. An executor who has in his hands a large fund belonging to the estate, as shown by his last accounting to the probate court, has not "wholly settled" the estate (How. St., § 5957); and therefore may be required by such court, under How. St., § 6809, to render an accurate account of all property in his hands as such executor, although the legatees have made him a trustee of the entire estate for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of the will.—In re Sweetser's Estate, 109 Mich. 198.

¶ 1061. Those who have assumed without authority to administer an estate, and claim to have administered fully, and are called upon in a court of probate or of equity for an accounting, are estopped from denying their representative character and their liability to account accordingly.—Damouth v. Klock, 29 Mich. 289.

¶ 1062. A surety on the bond, given by a residuary legatee, as executor, to secure payment of the testator's debts and legacies, cannot maintain a bill in equity against him and the cosureties for an accounting for assets of the estate, the appointment of a receiver, and an administration of the estate by the chancery court.—McElroy v. Hatheway, 44 Mich. 390.

§ 334. ——Accounting for deceased representative, guardian or trustee.

See also post ¶ 1235.

Liability of sureties of representative respecting duties to estate of which decedent was executor, see post ¶ 1231.

¶ 1063. An executor's obligation to account in the proper court rests, on his decease, upon his personal representative, who should observe the same rules in so doing as the executor, and should be held to the same strictness, so far as he has knowledge, or with a reasonable degree of diligence can obtain the same.—Perrin v. Lepper, 72 Mich. 454.

¶ 1064. The administrator of a deceased guardian may, under How. St., § 6760, be cited to render an account of the guardianship.—Tudhope v. Potts, 91 Mich. 490.

¶ 1064a. Equity has jurisdiction to require the executors of the estate of a deceased guardian to account for funds of the ward fraudulently appropriated by the deceased, and to decree a sale of lands in the possession of his heirs and devisees to satisfy the amount found due, although the period within which the probate court might act in relation to the claim has expired.—Allen v. Conklin, 112 Mich. 74.

§ 335. ——Accounting between corepresentatives.

See also ante ¶ 961.

Accountability for corepresentatives and relative liabilities, see ante, X, E.

¶ 1065. Equity has jurisdiction of a suit by one executor against his coexecutor, who has received all of the statutory commissions, for an accounting and division of such commissions.—Speirs v. Wisner, 88 Mich. 614.

¶ 1066. One of three executors, who managed the business and had the responsibility of administering the estate, received the statutory commissions. One of his coexecutors resided in another state, and the other, the widow, who was absent much of the time during the settlement of the estate, obtained an assignment from the nonresident executor of his claim to such commissions, and filed a bill to compel the managing executor to pay her two-thirds of the commissions he had received, which bill was dismissed.—Speirs v. Wisner, 88 Mich. 614.

§ 336. Time for accounting, delay, laches and estoppel.

Disability of administrator to plead laches against heirs seeking accounting where he has not suffered harm by delay, see also Equity ¶ 210.

Trust relationship as preventing bar of accounting, see also Accounting Suits ¶ 12.

¶ 1067. Where the estate has not been legally closed the probate court has jurisdiction of an heir's petition for an accounting by the administrator, such petition being filed in the first year of his majority and within eight years after the administrator claims to have made distribution.—Loomis v. Armstrong, 63 Mich. 355.

¶ 1068. A settlement by a special guardian with his ward, they also being administrator and heir, after the latter's majority, in which the former's overpayment to the widow during minority is ratified by the heir, estops the latter from contesting the administrator's account because of such overpayment; since the settlement left the heir uninjured by the overpayment.—Loomis v. Armstrong, 63 Mich. 355.

¶ 1069. A suit by the deprived heirs for an accounting against the administrator and heirs of the widow, brought after the closing of the husband's estate and at the time of final accounting of the widow's estate, is not barred by laches on account of the failure of the heirs to discover the death of the husband, in view of the unjust and unlawful claims of the heirs of the widow who had converted her husband's entire estate and taking into consideration that the property is practically all in the control of the court on account of litigation between the heirs of the widow and her administrator.—Maney v. Casserly, 134 Mich. 252.

B. PROCEDURE AND PRACTICE; STATING THE ACCOUNT.

§ 337. Jurisdiction and proceedings in general.

Accounts involving rights of infants, see post § 338.

Accounting suits in equity, see post § 339.

Testamentary trust accounting, see post § 340.

Application, other pleadings and procedure, see post § 341.

Method of stating and items to be included, see post § 342.

Variance from inventory or property receipted for, see post § 343.

Mistakes, amendments and corrections, see post § 344.

Procedure on refusal of representative to account, see post § 345.

Right, duty and time for accounting, see ante, XII, A.

Exceptions, contests, hearings, surcharge and falsification, see post, XII, C.

Decree and its effect and supplemental accounting, see post, XII, D.

Relative jurisdiction of probate and circuit courts in accounting, see ante § 13.

Necessity of making representative party in suit for accounting by testamentary trustee, see Trusts, XI.

Accounting for property returned by representative pursuant to replevin judgment against him, see Jud. Act, chap. LIV, § 19, Comp. L. 1915, § 13863.

Examination by court of accounting representative, see Prob. Ct. Rule 11, § 3.

¶ 1070. Where certain tribunals have acquired jurisdiction over an estate and its representative within their territory, the representative is bound to account to them only for all assets, and the courts of other states cannot interfere.—Woodruff v. Young, 43 Mich. 548.

¶ 1071. Assent on the part of the heirs to the settlement of an estate and the distribution of the funds by the administrator does not relieve him from his duty to file his account and obtain settlement with the probate court.—Nowland v. Rice's Estate, 138 Mich. 146.

¶ 1072. A claim for an accounting against an estate on a contract creating a trust relation between claimant and decedent, where the transactions were all completed during decedent's lifetime, and were of such a character that, had he lived, the entire controversy could have been settled in a court of law, may be presented in probate court, without a resort to equity.—Sullivan v. Ross' Estate, 113 Mich. 311.

¶ 1073. Under How. St., § 6760, providing that the judge of probate shall have jurisdiction of all matters relating to the settlement of the estates of deceased persons, the probate court has authority to determine whether a promissory note given by an executor to a legatee was accepted by the latter in payment of her legacy, upon a petition by the legatee to require the executor to account for her interest in the estate even though the circumstances of the case are such that equity would also have had jurisdiction of the controversy.—Fingleton v. Kent Circuit Judge, 116 Mich. 211.

¶ 1074. Under Comp. Laws 1897, § 9438, allowing extra compensation to an administrator for extraordinary services, the discretion of the probate judge is to control, and the administrator is not entitled to a jury trial in fixing the amount on appeal from the settlement of the account.—In re Mower's Appeal, 48 Mich. 441; Loomis v. Armstrong, 63 Mich. 355; Wisner v. Mabley's Estate, 70 Mich. 271; In re Brewster's Estate, 113 Mich. 561; In re Fischer's Estate, 158 Mich. 1.

§ 338. Accounts involving rights of infants.

See also post ¶ 1108.

¶ 1075. The probate court should carefully scrutinize an executor's accounts where wards are interested, and should not accept without examination a stipulation between guardian and executor.—Sanborn v. St. Clair Circuit Judge, 94 Mich. 519.

§ 339. Accounting suits in equity.

Suit by representative for accounting of money recovered in action for decedent's death, see also ante ¶ 232.

¶ 1076. Equity has jurisdiction of a bill for an accounting against the administrator and the distributees of the estates of a husband and his widow upon the showing of fraud committed by the widow and the administrator as to the listing of the husband's heirs, the final improper payment of the entire estate to the widow and upon her death a conversion by the administrator.—Maney v. Casserly, 134 Mich. 252.

¶ 1077. A bill in equity for an accounting in an estate based on the fraud of the widow and the administrator, is not an appeal from the probate court and is not barred by the statute of limitations applied to such cases.—Maney v. Casserly, 134 Mich. 252.

¶ 1078. A suit by a contract purchaser of land against the executors of the estate of one grantor, who is the wife of the other grantor, and against the special administrator of the estate of the husband to compel a conveyance of the land and to determine in what proportions the respective estates are entitled to the balance due on the contract, which was tendered in court, and in which the representatives of the wife's estate seek an accounting against the husband's estate to determine how much the husband's estate is indebted to the wife's estate for moneys collected on such contract during the lives of the parties, is not a suit commenced by an administrator within Comp. Laws 1897, § 9383, How. 2nd Ed., § 11094, so as to give a chancery court jurisdiction of the suit so far as it relates to the accounting between the estates.—Flammer v. Cullen, 194 Mich. 585.

¶ 1079. Where a bill brought for an accounting against an administrator after the estate is closed does not allege diligence on the part of complainant in protecting her rights; nor that she discovered the frauds complained of too late to have them corrected in the probate court; nor that she was ignorant of their existence; nor that they were passed upon by the probate court; nor that she did not have due notice and opportunity to be heard in the probate court; and there is no explanation as to why she did not appeal to the circuit court or petition the probate court, the bill is properly dismissed.—Davis v. McCamman, 165 Mich. 287.

§ 340. Testamentary trust accountings.

Testamentary trusts not involving executorial matters, see Wills, VI, F.

Accountings by trustees not involving executorial matters, see Trusts, XI.

¶ 1080. A testator left most of his estate in the shape of partnership interests in various businesses. He appointed a son as executor, who carried on the various enterprises for many years. At the end of some thirteen years all the legatees joined in a paper authorizing the said executor to hypothecate the assets of the estate in securing the debts of the enterprises. After some twenty years longer, the legatees brought a petition for an accounting. The defendant executor demanded that the probate judge first find whether the aforesaid authorization did not terminate the relation of executor and create that of trustee, and if so, to deny an accounting. Held, the probate court acted within its rights in determining both questions at one hearing, and disposing of them in one decree for an accounting. —Stevens v. Ottawa Probate Judge, 156 Mich. 526.

¶ 1081. An administrator of an estate who is appointed a trustee of the estate by a court of chancery, in accordance with proceeding brought by the widow, is required to account as trustee to the court appointing him, and not to the probate court, as the latter court should not require an accounting as if no proceedings were had in the chancery court, but when it appears that the chancery court never had authority to appoint the administrator as trustee because six children to whom the estate belonged, subject to use by the mother, were not made parties to the chancery proceeding, and had no notice of the appointment as trustee, the probate court has jurisdiction of the estate and the administrator, and since such jurisdiction has not been devested, the administrator may be required to settle his account in the probate court.—Look v. Durfer, 121 Mich. 462.

§ 341. Application, other pleadings and procedure.

Accounting bill by administrator of wife against husband in possession of her property, see also Accounting Suits ¶ 13.
Multifariousness of bill for accounting and also to adjust personal equities of complainant with executor, see Equity ¶ 280.
Retention of suit to annul deed in order to require accounting of personal representative because land has passed into bona fide purchaser's hands frustrating rescission, see also Equity ¶ 874.

¶ 1082. In proceedings for the settlement of an administrator's account no technical rules of pleading should be enforced and the rules of evidence should be liberally construed in the reception of testimony.—Loomis v. Armstrong, 63 Mich. 355.

¶ 1083. An application to a probate court to call an administrator to account, averring that the applicant is heir of the deceased, and showing the proper facts entitling her to an account if she is such heir, is sufficient to justify action by the probate court thereon, though verified only by the oath of the applicant's attorney, who swears to the facts averred on information and belief, and without giving any reason why the oath is not made by the applicant himself.—In re Robinson's Estate, 6 Mich. 137.

¶ 1084. Though the probate judge may properly require an absolute verification of anything whereon his action is required upon the merits, yet when the party complained of is cited to appear, and has an opportunity to controvert the facts, there is no rule which renders it imperative on the probate court to decline receiving an unsworn petition—e. g., one to compel an account from an administrator.—In re Robinson's Estate, 6 Mich. 137.

¶ 1085. Where, in the case of a petition for an accounting verified only by the petitioner's attorney the respondent opposes the relief asked on the ground that the petition is not properly verified, and makes no issue of fact, there is nothing for the court to pass upon but the sufficiency of the allegations in the petition.—In re Robinson's Estate, 6 Mich. 137.

¶ 1086. A bill by a decedent's heirs to vacate orders allowing his administrator's final account and discharging such administrator, and to compel him to account,—such bill being based on fraudulent management of the estate,—requires an answer from the administrator; but it is demurrable as to his sureties, who, though made parties, are not alleged to have been conversant with the fraud or to have been bound to know of it.—Grady v. Hughes, 80 Mich. 184.

§ 342. Method of stating and items to be included.

Disbursement items to be included in account, see also ante ¶¶ 395, 396.
Necessity of accounting for proceeds of sale of partnership property where needed to satisfy firm debts, see also ante ¶ 419.
Costs and allowances in actions and suits, see ante, XI, C.
With what representative is chargeable in his accounts, see Jud. Act, chap. LXII, § 1; Comp. L. 1915, § 14104.
Accountability of representative for proceeds of sale of personalty, see Jud. Act, chap. LXII, § 4; Comp. L. 1915, § 14107.
For what debts due estate representative not accountable, see Jud. Act, chap. LXII, § 5; Comp. L. 1915, § 14108.
Form for representative's accounts, see Prob. Ct. Rule 11, § 1.

¶ 1087. An administrator, in accounting, should give, as far as possible, all the separate items of his disbursements.—Loomis v. Armstrong, 49 Mich. 521.

¶ 1088. An executor charged with the investment of an estate cannot render an account for the principal and disregard the interest that should have been earned.—Cheever v. Ellis, 134 Mich. 645.

¶ 1089. Where, before the time for appeal expired, an executor, without consulting his coexecutors or the residuary legatee, and without ascertaining whether an appeal was intended, paid over a claim allowed by the probate court, the amount cannot be allowed on his account while the appeal is pending.—Wisner v. Mabley's Estate, 74 Mich. 143.

¶ 1090. A receipt running from a supposed distributee to an administrator does not bind him to account for the money represented but not in fact turned over, where it rested on no consideration and where such person was not in law entitled to share in the estate.—In re Doyle's Estate, 147 Mich. 544.

§ 343. Variance from inventory or property receipted for.

Variance between assets stated in account and amount realized thereon by representative, see post ¶ 1127.

Variance in account as to receipt for share of estate given to representative by one not entitled to share, see ante ¶ 1090.

Accounting by representative for personalty as same is appraised, see Jud. Act, chap. LXII, § 2; Comp. L. 1915, § 14105.

¶ 1091. Where the assets of an estate consist in part of an interest in a mercantile business carried on by a surviving partner, and it appears that the executors have administered the estate with care and economy, they cannot, on a bill for an accounting filed by the heirs, be held accountable at the inventory figure, for the assets received.—Gaskill v. Weeks, 154 Mich. 223.

¶ 1092. The action of a special administrator in receipting as such special administrator for the funds in dispute was not conclusive that such funds were the property of the estate; where, in appeal from the settlement of the final account of such administrator, it appears that the decedent, shortly before his death, indorsed certain certificates of deposit and a bank book, of which he was the owner, for the purpose of making a gift causa mortis, and that when such administrator attempted to collect them, the bank, having been notified by the heirs not to pay them except to the properly authorized representative of the decedent, refused, as a precautionary measure, to pay such funds unless such special administrator should receipt for them as such.—Reed v. Whipple, 140 Mich. 7.

§ 344. Mistakes, amendments and corrections.

¶ 1093. The omission of an item of payment in an administrator's account is of no more importance than in any other, where the payment is satisfactorily shown.—Loomis v. Armstrong, 63 Mich. 355.

¶ 1094. It is proper to allow amendments and additions to an administrator's account in proceedings for the settlement thereof.—Loomis v. Armstrong, 63 Mich. 355.

¶ 1095. On final accounting of an administratrix, it is not error in the circuit court to permit an amendment of the account by striking out an item of rents and profits wrongly included by the administratrix's attorney under the impression that the administratrix was liable therefor.—Russell v. Wheeler, 129 Mich. 41.

§ 345. Procedure on refusal of representative to account.

¶¶ 1096-1097. If an executor or administrator refuses to file an account, it is proper for those interested to ascertain, so far as they can, the amount of property that came into his hands, and to state an account for him.—Stevens v. Ottawa Probate Judge, 156 Mich. 526.

C. EXCEPTIONS, CONTESTS AND HEARINGS; SURCHARGE AND FALSIFICATION.

§ 346. Practice and procedure on hearing.

Issues and questions open on appeal, see post § 347.

Evidence and presumptions, see post § 348.

Instructions, see post § 349.

Issues to jury and findings on same, see post § 350.

Right, duty and time for accounting, see ante, XII, A.

Procedure and practice in stating the account, see ante, XII, B.

Decree and its effect and supplemental accounting, see post, XII, D.

Persons to whom notice of examination and allowance of representative's account to be given, see Jud. Act, chap. LXII, § 13; Comp. L. 1915, § 14116.

Notice of hearing for examination of account, see Jud. Act, chap. LXII, § 9; Comp. L. 1915, § 14112.

Procedure to contest representative's account, see Prob. Ct. Rule 11, § 3.

Notice of hearing on representative's account, see Prob. Ct. Rule 11, § 2.

¶ 1098. The probate court may require executors whose accounts are under investigation to submit to oral examination under oath by counsel for heirs and legatees of the estate.—In re Rathbone's Estate, 44 Mich. 57.

¶ 1099. The party contesting an administrator's account in the probate court may do so either by disputing items of disbursements, or by adding charges, or by showing larger assets. And when the case is closed it should show not only the result, but a detailed statement on both sides of the account as settled, and the controversy on appeal will then be confined to such parts as are disputed, with the right to either party to correct errors or omissions. The practice should conform as nearly as possible to the equity practice of pointing out the real issues.—Loomis v. Armstrong, 49 Mich. 521.

¶ 1100. Upon objection to an allowance of compensation to the administrator at the hearing upon his final account, on the ground that he agreed to act without compensation, the contestant is concluded as to an item for services in the annual account, where no fraud is shown and there is no claim that contestant was not notified of the hearing of such account.—Morton v. Johnston, 124 Mich. 561.

¶ 1101. Where a special administrator upon turning over the estate to the general administrator puts in a claim for attorney's fees rendered to it, and such claim is allowed, an objector to such claim must appeal from the order allowing said petition and cannot raise the question in proceedings by the general administrator for the settlement of its account.—In re McNamara's Estate, 166 Mich. 451; McNamara v. Michigan Trust Co., Id.

¶ 1102. An objection to the allowance of the final account of an administrator will not be sustained on the ground that said administrator in its capacity of special and general administrator has filed so many petitions in the probate court for the allowance of claims and charges of administration that parties in interest might have been oppressed in being compelled to perfect a multitude of appeals, where there is no claim that the services rendered were not valuable or the amounts for them as charged reasonable.—In re McNamara's Estate, 166 Mich. 451; McNamara v. Michigan Trust Co., Id.

§ 347. Issues and questions open on appeal.

¶ 1103. Where on the hearing of the final account of an executor, in which he credits himself with the amount of a government bond delivered to the testator in his lifetime, the heirs join in a request for a finding of fact that the testator did not owe the executor, at the time of his death, any amount whatever except the amount of the bond, with interest, and one other item, such request amounts to an admission by the heirs that the estate was indebted to the executor in the amount of the bond, and the heirs are estopped from objecting to such credit on the trial of an appeal from the allowance of the account.—In re Hopkins' Estate, 99 Mich. 57.

§ 348. Evidence and presumptions.

Evidence as to compensation of representative, see ante § 298.

Admissibility of parol evidence to affect character of administrator's dealings evidenced by deeds and contracts for purposes of accounting, see also Evidence ¶ 820.

¶ 1104. Upon final accounting where the administratrix who was the wife of the decedent, claimed the balance unexpended of the proceeds of a check payable to her order, given as part payment of a house and lot deeded by her and confirmed by a later deed from both deceased and herself, the presumption would be that it was the wife's money, as the check was payable to her.—Hall v. Wortman, 123 Mich. 304.

¶ 1105. In a final accounting by an administratrix who was the wife of the deceased, where there was dispute as to the ownership of notes and a check given as part payment of a house and lot deeded by the wife and later confirmed by a deed from both husband and wife, it was proper to admit in evidence a deed from the husband to the wife to show who had the title as bearing on ownership of the check and notes.—Hall v. Wortman, 123 Mich. 304.

¶ 1106. Where one of the assets of the estate was a mortgage found among the papers of the deceased and on which the administrator in good faith commenced suit to foreclose, but the suit was dismissed because it was found that it had been paid, it not appearing when, he could only be charged with interest up to the time of appraisal, there being a presumption, in the absence of proof, that past due debts were promptly collected by the administrator.—In re Fishbeck's Estate, 146 Mich. 348.

¶ 1107. In a proceeding by an heir against his father's administrator for an accounting, an inquiry into the widow's pecuniary condition at the time of trial in the circuit court is irrelevant and improper, especially if it tends to injure the heir by raising the inference that he has been benefited out of property to which the widow was entitled.—Loomis v. Armstrong, 49 Mich. 521.

¶ 1108. An administrator's final account showed the amount received and paid out on account of the estate, and stated that the debit balance had been turned over by the administrator to himself, as guardian of the minor children of the deceased, and accounted for by him as such guardian, and the account as thus balanced was allowed by the probate court. On the trial of an appeal from the order of allowance, testimony was received tending to show that the personal property of the deceased had all been applied to the payment of his debts: that the only remaining property consisted of a lot, on which was a store building with tenements above; that, during all of the time since the death of their father, four of the minor children had occupied one of the tenements; that the debit balance referred to in the account was never in fact paid to the administrator, but that one of the daughters of the decedent had received the rents, and receipted for them in the name of the administrator, and applied them from time to time to the support of the family, consisting at first of all of the children, including the appellant, and, after her marriage, of the remaining children. The testimony was objected to as in contradiction of the charge which the administrator had made against himself. Held, that such was not the import of the testimony, but that it was offered for the purpose of showing a disbursement of the fund under such circumstances as, it was claimed, would relieve the administrator from accounting further to the estate, his theory being that this method of dealing with the estate had the approval of all the adult children, and that he, as guardian, had properly accounted for the funds received on account of his wards.—In re Buchan's Estate, 100 Mich. 219.

¶ 1109. On accounting evidence, that the executor paid dividends from time to time on past due notes on which the testator was liable as indorser and that these payments were allowed to him in his various accounts, sufficiently shows that the notes were allowed as an absolute and not as a contingent claim. —Owen v. Potter, 115 Mich. 556.

§ 349. Instructions.

Issues to jury and findings on same, see post § 350.

¶ 1110. In the absence of evidence showing that money found in a crock was given to an administrator, an instruction that such administrator should be charged therewith in his account, as money so found could not be the subject of any gift, was not error.—Casserly v. Casserly, 123 Mich. 44.

¶ 1111. On appeal from a final account, where the administrator claimed the personalty as a gift, but where the testimony of certain witnesses did not conclusively show an intention to make a present gift, an instruction was properly refused which told the jury, in referring to the testimony of such witnesses, that if their statements were true, they showed a clear intention to make a gift and that their legal effect was to make a valid gift.—Casserly v. Casserly, 123 Mich. 44.

§ 350. ——Issues to jury and findings on same.

See also post ¶ 1117.

¶ 1112. Under the express provisions of Comp. L. 1897, § 673, it is proper to submit to a jury questions of fact (such as whether the administrator agreed to act without compensation and whether or not a tax title was purchased for the benefit of the estate) arising upon an appeal from an allowance of an administrator's final account.—Morton v. Johnston, 124 Mich. 561.

¶ 1113. On the trial of an appeal from an allowance of an administrator's final account, the jury should pass on each separate item, but in the absence of showing that an injustice has been done in taking a general verdict, the error in practice will not cause a reversal.—Casserly v. Casserly, 123 Mich. 44.

¶ 1114. The findings of a jury in matters of probate accounting are not conclusive but advisory, being closely analogous to those of juries called in chancery cases.—Ward v. Tinkham, 65 Mich. 695.

D. DECREE AND ITS EFFECT; SUPPLEMENTAL ACCOUNTING.

§ 351. In general.

Rights and facts concluded, see post § 352.
Conclusiveness and finality of annual or intermediate accounting, see post § 353.
Collateral attack and impeachment, see post § 354.
Reopening, rehearing and supplemental accountings, see post § 355.
Appeal to circuit court from decree on accounting, see Probate Courts, III; and see also note, ante § 197.
Writ of error from circuit court judgment on appeal to supreme court, see Appeal.
Proper court for accounting after circuit court on appeal reverses order of probate court refusing accounting, see Probate Courts, III.
Writ of error to circuit judgment on motion for new bond and accounting, see Appeal § 28, ¶ 94.
Review of discretion of circuit court as to allowances to representative, see Appeal § 418.

¶ 1115. After the probate court has passed upon the merits, and has put into the form of a decree its final adjudication upon an administrator's account, it has no jurisdiction to review or set aside such decree.—Grady v. Hughes, 64 Mich. 540; Holden v. Lathrop, 65 Mich. 652.

¶ 1116. A probate court in passing upon an executor's account can decree that all debts and claims and administration charges on the estate have been satisfied, and determine the executor's liability to the estate and the amount left to a specified devisee. Such a decree, if no appeal is taken, is binding upon the executor, the devisee and all parties in interest, and cannot be attacked collaterally; and under it the executor must pay over to the devisee the legacy with accumulated interest, and if he does not the sureties become liable on the executor's bond. —Clark v. Fredenburg, 43 Mich. 263; Holden v. Lathrop, 65 Mich. 652.

¶ 1117. The fact that the circuit court on appeal submitted to the jury the value of the administrator's attorney's services, treating it as advisory will not work a reversal if there is nothing to show that the allowance finally made was not a judicial finding.—In re Pfeffer's Estate, 117 Mich. 207.

§ 352. Rights and facts concluded.

¶ 1118. Under a will giving the net income of the estate to the widow, payments shown by the final account to have been made to the widow for her support were considered as having been made out of the personal estate and not out of the income, although such payments were made pursuant to an entry which never assumed to be an order.—Dickinson v. Henderson, 122 Mich. 583.

¶ 1119. In an account of the executor in a will giving the possession and control of personal property to the widow during her widowhood, the failure to credit a debtor in full for payments on his note to the widow is unimportant where the debtor is not a party and not bound by the finding.—Gee v. Hasbrouck, 128 Mich. 509.

¶ 1120. The final account of an administrator is binding and conclusive only as to property mentioned in it and which came into his hands, and does not preclude a suit in chancery by the heirs at law, although they have receipted for the distributive shares, to require an accounting for money fraudulently obtained from a decedent in his lifetime and secretly withheld from his administrator.—Powell v. Pennock, 181 Mich. 588.

¶ 1121. Where an executor and trustee under a will has resigned both capacities, his settlement with the administrator with the will annexed will not bind the trust estate or the cestui que trust.—Wooden v. Kerr, 91 Mich. 188.

§ 353. Conclusiveness and finality of annual or intermediate accounts.

Conclusiveness of finding of jury in matters of probate accounting, see also ante ¶ 1114.

Right of appeal to circuit court, see Probate Courts, III.

¶ 1122. Annual accounts filed by an executor, where there is no omission of credit or concealment of assets, and where lack of notice of application for approval is not claimed, are conclusive as to all matters contained therein.—Porter v. Long, 124 Mich. 584.

¶ 1123. Items of an administrator's annual account are not open to attack on the presentation of the final account, in the absence of any claim that the parties were not notified as required by Comp. L. 1897, § 9441, or that they were misled by fraud.—Morton v. Johnston, 124 Mich. 561.

¶ 1124. An order of the probate court allowing an administrator's first account is conclusive as to all items therein unless appealed from and a second account should begin with the balance due from the first.—Nowland v. Rice's Estate, 138 Mich. 146.

¶ 1125. The rule that annual accounts are conclusive does not apply to amounts claimed as compensation by an executor as surviving partner for managing the partnership business, where such charges do not appear in the accounts and the amount withheld for such compensation never passed into the possession of the surviving partner as executor.—Porter v. Long, 124 Mich. 584.

¶ 1126. The allowance of items of disbursements in an executor's annual accounts is binding upon the estate.—Cheever v. Ellis, 134 Mich. 645.

¶ 1127. The statements of assets of an estate in the annual accounts of the executor are not binding upon the estate so far as they prove worthless or not collectible on account of the executor's negligence.—Cheever v. Ellis, 134 Mich. 645.

§ 354. Collateral attack and impeachment.

Validity of decree for allowance of attorney fees where advisory verdict of jury received, see ante ¶ 1117.

¶ 1128. A decree against an executor on his accounting, where nothing appears to put in question the jurisdiction of the probate court, cannot be attacked collaterally on the merits in a suit on the executor's bond.—Holden v. Lathrop, 65 Mich. 652.

¶ 1129. Where an administrator had, with the assets of the estate, purchased claims against the estate and assigned them to his sister, the decedent's widow, and a judge of probate, acting as commissioner, had allowed the claims, and had afterwards ordered the allowance of the administrator's final account, it was held that in an appeal from this order by one of the next of kin and heirs at law, evidence of the purchase and assignment could not be excluded as impeaching the award of the judge of probate, as commissioner. Such evidence would have tended to show fraud and collusion in the administrator in permitting the allowance of the claims in favor of the widow, and he cannot claim that a decision thus obtained is unimpeachable and a defense.—Grovier v. Hall, 23 Mich. 7.

§ 355. Reopening, rehearing and supplemental accountings.

¶ 1130. The probate court has authority to order a rehearing of an administrator's account, on a showing of mistake or fraud, under the provisions of Act No. 271, Pub. Acts 1905.—Davis v. McCamman, 165 Mich. 287.

¶ 1131. A petition to reopen the settlement of an estate so as to charge the administrator with certain assets, which, it was alleged, he had omitted to charge to himself, is properly denied, when filed twelve years after the parties in interest had attained majority, and in a case where there could have been no fraudulent concealment by the administrator, as the files and records of the probate court showed the nature of the decedent's interest in such assets.—Duryea v. Granger's Estate, 66 Mich. 593.

¶ 1132. Where an executor refuses to turn over the residue to residuary legatees because of certain equities he himself claims and a settlement is finally made which is free from fraud, a subsequent reopening of the estate for accounting cannot be had.—In re Kilbourne's Estate, 173 Mich. 258.

¶ 1133. Where a hearing on the allowance of an administrator's account is reopened for the purpose of pursuing a single inquiry, it is not error for the probate court to refuse to admit evidence not pertinent to said inquiry, although said evidence might have been competent if offered at the original hearing.—In re Norton's Estate, 169 Mich. 531.

¶ 1134. Under Comp. L. 1871, § 4496, authorizing the probate court, after payment of debts and certain other charges and expenses, to assign the residue of the estate to such other persons as are entitled by law to the same, and section 4497, providing that in such decree the court shall name the persons, and the proportions to which each may be entitled, and such persons shall have the right to demand and recover their respective shares from the executor or administrator, or any person having the same, where executors have received their discharge, without fraud or collusion, and have never had possession of the balance of the purchase price of the interest of deceased in his partnership business, which was sold to the partner, and the order of distribution stated that the distributees should look to such partner for the balance of the purchase price, the executors cannot be compelled to render an accounting to the next of kin for such uncollected portion of the purchase price, the remedy being against the partner.—McDermott v. Copeland, 9 Fed. 536.

XIII. SHARES IN THE ESTATE; DISTRIBUTION, PAYMENT AND DELIVERY.

A. IN GENERAL; DUTY, TIME AND MANNER OF PAYMENT OR DELIVERY.

§ 356. Shares and interests in estates in general.

Assignability of shares or expectancies, see post § 357.

Rights or title of assignee or transferee, see post § 358.

Adultery as bar to right of surviving spouse, see post § 359.

Prerequisites to distribution, see post § 360.

Devises and specific bequests, see post § 362.

Mode and medium of payment, see post §§ 363-367.

Liability for bequest improperly delivered or paid, see post § 368.

Recalling payment or delivery, see post § 369.

Disposal of assets of foreign estates, see post § 370.

Liability of heirs, devisees and distributees for debts, see ante, VIII.

Sale or subjection of lands to pay legacies charged under will, see ante §§ 260, 261

Distribution by agreement and rights of distributees thereunder, see ante, I.

Right to possession of property of estate by person other than representative, see ante, V, F.

Right to possession of realty of heirs and devisees, see ante ¶¶ 428, 429.

Rights of heirs and distributees to follow property for debts, see ante § 138.

Right of heirs in contracts drawn payable "to heirs," see also ante § 71.

Title of heirs and persons entitled to distributive shares, see also ante ¶¶ 183, 186, 187.

Statutory provision as to lands devised or assigned to heirs for payment of debts, see ante § 225.

Right and title of heirs in mortgages, see also ante § 60, ¶¶ 193-196.

Right and interest of heirs in realty, see also ante ¶¶ 199, 203.

Rights of legatees to award in condemnation proceedings, see also ante ¶ 271.

Effect of devise or grant subject to mortgage, see ante § 148.

Payment and satisfaction of claims and distribution among creditors, see ante, VI, D.

Necessity of distribution before discharge, see post ¶¶ 1204, 1205.

Partition by probate court, see post §§ 394-396.

Probate proceedings for determination of heirship, see post §§ 397, 398.

General substantive law of intestate devolution and shares and persons entitled thereon, see Descent and Distribution.

Persons entitled to distribution and order and degrees and shares to which they succeed, see Descent, II-VI.

Wills and shares under wills, including construction of wills and implications from disposal by will, see Wills.

Abatement and ademption of legacies, see Wills, VI, H, I.

Construction of and implications from will as to adjustment of advancements, see Wills, VI, G.

Lapse of legacies and substitution or disposal as residue, see Wills, VI, E.

Words in will designating the persons to take and their respective shares, and construction and implications of will, see Wills, VI.

Rights of devisee under foreign probate to be heard in administration proceedings, see Wills, V.

Rights of devisee of life estate, see Life Estates, II.

Distributee of note which was portion of estate as "creditor" protected against unfiled mortgage, see Chattel Mortgages § 45, ¶ 192.

Effect of antenuptial agreement releasing share as widow, see Husband and Wife, I.

Statutory provisions as to distribution of personalty, see Jud. Act, chap. LVII, § 1 et seq., Comp. L. 1915, § 13913 et seq.

Disposition of proceeds of sale of realty remaining as surplus on final settlement of accounts, see Jud. Act, chap. LIX, § 36, Comp. L. 1915, § 14022.
Liability of property given to legatees and devisees for payment of debts and exemption of specific devises and legacies, see Jud. Act, chap. LII, §§ 25-29, Comp. L. 1915, §§ 13797-13801.
Deposit with county treasurer of money belonging to unknown or nonresident distributees and procedure to obtain, see Jud. Act, chap. LVII, §§ 34-37, Comp. L. 1915, §§ 13946-13949.

§ 357. Assignability of shares or expectancies.

Right of heirs to transfer or assign mortgages, see also ante ¶¶ 194-196.
Bargains between heir and attorney, see also Attorneys ¶ 95.

¶ 1135. Any one but the executor may purchase the claims of legatees.—Owen v. Potter, 115 Mich. 556.

¶ 1136. An heir's agreement to sell his expectant interest in his ancestor's estate is unenforceable either at law or in equity.—Stevens v. Stevens, 181 Mich. 438.

§ 358. Rights or title of assignee or transferee.

Procedure against heirs' grantees on recourse to lands for payment of claims, see ante § 228.
Lands in hands of heirs' grantees as assets for payment of debts, see ante § 215.
Remedy and procedure by assignees, see post § 380.
Right of representative to sell personalty after disposal of it by distributees, see also ante ¶ 386.
Right of grantee of heir to restrain representative from disposing of his lands for payment of debts, see ante ¶ 679.

¶ 1137. Where one who bargains for the interest of an heir agrees also to pay the debts of the estate he gets the full interest of such heir, whatever it may be.—Kennedy v. Shaw, 43 Mich. 359.

¶ 1138. The grantee of a residuary legatee may defend his title without showing the payment of the antecedent bequests.—Chapman v. Craig, 37 Mich. 370.

¶ 1139. An assignment, by the other heirs, to H., of "all their right and interest in and to the share of the whole of the estate remaining as is hereinafter specified" followed by a paragraph assigning the remaining estate to the parties giving to H. four-fifteenths thereof, entitles him to the four-fifteenths only, since the assignment referred to the estate "hereinafter specified" and hence conveyed only the assignor's rights in the share allotted to him.—Lasley v. Preston, 132 Mich. 208.

¶ 1140. One of several heirs filed a bill to set aside a sale made by him of his interest in the surplus of the estate after the payment of certain legacies, on the ground of alleged false representations made to him as to the purchase of the interest of others of the heirs, including the one who made such representations, and as to his probable interest in such surplus. On the hearing it was established by a fair preponderance of the evidence that complainant was not induced to sell his interest by any false representations, but that he was anxious to sell, and sold voluntarily fearing pending litigation, and with full knowledge of the condition of the estate. Held, that this is not a case where relief can be granted upon the ground of inadequacy of consideration; that complainant preferred to take the sum received rather than incur the expense of litigation in which the estate was involved, the result of which was uncertain; that it is of no consequence, therefore, whether the purchasers of his interest made much or little, nor can the rights of either party be affected in this regard by considering the total amount of profits made from the entire purchases by the defendants.—Dakin v. Rumsey, 104 Mich. 636.

§ 359. Bigamy or adultery as bar to right of surviving spouse.

Bigamy as bar to right of surviving spouse, see Comp. L. 1915, §§ 14618, 14619.

¶ 1141. A widow is not barred from her rights in her husband's estate by living in a state of adultery with another man without any form of marriage ceremony under Comp. L. 1915, §§ 14618, 14619, providing that no surviving spouse who at the time of the death was living with another person in a bigamous relation shall take any interest in the property of the deceased.—In re Dettman's Estate, 195 Mich. 231.

§ 360. Prerequisites to distribution.

¶ 1142. When commissioners have made their report upon claims against an estate, and the administrator has paid all that was allowed, and the time has expired for presenting more, except upon special application to the probate court on cause shown, it is the duty of the administrator to turn over the property to the heirs and distributees, and he may do so without waiting for an order of the probate court requiring him to do so.—Brown v. Forsche, 43 Mich. 492.

¶ 1143. It is necessary, before an estate is distributed, that debts payable shall be computed and paid and that taxes exacted by the state shall be computed and paid.—Colvin v. Jones, 194 Mich. 670.

¶ 1144. Distribution of a decedent's estate may be made by an executor or administrator before and even without the issue of an order therefor.—Willard v. Van Leeuwen, 56 Mich. 15.

§ 361. Time for distribution.

Priority of legacy over claims of creditors where legatee is widow accepting legacy in lieu of dower, see ante ¶ 669.

Time for payment of legacies, see Wills, VI.

Time for payment of legacies by representative, see Jud. Act, chap. LVI, § 1, Comp. L. 1915, § 13883.

Extension of time for payment of legacies and procedure to obtain, see Jud. Act, chap. LVI, §§ 2-4, Comp. L. 1915, §§ 13884-13886.

¶ 1145. The statute contemplates that an administrator in ordinary cases will collect the assets, pay the debts, and close the estate within eighteen months. The parties interested have a right to have their shares distributed at that time, and if there is sufficient money on hand to pay the debts, the administrator is not justified in delaying distribution for the purpose merely of collecting money securely invested.—Ward v. Tinkham, 65 Mich. 695.

¶ 1146. There is nothing in the statute that requires an administrator to delay the distribution of an estate under an order of the probate court until the expiration of the time for an appeal; and the administrator who in good faith distributes the estate in accord with such an order is not liable for the loss sustained by one distributee through an erroneous order of the probate court.—Ernst v. Freeman's Estate, 129 Mich. 271.

¶ 1147. The probate court cannot extend the time within which a residuary legatee, who is also executor, is required by the will to pay legacies.—Durfee v. Abbott, 50 Mich. 479.

§ 362. Devises and specific bequests.

¶ 1148. An executor has no right to withhold his assent to the legatee's immediate possession of specific bequests, unless there is a deficiency of assets; such assent is presumed from his leaving the legatee in possession, and cannot be revoked arbitrarily.—Eberstein v. Camp, 37 Mich. 176; Atwood v. Frost, 51 Mich. 360.

¶ 1149. Specific bequests vest at the testator's death and are not dependent upon any order of distribution or allotment by the probate court; the identical thing given is severed from the bulk of the testator's property by the operation of the will from his death.—Proctor v. Robinson, 35 Mich. 284.

¶ 1150. Specific bequests, especially if needed for household or husbandry purposes, should be delivered at once to the legatee, unless likely to be needed to satisfy claims on the estate.—Eberstein v. Camp, 37 Mich. 176.

¶ 1151. A residuary devisee of lands takes the title thereto subject to the payment of debts and legacies, and unless the land is taken by the executors for the purposes of administration he may take and defend possession from the time the will is probated.—Chapman v. Craig, 37 Mich. 370.

¶ 1152. The consent of the executor to the devisees' taking possession of the devised estate before determination of their liability to contribute towards the debts of the estate is unnecessary.—Atwood v. Frost, 59 Mich. 409.

§ 363. Mode and medium of payment.

Set-off or application against debts owing, see post § 364.

Deduction and adjustment of advancements and hotchpot, see post § 365.

Payment or delivery into trust for heir, see post § 366.

Showing and record to support payment to guardian or representative of heir, see post § 367.

Payment of legacy by promissory note of representative, see also ante ¶ 1073.

¶ 1153. The probate court can properly make no order requiring a legatee of money to accept anything but money in satisfaction of the legacy.—Michigan Home Missionary Society v. Corning, 164 Mich. 395.

¶ 1154. Where a will bequeaths $5,000 in trust, both the trustees and the beneficiary have a right to require the executors to pay over that sum in cash.—Michigan Home Missionary Society v. Corning, 164 Mich. 395.

¶ 1155. Where a mortgage was given by will to the testator's wife for life and the remainder over to his son, and the two were appointed executors, it is entirely competent for them to hold the mortgage as a legacy instead of assets, and their possible liability to be called on to contribute as legatees in the event of failure of assets would not prevent this.—Proctor v. Robinson, 35 Mich. 284.

¶ 1156. Where a probate court enters an order approving the turning over by the executors of a note to trustees in discharge of a trust fund created by the will, such order rests upon the consent of the trustees.—Michigan Home Missionary Society v. Corning, 164 Mich. 395.

§ 364. ——Set-off or application against debts owing.

Right to cast descent of land from one to other to offset debts, see Descent § 27, ¶ 61.

¶ 1157. The distributive share due an heir from personal estate may be applied by an administrator in payment of a debt due the estate by the heir.—Marvin v. Bowlby, 142 Mich. 245.

§ 365. ——Deduction and adjustment of advancements; hotchpot.

Jurisdiction of probate court to determine advancement, see post ¶ 1174.

What are loans and what advancements, see Descent § 27.

Interpretation and construction of will respecting advancements, see Wills, VI, G.

Best and secondary evidence as to advancements, see Evidence § 136.

Rule for bringing advancements into hotchpot, see Comp. L. 1915, §§ 11800-11805.

¶ 1158. Advancements are not matters of contract but are exclusively within the ancestor's control.—Power v. Power's Estate, 91 Mich. 587.

¶ 1159. Advancements in a proceeding to determine the rights of legatees are not to be treated as debts, but as gifts to apply as legacies.—McClintock's Appeal, 58 Mich. 152.

¶ 1160. Money paid to a child for which a promissory note is taken, while presumed to be a loan, may be given the character of an advancement by provision in a trust deed if such intention clearly appears in the deed. —Sprague v. Moore, 130 Mich. 92.

¶ 1161. Moneys paid to a child for which promissory notes are taken and moneys paid on paper indorsed for the benefit of beneficiaries, are not to be considered as advancements under a trust deed which provides that all debts due from the beneficiaries to the grantor shall be part of the estate and further that obligations entered into for the benefit of any beneficiary shall bear interest and be charged to such beneficiary's share.—Sprague v. Moore, 130 Mich. 92.

¶ 1162. An intestate executed for the consideration of $1 a deed to his son of valuable property, and on the same day, in a separate paper, certified that he executed such deed as a portion of his son's patrimony, giving also the value of the property conveyed. Held, that this was an advancement, within How. St., §§ 5780, 5781, and that the grantee's knowledge that his father gave him the land as an advancement was not essential. —Power v. Power's Estate, 91 Mich. 587.

¶ 1163. A nephew who has a one-third interest in a remainder, after a life estate in the widow with power to use so much as she shall need, may, on distribution after the widow's death, properly be charged with a payment of $1000 made to him by the widow who was also executrix, where the evidence shows that the amount was charged against the estate and the jury find it was intended by the widow as a gift to be paid out of the estate.—In re Mallary's Estate, 127 Mich. 119.

§ 366. ——Payment or delivery into trust for heir.

¶ 1164. The executors of a will by a written instrument acknowledged and recorded set aside a past-due bond and mortgage to be held by them in trust to meet a legacy. There was no evidence of consent on the part of the legatees, or any order of court on the subject. Held, not be an irrevocable act such as was necessary to transmute the property.—Sherman v. Jerome, 120 U. S. 319, 30 L. ed. 680, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 577.

§ 367. ——Showing and record to support payment to guardian or representative of heir.

¶ 1165. Where an election to take under the statute rather than under the will of her deceased husband is filed for a widow by her guardian within six months after an order adjudging the widow incompetent, there is sufficient before the court to satisfy the probate judge of her incapacity to act for herself.—In re Andrew's Estate, 92 Mich. 449.

¶ 1166. An administrator's petition that an order be entered nunc pro tunc confirming an election by his decedent's guardian to take under the statute for his ward, instead of under her husband's will, was denied by the court, which, however, found that "said guardian had declared in open court that he would elect for his ward to take under the statute instead of the will," and that such election "was made and filed with the court's knowledge and consent." Held, that the finding was sufficient record of such election, and had the same effect as if the record of election had been on the day of the filing.—Bassett v. Durfee, 87 Mich. 167.

§ 368. Liability for bequest improperly delivered or paid.

Liability of representative for surrender of estate to one of several claimants, see also post ¶ 1179.

¶ 1167. An executor intrusted with the duty of keeping a legacy for a minor heir until she was of age paid it over to her guardian while she was still a minor. Held, that the payment did not discharge the executor, and that if the guardian did not pay the legacy to his ward when she became of age, the executor still remained liable.—Hinckley v. Washtenaw Probate Judge, 45 Mich. 343.

§ 369. Recalling payment or delivery.

¶ 1168. When an administrator assents to the possession of assets by distributees who are entitled thereto, he cannot reclaim the property unless it is needed for the payment of debts.—Kennedy v. Shaw, 43 Mich. 359.

§ 370. Disposal of assets of foreign estates.

Wills probated abroad and foreign wills, see ante § 16.

¶ 1169. Under Comp. Laws 1897, § 9284, relating to ancillary administration in Michigan, the estate must be disposed of in accordance with the directions contained in the will of the deceased having her domicile in another state.—In re Steven's Estate, 171 Mich. 486.

¶ 1170. Where the will of a person dying and domiciled in another state makes property located in Michigan subject to all debts of the estate, and all the property of the deceased in the other state is specifically devised and bequeathed, the Michigan court is authorized to order the transmission of funds derived in ancillary administration to the court of the other state.—In re Steven's Estate, 171 Mich. 486.

B. REMEDIES AND PROCEDURE; ENFORCEMENT OF ORDER TO PAY.

§ 371. Jurisdiction and procedure in general.

Conflicting claims and contests, see post § 372.
Construction of will incident to distribution, see post § 373.
Remission of ancillary estate to domicile, see post § 374.
Petition, procedure, decree and its effect, see post §§ 375-377.
Enforcing decree or agreement for distribution, see post §§ 378-379.
Remedy and procedure by assignees, see post § 380.
Equitable remedies and relief, see post § 381.
Garnishment, bill, or other remedy to reach shares for creditors, see post § 382.
Relative jurisdiction of probate and circuit courts in general, see ante § 9.
Right of heirs to maintain ejectment, see also ante ¶ 985.
Jurisdiction of chancery to restrain representative from making distribution, see ante ¶ 44.
Jurisdiction over distribution of property beyond state, see ante ¶ 78.

¶ 1171. When all the debts of an intestate have been paid, and the administrator is discharged, the assignment of the property to the heirs and next of kin, required by statute, is a mere formality, which it is the duty of the court to make and which nobody can contest.—Dickison v. Reynolds, 48 Mich. 158.

¶ 1172. The probate court has jurisdiction of a petition by a legatee and devisee to order the executor to turn over possession of the property.—Langrick v. Gospel, 48 Mich. 185.

¶ 1173. The probate court has jurisdiction to direct the payment of a specific legacy if such payment is withheld.—Byrne v. Hume, 86 Mich. 546.

¶ 1174. Under Comp. Laws 1897, § 9457, the probate court is expressly authorized to determine all questions as to advancements made or alleged to have been made by the deceased.—In re Simon's Estate (Appeal of Simon), 158 Mich. 256.

¶ 1175. Under Comp. Laws 1897, § 9443, the administrator has authority prior to the closing of the estate to initiate proceedings for the determination of heirship and partial distribution, and the probate court has jurisdiction to authorize the administrator to make a partial distribution of the estate after reserving sufficient assets to satisfy creditors' claims and necessary expenses of administration.—Michigan Trust Co. v. McNamara, 167 Mich. 406; In re McNamara's Estate, Id.

¶ 1176. If an executor appointed by the probate court of the state, but who has left the state, is properly charged in his account with all that came into his hands and which was not distributed according to law, it is within the power of the probate court to order him to distribute that amount or to pay it to his successor in trust.—Michigan Trust Co. v. Ferry, 228 U. S. 346, 57 L. ed. 867, 33 Sup. Ct. Rep. 550; reversing 175 Fed. 667, 681.

§ 372. ——Conflicting claims and contests.

¶ 1177. The authority given by How. St., § 5964, to probate courts to make decrees assigning estates to those by law entitled to receive them confers, it seems, the power to adjudicate between contesting claimants.—Knapp v. Knapp, 95 Mich. 474.

¶ 1178. Where two parties claim the right to the proceeds of sale of an estate after final distribution, the administrator should collect the property, and then proceed in the usual course to have the question of distribution properly determined.—Crane v. Beedle, 95 Mich. 524.

¶ 1179. In the absence of an agreement between contesting claimants, or an adjustment of differences between heirs, the administrator is not authorized to surrender the estate to one claimant, or close it up, except in the usual course.—Crane v. Beedle, 95 Mich. 524.

§ 373. ——Construction of will incident to distribution.

Bills for construction of wills in general, see Wills, VI, J.

¶ 1180. How. St., §§ 5964, 5965, providing that after the payment of debts, expenses of administration, etc., the probate court shall assign the residue of the estate to those entitled, gives probate courts jurisdiction in the settlement of estates to construe wills.—In re Reid's Estate (Glover v. Reid), 80 Mich. 228; Byrne v. Hume, 84 Mich. 185, affirmed on rehearing, 86 Mich. 546.

¶ 1181. After an estate is settled and is before the probate court for distribution, that court has jurisdiction to interpret the various provisions of a will, but not otherwise.—Dudley v. Gates, 124 Mich. 440.

¶ 1182. The probate court has power to construe wills for certain purposes, and must necessarily do so in distributing estates.—Parkinson v. Parkinson, 139 Mich. 530.

§ 374. Remission of ancillary estate to domicile.

Domiciliary, ancillary and foreign administration in general, see ante §§ 15-17.

¶ 1183. It is entirely within the discretion of the probate court granting ancillary administration to determine whether the residue of the estate shall be distributed among heirs there or remitted to the principal administration for distribution.—In re Steven's Estate, 171 Mich. 486.

§ 375. Petition, parties, notice, and hearing for distribution.

Evidence and procedure in general, see post § 376.

Decree, effect and conclusiveness, see post § 377.

Pleadings in proceedings by assignee, see post ¶ 1196.

¶ 1184. How. St., §§ 5964, 5965, giving the probate court the jurisdiction and power to construe wills in determining the distribution of estates in the hands of executors, contemplate notice in some way to persons interested.—Canfield v. Canfield, 118 Fed. 1.

¶ 1185. Under Comp. L. 1897, § 9448, How. St., 2nd ed., § 11149, requiring notice of a hearing upon a petition for distribution of property of an intestate, an order of the probate judge, upon petition by an administratrix, assigning the widow the property, is void where no order appointing a time for a hearing was made, and no notice of the application was given.—Rich v. Victoria Copper Mining Co., 147 Fed. 380.

¶ 1186. Where there is a will duly allowed and probated, disposing of the entire estate of a decedent, the heirs at law, as such, have no interest in any further proceedings in the settlement of the estate.—Labar v. Nichols, 23 Mich. 310.

¶ 1187. Where a legatee's legacy is directed to be paid, and there is a surplus for distribution beyond what is necessary to meet it, and there is no reason to suppose there can be contingent claims which will reduce the assets so as to affect his legacy, he has no right to interfere with the distribution. And where the legal presumptions are all against the existence of any contingent liability, one seeking to intermeddle with the settlement must show affirmatively such facts as will overcome the presumption, and show that he is likely to be injuriously affected, before he be permitted a standing in court.—Labar v. Nichols, 23 Mich. 310.

§ 376. ——Evidence and procedure in general.

Evidence in ejectment by heir for lands disposed of by representative, see ante ¶ 814.

Presumptions and evidence of completion of distribution, see also post ¶¶ 1210, 1211.

Action on bond of representative after refusal to make distribution as ordered, see post ¶ 1221.

Relation of coheirs as authority to make binding admissions for each other, see Evidence §§ 407, 408.

¶ 1188. Money paid to a son for which he gives a promissory note is presumed to be a loan rather than an advancement.—Sprague v. Moore, 130 Mich. 92.

¶ 1189. Circumstantial evidence is proper in determining whether advancements were made under a will; the omission of a precise man to enter a charge against his estate can be shown for what it is worth.—McClintock's Appeal, 58 Mich. 152.

¶ 1190. A testator's certificate that he has advanced to an heir a specified sum over and above all offsets to date is not admissible in evidence that such an advancement was made. But if the payment is otherwise proved the certificate is admissible to show the testator's purpose to treat it as an advancement.—McClintock's Appeal, 58 Mich. 152.

§ 377. Decree, effect and conclusiveness.

Procedure to enforce decree and recover shares, see post § 378.

Conclusiveness of probate court partition proceedings, see post § 395.

Effect of order of distribution on the continuance of widow's allowance, see ante ¶¶ 357-358.

Conclusiveness of decree in suit on representative's bond against sureties, see also post ¶ 1234.

Appeals from decree, see Probate Courts, III; and see also note, ante § 197.

Review of circuit order respecting distribution or payment of money to distributees, see Appeal § 28.

¶ 1191. Where it appears that after due notice an estate has been distributed and the administrators discharged in accordance with a decree, an amendment to such decree where a demurrer has been sustained on appeal will not be given, as sec. 549, subsec. 143, Comp. Laws of 1897 as amended by Public Act No. 299 of 1909, which apparently gives such right in all cases, is merely declaratory of the pre-existing practice in the circuit courts.—Macomber v. Cottrell, 171 Mich. 371. (Bird, J., dissenting.)

¶ 1192. The widow and heirs of a decedent entered into an agreement in the probate court for the division of the property.

Later, the probate court, by order, allowed the administrator's account assigning the personal property professedly in accordance with the agreement. Held, that the agreement was not a mere stipulation authorizing further proceedings in the probate court, but was a complete agreement, fixing the rights of the parties, and the order allowing the administrator's account did not bar a subsequent action on the agreement.—Garvin v. Stone, 152 Mich. 594.

§ 378. Procedure to enforce decree and recover shares.

Trover by devisee against representative to recover value of growing crops, see also ante ¶ 395.

¶ 1193. Where several heirs are jointly interested in a note which belonged to the testator, one of the heirs may not bring and maintain an action of assumpsit for his share of the note, as adjudged by a decree of the probate court, under Comp. Laws 1897, § 9444, as amended by Pub. Acts 1903, No. 177, How. 2nd ed., § 11155, providing that in the decree shall be designated the persons and proportions to which each shall be entitled, and that such persons shall have the right to recover their respective shares from the executor and administrator or any other person having the same or any part thereof, as but one suit should be maintained to avoid splitting the cause of action.—Jensen v. Gamble, 191 Mich. 233.

§ 379. Enforcement of agreements as to distribution.

¶ 1194. The probate court is not the tribunal to adjudicate specific performance or other relief upon a wife's failure, after her husband's death, to carry out her contract to receive a conveyance, mortgage and bequest in lieu of claims against his estate.—Dakin v. Dakin, 97 Mich. 284.

¶ 1195. The probate court has not power to decree specific performance of an agreement by heirs for the settlement of an estate, if such agreement is valid, nor can it cancel the agreement if invalid.—Shurte v. Fletcher, 111 Mich. 84.

§ 380. Remedy and procedure by assignees.

Rights and titles of assignees and grantees, see ante § 358.

¶ 1196. A declaration by the assignee of an heir's share of an estate against an administrator for his distributive share of the assets must allege facts showing that defendant has been acting as administrator and has thus become liable.—Basom v. Taylor, 39 Mich. 682.

§ 381. Equitable remedies and relief.

¶ 1197. Where the plaintiff's claim can be sued at law, or is within the jurisdiction of the probate court in the settlement of an estate, equity will not take jurisdiction thereof.—Cole v. McFall, 48 Mich. 227.

¶ 1198. There is no adequate remedy at law either to set aside an order of distribution of a probate court procured by the fraudulent suppression of a will, or to protect the fund.—Ewing v. Lamphere, 147 Mich. 659.

¶ 1199. A court of equity has jurisdiction of a suit by the administrator and heirs of an insane decedent against the wife and children of a deceased guardian of decedent to marshal the assets of the estate and to bring such assets into the probate court to be distributed according to law, the theory of the bill involving an intricate and complex accounting covering a long period of years.—Elwell v. Pierce, 200 Mich. 479.

¶ 1200. In a suit to enjoin foreclosure of a mortgage held by the defendant under an order of distribution the fact that the mortgage note was not inventoried with the mortgage is immaterial, for its production by the legatee at the hearing leads to the presumption that it was among the assets of the estate, and was, with the mortgage, transferred to the legatee.—Crow v. Conant, 90 Mich. 247.

§ 382. Garnishment, bill or other remedy to reach shares for creditors.

Liability of heirs, devisees and distributees for debts, see ante, VIII.

Persons and property subject to garnishment in general, see Garnishment, II.

Staying bill by legatee's creditor to reach legacy, where legatee is indebted to estate and administration still pends, see Creditors' Suits, ¶ 135.

¶ 1201. An administrator cannot be garnished, but he may be made defendant to a bill filed by an heir's judgment creditors to prevent paying over to an heir his portion of the estate until complainants' debt is satisfied.—Earle v. Kent Circuit Judge, 92 Mich. 285.

¶ 1202. In a suit by a judgment creditor to reach property alleged to be equitably subject to his claim, it was contended by the complainant that defendant's wife was the owner of a certain mortgage at the time of her death, and that defendant and his two children should share equally therein. It did not appear that the wife's estate had been administered, and testimony that, during her lifetime, she had turned the mortgage over to her son, was not contradicted. Held, that it could not be said that the husband was entitled to a distributive share of the mortgage.—Shelden v. Shattuck, 108 Mich. 344.

XIV. DISCHARGE; LIABILITIES ON BONDS.

§ 383. Discharge in general.

Validity and effect of discharge order, see post § 384.

Presumptions and evidence, see post § 385.
Liability on bonds, see post §§ 386-393.
Liability of representative to account after having been made trustee to carry out provisions of will, see also ante ¶ 1060.
Necessity for representative to account after discharge, see also ante ¶ 1058.
Right to administration de bonis non after discharge of original representative, see ante ¶¶ 26, 27.
Liability to account after discharge received without fraud or collusion, see ante ¶ 1134.
Completion of administration by filing an executor's bond as residuary legatee, see also post ¶¶ 1222, 1223.
Appeals to circuit court from order of discharge, see Probate Courts, III.
Writ of error from circuit court judgment on appeal to supreme court, see Appeal.
Discharge of administrator where estate consists of personalty of less than five hundred dollars in value, see Jud. Act, chap. LIII, § 26, Comp. L. 1915, § 13844.
Filing of papers and certificate of enrollment on completion of estate proceedings, see Prob. Ct. Rule 17.

¶ 1203. The duties of an executor or administrator do not necessarily cease upon the final settlement and approval of his accounts unless the record shows his formal discharge from his trust.—Root v. Beymer, 146 Mich. 692.

¶ 1204. An estate cannot be held to be fully settled, and the executor's or administrator's duties as such closed, until the executor has paid the debts of the estate and the legacies provided for in the will, and filed with the judge of probate evidence in some form of such facts.—Buss v. Buss' Estate, 75 Mich. 163.

¶ 1205. Executors are not discharged from their bond by an order of distribution until the estate is distributed.—Cranson v. Wilsey, 71 Mich. 356.

¶ 1206. Before an executor is entitled to a discharge from official responsibility as such, on the ground that the fund coming into his hands as executor has, pursuant to the terms of the will, become converted into a trust fund, for which he is only liable as trustee to account in a court of equity, he must show some act done to change the character of his holding, and that the fund is properly placed.—In re Sanborn's Estate, 109 Mich. 191.

¶ 1207. The final account of an executrix, who was also life tenant, with limited powers over the corpus of the estate, was stated in 1872, showing a balance in her favor. She died eight years later without having asserted any claim for payment and a year before death applied for a discharge stating that nothing remained to be settled. Held, that the claim was barred on the ground of laches for such balance.—Smith v. Blindbury, 66 Mich. 319.

¶ 1207a. An estate is properly assigned to the sole devisee, and the executors discharged, where the latter have refused to file their account, in obedience to an order of court, after the parties in interest have adjusted the affairs of the estate to their satisfaction.—In re Lambie's Estate, 112 Mich. 118.

§ 384. ——Validity and effect of order.

Appeals from probate court, see note, ante § 197.

¶ 1208. Where an administratrix with the will annexed filed her first account showing that she had paid out considerably more money than she had received, a part of the order of the court in allowing the account which recites that the administratrix was discharged is a nullity because without jurisdiction, no petition for discharge being filed.—In re Young's Estate, 144 Mich. 663.

¶ 1209. An order of probate court discharging an executrix and canceling her bond does not bar a legatee who was not a party from the right to have an administrator de bonis non to protect her legacy.—Cole v. Shaw, 134 Mich. 499.

§ 385. Presumptions and evidence.

Presumption of due and legal performance of official duties by probate court and representatives in settling estate, see also Evidence § 38, ¶ 228.

¶ 1210. After a lapse of long time, to wit, thirty years, it is presumed that the executrix who received the proceeds of land has fully settled with the heirs for their shares.—Barlage v. Detroit, G. H. & M. R. Co., 54 Mich. 564.

¶ 1211. Where a widow as executrix receives money belonging to the estate as land, being an award for condemnation, it is presumed that she accounts for it, and if she does, the heirs, in receiving it, waive all errors. And it is the same in legal effect if the heirs do not receive the money specifically awarded to them, but on final settlement are paid their equivalent shares.—Barlage v. Detroit, G. H. & M. R. Co., 54 Mich. 564.

§ 386. Obligation, breach and liability on bonds.

On special bonds for real estate sale, see post § 387.
On bonds of residuary legatees to dispense with further administration, see post § 388.
Liability of sureties, see post § 389.
Defenses open to sureties, see post § 390.
Remedies and procedure on bonds, see post §§ 391-393.

Necessity and sufficiency of bond for issuance of letters, see ante §§ 35, 36.
Liability of representative on bond for failure to pay allowed claims, see ante ¶ 595.
Effect on liability of order permitting bond to be prosecuted for default of representative, see ante ¶ 839.
Liability on bond of representative where order of settlement is disregarded, see ante ¶ 1116.
Probate bonds and prosecution thereof, see Jud. Act, chap. LXIII, §§ 1-19, Comp. L. 1915, §§ 14119-14137.
Liability of representative on bond for failure to account, see Jud. Act, chap. LXII, § 11, Comp. L. 1915, § 14114.
Liability of representative on bond for failure to pay debts after order of distribution to creditors, see Jud. Act, chap. LVI, § 12, Comp. L. 1915, § 13894.
Liability on bond to pay all debts given to prevent sale of realty by person interested in estate, see Jud. Act, chap. LIX, § 11, Comp. L. 1915, § 13997.

¶ 1212. The condition in an administrator's bond that he shall perform all orders and decrees of the probate court by the said administrator to be performed "in the premises," has relation only to the estate of which he is administrator and does not extend to an order, though in terms addressed to him, which relates to another estate.—Robbins v. Burridge, 128 Mich. 25.

¶ 1213. An administrator is not liable on his bond for the amount owed by him to his intestate when at the time of his appointment he was insolvent and remained insolvent during the period of his administration, under Comp. L. 1897, § 9433, which exempts administrators from liability for uncollectible debts of the estate.—Sanders v. Dodge, 140 Mich. 236.

¶ 1214. Where executors ordered to distribute wrongfully convert property to the use of one of their number, action lies on their bond until they have assumed the character of trustees.—Cranson v. Wilsey, 71 Mich. 356.

¶ 1215. Under a will containing a bequest to two infants to vest at majority and meanwhile directing the executors to invest the fund and interest thereon in real estate mortgages, an order for distribution was made, but the executors instead of investing the fund converted it to the use of one of their number. Held, that an action for such conversion would lie on their bond. The order, not having been obeyed, did not change the character of their possession from that of executors to that of trustees.—Cranson v. Wilsey, 71 Mich. 356.

¶ 1216. An administrator's bond has no independent force apart from the administration proceedings, and if a liability is barred which it was meant to secure, action on the bond to enforce that liability is barred also.—Biddle v. Wendell, 37 Mich. 452.

¶ 1217. Where suit on an executor's bond was brought at the instance of a minor's guardian to recover what the minor was entitled to from the testator's estate, it is a complete defense that the minor on his majority settled the whole claim with the executor, receiving payment partly in cash and partly by note; and it makes no difference that when such settlement was made the guardian had not settled his trust account.—Cheever v. Congdon, 34 Mich. 296.

§ 387. ——On special bonds for real estate sale.

Necessity and sufficiency of special sale bond, see ante § 232.

¶ 1218. Suit on administrator's bond given on sale of real estate is not barred by insufficient recovery on general bond.—Durfee v. Joslyn, 92 Mich. 211.

¶ 1219. The bond given by an administrator on sale of real estate is only an additional security for the moneys that came into his hands and does not supersede or affect the general bond.—Durfee v. Joslyn, 92 Mich. 211.

¶ 1220. An action on the general bond of an executor is not prerequisite to a suit on a bond given by him on a sale of real estate.—White v. Schaberg, 131 Mich. 319.

¶ 1221. After an executor's sale of realty, made by order of the probate court, has been confirmed without opposition, the executor cannot refuse to obey its order to distribute the proceeds to the devisees on the ground that the sale was irregular; and in an action on his bond for such refusal this defense is not open to the executor or to his securities.—Clark v. Fredenburg, 43 Mich. 263.

§ 388. ——On bonds of residuary legatees to dispense with further administration.

Title of residuary legatee as executor, see ante § 66.
Effect of bond by residuary legatee as executor, see ante § 220.
Effect of bond of residuary legatee as executor on rights and lien of creditors, see ante § 220.
Necessity for inventory or account by residuary legatee as executor, see ante ¶ 330.
Bond when executor is residuary legatee, see Jud. Act, chap. LII, § 37, Comp. L. 1915, § 13809.

¶ 1222. An executor's bond as residuary legatee ends the ordinary course of administration.—Durfee v. Abbott, 50 Mich. 479; Wheeler v. Hatheway, 54 Mich. 547.

¶ 1223. Giving bond as executor and residuary legatee substantially completes administration; and the intervention of the judge of probate afterwards, if admissible at all, is never essential unless, perhaps, where the executor disputes a claim.—Durfee v. Abbott, 50 Mich. 278.

¶ 1224. When the executor is also residuary legatee, it is optional with him to give the usual executor's bond, or the bond prescribed by statute, conditioned to pay all the testator's debts and legacies; if the latter is given, he becomes at once the absolute owner of all the estate, both real and personal, with all the rights and remedies of an absolute owner, and subject to none of the restrictions and accountabilities of an ordinary executor. But he and his sureties are personally bound to pay all the debts and legacies whether there are sufficient assets or not.—Hatheway v. Weeks, 34 Mich. 237; McElroy v. Hatheway, 44 Mich. 399; Durfee v. Abbott, 50 Mich. 278.

¶ 1225. An executor who has given bond as residuary legatee cannot be sued on such bond by a creditor until the expiration of the time fixed by the probate court for the presentation of claims against the estate; he being chargeable only with such claims as that court has approved and allowed.—Blackmore v. Kent Probate Judge, 95 Mich. 446.

¶ 1226. An executor and residuary legatee, who has given the bond prescribed by statute conditioned to pay all the debts and legacies, cannot refuse to pay the debts and legacies on the ground that the assets are worth less than he supposed; and equity cannot relieve him from the risk he took, nor can he be released from his bond on surrendering the assets for ordinary administration.—Hatheway v. Weeks, 34 Mich. 237.

¶ 1227. An order by the probate court exacting of an executor a bond in a penal sum specified, with sufficient sureties, "as required by the statute in such cases made and provided," is a sufficiently definite requirement of a residuary legatee's bond as distinguished from any other, for the purposes of a suit on it.—Hatheway v. Sackett, 32 Mich. 97.

§ 389. Liability of sureties.

Defenses open to sureties, see post § 390.
Necessity and sufficiency of justification on bond, see ante § 37.
Liability of sureties on bond of residuary legatee as executor, see also ante ¶ 1224.
Defenses open to sureties, see post § 390.
Right of surety to subrogation, see Subrogation, I.
Right of surety to discharge, see Jud. Act, chap. LXIII, § 17, Comp. L. 1915, § 14135.

¶ 1228. The liability of the sureties on an administrator's bond is coextensive with that of their principal and extends no further than his.—Ward v. Tinkham, 65 Mich. 695.

¶ 1229. The liability of sureties in an administrator's bond arises only after the default of their principal is fixed, and then only under the terms of the obligation entered into by them.—Grady v. Hughes, 80 Mich. 184.

¶ 1230. It is in all cases the duty of the bondsmen to see that their principal fulfils the obligation of the bond, and the creditors of an estate are not obliged to sue sooner than within the time set by the statute of limitations.—Avery v. Miller, 81 Mich. 85.

¶ 1231. Under Comp. L. 1897, § 9320, which provides that the executor of an executor shall not as such have any authority over the first estate but on the death of the first executor further administration may be granted to such person as the probate court may judge proper, the sureties on the bond of an administrator are not liable for his default in regard to the prior estate notwithstanding the bond is conditioned on his performance of all orders and decrees of the probate court in the premises, and the probate court has ordered payment by him of a given sum to the administrator de bonis non of the previous estate.—Robbins v. Burridge, 128 Mich. 25.

¶ 1232. A petition by an administrator stating that his intestate was executor in another estate and that he desired to file the final account of his intestate in that estate, which account is filed and approved, and the administrator ordered to pay a given sum to an administrator de bonis non of the former estate and a subsequent order granting leave to the administrator de bonis non to sue and prosecute upon the bond of the later administrator for his failure to pay the given sum granted over the objections of the sureties who appeared in court, is not res adjudicata on the right of recovery against the sureties.—Robbins v. Burridge, 128 Mich. 25.

§ 390. Defenses open to sureties.

Liability of estate for obligation of decedent as surety, see ante ¶ 514.

¶ 1233. A surety for an executor is not, it seems, precluded, by his failure to resist the application for leave to sue on the bond, from resorting to any legal defense against a probate decree against his principal for payment of which the bond is sued.—Holden v. Lathrop, 65 Mich. 652.

¶ 1234. An executor's sureties, notified to show cause why his bond should not be sued, cannot, in suit thereon, assail on the merits a decree jurisdictionally passed on his accounting.—Clark v. Fredenburg, 43 Mich. 263; Holden v. Lathrop, 65 Mich. 652.

¶ 1235. A petition by an administrator stating that his intestate was executor in another estate and that he desired to file the final account of his intestate in that estate which account is filed and approved and the administrator ordered to pay a given sum to an administrator de bonis non, does not estop the sureties on the administrator's bond who were not parties to the proceedings from asserting that the rendering of the account and the payment to the administrator de bonis non are not part of the administrator's duties.—Robbins v. Burridge, 128 Mich. 25.

§ 391. Remedies and procedure on bonds.

On residuary legatee's bonds, see post § 392.
On predecessor's bond, see post § 393.
Necessity and sufficiency of bond for issuance of letters, see ante §§ 35, 36.
Necessity and sufficiency of special bond for sale of realty, see ante § 232.
Right of representative of obligee's estate to sue on bond drawn to decedent, his heirs or assigns, see also ante ¶ 224.
Procedure on bonds drawn to decedent as obligee, see ante ¶ 270.
What determined by order of court permitting bond to be prosecuted, see ante ¶ 839.
Objection that second suit on bond was brought instead of scire facias on judgment rendered on former suit, see Appeal ¶ 1259.
When suit may be brought on bond, see Jud. Act, chap. LXIII, §§ 3-6, Comp. L. 1915, §§ 14121-14124.
In whose name suit on bond to be brought, see Jud. Act, chap. LXIII, § 7, Comp. L. 1915, § 14125.
Permission of court to prosecute suit on bond, see Jud. Act, chap. LXIII, § 8, Comp. L. 1915, § 14126.
Judgment, execution and disposition of moneys recovered in action on bond, see Jud. Act, chap. LXIII, §§ 9-11, Comp. L. 1915, §§ 14127-14129.

¶ 1236. One whose claim against an estate has been allowed but has not been paid within the time limited makes a prima facie case in an action on the administrator's bond if he shows an inventory of assets exceeding the debts and an order for the payment of the debts; but defendants may rebut this by showing a deficiency of assets.—Hilton v. Briggs, 54 Mich. 265.

¶ 1237. Where, in a suit upon an administrator's bond, defendants' testimony shows that the administrator received certain sums of money belonging to the estate, and there is no evidence to the contrary, it is proper for the court to find the fact established.—Wayne Probate Judge v. Joslyn, 101 Mich. 551.

¶ 1238. In an action on the special bond of an administrator given for the sale of real estate, where the law of the case permits admission of evidence that the final accounting included money received from such sale and also permits a recovery of such amount, it is not proper to regard the order on final accounting as "the sole and conclusive evidence" of the rights of the estate against the administrator.—Wayne Probate Judge v. Joslyn, 101 Mich. 551.

¶ 1239. Where a bequest was "to the corporation of the village of A.," and the order of the probate court giving permission to sue on the executor's bond, for its nonpayment, was "to the common council of the village of A," and the declaration on the bond was "for the use and benefit of the village of A," it was held that there was no variance that would prevent the admission of the order in evidence. The common council of the village is, for the purpose of the suit, identical with the village or the corporation of the village.—Hatheway v. Sackett, 32 Mich. 97.

§ 392. ——On residuary legatee's bond.

Effect of bond of residuary legatee as executor on rights and lien of creditors for payment of claims, see ante § 220.
Suit against residuary legatee by one surety on his bond for accounting and administration of estate in equity, see ante ¶ 1062.
Bond when executor is residuary legatee, see Jud. Act, chap. LII, § 37, Comp. L. 1915, § 13809.

¶ 1240. The rule that proceedings at law to enforce payment of a deficiency on foreclosure cannot be taken without leave of the court in which the foreclosure was had (How. St., § 6703), does not apply to an action begun by leave of the probate court upon the bond of the mortgagor's residuary legatee.—Culver v. Detroit Superior Court Judge, 57 Mich. 25.

¶ 1241. Whether or not good pleading requires the declaration on a residuary legatee's bond to aver the granting of an order of the probate court, giving permission to sue on the bond, the omission to do so is not available by way of objection to the proof of such permission; the defect, if it is so, is technical, and advantage can be taken of it only by demurrer.—Hatheway v. Sackett, 32 Mich. 97.

¶ 1242. An action at law for the nonpayment of a legacy may be brought upon the bond given under Comp. L. 1871, § 4366, How. St., § 5836, by an executor who is also residuary legatee. It is not an action on the bequest itself, nor specifically and strictly for the legacy. The giving of the bond is a prima facie admission of sufficient assets, and is an express undertaking to pay the legacies, and an order by the probate court for payment is not necessary as a precedent to suit upon it.—Hatheway v. Sackett, 32 Mich. 97.

¶ 1243. The residuary legatee, in a proceeding against him by a general legatee upon his bond, has a right to examine the plaintiff fully as to what the latter has received from the testator's estate.—Wheeler v. Hatheway, 54 Mich. 547.

¶ 1244. If a mortgage upon the estate of a testator is a bona fide indebtedness which the residuary legatee is bound to pay, it cannot be deducted from the amount of a general legacy in an action on the residuary legatee's bond.—Wheeler v. Hatheway, 54 Mich. 547.

§ 393. ——On predecessor's bond.

Accountability for representative and predecessor, see ante, X, E.

¶ 1245. Where leave has been granted to an administrator with the will annexed to sue upon his predecessor's bond, and suit is brought in the name of the probate judge for the use of a legatee who has no definite vested interest, the record may be amended so as to show the administrator as the party in interest for whose use it is sued.—Cranson v. Wilsey, 71 Mich. 356.

XV. PARTITION BY PROBATE COURT AND DETERMINATION OF HEIRSHIP.

§ 394. Partition by probate court.

Conclusiveness of findings, see post § 395.
Collateral attack and impeachment, see post § 396.
Probate proceedings for determination of heirship, see post §§ 397, 398.
Proceedings by representative to partition as surrender of possession of realty, see ante ¶ 399.
Distribution of shares in estate, see ante, XIII.
Appeals to circuit court from partition orders of probate court, see Probate Courts, III.
Writ of error from circuit judgment on appeal to supreme court, see Appeal.
Right and propriety of partition in equity, see Partition, I.
Proceedings in probate court for assignment of dower, see Dower §§ 40, 41.
Necessity and sufficiency of notice of proceedings to assign dower, see Dower § 40.
Partition by probate court, see Jud. Act, chap. LVII, §§ 6-24, Comp. L. 1915, §§ 13918-13936.

¶ 1246. Partition in the probate court is restricted to the lands to be assigned to the heirs or devisees after the payment of debts. —Campau v. Campau, 19 Mich. 116.

¶ 1247. The probate court may be required to make partition of lands devised by a will dividing the real estate among the heirs; but the partition does not change the nature of the title to each share.—Haddon v. Hemingway, 39 Mich. 615.

¶ 1248. Partition before expiration of a dower interest is not forbidden by Comp. L., § 4515 (How. St., § 5983); that statute only provides for making partition afterwards.—Persinger v. Jubb, 52 Mich. 304.

¶ 1249. Proceedings for partition need not be held invalid on review merely because the petition therefor was made by an administratrix, as such, so long as it appeared that she had a dower interest and was guardian for minor heirs; the misdescription could have been amended at any stage by leave of the judge of probate.—Persinger v. Jubb, 52 Mich. 304.

¶ 1249a. The register of probate, in 1817, had authority under the territorial act of January 19, 1811 (Ter. Laws, p. 160), to make partition of real estate among tenants in common.—Willetts v. Mandlebaum, 28 Mich. 521.

§ 395. ——Conclusiveness of findings.

Appeals from probate courts, see note, ante § 197.
Conclusiveness of decree of distribution, see ante § 377.

¶ 1250. On an issue of title by virtue of an assignment to heirs and a partition in probate court, slight showing that an assignment has been made to the heirs to support a partition among them will be sufficient to support a finding of title by partition, where it appears that the probate court has proceeded to partition the lands among the heirs.—Dickison v. Reynolds, 48 Mich. 158.

¶ 1250a. Partition by the probate court under a will and determination by it of the estate taken by each devisee is as final as though made by a court of equity.—Parkinson v. Parkinson, 139 Mich. 530.

§ 396. ——Collateral attack and impeachment.

¶ 1251. A recital in a decree for partition that a specified party is entitled to share cannot be collaterally attacked even though it be an adjudication that ought properly to have preceded the decree, and though the person named be illegitimate and therefore precluded by statute from claiming any part of the estate.—Persinger v. Jubb, 52 Mich. 304.

¶ 1252. A decree of the probate court making partition among the devisees under a will and assigning to one a life estate, consented to by the devisee and not appealed from, cannot be questioned in a proceeding in chancery by alleging that the will was void and that therefore title in fee was taken under the statute.—Parkinson v. Parkinson, 139 Mich. 530.

¶ 1253. A probate partition assigning a life estate to testator's daughter with remainder to her children, yet unborn, according to invalid provisions of the will, cannot be attacked collaterally by such children in ejectment for the land claiming as heirs of the testator on the theory that because of the invalidity the devise lapsed to the heirs; since when it lapsed at testator's death they were not his heirs, being yet unborn, and therefore were not necessary or proper parties to the probate partition.—James E. Scripps Corporation v. Parkinson, 186 Mich. 663.

§ 397. Probate proceedings for determination of heirship.

Effect and conclusiveness of finding, see post § 398.

Authority of representative to initiate proceedings for determination of heirship, see also ante ¶ 1175.

Presumption as to testacy and heirs, see also Descent § 5.

Deed as evidence of heirship, see Evidence ¶¶ 2580-2582.

Determination of heirship by probate court, see Jud. Act, chap. LVII, §§ 25-29, Comp. L. 1915, §§ 13937-13941.

Right of spouse living in bigamous relations on proceedings for determination of heirship, see Comp. L. 1915, §§ 14618, 14619.

¶ 1254. It seems that the probate court in a proceeding under Laws 1887, Act No. 278, providing for adjudication by the probate court who are the legal heirs and representatives, "and entitled to (decedent's) lands" on application by "any person claiming an interest in the lands," has no jurisdiction to determine the rights of one adopted by proceedings under an unconstitutional statute on the understanding and promise that he would receive the property as decedent's son, which understanding was adhered to and lived up to.—Wright v. Wright, 99 Mich. 170, per Long, J., court being divided.

¶ 1255. How. St., § 5990 et seq., providing that, "when any person shall have deceased having title to any lands in this state," specified proceedings may be had to determine "who are or were the legal heirs of said deceased person," is not limited to cases where the ancestor died after the passage of the act.—Miller v. Davis, 106 Mich. 300.

¶ 1256. The orders of the probate court in proceedings for the determination of heirship under How. St., § 5992c, are not appealable.—Lorimer v. Wayne Circuit Judge, 116 Mich. 682.

¶ 1256a. The proper remedy of any heir whose interest was injured by the partition of an estate by the register of probate under the territorial statute of January 19, 1811 (1 Ter. Laws, p. 168), was an appeal under the statute.—Willetts v. Mandlebaum, 28 Mich. 521.

§ 398. ——Effect and conclusiveness of finding.

See note, ante § 197.

¶ 1257. Where one dies intestate, leaving no issue, but a widow and a father, the title of the widow to a life estate and that of the father to the remainder after the death of the widow vested immediately upon the death of the intestate, and the only effect of an order of the probate judge, at the close of administration, reciting that intestate had left no father and assigning the lands of decedent to the widow, was to award the widow the possession of the property.—Rich v. Victoria Copper Mining Co., 147 Fed. 380.

¶ 1258. The finding of the circuit court on appeal from the probate court in the proceedings under Act No. 278, Laws of 1887, for the determination of heirship is not conclusive and is but prima facie evidence of the facts found.—Wright v. Wright, 99 Mich. 170.

¶ 1259. The findings of the probate court in proceedings on heirship under How. St., § 5992c, are not conclusive on anybody and are merely prima facie evidence of the facts found which may be ignored by resort to original evidence in later proceedings.—Lorimer v. Wayne Circuit Judge, 116 Mich. 682.

¶ 1260. The findings of the probate court in proceedings for the determination of heirship under Comp. L. 1897, §§ 9469-9471, are binding on no one and are merely evidence of the facts found which may be ignored by resort to original evidence in any subsequent proceedings.—Fisher v. Gardnier, 183 Mich. 660.

¶ 1261. A determination by the probate court under §§ 9469-9471, Comp. Laws 1897, §§ 11180-11182, How. St., 2nd ed., as to who are the heirs of a deceased person is not res adjudicata, but merely prima facie evidence of the facts found.—Hawley v. Dibble, 184 Mich. 298.

ESTIMATES.

Cross-References.

Estimates—

Under terms of contracts as basis for performance or payment, see Building Contracts, II, VI; Contracts, VI, VII; Public Contracts, IV; Sales.

As basis for local improvements, see Local Improvements, III; Drains, II.

As opinion evidence, see Evidence, VI; Indictment, VIII.

ESTOPPEL.

TREATS of the preclusion of a person to assert facts by previous solemn writings establishing the fact, which he cannot question, or by previous representations and conduct on his part contrary to or inconsistent with the attempted assertion. It excludes estoppels by judgment (see Former Adjudication) and also excludes equitable estoppels and laches as applied specifically to the particular matters involved in the various specific topics. Only the general principles of equitable estoppel are treated in this topic. See division III.

Analysis.

I. In general.

§ 1. Definition and distinctions.
§ 2. Policy and grounds of estoppel.
§ 3. Capacity or disability to be estopped.
§ 4. Matters of law or questioned facts.

II. By record or deed; and effect on after-acquired titles.

§ 5. By records and judgments in general.
§ 6. Nature and requisites of estoppel by deed.
§ 7. ——Mutuality.
§ 8. Quitclaim deeds.
§ 9. Partition deeds.
§ 10. Deeds and grants by public or public officers.
§ 11. Deeds by representatives, trustees, etc.
§ 12. Mortgages.
§ 13. Persons estopped; parties and privies.
§ 14. Facts concluded by deeds, mortgages and bonds.
§ 15. ——Recitals.
§ 16. ——Upon grantees and mortgagees.
§ 17. ——Upon sureties.
§ 18. Inurement of grantor's after-acquired title to grantee.
§ 19. ——Sufficiency of the deed; quitclaims.
§ 20. ——Of mortgagor's after-acquired title to mortgagee.
§ 21. ——Titles which will inure.
§ 22. ——Title accruing to grantor's wife.
§ 23. Pleading or urging and proof of estoppel.

III. Equitable estoppel and estoppel in pais.

A. General Principles and Elements.

§ 24. Nature and policy of doctrine.
§ 25. Mutuality.
§ 26. Certainty and ambiguity.
§ 27. Element of falsity, mistake or deception.
§ 28. Element of knowledge or intent.
§ 29. Element of reliance and misleading.
§ 30. Equal knowledge or independent judgment.
§ 31. Disadvantage, detriment or change suffered.

B. Representations and Appearances Creating Estoppel.

§ 32. Actual or constructive representations; silence.
§ 33. ——Appearance of title or right in third person.
§ 34. ——Drafting or witnessing another's deed or will.
§ 35. Acquiescence or inaction or nonclaim.
§ 36. Inconsistent claims or positions, accepting benefits.

§ 37. Disclaimers and disavowals.
§ 38. Receipts, releases and acknowledgments.
§ 39. Repudiation or impeachment of one's own title.
§ 40. Impeachment of one's own deed or contract.
§ 41. Recognition of right or adoption of obligation.
§ 42. Contracts and promises as estoppels.
§ 43. Contracting or doing work as recognition or assent.
§ 44. Corporate and official acts.
§ 45. Indirect representations, representations to third persons.
§ 46. Acts done as agent or functionary for another.
§ 47. Representations and acts by agents or third persons.

C. Operation, Scope and Effect; Pleading, Proof and Practice.

§ 48. In general.
§ 49. Recognition and effect at law.
§ 50. Scope, extent and duration of estoppel in general.
§ 51. Validation or cure of illegal or defective acts.
§ 52. Persons and privies concluded.
§ 53. Persons protected or entitled to claim estoppel.
§ 54. Persons sustaining diverse capacities, rights and trusts.
§ 55. Particular matters; cross-references.
§ 56. Modes of urging estoppel.
§ 57. Necessity and sufficiency of pleading estoppel.
§ 58. ——In actions at law.
§ 59. Burden of proof and evidence of estoppels.
§ 60. Court and jury questions.
§ 61. Instructions and requests.

I. IN GENERAL.

§ 1. Definition and distinctions.

[Note. There are numerous doctrines and rules of preclusion which are sometimes called estoppels or in respect to which the word "estoppel" is sometimes used. It is not the province of a digest to go into juristic distinctions, but for the purpose of compilation the doctrine that one is precluded by an Election and Waiver of one right in favor of another has been treated in the topic so named, which see.

The conclusion of questions between parties by being merged or embodied into a contract or settlement is treated in Accord and Satisfaction; Account Stated; Releases; Contracts, VIII.

The exclusion of parol or extraneous evidence as to what was meant or intended by terms of a contract or conveyance is a doctrine of evidence and is treated in Evidence, V.

The exclusion as against bona fide takers of claims and defenses whereof they had no notice or of defenses in favor of persons taking with notice is treated in Notice and Record of Title, I; Negotiable Instruments, XIII.]

Nonoperation to conclude matters of law, see post § 4.

(3 Mich. Dig. 22)

Conclusiveness of accord, see Accord and Satisfaction §§ 13, 14.

Conclusiveness of certificate of architect as to performance, see Building Contracts § 10.

Ratification of acts of agents, see Agency, II, C.

¶ 1. Estoppel is a bar which precludes a person from denying the truth of a fact which has in contemplation of law become settled by the act of the party himself, express or implied.—Detroit Sav. Bank v. Loveland, 168 Mich. 163.

§ 2. Policy and grounds of estoppel.

Equitable basis of estoppels in pais or equitable estoppels, see post § 24.

Necessity that estoppels be mutual, see post §§ 7, 25.

¶ 2. Estoppels arise upon equities and are enforced for their protection.—Ferguson v. Millikin, 42 Mich. 441; De Mill v. Moffat, 49 Mich. 125; Bell v. Todd, 51 Mich. 21.

¶ 3. The doctrine of estoppel is applied to prevent injustice, not to relieve parties from the obligations of their contracts.—Ladd v. Brown, 94 Mich. 136.

§ 3. Capacity or disability to be estopped.

Effect of officials' acts and doings to estop government, see also post ¶ 209.

Estoppels by or against counties, municipalities or the state, see Counties; Municipal Corporations, III; State of Michigan, I.

Estoppel of the public to make constitutional question, see Constitutional Law § 29, ¶¶ 145-147.

Immunity of county from plea of estoppel in action on officer's bond, see Officers VII.

Disability of state to prosecute authorized acts as nuisances, see Nuisances, I.

Capacity of married women generally and in respect to their separate estates, see Husband and Wife, IV.

Disabilities of infants and incompetents, see Infants, I, III; Insane Persons, II-IV.

§ 4. Matters of law or questioned facts.

Invalid contract as estoppel, see post § 42.

¶ 4. A married woman who, to protect her separate property from her husband's creditors, voluntarily includes it in a bill of sale by him to a third person, is not estopped from claiming it as against the vendee, who knew her object; the mistake being one of law.—Bloomingdale v. Chittenden, 75 Mich. 305.

¶ 5. Where, because of an erroneous assumption of law on all sides, a corporation had mistakenly listed its property for taxation in a township where it was not legally taxable, it is not thereby estopped from contesting the validity of the tax.—Township of Portsmouth v. Cranage Steamship Co., 148 Mich. 230.

II. BY RECORD OR DEED; AND EFFECT ON AFTER-ACQUIRED TITLES.

Inconclusiveness of recitals of amount of consideration to exclude evidence thereof, see also Evidence § 161.

Statements and recitals in deeds and grants as admissions against interest, see Evidence § 383.

§ 5. By records and judgments in general.

[Note. The conclusiveness of judgments and decrees to settle the facts involved and passed on is fully treated in Former Adjudication, which see.]

Estoppel to make collateral attack on judgment otherwise open to it, see Judgments, VII.

Conclusiveness of bankruptcy decree and discharge, see Bankruptcy § 13.

Conclusiveness of return to writs, see Attachment § 75; Executions, IX; Process, II, D; Certiorari §§ 56-61; Mandamus, V.

Effect of audit of claim by county or municipal auditing board, see Counties, VI; Municipal Corporations, XIV.

Audit and allowance of claim by county as estoppel of claimant to make additional claim, see Counties § 47.

¶ 6. The certificate of the county clerk to the acknowledgment of a recognizance of bail is not a record made in open court, so as to be unimpeachable.—Spencer v. Fish, 43 Mich. 226.

§ 6. Nature and requisites of estoppel by deed.

[Note. Estoppel by act or representation in which the deed is a part of the appearance created is an equitable estoppel rather than one by deed. See post, III, B. The estoppel by deed is a "preclusion to deny that which has been asserted by an agreement or conveyance under seal," and when the assertion is not made or implied from the deed the estoppel is treated as one in pais.]

Various kinds of deeds, see post §§ 8-12.

Sufficiency of deeds and mortgages to carry after-acquired titles, see post § 19.

¶ 7. A grantor is concluded by the terms of his deed whether he understands them or not.—White v. Smith, 37 Mich. 291.

¶ 8. A grantor and those claiming under him are estopped as against his grantee from disputing the description in the deed on the ground of a supposed mistake by the grantor as to his boundary.—Fahey v. Marsh, 40 Mich. 236.

§ 7. ——Mutuality.

See also post ¶ 20.

Mutuality in estoppels in pais, see post § 25.

¶ 9. A lease with a reservation which afterwards becomes the subject of an agreement between the lessor and a third party, in which the lessee has no interest, may be admissible in evidence to show the character of that agreement, but it will not operate to bind the lessor by way of estoppel in favor of the third party; estoppel must be mutual.—Chope v. Lorman, 20 Mich. 327.

§ 8. Quitclaim deeds.

Matters precluded against grantee, see post § 16.

Persons estopped, see post ¶ 20.

Inefficacy of quitclaim deeds to support doctrine of inurement of after-acquired title, see post § 19.

Inurement of title coming by quitclaim deed to grantee under earlier warranty deed, see post § 21, ¶ 54.

Effect of recital in quitclaim as an admission by grantee against his interest, see Evidence § 383.

¶ 10. A quitclaim deed does not of itself operate as an estoppel against either the grantor or grantee as to the nature or extent of the title, in an action in ejectment, since it is not an assertion of any particular, or of any title.—Olmstead v. Tracy, 145 Mich. 299.

§ 9. Partition deeds.

Inapplicability of doctrine of inurement of after-acquired title, see post § 19, ¶ 40.

¶ 11. Where some of several tenants in common have attempted a voluntary partition among themselves, their deeds to each other, though void as to the tenants not concerned, are valid among themselves, operating by way of estoppel.—Campau v. Campau, 19 Mich. 116.

§ 10. Deeds and grants by public or public officers.

¶ 12. The plan on which Detroit was originally laid out left many triangular parcels of land which the "governor and judges" set aside for public purposes to be thereafter declared by the city council. In 1834 the governor and judges granted unreservedly to Ste. Anne's Church the use of a particular triangle for religious purposes. In 1837 the city, acting under a power conferred by its charter, exchanged certain lands with the church, and in doing so gave it the triangle. Held that, whether the city had any title to the triangle at that time or not, it is estopped from denying its conveyance, because in 1842 it was given full legal title to the lands covered by the old plan; and after the lapse of forty years, during which the city made no adverse claim, a quitclaim of the property by the church should be sustained.—Cicotte v. Anciaux, 53 Mich. 227.

§ 11. Deeds by representatives, trustees, etc.

Right to question capacity and status as personal representative and collateral questions of capacity, see Estates of Decedents §§ 32, 33-53.

¶ 13. The deed of an administratrix, containing a covenant to warrant the title against any one claiming under the grantor, does not estop her from claiming dower in the premises as widow of the deceased.—Wright v. De Groff, 14 Mich. 164.

¶ 14. A covenant by an administratrix against her own acts, in a deed made by her in her representative capacity, of the lands of her husband's estate, bars or estops her from claiming dower therein.—Wright v. De Groff, 14 Mich. 164.

¶ 15. A widow who as administrator in name but without lawful appointment made a conveyance of property under a supposed administration is estopped from afterwards asserting rights as widow contrary to such conveyance; though subsequently she came back into the title by reconveyance to her but under another who was also estopped.—Damouth v. Klock, 29 Mich. 289.

¶ 16. Where a widow as administratrix and guardian of her three children conveys by warranty deed a part of her husband's estate and in her report to the probate court of the property left for distribution does not mention any outstanding estate nor in the final account claim that any interest in it belongs to her, she is estopped in a suit by the grantee to quiet title to claim that she did not convey her dower interest.—Hunt v. Stevens, 174 Mich. 501.

§ 12. Mortgages.

¶ 17. Where a mortgage is expressly made subject to prior mortgages, their validity cannot be denied by the mortgagor or his assignee in bankruptcy.—Jerome v. McCarter, 94 U. S. 734, 24 L. ed. 136.

§ 13. Persons estopped; parties and privies.

See also ante ¶ 8.

Effect of deed in representative capacity, see ante § 11.

Coming back into title by different right, see ante § 11, ¶ 15.

Persons concluded by judgments, see Former Adjudication, V.

¶ 18. Where a party to a deed is estopped, all other persons claiming under or through him are equally bound by the estoppel.—Lee v. Payne, 4 Mich. 106.

¶ 19. Where a grantor on giving a warranty deed delivers to the grantee an outstanding life-lease held by him, he is estopped from claiming afterwards that the deed did not convey the interest held under the lease; and so are all who claim in privity with the grantor.—Case v. Green, 53 Mich. 615.

¶ 20. Between a quitclaim grantee and a minor grantor, who joined with other common tenants in a quitclaim deed, there exists no relation by which tax titles, outstanding without fault of the grantee and bought in by him, inure to the minor's benefit as common tenant with the minor, treating his quitclaim deed as void because of minority; since the quitclaim deed asserted no title and could be the basis of no estoppel nor of any obligation on the part of the grantee towards the minor to buy in or pay taxes. Accordingly one holding by warranty deed from the grantee is not estopped as defendant in ejectment to set up such tax titles against the minor suing after majority for possession on the theory that his quitclaim deed was invalid.—Olmstead v. Tracy, 145 Mich. 299.

¶ 21. Where, prior to the consolidation of two railroad companies, one of them conveys certain lands by warranty deed with mineral reservations, after which the lands are certified to the state of Michigan in aid of the construction of the road of the other company, and the two companies are consolidated under a new name pursuant to the statute, and the state patents the lands to the new company, which conveys the mineral reservations, the patentee and its grantees are bound by the deed given by the first company.—Deer Lake Co. v. Michigan Land & Iron Co., 89 Mich. 180.

§ 14. Facts concluded by deeds, mortgages and bonds.

As to entire estate passing, see also ante ¶ 19.
As to unreserved minerals, see ante ¶ 21.
Effect of deeds by persons in representative capacity, see ante § 11.
By recitals, see post § 15.
Conclusion of grantees and mortgagees, see post § 16.
Inurement of after-acquired title by estoppel of grantor to assert it contrary to his deed, see post §§ 18-22.
Estoppel by deed to dispute boundaries, see Boundaries § 9.
Release bond in attachment as estoppel to attack attachment or levy, see Attachment § 147.
Admission by giving release bond in attachment, see Attachment ¶ 166.
Preclusion of mortgagor to set up outstanding title as defense to foreclosure, see also Foreclosure, III, A.
To affirm or deny execution and delivery of instrument, see Execution of Instruments, I, III.
Right of purchaser accepting deed under contract to object later to its sufficiency to meet terms of contract, see Vendors and Purchasers, III, VIII.

¶ 22. Where, upon the transfer to defendant partner of firm goods which plaintiff seized under a security bill of sale, defendant has executed a bond conditioned to sell such goods as described in the attached inventory, and to pay the proceeds to plaintiffs up to a certain sum, he is estopped in an action on the bond from saying that certain of the property transferred to him by plaintiffs belonged in fact to others, or that all of the property seized by plaintiffs under the bill of sale was not transferred to him; but if by fraud or mistake articles are included in the inventory which were not in the bill of sale, and which did not come into plaintiff's possession, and which were not transferred to defendant, he and his surety are not estopped from denying that the inventory contained such articles, and they cannot be charged therewith.—Wheeler v. Meyer, 95 Mich. 36.

¶ 23. A mortgagor cannot deny he held the title to the mortgaged premises at the time the same was executed.—West Michigan Park Ass'n v. Pere Marquette R. Co., 172 Mich. 179.

§ 15. ——Recitals.

See also post ¶ 28.
Recitals in simple contracts as estoppels, see post § 42.

¶ 24. A recital which is an essential basis of the contract, such as an enumeration of patents owned for the purpose of fixing the duration of a licensing agreement by their duration, is an estoppel; otherwise where the recital is not material.—Thomson Elec. Welding Co. v. Peerless Wire Fence Co., 190 Mich. 496.

¶ 25. Where an action is not founded upon a mining option and lease, but is collateral to it, facts recited or admitted in such instrument do not operate by way of estoppel.—Houlihan v. Fogarty, 162 Mich. 492.

¶ 26. A recital in a deed by the auditor general that a former deed was erroneously released, is no more than evidence of such fact and is not conclusive against the landowner.—Hoffman v. Silverthorn, 137 Mich. 60.

§ 16. ——Upon grantees and mortgagees.

Facts conclusive on mortgagor, see ante § 14.
Estoppel to deny validity of mortgages described as prior, see ante ¶ 17.
Preclusion of grantee to question mortgage to which deed is subject or which he assumes, see Mortgages, VII.

¶ 27. A foreclosure purchaser who claims title under the sheriff's deed is estopped from denying an erroneous recital therein as to the rate of interest borne by the mortgage.—Dodge v. Kennedy, 93 Mich. 547.

¶ 28. The grantee in a quitclaim deed which recites that a contract to him for the sale of the land has been assigned by him is estopped from bringing an action to support which title under such contract would be requisite.—Smith v. Ryerson, 98 Mich. 588.

§ 17. ——Upon sureties.

[Note. The topic Suretyship treats of the obligations of sureties in general, and should be consulted in this connection, since the measure and conditions of the surety's liability, i. e., the binding effect of the bond, is intimately involved and is the more frequent subject of inquiry.]

¶ 29. Sureties are estopped to deny the facts recited in their obligations, whether true or false.—Brockway v. Petted, 79 Mich. 620.

§ 18. Inurement of grantor's after-acquired title to grantee.

Sufficiency of the deed to invoke the doctrine, see post § 19.
Titles which will inure, see post §§ 21, 22.
Inurement under mortgage, see post § 20.
Deeds and mortgages in terms applying to described property and any to be acquired thereafter by grantor, see Deeds, III, C; Mortgages, III; Railroads, VI.
Effect of after-acquired title in dedicator of land, see Dedication § 3.
Right to assert title previously parted with as ground for recovery in ejectment, see Ejectment ¶ 29.

¶ 30. Where a grantor assumes by his deed to convey a title, and by any form of assurance, whether it be by covenant of seizin and title or by that of quiet enjoyment, obligates himself to protect the grantee in the enjoyment of that which the deed purports to give him, he is estopped from afterwards acquiring or asserting a title and leaving the grantee to sue upon the covenants for redress.—Smith v. Williams, 44 Mich. 240.

¶ 31. A warranty deed from a patentee of the United States, dated and purporting to be executed long before the issuing of the patent, effects an estoppel as against the grantor therein and all persons afterwards claiming title through him, to transmit the title to the grantee therein.—Shotwell v. Harrison, 22 Mich. 410.

¶ 32. One who by his deed has assumed to convey a title and has obligated himself therein to protect the grantee in his enjoyment of it is estopped from asserting as against his grantee an after-acquired title.—Ryan v. United States, 136 U. S. 68, 34 L. ed. 447, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 913.

¶ 33. One who contracts to sell land that he does not own, but title to which he subsequently acquires and conveys by general warranty, cannot in an action of ejectment be heard to say that he had no title when he agreed to sell.—Ryan v. United States, 136 U. S. 68, 34 L. ed. 447, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 913.

¶ 34. Title subsequently acquired by the grantor of a warranty deed inures to the benefit of the grantee.—Dye v. Thompson, 126 Mich. 597.

¶ 35. A grantor who assumes to convey property by a warranty deed when the title is in a third person, will, together with his subsequent grantees, be estopped from setting up against the first grantee, who has been evicted, an after-acquired title, and the after-acquired estate will pass by operation of law to the first grantee.—Donahue v. Vosper, 189 Mich. 78.

¶ 19. ——Sufficiency of the deed; quitclaims.

Warranty deed by entryman before patent, see also ante ¶ 31.

Wife's joinder in deed as affecting her separate rights, see post ¶ 61.

¶ 36. A deed containing covenants of warranty is effective to convey a title subsequently acquired.—Duffy v. White, 115 Mich. 264.

¶ 37. Where a deed, though lacking a covenant of warranty, imports the conveyance of a fee, the doctrine of estoppel permits the grantee to have the benefit of titles subsequently acquired by the grantor.—Pendill v. Marquette County Agric. Soc., 95 Mich. 491.

¶ 38. Where the deed of land purchased from an administrator by a wife with her own money is taken in the name of her husband, who conveys to her by warranty deed, a second deed executed to the husband by the administrator to cure a defect arising out of the proceedings upon which the first one was based enures to the wife's benefit, and a further conveyance from the husband is unnecessary.—Morris v. Jansen, 99 Mich. 436.

¶ 39. A deed in which the covenants of warranty except the acts of the United States, then the fee owner, suffices to draw to the grantee the after-acquired title when the United States confirms title in the grantor, and the fact that after such confirmation the same grantor makes a full covenant deed to another person, is immaterial.—Chapman v. City of Sault Ste. Marie, 146 Mich. 23.

¶ 40. A deed reciting that the parties "have by amicable arrangement divided among themselves the property of the estate of" their ancestor, and that in consideration of one dollar to each in hand paid, they "have granted, sold and conveyed all their right, title and interest" in the land mentioned, does not carry on its face, either expressly or by necessary implication, the statement that the grantors or their ancestor were seized of a title in fee in the premises, and therefore the doctrine of estoppel to assert an after-acquired title against one who claims under the grantee is inapplicable.—Pendill v. Marquette County Agric. Soc., 95 Mich. 491.

¶ 41. A deed made in an exchange of properties will not be set aside because of a tax title outstanding in a third person where the grantor subsequently obtained a quitclaim deed from the tax claimant and he had previously conveyed to the complainant by warranty deed.—Pirgandi v. Fay, 128 Mich. 630.

¶ 42. A quitclaim deed does not operate to convey a title subsequently acquired.—Gadsby v. Monroe, 115 Mich. 282.

¶ 43. A quitclaim deed can never inure to convey any subsequently acquired title not actually owned in equity at the time of the deed.—Frost v. Methodist Episcopal Missionary Soc., 56 Mich. 62; Fay v. Wood, 65 Mich. 390.

¶ 44. A quitclaim deed can never inure to convey any subsequently acquired title which was not actually owned in equity at the time of the deed, but it will convey land thereafter patented if the grantor has already bought and paid for it, and obtained a land-office certificate that passes everything but the formal title.—Frost v. Methodist Episcopal Church Missionary Soc., 56 Mich. 62.

¶ 45. A quitclaim deed does not inure to convey any subsequently acquired title which was not actually owned in equity at the time of the deed.—Fay v. Wood, 65 Mich. 390; People v. Miller, 79 Mich. 93.

¶ 46. The owners of a lot who had joined with owners of adjoining lots in quitclaiming a strip of land off the ends of the lots "for the purpose of a public street" in order to widen the street afterwards acquired title to the adjoining lots by warranty deed. Held, in an action against them for obstructing the street, that they cannot be said to be estopped, through the operation of their quitclaim deed, from claiming the full length of the acquired lots.—People v. Miller, 79 Mich. 93.

¶ 47. A quitclaim deed creates no relation between the grantor and grantee which requires either, as to the other, to pay the taxes on the property included in the deed, though the grantor of such deed claimed that his deed was void for minority and valid as to cograntors who were his tenants in common, and therefore that purchase by the grantee inured to his benefit as tenant in common.—Olmstead v. Tracy, 145 Mich. 299.

§ 20. ——Of mortgagor's after-acquired title to mortgagee.

What titles will inure, see post § 21.

¶ 48. Where plaintiff has no title to land at the time of giving a mortgage containing a warranty of title, and subsequently acquires title, the subsequently acquired title redounds, under the warranty, to the benefit of the mortgagee.—West Michigan Park Ass'n v. Pere Marquette R. Co., 172 Mich. 179.

¶ 49. Where one has gone into possession of land under an oral agreement of purchase which included the payment of a mortgage as part of the price, mortgages the land to a third person, pays the prior mortgage, and subsequently takes a quitclaim deed, before any rights of vendee's creditors had attached to the land, such deed inures to the mortgagee's benefit as against the vendee's creditors, as fully as if the mortgage had contained covenants of warranty of title.—Clark v. Daniels, 77 Mich. 26.

¶ 50. Where a railroad company has mortgaged, before acquiring the title thereto, lands granted in aid thereof, it is afterwards estopped from setting up an after-acquired title against those who claim under the mortgagees.—Tucker v. Ferguson, 22 Wall. (89 U. S.) 527, 22 L. ed. 805.

¶ 51. One who gives a purchase-money mortgage that includes lands not granted to him is not estopped as against the grantors and mortgagees from denying that it covers those lands, if he acquire them afterwards.—Brown v. Phillips, 40 Mich. 264.

¶ 52. A wife's mortgage for her husband's debt of land owned by both in the entirety, being void in its inception, does not estop her or her heirs from asserting the title afterwards vested in her on her husband's death; and How. St., § 8506, relating to foreclosure deed's passing after-acquired title, does not apply.—Naylor v. Minock, 96 Mich. 182.

¶ 53. Under the warranty contained in a mortgage covering a tract of land, with the exception of that part assigned to a widow as dower, the after-acquired title of the mortgagor in the part assigned to the widow inured to the benefit of the mortgagee and his grantees after foreclosure sale, although the question as to whether the expression in the mortgage relating to dower lands excepted the fee or only the life estate, was doubtful.—Caple v. Switzer, 122 Mich. 636.

§ 21. ——Titles which will inure.

Tax titles to other common undivided shares, see ante ¶ 20.

¶ 54. A quitclaim deed, perfecting a mortgagor's title, inures to the mortgagee's benefit under his mortgage.—Gray v. Franks, 86 Mich. 382.

¶ 55. A title subsequently acquired by inheritance held to inure to the benefit of a mortgage made by the owner of a life estate in the land.—Brayton v. Merithew, 56 Mich. 166.

¶ 56. A patent obtained by a mortgagor and vendee in possession inures to the benefit of his mortgagee and vendor.—Haney v. Roy, 54 Mich. 635.

¶ 57. Title obtained by foreclosure will inure to the benefit of the purchaser's grantee by estoppel under his warranty.—Lee v. Clary, 38 Mich. 223.

¶ 58. Where both parties to a conveyance of land that is mortgaged suppose that a title in fee is being transferred, though in fact it is not, and the grantor afterwards purchases the land at the foreclosure sale, he is bound in equity to recognize the grantee's right to a perfected title. And if he further becomes a party to an arrangement whereby a third person takes a deed from the grantee and gives back a mortgage that he, the grantor, disposes of for his own purposes, he is then estopped from disputing that his original deed conveyed title and that his foreclosure purchase related back to it.—La Coss v. Wadsworth, 56 Mich. 421.

¶ 59. Where one who has conveyed land with covenants of warranty acquires at guardian's sale an adverse interest of minor heirs, the title thus acquired inures to the benefit of his grantee.—Pfirrman v. Wattles, 86 Mich. 254.

¶ 60. Plaintiff, a summer resort association organized under Act No. 51, Public Acts 1859, and claiming existence under Act No. 230, Public Acts 1897, gave a mortgage to land in 1889. Foreclosure was had in 1895 followed by a sheriff's deed on execution under a deficiency decree dated February 1, 1897. Since the latter date defendants took plaintiff's place in the control and development of the premises, openly and notoriously under a claim of ownership. Nineteen years after the giving of the mortgage plaintiff sued in ejectment on the ground that the giving of the mortgage was not authorized by a vote of the stockholders as provided for by statute but was made in pursuance of a resolution of the board of directors, and that it had since acquired title. Held, plaintiff could not raise this question in the ejectment suit since the estoppel to claim the after-acquired title prevented.—West Michigan Park Ass'n v. Pere Marquette R. Co., 172 Mich. 179.

§ 22. ——Title accruing to grantor's wife.

Burden of proving that consideration moved to married woman joining in deed, see post § 23.

Title subsequently coming to husband grantor to wife, see ante ¶ 38.

¶ 61. The future interest of a married woman in land held by her husband under a devise for life with remainder to his surviving heirs, does not pass by estoppel by reason of her joinder with her husband in the conveyance of his life interest, where neither her purpose in doing so or that she was benefited by the consideration is shown. —Menard v. Campbell, 180 Mich. 583.

§ 23. Pleading or urging and proof of estoppel.

Pleading and proof of estoppel in pais, see post § 56 et seq.

Pleading estoppel by judgment, see Former Adjudication, VII.

¶ 62. In order to show that the estate of a married woman as remainderman was transferred by estoppel by her joinder with her husband in conveying his life estate, the burden rests on those claiming under the conveyance to show the purpose of the wife in joining therein, and that she was benefited by the consideration.—Menard v. Campbell, 180 Mich. 583.

III. EQUITABLE ESTOPPEL AND ESTOPPEL IN PAIS.

A. GENERAL PRINCIPLES AND ELEMENTS.

§ 24. Nature and policy of doctrine.

See also post ¶ 224.

Equitable basis, see also ante § 2.

Representations and appearances held out creative of estoppel, see post, III, B.

Necessity of mutuality, see post § 25.

Ambiguous or equivocal representations or appearances, necessity that estoppel be certain, see post § 26.

Elements of falsity, mistake or deception, knowledge or intent, reliance, and action to prejudice, see post §§ 27-29.

Necessity of reliance making denial of appearance or representation inequitable, see post § 29.

Doctrine that of two equally innocent parties loss will fall on one making it possible, see Equity § 9.

¶ 63. The doctrine of estoppel rests upon the inequity of permitting one to allege the existence of facts which by his own conduct he has induced another to believe do not exist.—Hubbard v. Shepard, 117 Mich. 25.

¶ 64. An estoppel arises when one by his acts, representations, or admissions, or by his silence when he ought to speak out, intentionally, or through culpable negligence, induces another to believe certain facts to exist and such other person rightfully relies and sets on such belief, so that he will be prejudiced if the former is permitted to deny the existence of such facts.—Kole v. Lampen, 191 Mich. 156.

§ 25. Mutuality.

See also post ¶ 101.

Mutuality in record or deed estoppels, see ante § 7.

¶ 65. Estoppels must be mutual.—Chope v. Lorman, 20 Mich. 327.

¶ 66. There can be no estoppel in favor of those who are not themselves estopped.—Baker v. Johnston, 21 Mich. 319.

¶ 67. The general rule is that, to constitute an estoppel, the statement which is alleged to work the estoppel must have been made to the party who was expected to act upon it, or to his agent, or other person in privity with him.—Palmer v. Sharp, 112 Mich. 420.

¶ 68. A paper signed by a judgment debtor and delivered to the attorney of his creditors, agreeing to compromise the judgment in a certain way, or in default thereof to deliver certain property levied upon in payment, cannot estop him from claiming the levy to be invalid, where it appears that the attorney had no authority to enter into such an agreement, or to compromise the judgment in any manner.—Hickey v. Hinsdale, 12 Mich. 99.

¶ 69. An attorney's suit against a railroad company of which he was a director to recover for professional services cannot be defended on the ground that his claim, by reason of his position and his representations, is inequitable as against an investment company which is the real owner of the road; the investment company not being a party.—Ten Eyck v. Pontiac, O. & P. A. R. Co., 74 Mich. 226.

¶ 70. One cannot repudiate a contract and base an estoppel on it as against the other party any more than he can rely upon the promise while withholding the consideration for it.—Alpena Lumber Co. v. Fletcher, 48 Mich. 555.

§ 26. Certainty and ambiguity.

Words of agent referring to article as "mine" where not used in connection with any question of his ownership as distinguished from the principal's, see post ¶ 218.

¶ 71. Estoppels never arise from ambiguous facts, but must be established by such as are unequivocal and not susceptible of two constructions. — Fredenburg v. Lyon Lake M. E. Church, 37 Mich. 476.

¶ 72. The doctrine of estoppel, based upon direct or indirect assertions, promises or assurances on which another has acted to his prejudice, should be applied only where the facts calling for it are unquestionable, and the wrong to be prevented undoubted.—Maxwell v. Bay City Bridge Co., 41 Mich. 453.

¶ 73. The act of the buyer of logs in reporting the quantity determined by the scaler to the seller for the purpose of fixing the amount due for stumpage does not estop the buyer to question the correctness of the scale on making a claim subsequently for loss of part of the logs by reason of the seller's negligence in handling them under a subsequent contract, where at the time of the earlier transactions the buyer did state that the scale was too low and asked that a new scale be required.—Sullivan v. Ross' Estate, 124 Mich. 287.

¶ 74. Plaintiffs in replevin of property taken under attachment against W, who claimed title until the property was paid for by W, were not estopped to claim such title because one of the plaintiffs stated to the attaching creditor, prior to the attachment, that good title could be obtained from W by a purchaser; as a purchaser could in fact have obtained good title after plaintiffs had been paid.—Schoolcraft v. Simpson, 123 Mich. 215.

§ 27. Element of falsity, mistake or deception.

See also post ¶ 98.

Necessity of misleading influence, see post § 29.

Analogous doctrines of fraud as to elements of falsity and deception, see Fraud, I.

¶ 75. A transaction in which there was no concealment or misunderstanding of facts will not furnish grounds for an estoppel in pais.—Gorham v. Arnold, 22 Mich. 247.

§ 28. Element of knowledge or intent.

See also post ¶¶ 110-156.

Deed made without understanding, see ante § 6.

Equal knowledge or notice as preventing reliance and estoppel, see post § 30.

Acquiescence or inaction evincive of intent without regard to actual intent, see post ¶ 150.

Analogous elements in fraud, see Fraud, I.

¶ 76. To constitute one's statements and acts an estoppel they must have been said and done with full knowledge of the facts.—Going v. Oakland County Agric. Soc., 117 Mich. 230.

¶ 77. In order to create an estoppel in pais, it must appear that the party making the representations knew or was informed that the party to whom they were made intended to rely upon them.—First Nat. Bank v. Marshall & I. Bank, 108 Mich. 114.

¶ 78. A wife is not estopped by inaction from claiming title to her cow as against the vendee of one to whom her husband had without her assent sold it, where, although there was evidence that she learned immediately of the sale made by her husband, it appeared that she was misinformed as to its whereabouts and did not then know where the cow was, nor that the person who afterwards bought from her husband's vendee was contemplating purchase.—Anderson v. Crowley, 96 Mich. 457.

¶ 79. Defendant, having purchased certain exempt property from his debtor, told plaintiff, another creditor, upon inquiry, that he had taken the goods on attachment, but he had no wilful intent to induce plaintiff to act to his detriment. Plaintiff thereupon went to the town where the debtor was engaged in business, several miles distant, and procured from him an assignment of his right of exemption in the goods. Held, in trover for the property, that, as defendant's statement was not of a nature to induce plaintiff to go to such place, and as plaintiff parted with no new consideration and lost no rights after reaching there, and was advised of defendant's claim before bringing suit, defendant was not estopped to claim title under his purchase.—Meisel v. Wells, 107 Mich. 453.

§ 29. Element of reliance and misleading.

See also post ¶¶ 111-115.

Knowledge or reason to expect reliance on statements, see ante § 28.

Equal knowledge or exercise of independent judgment as preventing estoppel, see post § 30.

What amounts to disadvantage or detriment suffered by relying, see post § 31.

Resolution of council rescinded before action on it, see post ¶ 212.

Analogous elements in fraud, see Fraud, I.

¶ 80. There can be no estoppel unless a party is misled to his prejudice by the one against whom it is set up, and does material acts relying upon conduct well calculated to mislead him.—Palmer v. Williams, 24 Mich. 328; De Mill v. Moffat, 49 Mich. 125; Meisel v. Wells, 107 Mich. 453; Murray v. Rugg, 116 Mich. 519.

¶ 81. To entitle a party to insist upon an estoppel he must be able to show that the other party has done something, or represented something, which has had the effect to deceive and mislead him, and which would render it inequitable for the right of such other party to be enforced against him.—Crane v. Reeder, 25 Mich. 303.

¶ 82. There can be no estoppel unless a party is misled to his injury.—Plumb v. City of Grand Rapids, 81 Mich. 381; Fletcher v. Kalkaska Circuit Judge, 81 Mich. 186; Tower v. Township of Somerset, 143 Mich. 195.

¶ 83. An owner of property is not estopped from asserting his ownership in a case where the evidence fails to show that his silence or conduct has misled others to their prejudice, or induced them to do what they would not have done if informed of his rights.—Burdick v. Michael, 32 Mich. 246.

¶ 84. In order to entitle a party to insist upon an estoppel he must be able to show that the other party has done or represented something which has had the effect to deceive and mislead him, and which renders it inequitable for the right of such other party to be enforced against him.—Fletcher v. Kalkaska Circuit Judge, 81 Mich. 186.

¶ 85. There can be no estoppel unless a party is misled to his prejudice by the conduct of the person against whom it is set up, and unless acts are done in reliance upon conduct calculated to mislead.—Thirlby v. Rainbow, 93 Mich. 164.

¶ 86. To raise an estoppel in pais the party must have been induced to act to his disadvantage, so that his situation has been changed in consequence thereof.—Gooding v. Underwood, 89 Mich. 187.

¶ 87. The conduct of the party claimed to have been estopped must have been such as to have misled the party setting up the estoppel into a course prejudicing him or inducing him to do what he otherwise would not have done.—Ladd v. Brown, 94 Mich. 136.

¶ 88. One cannot be estopped from asserting a title against one who has always recognized it.—White v. Hapeman, 43 Mich. 267.

¶ 89. The element of injury must be present where one is misled by reliance on the representations of another against whom an estoppel is urged.—Dean v. Crall, 98 Mich. 591.

¶ 90. An estoppel does not arise where the situation of the person in whose favor the estoppel is claimed to have operated, is no different than it would otherwise have been.—Harlow v. Jaseph, 133 Mich. 500.

¶ 91. Reliance upon the acts and conduct of a grantor and lessor to the injury of the party complaining is an essential element to work an estoppel against the grantee and tenant.—Weller v. Harrison Land Co., 195 Mich. 624.

¶ 92. An estoppel does not arise as a result of statements by a person where the person to whom they are made is not in any way influenced or injured by such statements.—New Era Ass'n v. Kuyat, 191 Mich. 646.

¶ 93. One who has put another into possession of property, together with the muniments of title or indicia of ownership, is not estopped from setting up title in himself as against a purchaser unless it appears that the purchaser relied upon and was misled by such possession, etc.—Stanton v. Estey Mfg. Co., 90 Mich. 12.

¶ 94. The defendant in a chancery suit conceded by his answer that a certain note belonged to a third party. This party afterwards sold it to one who was aware of his concession. But the defendant claimed to have bought it first. Held, that his concession in the suit was no estoppel as against the claim.—Church v. Clapp, 47 Mich. 257.

¶ 95. The omission of claimants of land to put into a case an instrument not in their possession which tended to qualify the estate they claimed, and which the other side ought properly to have produced and had construed, instead of relying on claimants' oral construction, was held not to estop them from urging their claim to the land in a later action.—Thayer v. Arnold, 32 Mich. 336.

¶ 96. A dock owner whose property is injured by the proximity of a bridge is not estopped from claiming damages by the mere fact that his grantor had petitioned fhat the bridge be located in its present position if the bridge company's action was not determined by the acts of the grantor.—Maxwell v. Bay City Bridge Co., 46 Mich. 278.

¶ 97. A man bitten by a dog asked a woman who owned it, and she said it belonged to her. He accordingly sued her. Held, that she would be estopped from denying ownership on the trial if she knew that the inquiry was made for the purpose of finding out who was liable for the injury.—Robb v. Shephard, 50 Mich. 189.

¶ 98. To constitute an estoppel in favor of the tenant and his vendee against a landlord asserting title to personal property after having, in ignorance of his rights, levied upon it as the property of his tenant, there must have been some degree of turpitude in his conduct, which misled the tenant and his vendee to their injury.—Smith v. Sprague, 119 Mich. 148.

¶ 99. A patentee of land adjoining an unmeandered lake containing an unsurveyed island, who applied to the government for a survey and sale of the island, was not estopped by such application from asserting his title to the island, as against a purchaser to whom he had given notice of his ownership and that he would contest the sale.—Church v. Case, 122 Mich. 554.

¶ 100. Where an administrator presented a claim against an estate for services performed by his intestate, and the defendant estate claimed that the claimant was estopped on the ground that the wife of claimant's intestate presented a claim to the commissioners for the same services and testified that her husband had assigned the claim to her, and where claimant administrator was present during that hearing and heard the wife make such claim without entering objection, the claimant was not estopped, the wife having testified on trial at bar that her claim included services performed by her, and where it also appeared that a duplicate of the present claim was filed before the commissioners before the determination of the wife's claim, so that they were not misled.—Bates v. Kuney's Estate, 124 Mich. 596.

¶ 101. Where one of two joint owners of undivided shares in land offers, for himself and his co-owner, to sell their interests, and represents them as estimated to cover a specified acreage, and his offer is not accepted, but an offer made by his co-owner is, his statement as to quantity will not conclusively bind him in a subsequent litigation begun by the purchaser for the partition of the lands, any more than if it had been casually made in oral conversation; and he will not be estopped from denying that his co-owner had the quantity stated, especially if the estimate given by the latter was lower. The purchaser cannot take advantage of the first offer while expressly denying that he claims anything under it.—Alpena Lumber Co. v. Fletcher, 48 Mich. 555.

¶ 102. A wife who did not mislead a creditor and was not responsible for any thing misleading is not estopped to assert her separate rights in property hypothecated for a debt by a conveyance with a reconveyance to her husband under which the creditor levied.—Huot v. Reeder Brothers Shoe Co., 140 Mich. 162.

¶ 103. There is no estoppel to claim a debt from a decedent's estate from the failure of the executrix of the creditor's estate to inventory such claim as assets, where neither the debtor nor his executors were misled by such omission.—Ewers v. White's Estate, 114 Mich. 266.

¶ 104. A letter from a first mortgagee to a second mortgagee stating in effect that unless the second mortgagee pays interest to a specified amount the first mortgagee will foreclose cannot be made the basis of an estoppel, as such letter could not alter the legal rights of a second mortgagee.—First State Bank of Decatur v. Day, 188 Mich. 228; O'Dell v. First State Bank of Decatur, Id.

§ 30. Equal knowledge or independent judgment.

See also ante ¶¶ 92-96, 100, 101.

Knowledge of impossibility of corporate existence as preventing estoppel to deny it, see also Corporations § 12.

Knowledge of want of power rebutting estoppel of corporation to plead ultra vires, see Corporations § 96, ¶ 347.

¶ 105. There can be no estoppel where one is not deceived or misled, but acts upon his own judgment and with knowledge of the facts.—Northern Michigan Lumber Co. v. Lyon, 95 Mich. 584.

¶ 106. A party cannot invoke the aid of the doctrine of equitable estoppel where it appears that the facts were known by both, or that both had the same means of ascertaining the truth.—Sheffield Car Co. v. Constantine Hydraulic Co., 171 Mich. 423.

¶ 107. No estoppel against complainants in a bill to set aside a guardian's deed can be made out by defendants, who have all along dealt with complainants with a full knowledge of the facts in the case.—Houlihan v. Fogarty, 162 Mich. 492.

¶ 108. No estoppel to insist on one's right to cut and remove timber under a contract expressly giving it, if the owner should fail to furnish it according to agreement, can exist in favor of a purchaser of the land whose agent in the purchase had actual notice of the contract and where the other party was in possession of a mill on the land insisting on his rights.—Carey v. Leonard, 141 Mich. 273.

¶ 109. A cobeneficiary under a trust of land is not estopped to say that her conveyance during minority to the other cobeneficiary and a mortgage by such grantee while the trust continued were void because of minority and of the lack of title in the mortgagor, where the opposite party was legally chargeable with notice of the trust and that it was yet in course of execution, and consequently of their lack of title.—Weaver v. Van Akin, 71 Mich. 69.

¶ 110. The seller who has treated title as having passed cannot avoid the estoppel on the ground that the goods were shipped by an agent, and that the latter had made the election to treat the consignment as a sale while in poor health only a short time before his death, and that the theory had been maintained for several months by the principal because he had no knowledge of the terms of the transaction, where the correspondence relating thereto was under the principal's control, and the precise terms might have been promptly ascertained.—McDonald v. Preston Nat. Bank, 111 Mich. 649.

§ 31. Disadvantage, detriment or change suffered.

See also post ¶¶ 125-212.

Avowal of ownership causing suit to be brought accordingly, see also ante ¶ 97.

Necessity of reliance to disadvantage or detriment, see ante § 29.

Indorsee's change of position or parting with value as estopping bank to deny certification of check, see Banking II, D.

¶ 111. To constitute an estoppel in pais the conduct complained of must have induced another to act to his disadvantage, and his situation in consequence thereof must have changed.—Lilly v. Townsend, 110 Mich. 253.

¶ 112. Defendant cannot set up any equitable estoppel to urge infancy against plaintiffs arising from their acceptance, after coming of age, of proceeds of a guardian's unauthorized sale of their lands with no new act by the purchaser on the faith of it.—Ryder v. Flanders, 30 Mich. 336.

¶ 113. If the plaintiff has been induced to incur the expense of litigation in reliance on an apparently legal and valid promise by defendant to pay, and upon a statement by defendant establishing his liability, which, though untrue, plaintiff had reason to believe and to rely upon, the defendant is estopped from denying its truth. Expenditures in litigation may as reasonably constitute the basis of an estoppel as any other expenditures.—Meister v. Birney, 24 Mich. 435.

¶ 114. A representation by M. to B. that certain lumber is the property of a firm, thereby inducing B. to bring an action for conversion against the firm instead of M. will not estop M. from thereafter asserting title to the lumber, upon which B. has levied under his judgment against the firm, where B. had no valid claim against either M. or the firm.—McRae v. Bennett, 113 Mich. 47.

¶ 115. A party will not be estopped to seek correction of a mistake in a party wall agreement whereby a wall already constructed pursuant to a parol agreement was mistakenly granted away, the defendant having parted with nothing on the strength of complainant's mistake.—Eberle v. Heaton, 124 Mich. 205.

¶ 116. An owner who bought land at a time when water flowed in a channel forced by obstruction of the original natural drainway and who knew that the natural servitude was in the original way, cannot claim an estoppel against the highway commissioner to restore the flow in protecting the highway from the diverted flow.—Tower v. Township of Somerset, 143 Mich. 195.

¶ 117. A bank is not estopped from enforcing by attachment its claim against a corporation, merely because such claim is included in a trust mortgage executed by the corporation to secure all of its creditors, where the terms of the mortgage have not been accepted by the bank, and where the execution of the mortgage was not authorized by a majority of the directors or stockholders of the corporation.—Murray v. Rugg, 116 Mich. 519.

¶ 118. A mortgagor was not estopped from foreclosing his mortgage as against a subsequent purchaser of the land to whom he honestly asserted that the land was clear of taxes, and where such purchaser thereafter purchased a tax title obtained upon a sale for taxes which were unpaid at the time of such representation by the mortgagor.—Brown v. Avery, 119 Mich. 384.

¶ 119. A corporation, the successor of a partnership limited, is not estopped to claim that a contract between an officer of the partnership and a salesman representing a third person for the issue of a certain amount of stock in the partnership in alleged consideration for services in procuring the sale of certain patents by such third person to the partnership, pursuant to an arrangement with such third person, is invalid within How. Ann. St., § 2369, because not reduced to writing, where such salesman had no interest in the patents and hence, when the patents were taken over, nothing was retained to the detriment of the salesman.—Dickinson v. Matheson Motor Car Co., 161 Fed. 874.

B. REPRESENTATIONS AND APPEARANCES CREATING ESTOPPEL.

§ 32. Actual or constructive representations; silence.

General elements of representation coupled with reliance, action thereon, and detriment ensuing therefrom, see ante, III, A.

Uncertain, equivocal or ambiguous representations, see also ante § 26.

Representations made in ignorance or without intent that action thereon should be taken, see ante § 28.

Necessity that silence should have induced prejudicial change in position, see ante § 29.

Clothing another with apparent title, right or authority, see post § 33.

Drafting or attesting instruments affecting one's own title without protest, see post § 34.

Inconsistent claims, disclaimers, disavowals, receipts, releases, or acknowledgments, see post §§ 37-41.

Contracts, promises or rendition of services as estoppels, see post §§ 42, 43.
Corporate or official acts, see post § 44.
Acts done as or by or through agents or intermediaries, see post §§ 45-47.
Acquiescence, inaction and nonclaim, see post § 35.
Silence sufficient to raise estoppel, see also ante ¶ 64.
Evidence of representations and action thereon, see post § 59.
Court and jury questions, see post § 60.
Instructions on estoppel, see post § 61.
Estoppel of dowress by acts or conduct to claim dower, see Dower § 27.
Sworn answer in equity as estoppel to assert different facts, see also Equity ¶ 681.
Silence in face of assertions against interest as an admission, see Evidence § 386.
Nonestoppel of taxpayer by return as against state, see Taxes, V, VI.
Representation of boundary line as estoppel between vendor and purchaser, see Boundaries § 9.

¶ 120. A person who keeps silent when he should have spoken will not in a court of equity be heard to speak when he should keep silent.—Peters v. Canfield, 74 Mich. 498.

¶ 121. One who was silent as to his rights when he should have spoken is thereafter estopped from speaking.—Bartlett v. Grand Rapids Street R. Co., 82 Mich. 658; Condon v. Hughes, 92 Mich. 367.

¶ 122. An estoppel arises from silence as well as from statements when there is a duty and an opportunity to speak.—Inglis v. Millersburg Driving Ass'n, 169 Mich. 311.

¶ 123. When a party relies on equitable estoppel in pais, he must show that the person against whom it is claimed had an opportunity to speak, a duty to speak, that he failed to speak, and a reliance in good faith upon such failure.—Sheffield Car Co. v. Constantine Hydraulic Co., 171 Mich. 423.

¶ 124. Estoppel does not generally arise from one's silence or inaction, unless he knows that there is occasion to speak or act.—Griffin v. Nichols, 51 Mich. 575.

¶ 125. An equitable estoppel may arise where one person has induced another to act upon the supposition that a certain state of facts exists which does not exist in fact, or has pursued a course of conduct in respect to his own property or rights which has led another into expenditures which are to be lost, or into action which will prove detrimental if the party so misleading is allowed afterwards to assert rights inconsistent with such course of conduct.—Morrill v. Mackman, 24 Mich. 279.

¶ 126. The doctrine of estoppel in pais, which once presupposed a wilful misrepresentation of fact, has been extended to cover false appearances produced in other ways tantamount to a misrepresentation, and even to silence under circumstances amounting to it.—Pearson v. Hardin, 95 Mich. 360.

¶ 127. He who by his language or conduct leads another to do what he would not otherwise have done shall not subject such person to loss or injury by disappointing the expectations upon which he acted.—Dickerson v. Colgrove, 100 U. S. 578, 25 L. ed. 618.

¶ 128. One cannot be charged with another's debt or be made responsible for the goods another may afterwards obtain, by his mere silence, or by his failure to object when notified that such goods will be charged to him.—Grice v. Noble, 59 Mich. 515.

¶ 129. A lessee under a 99-year mining lease granting it the right to take minerals for its own manufacture is estopped to deny the right to subsequent grantees of the lessor, who have entered upon the land, spent large amounts in its development and erected valuable improvements, where the original lessee has been silent and claimed no right whatever for more than forty years.—Negaunee Iron Co. v. Iron Cliffs Co., 134 Mich. 264. Writ of error dismissed in 197 U. S. 463, 49 L. ed. 836, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 474.

¶ 130. Plaintiff suffered a loss by fire. He thereafter directed his agent to effect a settlement with defendants and other creditors at ninety cents on the dollar. During the negotiations for such settlement plaintiff secretly intended, after the settlement should be concluded, to institute a suit against defendants, claiming that the latter had misappropriated certain proceeds of fire insurance policies belonging to plaintiff. The settlement was effected, no disclosure being made by plaintiff of said secret intent. Held, he was estopped from prosecuting his suit against defendants.—Dillon v. Craig, 168 Mich. 216.

§ 33. ——Appearance of title or right in third person.

Evidence of holding out, see post ¶ 269.
Holding out agency, see Agency § 19.

¶ 131. A person who stands by and permits another to deal with his property as his own, the purchaser relying upon appearances, will not be permitted, after the transaction is closed, without objection from him, to question it.—Peters v. Canfield, 74 Mich. 498.

¶ 132. If one who has a title to an estate offered for sale knowingly allows another to sell it to a purchaser who supposes the title to be good, without at the time asserting his title, he is bound by the sale. This is especially true where the silent party has himself received the benefit of such sale, and where the purchaser has made improvements.—Moran v. Palmer, 13 Mich. 367.

¶ 133. A person having a title to an estate offered for sale knowingly allowed another to sell it to a purchaser who supposed the title to be good, without, at any time, asserting his title. Held, both the person and his privies were estopped to contest the validity of the sale.—Johnson v. Hogan, 158 Mich. 635; Cleveland Cliffs Iron Co. v. Hull, Id.

¶ 134. Where the husband of a woman sold a horse belonging to her, without her authority, and she was informed of the sale before payment had been made, and had ample opportunity afterwards to inform the purchaser of her rights, but neglected to do so and remained silent until he had made payment to the husband, it was held that she was thereafter estopped from asserting title to the horse against the purchaser or those claiming under him.—Dann v. Cudney, 13 Mich. 239.

¶ 135. One who neglects to assert his rights in property when he sees others dealing with it as if no such rights existed is estopped by his silence from afterwards asserting a lien; so held where the holder of a vessel mortgage treated it as worthless for seven years, and permitted a sale to innocent purchasers.—Harkness v. Toulmin, 25 Mich. 80.

¶ 136. The bare fact that the owner of property intrusts its custody to another, does not give that other any apparent authority to sell to a third party and pass title.—Ball-Barnhart-Putnam Co. v. Lane, 135 Mich. 275.

¶ 137. An apparent title to certain land by transfer to a third person's name cannot be assailed by the parol evidence of one who has caused its transfer, that he has an elder title not recorded.—First Nat. Bank v. McAllister, 46 Mich. 397.

¶ 138. Both the trustee in a trust-deed and the creditors for whose benefit it was executed are estopped from setting up a claim against one to whom the grantor, left in possession of the whole property, had sublet a privilege.—Cunning v. Tittabawassee Boom Co., 88 Mich. 237.

¶ 139. A. conveyed land to B., taking from him a mortgage for the purchase money, and assigned the mortgage to C., who conveyed the premises with warranty to D. B. never took possession, and, though living near the premises for years, and knowing that C. and others were in adverse possession, claiming title, never claimed any title in himself, but drew the conveyance from C. to D. and took the acknowledgment of it, keeping silent as to any defect in the title. Held, that B. and one to whom he subsequently quitclaimed were estopped from claiming any title to the premises.—Baker v. Humphrey, 101 U. S. 494, 25 L. ed. 1065.

¶ 140. Where a mortgagee, after assigning the mortgage to his father, of like name, dealt with the mortgagor and his grantees as though he still held the mortgage, and the father gave no notice of the assignment and so conducted himself as to authorize the mortgagor and his grantees to believe that the son was the real owner of the mortgage, the father is estopped from denying it, whether the money for which the mortgage was originally given was his or not.—McCabe v. Farnsworth, 27 Mich. 52.

¶ 141. The purchaser of lumber from one having a lien thereon is not liable to the owner, in trover for a conversion, where, in objecting to payment being made to the lienor, the former did not disapprove of the sale itself nor deny the lienor's right to sell.—Wannebo v. Stone, 181 Mich. 581.

¶ 142. On dissolution of a partnership between plaintiff and defendant, where defendant assigned to plaintiff all the assets, including a government claim which was afterwards paid by a draft, receipted by defendant in the firm name and so disposed of by him as to enable another to collect it and withhold the avails from the plaintiff, plaintiff in an action for money had and received need not prove that defendant had actually received the money for he is estopped from denying it; by his conduct he cut off plaintiff's remedy against the government and also wrongfully enabled another party to obtain the money.—Bullard v. Hascall, 25 Mich. 132.

¶ 143. A firm of commission brokers, having settled with a grain dealer with whom they had dealt, solicited his further shipments. He replied he did not know when he would resume business, but suggested they correspond with his brother, whose initials he said were the same as his own. The brokers understood this to mean that he intended to remain out of business for a time, and they wrote informing him how they understood his letter, and further stating that they had solicited his brother's consignments, but he made no reply. He soon resumed control of the business, but kept his brother in his employ without notifying the brokers of the new arrangement. His own name was Oramel and his brother's Osmyn. The brokers having entered upon the suggested correspondence transacted considerable business with Osmyn, in whose charge the business had been left, and who was acting, as they supposed, as a principal, but really as an agent. In the course of these dealings they realized certain profits on a carload of wheat received from him and they bought a quantity of wheat at his request. They also lent him a large sum of money, and later discovered that he had never been the principal in the business, and before borrowing the money had left his brother's employment. Oramel offered to take the wheat they had bought off their hands, but they refused, expressing a willingness to hold it until it should rise in value. They also retained the profit on the carload they had sold to apply on the account of the money lent to Osmyn, and Oramel sued them for it. Held, as his own course had misled the brokers into supposing that they were dealing with Osmyn as a principal, and he had neglected to inform them differently, he was estopped by his own negligence from objecting to applying the proceeds of the sale upon Osmyn's debt, and from claiming the proceeds on the ground that the carload belonged to himself. —Stebbins v. Walker, 46 Mich. 5.

¶ 144. Where, on the trial of an action of trespass to lands, it appears that defendant, before committing the alleged trespass, applied to plaintiff to ascertain whether or not he had any claim upon the land, and was informed by plaintiff that he did not know who was boss, but that he rather thought a certain third person (with whom plaintiff had been in litigation over the title to the land) was, and, if he should change his opinion about the matter, he would let defendant know, and give him the first chance to rent the land; and where defendant, after waiting a reasonable time, and receiving no information from plaintiff of any claim on his part to the land, or change of intention or mind upon the subject, and in reliance upon said statements, applied to the adverse claimant to rent the land of him, and entered thereon and did the acts complained of under his authority, plaintiff is estopped from denying that such entry was lawful, and cannot maintain said action.—Kinney v. Service, 101 Mich. 185.

§ 34. ——Drafting or witnessing another's deed or will.

¶ 145. Where the holder of the legal title to land acts as the scrivener and acknowledging officer in a transfer thereof made by an adverse claimant, he acquiesces in such transfer to the extent, at least, of recognizing the grantee's rights to whatever interest his grantor had; and so long as such interest is outstanding he cannot bring ejectment against such grantee.—Morse v. Byam, 55 Mich. 594.

¶ 146. One who witnessed and took the acknowledgment of his wife's mortgage of land upon which he has placed machinery in such a manner as not to be a part of the realty, is not estopped from asserting title to such machinery as against the mortgagee's assignment.—Bartlett v. Haviland, 92 Mich. 552.

¶ 147. Where a devisee acts as witness to a deed conveying land of the estate to complainant, and said deed is void for lack of authority in the executors under the will, said devisee is not estopped to deny the validity of complainant's title in a bill to enjoin the ejectment suit and to quiet title.—Vincent v. Evans, 165 Mich. 695.

§ 35. Acquiescence or inaction or nonclaim.

See also ante ¶ 129.

Silence as a holding out of appearances, see ante § 32.

Silence operating to hold out another as having right, see ante § 33.

Acquiescence by drafting or witnessing disposing instrument by another, see ante § 34.

Omission to make claim of individual title in final accounting, see also ante § 16.

Claim by attachment as basis for estoppel to claim exemption against attachment, see also ante ¶ 79.

[Note. The doctrine of laches in equity, if not the same as estoppel by acquiescence, is so much like it that the distinction is largely juristic and impracticable in a digest. Reference is therefore made to Equity, IV, where the general doctrines of laches are treated and numerous cross-references are collected tracing applications of the doctrines into the specific topics.]

Delay and acquiescence regarded as laches, see Equity, IV.

Estoppel to assert negligence against bailee, see Bailments ¶ 18.

Ratification of acts of agent, see Agency, II, C.

Estoppel of signers of drain petition to deny alteration after signing, see Drains ¶ 154.

Failure to notify bank of forgery as working estoppel on depositor, see Banking § 42.

Estoppel to question election by omission to challenge at the polls, see Elections ¶ 262.

Failure to examine checks as working estoppel of depositor to claim violation of his instructions, see Banking ¶ 45.

Acquiescence of public officers as estopping township, see also post ¶ 211.

Receipt, release or acknowledgment as estoppel, see post § 38.

Estoppel to assert error on appeal for first time, see Saving Questions.

¶ 148. If one stands by and sees another dealing with property in a manner inconsistent with the former's right to it, and does not object while the act is in progress, he cannot afterwards complain.—Truesdail v. Ward, 24 Mich. 117; Hayes v. Livingston, 34 Mich. 384.

¶ 149. If, by words or conduct, one has intimated that he consents to an act which has been done, and that he will not oppose it, although it could not lawfully have been done without his consent, and thereby induces others to do that from which they might have abstained, he cannot question the legality of the act he has so sanctioned, to the prejudice of others who have given faith to his words or to the fair inference to be drawn from his conduct.—Truesdail v. Ward, 24 Mich. 117; Heyn v. O'Hagen, 60 Mich. 150.

¶ 150. Whatever may be the actual intent of a party to a transaction, if he so acts as to lead a reasonable person to believe that he understands and assents to its terms, and the other party, so believing, acts accordingly, the former is estopped from asserting that he did not so understand and assent; and he is bound by the action taken.—Peake v. Thomas, 39 Mich. 584; Vanneter v. Crossman, 42 Mich. 465.

¶ 151. In an action for damages to land caused by the setting back of water by means of a milldam, where the evidence discloses simply that the defendant and his grantor of the millsite for several years before him had flowed the lands and paid a yearly compensation therefor, the doctrine of equitable estoppel does not apply in the absence of any showing that the original construction of the dam was in reliance on any license, or that the course of the defendant or his grantor was changed, or any expenditure made in reliance upon any conduct or promise of plaintiff.—Morrill v. Mackman, 24 Mich. 279.

¶ 152. An estoppel arises where a delay in bringing an action has been relied on by a person or his grantors, or some act done by them on the strength of the delay, or that by reason thereof they will be compelled to surrender, forego or alter what has already been done.—Longton v. Stedman, 182 Mich. 405.

¶ 153. Where, without notice to the owner, taxes on land have been voluntarily paid by one having no record title, there is no estoppel to claim title against the owner, who, on learning of such payments, protests to the supervisor and asserts his title.—Butler v. Grand Rapids & I. R. Co., 85 Mich. 246; affirmed in 159 U. S. 87, 40 L. ed. 85, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 991.

¶ 154. One who claims title to an island as included in a patent of riparian land, and who has exercised actual ownership, is not estopped as by nonclaim against persons who have had neither possession nor record title.—Butler v. Grand Rapids & I. R. Co., 85 Mich. 246; affirmed in 159 U. S. 87, 40 L. ed. 85, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 991.

¶ 155. A contiguous owner was estopped from enjoining the operation of a railroad in a street without compensation, by reason of his failure to appeal from certain decrees, and on the contrary acquiescing in one of them and accepting compensation for raising of the street grade for the purpose of enabling the road in question to be operated.—Ilgenfritz v. Toledo & Monroe Ry., 136 Mich. 634.

¶ 156. The original owner of land especially when absent at the time and without knowledge is not estopped from asserting his title by his allowing an invalid tax sale to go on and defendant to make improvements on the land without objection.—Petit v. Flint & P. M. R. Co., 114 Mich. 362.

¶ 157. Vendors who had retained title to logs and lumber to be cut from lands sold by them to grantors of a corporation, as well as a lien on the lands, are not estopped as against the corporation's trustee for creditors to assert title to logs and lumber by having forborne to do so earlier and before they were destroyed by fire, where it appears from voluminous correspondence that vendors had been pressing the trustee for payment and it had requested delay in view of the fact that the claim of vendors was secured on the logs and lumber against which their letters proposed to move.—Mosher v. Lansing Lumber Co., 112 Mich. 517.

¶ 158. A defendant lessee going beyond the privileges of his lease to erect signs for his own business and without communication to the lessor contracted to let an advertising firm put up a whisky sign on the roof of plaintiff lessor's building. Plaintiff's agent discovered the sign in process of erection, consulted plaintiff's attorney, and immediately informed defendant that he had no right to permit the erection of the sign. Held, plaintiff was not estopped to deny the right of defendant to allow the sign to be put up and for an accounting of rentals received for it.—Forbes v. Gorman, 159 Mich. 291.

¶ 159. Where a sheriff's claim for extra compensation is allowed by the court after a contest, the action of the contestant's attorney in directing the sheriff's attorney to draft the proper order, and in assenting to the entry of such order, is not an estoppel, as no remedy can be invoked before the order is entered and some detriment incurred.—Fletcher v. Kalkaska Circuit Judge, 81 Mich. 186.

¶ 160. One of several licensees of a patent, having given to another licensee an authority to sell it for a given sum, is estopped to claim that he should have more corresponding to an aliquot share in the whole amount received for all the licenses, where the other licensee under such authority negotiated sale of the licenses altogether for a sum relatively larger of which sale and the larger sum the first mentioned licensee had full knowledge while the sale was pending and made no protest, but participated in closing the transaction.—Gordon v. O'Neill, 174 Mich. 575.

¶ 161. Twenty years' acquiescence by heirs in voluntary division precludes disturbance by one of them.—Mitchell v. Mitchell, 68 Mich. 106.

¶ 162. Acquiescence does not always work an estoppel.—Weller v. Harrison Land Co., 195 Mich. 624.

¶ 163. A building contractor is not estopped to recover items for extras simply because he did not formally ask credit for them, especially where he claimed too many extras were charged to him.—Malcomson-Houghten Co. v. Gregorian Bldg. Co., 191 Mich. 678; Wadham v. Gregorian Bldg. Co., Id.

§ 36. Inconsistent claims or positions, accepting benefits.

[Note. Generally speaking the taking of an inconsistent position or contention or claim signifies an election and waiver of rights rather than an estoppel of fact. The distinction, though sound in principle, is difficult to apply. See generally and compare cases in Election and Waiver.]

Holding out contract for fixed price as estoppel to claim contract for value of work, see post ¶ 202.

Concealing intent to assert inconsistent claim, see also ante ¶ 130.

Impeaching title under which one claims, see post § 39.

Impeaching one's own deed or contract, see post § 40.

Accepting benefits or proceeds of sale, see also ante ¶ 132.

Claims as personal representative, distinctness from personal claims, see also post § 54.

Offer by one co-owner as estoppel where sale was made on offer by other co-owner claiming different quantity, see ante ¶ 101.

To pursue agent for fraud after seeking to vacate foreclosure sale for agent's fraud, see also Agency ¶ 506.

To appeal from judgment or decree after compliance with it or acceptance of benefit under it, see Appeal § 66.

To urge on appeal theory differing from trial, see Appeal §§ 267-269.

Changing theory on appeal or on retrial afterwards, see Appeal §§ 267-269, 468, 559.

Petitioning as creditor as estoppel to claim that assignment was absolute, see also Assignments ¶ 86.

Affirming and renouncing contract at same time, see Contracts § 260.

Claiming under decree and at same time seeking to avoid it, see Judgments, VI, VII.

Estoppel to claim salary from corporation by prior inconsistent claim or conduct, see also Corporations ¶ 576.

Voting in meetings as raising estoppel to deny character as stockholder, see Corporations § 298.

To make claim against insolvent corporation for loan represented to others as free capital, see Corporations ¶ 828.

Estoppel of receiver to deny receipt of corporate assets on possession of which he has based a pleading, see Corporations ¶ 900.

Asking recount as estoppel to question power to make it, see Elections ¶ 171.

Estoppel to claim homestead estate by causing sale for debts, see Homesteads, V.

Assessment and sale of park for tax as estopping city to claim dedication, see Dedication § 85.

Estoppel of complainant in bill to quiet title to deny validity of sale to which she consented in ignorance of her legal rights, see Estates of Decedents ¶ 472.

Estoppel of heirs accepting lands discharged from mortgage to question sale by representative, the proceeds of which discharged mortgage, see Estates of Decedents ¶ 815.

Estoppel by proofs of loss furnished on claim for insurance, see Insurance, XV, XX.

Bidding at execution sale as estoppel to assert paramount title to the goods, see Executions, XI.

Estoppel of married woman to deny validity of award on ground of coverture where she has taken benefits under it, see Arbitration ¶ 109.

By receipt of dividend from assigned estate, see Assignments for Creditors ¶ 183.

Estoppel by action taken on it to ask for change of alimony award, see Divorce § 172.

Acceptance of benefit of note as estoppel to deny liability as indorser, see Banking § 16, ¶ 46.

Acceptance or receipt of benefit of drain as working estoppel to attack validity, see also Drains §§ 73, 109, 110.

Full restitution as condition to rescission of contract, see Rescission, III.

¶ 164. No rule is more necessary to enforce good faith than that which compels a person to relinquish claims which he has induced others to suppose he would not rely on; not because he obtains any advantage thereby, but because he has induced others to act so as to be seriously prejudiced if he is allowed to fail in the performance of what he has encouraged them to expect.—Faxton v. Faxon, 28 Mich. 159.

¶ 165. One who has sawed up another's logs and has afterwards agreed to pay for them cannot, when sued for their value, for the first time justify taking them, on the ground that he had already by mistake admitted the other's ownership of certain other logs which the latter had thereupon run down stream incurring expense thereby, which running defendant had never offered to repay.—Kimberly v. Guilford, 34 Mich. 259.

¶ 166. One is estopped to claim a construction of contract different from that which he designedly led the other party to believe was correct.—Manley v. Saunders, 27 Mich. 347.

¶ 167. One is estopped as against execution purchasers from questioning the sale except upon the grounds asserted by him at the time of the sale.—Ganong v. Green, 64 Mich. 488.

¶ 168. A complainant is not necessarily estopped from seeking a relief that is inconsistent with positions theretofore taken, if it is defendant's fault that he has been practically forced to take them.—Potter v. Brown, 50 Mich. 436.

¶ 169. A party to a litigation cannot be confined to the position first taken by him and out of which the litigation arose, if he took such position under a mistake of facts that was due to the want of information which the other party ought to have given him.—Lyon v. Travelers' Ins. Co. of Hartford, Conn., 55 Mich. 141.

¶ 170. A party having regained possession by a temporary loan of property which he had parted with under a contract of barter and exchange providing for such loan, is not estopped, while retaining such possession, from defending his title on the ground of rescission for fraud—it appearing that he retains nothing except what was originally his own.—Martin v. Ash, 20 Mich. 166.

¶ 171. Where the assignor of a chattel mortgage of whom goods are demanded which have been replevied under the mortgage in excess of the debt says that he has them but will not give them up, he is estopped when the other relying on it sues for conversion from claiming that he did not at such time have possession and control of them, but that they were then in the possession of the assignee.—Cadwell v. Pray, 86 Mich. 266.

¶ 172. In an action by H. for profits lost through A.'s preventing him from carrying out his contract to mine the ore in a certain level in A.'s mine, a letter written to A.'s general manager by H. before he stopped work, saying that the ore in that level was nearly exhausted, does not preclude H. from showing what the fact was as to the ore, whether it was voluntarily written or was written at the solicitation of A.'s superintendent to accomplish a wrongful purpose on the latter's part.—Anvil Mining Co. v. Humble, 153 U. S. 540, 38 L. ed. 814, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 876.

¶ 173. A teamster to whom a team of horses had been intrusted to take into the lumber woods and do teaming, sold the team and the purchaser subsequently sold the horses to defendant. The owner brought replevin to recover the horses. Held that he was not estopped to maintain the action by the fact that he failed to bring replevin against the first purchaser soon after learning of the sale, the owner having no knowledge of any purpose of such purchaser to resell.—Nichols v. Monjeau, 132 Mich. 582.

¶ 174. Plaintiff tenant made a cropping agreement with one W. Dennison, the owner of an undivided half interest in the land, by which the latter was to take as his share certain rows of shocks. Defendant acquired Dennison's interest. Plaintiff represented to her that Dennison was entitled to one-third of the harvested crop, and defendant appropriated this one-third. Held, in a suit for conversion, the plaintiff was estopped to set up the real agreement as against the one represented to the defendant.—Schultz v. Dennison, 159 Mich. 259.

¶ 175. Where the plaintiff had presented an itemized statement of his account which had been rejected in its entirety by the defendant he is not limited in his demand by the charges made in his statement, and may prove the actual value of the services rendered and recover therefor.—Wright v. St. Louis Sugar Co., 146 Mich. 555; Romeyn v. Campau, 17 Mich. 327.

¶ 176. The erroneous rendering of a bill for a certain machine does not estop the plaintiff from claiming that it was agreed that the purchase price of the machine should be applied in part payment of the purchase price of goods sought to be replevined under an oral contract of sale.—Dallavo v. Richardson, 134 Mich. 226.

¶ 177. A defendant who has insisted that he had never bought the goods from plaintiff and has declined to recognize any claim of plaintiff for the goods, is estopped, when sued for the conversion of the goods, from setting up that plaintiff sold the goods to defendant and therefore could sue only in assumpsit for the value of the goods.—Great Western Smelting & Refining Co. v. Evening News Ass'n, 139 Mich. 55.

¶ 178. An attorney for a party in an action in the justice court who secures a reversal of the case in the circuit court upon the sole ground that the purported undertaking for costs given by the adverse party was illegal, is estopped, in an action upon the assigned undertaking as plaintiff, to claim that such undertaking is valid.—Patek v. Ryskewiecz, 189 Mich. 344.

§ 37. Disclaimers and disavowals.

Disavowal of purchase as raising estoppel to claim purchase, see ante ¶ 177.

Purchase of disclaimed title before other party purchases in reliance on disclaimer, see ante ¶ 94.

Estoppel to claim liability of successor corporation by reason of prior silence or disclaimer, see Corporations ¶¶ 790, 791.

Estoppel of chattel mortgagee to assert mortgage after representations as to mortgagor's freedom from debt or incumbrance, see Chattel Mortgages § 54.

Requirements of statute of frauds as to quitclaims and releases of interests in land, see Frauds, Statute of.

¶ 179. A letter disavowing all intention to claim real estate may operate as an estoppel in pais, and may be available as a defense in an action of ejectment.—Dickerson v. Colgrove, 100 U. S. 578, 25 L. ed. 618.

¶ 180. One who in ignorance of his own rights disclaimed title to land, which the other then purchased from a person claiming ownership, is in the absence of countervailing equities treated as the victim of his own fault or misfortune; and will be required to make a release of his proper claims. —Beatty v. Sweeney, 26 Mich. 217.

¶ 181. After an irregular foreclosure of a mortgage one of two subsequent joint mortgagees was inquired of, by one who contemplated a purchase of the land, whether he had any claim upon it, and replied that he had not. The inquirer then purchased the land from the first mortgagee. It was held that such subsequent mortgagees were estopped from setting up any claim under their mortgage against such purchaser.—Cook v. Finkler, 9 Mich. 131.

¶ 182. Where an aged widowed father living with his son and the latter's family had sold the land occupied by him, and the purchaser before completing the purchase had asked the son whether he had any claim to the land, and had been told he had none, the son cannot in summary proceedings by the purchaser for possession of the land set up a claim to a life lease from the father; if he had any such claim it should have been asserted when he was asked if he had any claim.—Nagelspach v. Shaw, 146 Mich. 493.

§ 38. Receipts, releases and acknowledgments.

Rendition of account for stated sum and afterwards for more, see ante ¶ 175.

Quitclaim deeds as estoppels, see ante § 8.

Receipt as an admission against interest receivable in evidence, see Evidence § 380.

Receipt as conclusive evidence, see Evidence § 603.

Admissibility of parol evidence to contradict mere receipts, see Evidence § 190.

Statements exonerating or releasing secondary parties on bills and notes, see Negotiable Instruments, VII.

Sufficiency of statements to restrict creditor to recourse against principal and exonerate surety, see Suretyship, II.

¶ 183. One is not estopped from defending against the foreclosure of a mortgage given for the purchase-money of a boat, on the ground of fraudulent representations on the part of the vendor in making the sale, by a receipt given for all claims resulting from the sale, where the receipt was signed by the mortgagor relying on the advice of the vendor's attorney that she was only releasing her right to sue.—Gilchrist v. Manning, 54 Mich. 210.

¶ 184. Under the terms of an agreement, plaintiff was authorized to retain a certain amount due defendant out of a special fund due to both, in consideration of the payment by the former of an indebtedness under which both were jointly liable, no payment or action being required of defendant. The debt was not paid with plaintiff's money, as was intended, but another agreement was entered into by the plaintiff with other parties, under which defendant was paid, and his receipt in full taken, and the debt arranged to be paid by another. Held, that plaintiff, by acknowledging defendant's receipt in full of the amount due him from the special fund, was estopped to retain any sum due the latter, upon a subsequent payment by him of the indebtedness.—Friedman v. Adams, 149 Mich. 615.

§ 39. Repudiation or impeachment of one's own title.

Impeachment of one's own deed or contract, see post § 40.

Estoppel of grantee to deny grantor's title, see also ante ¶ 22.

Necessity of complete election and waiver, see Election and Waiver § 9.

Disability to repudiate and rescind while claiming under contract wholly or in part, see Rescission, III.

Estoppel of tenant to deny landlord's title, see Landlord and Tenant, III.

Estoppel of dowress or her privies to deny seizin and title of husband, see Dower § 36.

Estoppel of one cotenant to deny other's title, see Tenants in Common, II.

Right of taker of undivided interest to assert earlier paramount tax title, see Tenants in Common, II.

Preclusion to question title of common grantor, see Ejectment, II; Quieting Title, I, III.

¶ 185. One is estopped from denying a title under which he himself claims.—Paddack v. Pardee, 1 Mich. 421; Johnstone v. Scott, 11 Mich. 232.

¶ 186. One who comes into possession of land under a person claiming title, and whose title is subject to mortgage, is not at liberty to dispute the validity of such title, and if he procures releases to recover defects in it, they must be regarded as obtained in support of the title and not for its destruction. —Farmers' & Mechanics' Bank of Michigan v. Bronson, 14 Mich. 361; Wilkinson v. Green, 34 Mich. 221.

¶ 187. The doctrine that adverse claimants under a common grantor are estopped from denying their grantor's title does not hold where the grantor's deed does not purport to convey the entire title or leaves it uncertain what interest was conveyed without the aid of other testimony not furnished. —Campau v. Campau, 37 Mich. 245.

¶ 188. One who claims under a deed confirms all its provisions and cannot establish his claim by adopting those provisions, only, which are in his favor, while he repudiates or contradicts others that are repugnant thereto.—Jacobs v. Miller, 50 Mich. 119.

¶ 189. One who claims right in land by virtue of a confirmatory arrangement between two other persons, from one of whom his original title was derived, must recognize all the terms of that arrangement and cannot insist upon anything which his predecessor in title could not insist upon.—Norris v. Michigan State Ins. Co., 51 Mich. 621.

¶ 190. One who claims land under assignment from the vendor to his agent and who claims logs on the land under a contract with the purchaser, recognizing the rights of another who purchased other logs from the same purchaser, cannot repudiate the contract under which he bought his logs in order to assert title to the other's logs by reason of the ownership acquired of the land; since to do so would repudiate his own title.—Lange v. Muskegon Booming Co., 63 Mich. 584.

¶ 191. One who claims under a tax-deed is estopped from questioning the validity of the title upon which arose the taxes whereon his deed is based.—Tillotson v. Webber, 96 Mich. 144.

§ 40. Impeachment of one's own deed or contract.

See also post ¶ 233.

Impeachment of one's own title, see ante § 39.

Repudiation of exchange of property on ground of fraud, see ante ¶ 170.

To question one's own deed as champertous, see Champerty ¶ 13.

Of county treasurer to assert illegality of deposit in order to claim interest as his own, see Counties ¶ 170.

Estoppel of bank to deny sufficiency of order which it drew up and paid deposit upon, see Banking ¶ 37.

Duress, fraud or mistake as vitiating contract in its inception, see Contracts, III, D; Duress § 5; Fraud; Mistake.

Disability of school district to repudiate teacher's contract for want of recording after full execution, see Schools, V.

¶ 192. At law a party is estopped from disputing his deed; and if he would impeach it in equity he must show in what his equity consists.—Payne v. Atterbury, H. 414.

¶ 193. One who gives a deed of lands which are in the adverse possession of another is estopped from disputing the deed; and the grantee may enforce his rights under it, against the person in possession, in the name of the grantor.—Stockton v. Williams, 1 D. 546.

¶ 194. Where a debtor has mortgaged timber he cannot, as against his creditor, holding by a chattel mortgage, raise an imperfection in the latter's title consisting in the fact that mortgagor owned the land on which it stood.—Brown v. King, 172 Mich. 355.

¶ 195. Where a chattel mortgage is given without consideration and for the purpose of being sold, the mortgagor is estopped as against a purchaser from disputing that it secures a real debt; if it is not meant to be sold, he is not estopped.—Judge v. Vogel, 38 Mich. 569.

¶ 196. One who claims land under a deed describing it as part of block B cannot, in trespass against one who claims under a prior mortgage from the same grantor of all of block B, dispute his own deed and show that it is not in fact part of said block.—Thompson v. Smith, 96 Mich. 258.

§ 41. Recognition of right or adoption of obligation.

Impeaching one's own title or deed, see ante §§ 39, 40.

Disclaimers and disavowals of title or right, see ante § 37.

Estoppel of assignee taking with knowledge to dispute corporate power to make contract assigned, see Corporations § 98, ¶ 353.

Averment in pleading of title in third person, see also ante ¶ 94.

Taking mortgage expressly subject to other incumbrances, see ante § 12.

To dispute agent's right to commissions by filling orders, see Agency ¶ 545.

Recognition of better title as estoppel to assert adverse possession, see Adverse Possession §§ 18, 19.

Taking title of lot according to recorded plat as estoppel to dispute dedication and claim adversely, see Adverse Possession ¶ 121.

Recognition of or dealings with corporation as raising estoppel to question its existence, see Corporations §§ 12-14.

Estoppel of person acting under judgment to assert invalidity as justification for contempt, see also Contempt ¶ 27.

Preclusion of grantee expressly subject to mortgage or who assumes it, see Mortgages, VII.

Estoppel of junior mortgagee to question priority of senior mortgages, see Mortgages, V, VII.

¶ 197. Complainant's recognition of defendants' right to use a stream to float their logs, and his straightening, at their expense, the channel above his mill so as to make the mill safer and to facilitate log-driving, do not estop him from seeking to restrain their misuse of the stream by overcrowding it and by overflooding it.—Koopman v. Blodgett, 70 Mich. 610.

¶ 198. One cannot deny that funds received by him were funds of the state, where they came into his hands by reason of his membership on a commission appointed to represent the state at an exposition.—People v. Swineford, 77 Mich. 573.

¶ 199. A defendant who has appealed in an administrator's name from a decision of commissioners on claims, and has defended the appeal in such name, cannot, when sued by the administrator seeking to collect the estate to pay claims, question the administrator's title to the office.—Farrand v. Caton, 69 Mich. 235.

§ 42. Contracts and promises as estoppels.

Doing or contracting for work as estoppel to dispute legality of the work, see post § 43.

Making different contract for crops with lessor's grantee, see ante ¶ 174.

Estoppel by deed as including matters of recital, see ante § 15.

Statements and recitals in contracts as admissions, see Evidence § 382.

Statements and recitals in invalid or inoperative instruments as admissions against interest, see Evidence § 384.

Rule that bare agreement to arbitrate does not estop, see Arbitration § 20.

¶ 200. An invalid contract cannot operate as an estoppel.—Hickey v. Hinsdale, 12 Mich. 99.

¶ 201. A verbal executory agreement to purchase real estate subject to the back taxes, being void under the statute of frauds, is a mere nullity, and therefore could not be made the basis of an estoppel of the right to purchase such property at tax sale.—Ball v. Harpham, 140 Mich. 661.

¶ 202. Where parties who have contracted to build a building for another know that their employer understands that they are undertaking the job at a fixed price, which they have given him as their estimate of what the building would cost and that he has acted thereon making payments which they accepted, they will be estopped from asserting, after they have completed the work without undeceiving their employer, that there was no price fixed between them, and claiming that they are entitled to the market value of the work.—Davis v. Bush, 28 Mich. 432.

¶ 203. A mortgagor and mortgagee who join in a covenant that a certain sum is due on a mortgage, which the mortgagee assigns to another in order to enable the mortgagor to find a lender who will take a lower rate of interest, are both estopped thereby to assert that any larger sum is due.—Byrnes v. Martin, 67 Mich. 399.

¶ 204. As between a lien claimant and the owner of property, a recital in an agreement looking to their mutual protection from other liens, as to the amount of indebtedness due the claimant from the owner, does not estop the claimant from recovering a sum greater than that recited.—Fisher v. Burroughs Adding Machine Co., 157 Mich. 126.

¶ 205. The fact that the landowner on making a cropping contract with a farmer for half of the crop knew that the cropper had made a mortgage binding only the crop of the previous year, does not estop him to dispute the validity of the mortgage asserted against the year covered by the crop contract; even though the crop contract was in sequence of one for the preceding year and of an oral agreement that it should run for three years.—Brown v. Bolt, 116 Mich. 52.

§ 43. Contracting or doing work as recognition or assent.

¶ 206. One who bid for the digging of a ditch let by the highway commissioners, for the purpose of getting control of it, was not estopped thereby from contesting their action as illegal and calculated to do him irreparable injury.—Conrad v. Smith, 32 Mich. 429.

¶ 207. Complainant by working upon the construction of a drainage ditch did not consent to the deepening of such ditch and the laying of tile, resulting in damage from overflow waters to his own lands, and he is not estopped to seek an injunction restraining such diversion of waters.—Elliott v. Carter, 140 Mich. 303.

¶ 208. In an action by the owner of land, who was also tenant of another tract of land under the same grantor, against a prior grantor to recover damages for the flooding of the premises due to the filling up of a ravine across a street at the time it was laid out, where it appeared that when the ravine was filled plaintiff's grantor and lessor was in the employ of the defendant and was a foreman working by the day; that he hired some of the men and teams, and made up the pay roll; that the money was paid to him, and that he paid the men, held that plaintiff was not estopped by the acts of such vendor and lessor from claiming damages caused by the flooding of the premises.—Weller v. Harrison Land Co., 195 Mich. 624.

§ 44. Corporate and official acts.

Listing for taxes in wrong place, see ante ¶ 5.

[Note. Whether the act of a member or officer binds or commits the corporation, or its act the members, depends on principles of the law of corporations. See generally Corporations, XVII, XXIV. Effect of public official acts to bind the public or the actor depends on the capacity of the public to be estopped (see ante § 3) or on the effect of an act in one capacity to bind the actor in another capacity or right (see post § 54).]

¶ 209. A government may not be estopped from asserting its rights against an official servant by the acts or omissions of auditors, trustees, supervisors or other guardians of public rights.—Board of Sup'rs of Chippewa County v. Bennett, 185 Mich. 544.

¶ 210. Where a corporation has no power to convey a title to or interest in its property and no charge of fraud or misrepresentation is made, it is not estopped from claiming that its contract implied no such conveyance.—Hillsdale College v. Rideout, 82 Mich. 94.

¶ 211. A township is not estopped from maintaining a bill to remove a street railway unlawfully on its highway because of the failure of the township officers to take steps to prevent the building thereof nor by their mere acquiescence.—Township of Bangor v. Bay City Traction & Electric Co., 147 Mich. 165.

¶ 212. A city is not estopped from asserting that the claims of an assignee of a city contractor should be subordinated to the claims of materialmen nor does it waive its right to withhold payment to the assignee by the fact that the common council passed a resolution authorizing the mayor and clerk to pay the assignee, the resolution having been rescinded before any action was taken by the assignee and his situation having been in no way changed by his reliance thereon. —Carlisle v. Spain, 147 Mich. 158.

§ 45. Indirect representations, representations to third persons.

See also ante ¶¶ 67, 172.

Representations or acts by agents, see post § 47.

¶ 213. The rule of equitable estoppel is not confined to such representations as are made directly and in person to the parties acting upon them; the material point is that they are calculated to produce and do produce the end (per Christiancy, J.).—Quirk v. Thomas, 6 Mich. 76.

§ 46. Acts done as agent or functionary for another.

Estoppel to question capacity of representative, see Estates of Decedents § 53.

¶ 214. A lease which one executes as agent of the lessor would estop him from setting up any claim to the land inconsistent with the lease.—Blanchard v. Tyler, 12 Mich. 339.

¶ 215. One who forecloses a mortgage as attorney for another, and who permits title to pass to his client under a sheriff's deed, is estopped, as to an innocent purchaser from the latter, to assert his own title to the land under a claim which, if established, would demonstrate his knowledge, at the time of foreclosure, of the invalidity of the mortgage.—Walker v. Bottomley, 110 Mich. 127.

§ 47. Representations and acts by agents or third persons.

Representations to agents or third persons, see ante § 45.

Nonmutuality where agent was unauthorized, see ante ¶ 68.

Knowledge or means of knowledge preventing avoidance of estoppel on claim of want of knowledge of what agent had done, see ante ¶ 110.

[Note. The scope of the authority of agents and other representative persons to bind those represented is determined by the law of Agency or of Trusts or of Estates of Decedents, which see.]

Right to rely on agent's declarations to create estoppel to bind principal that agency exists, see Agency § 20.

Authority of bank officers to make admissions estopping bank, see Banking § 58.

Statement of cashier as estoppel of bank to assert lien on stock for debt of holder, see Banking § 58.

¶ 216. The acts of an agent whose authority is invalid under the statute of frauds will not estop the principal unless adopted by him.—Holland v. Hoyt, 14 Mich. 238.

¶ 217. A man's acquiescence, privately or as a supervisor, in the action of the board of supervisors in authorizing the erection of a dam the effect of which would be to overflow lands belonging to his father, will not bind the latter if the son was not authorized to act for the father and the latter did not know of his action.—Stone v. Roscommon Lumber Co., 59 Mich. 24.

¶ 218. An agent's casually speaking of a certain machine belonging to a corporation for which he acted as "my machine," in the hearing of the president of the corporation and in conversation with a person who was not dealing with the property or proposing to do so, and who was not shown to have relied upon any such expression of ownership, did not estop the corporation from afterwards asserting title to the machine in action of replevin against a sheriff who took it on an execution against the agent.—Michigan Paneling Machine & Manufacturing Co. v. Parsell, 38 Mich. 475.

¶ 219. Whether complainant in a bill to quiet title is estopped by the fact that a person said to be his solicitor had urged the defendant to bring ejectment against complainant, and had represented that complainant knew he had no title and wanted to be ousted so as to have recourse against his warrantor, quære.—Dale v. Turner, 34 Mich. 405.

C. OPERATION, SCOPE AND EFFECT; PLEADING, PROOF AND PRACTICE.

§ 48. In general.

Basis of estoppels in general, see ante § 2.

Nonoperation of estoppel as to matters of law, see ante § 4.

Scope, effect, duration and subjects of estoppel, see post §§ 50, 55.

Persons affected or entitled to urge, see post §§ 52-54.

Manner of urging, pleading and proving estoppel, see post §§ 56-59.
Court and jury questions, instructions and requests, see post §§ 60, 61.
Recognition of equitable estoppels on law side, see post § 49.
Estoppel as improper principle for construction of contract, see Contracts ¶ 1533.

¶ 220. It seems that an estoppel in pais operates as an admission or representation of a fact, which becomes conclusive by reason of the elements of the estoppel.—Dean v. Crall, 98 Mich. 591.

¶ 221. Whatever binds a party by estoppel is as valid against him as what he might voluntarily have done.—People v. Bristol, 35 Mich. 28.

¶ 222. The operation of estoppel is not as broad when real property is involved as when only personalty is involved, since the statute of frauds comes into play; and accordingly a party cannot recover in ejectment on the basis of an estoppel in pais; e. g., an estoppel against the other party's setting up a title in opposition to that which his opponent had acquired in reliance upon his oral statement.—Hayes v. Livingston, 34 Mich. 384.

§ 49. Recognition and effect at law.

As to relieving from contract obligations, see ante ¶ 3.
Necessity of pleading in law actions, see post § 58.
Available defense of estoppel as reason against assumption of jurisdiction by equity, see Equity ¶ 143a.
Estoppel as defense in ejectment, see Ejectment § 20.

¶ 223. Estoppels in pais are not unknown to the common law.—Smith v. Hamilton, 20 Mich. 433.

¶ 224. Estoppels in pais are called equitable because they arise on facts that make their application just, and not because they are in any way limited to cases in equity; they are just as applicable in courts of common law.—Barnard v. German American Seminary, 49 Mich. 444.

¶ 224a. An equitable estoppel in pais may be enforced by a court of law.—Lang v. Lundy, 185 Mich. 390.

§ 50. Scope, extent and duration of estoppel in general.

Equitable basis of policy of estoppel, see ante § 2.
Concrete applications of estoppel to various subjects, see topics referred to post § 55.
Right to resist appeal where one is estopped to take appeal, see Appeal ¶ 308.

¶ 225. Complainant's recognition of defendants' right to use a stream to float their logs, and his straightening, at their expense, the channel above his mill so as to make the mill safer and to facilitate log-driving, do not estop him from seeking to restrain their misuse of the stream.—Koopman v. Blodgett, 70 Mich. 610.

¶ 226. Destruction by a partner of an unrecorded deed by him to his copartner of an undivided half of land constituting firm assets would estop him to enforce partnership notes by which the mortgage was taken up, which the firm gave on the land; but on subsequently going out of the firm and making a clear title to the remaining partner for the land, and the latter's giving a bond to pay all firm debts on consideration of taking all the assets, it ceases to prevent enforcement.—Mette v. Feldman, 45 Mich. 25.

§ 51. Validation or cure of illegal or defective acts.

Nonestoppel as to matters of law, see ante § 4.
Estoppel to impeach one's own deed or contract, see also ante § 40.
Estoppel to urge collateral objection to judgment, see Judgments, VII.
Estoppel to make defense of statute of frauds, see Frauds, Statute of, III; Specific Performance, III.
Estoppel to deny delivery of deed, see Execution of Instruments, III.
Inefficacy of estoppels to perform office of writing required by statute of frauds, see Frauds, Statute of, III.
Establishment or extinction of easements by prescription, see Easements.

¶ 227. The doctrine of estoppel cannot validate an unexecuted contract which is against public policy.—Robinson v. Patterson, 71 Mich. 141.

¶ 228. The doctrine of estoppel cannot be so applied as to render valid and binding an agreement otherwise void for want of consideration.—Ladd v. Brown, 94 Mich. 136.

¶ 229. The enforcement of equities against the owner of the legal title of land is on equitable grounds distinct from estoppel which would offend the statute of frauds by divesting and transferring title to land by parol.—Hayes v. Livingston, 34 Mich. 384.

¶ 230. It seems that estoppels in pais may operate to create or extinguish easements.—Day v. Walden, 46 Mich. 575.

¶ 231. The state, or persons charged with offenses, cannot be estopped by the neglect of individuals to insist on such defenses as the law gives them. Constitutional provisions cannot be destroyed by a practical construction of a city charter based on such neglect.—People ex rel. Robison v. Swift, 59 Mich. 529.

¶ 232. Estoppel cannot arise to bar the right to assert against one conducting a saloon illegally that such is the fact and that because of the fact he is deprived of any exemptions pertaining to the business as such.—McCarthy v. Payne, 141 Mich. 571.

¶ 233. One is not estopped from repudiating the title of a defendant whom he charges with having obtained the property from him by false pretenses.—Dayton v. Monroe, 47 Mich. 193.

§ 52. Persons and privies concluded.

See also ante ¶¶ 133, 139.

Capacity of public to become estopped, see ante § 3.

Persons entitled to claim estoppel, see post § 53.

Persons sustaining dual and diverse characters, see post § 54.

Trustee and creditors under trust deed, see also ante ¶ 138.

By estoppels by deed, see ante § 13.

Right of creditor to deny incorporation and hold individuals, though other creditors are estopped, see also Corporations ¶ 60.

¶ 234. That which estops one from denying the delivery and acceptance of a deed of conveyance precludes his estate from denying it also.—Comstock v. Smith, 26 Mich. 306.

¶ 235. One who marries the widow of a mortgagor and goes into possession of the premises under an adverse title does not hold in his wife's right, and is not estopped by his marriage from disputing the mortgage.—Gorton v. Roach, 46 Mich. 294.

¶ 236. Where heirs who had participated in hearing of claims before probate judge, are estopped from insisting on appointment of commissioners on claims, the administrator who represents them is also estopped.—Jenks v. St. Clair Probate Judge, 96 Mich. 122.

§ 53. Persons protected or entitled to claim estoppel.

Persons and privies bound, see ante § 52.

Persons in diverse or dual capacities, see post § 54.

¶ 237. An assignee of property rights may have the benefit of an estoppel raised for their protection.—Spicer v. Bonker, 45 Mich. 630.

¶ 238. An assignee, who in any event got all that his assignment purported to carry and who was not misled to his prejudice, cannot claim that one of the assignors is estopped by admissions made to deny the interest of the coassignor.—Bank of Montreal v. Potts Salt & Lumber Co., 101 Mich. 546.

§ 54. Persons sustaining diverse capacities, rights and trusts.

See also ante ¶ 217.

Estoppel by acts done for another, see also ante § 46.

Estoppel of representative to bring trover for stock certificate because of indorsement before appointment, see Estates of Decedents ¶ 267.

Estoppel of representative to recover property of estate wrongfully disposed of by him before appointment, see Estates of Decedents ¶ 372.

¶ 239. An administrator does not preclude himself from maintaining a suit for a fund, in his representative capacity, by borrowing a part of it in his individual capacity, and executing his bond and mortgage therefor.—Cullen v. O'Hara, 4 Mich. 132.

¶ 240. The fact that the widow of a deceased shareholder in a corporation had indorsed and delivered the intestate's certificate of stock to an heir, who sold it, would not estop her, having been subsequently appointed administratrix, from claiming the stock for the estate.—Morton v. Preston, 18 Mich. 60.

¶ 241. An administrator's title cannot be affected by any estoppel that does not rest on equities against the estate.—Gilkey v. Hamilton, 22 Mich. 283.

¶ 242. A trustee for the beneficiaries in an insurance policy signed a written acknowledgment that the policy had been canceled, and in making proof of loss to another company made affidavit that there was no other insurance. It was afterwards claimed that he signed these documents without knowing what they contained. Held, that they did not estop him from claiming the first mentioned insurance for the benefit of the cestuis que trustent.—Hillick v. Traders' Ins. Co., 54 Mich. 531.

¶ 243. Where a debtor in 1887 had transferred his property to his wife, and thereafter the claim in question could not be collected, and in 1891 the administratrix of the estate of the creditor indorsed it to an agent for collection and where the latter after the death of the administratrix in 1892, commenced suit in his own name and recovered judgment for the full amount, and in 1896 settled for a much less sum, the new administrator subsequently appointed was not estopped by delay from maintaining a bill to set aside the settlement and for an accounting against the agent, although such administrator was appointed on the application of the agent who was the only creditor, since he also represented heirs who were interested in the estate and the due administration thereof and there was no one to represent the estate in the interim.—Upton v. Dennis, 133 Mich. 238.

§ 55. Particular matters; cross-references.

The principal matters as to which the doctrine of estoppel is sought to be applied are referred to in the following:

To deny or assert inclusion of items in account stated, see Account Stated §§ 4-6.

Deed according to plat as estopping claim of adverse possession of street, see Adverse Possession ¶ 167.

Agency by estoppel, see Agency § 18.

Estoppel to question authority of agent, see Agency § 27.

To question or assert alteration of writing, see Alteration of Instruments ¶ 32.

Estoppel of owner of dog by assuming responsibility for another in custody to deny own liability as "keeper," see Animals ¶ 63.

To claim error on appeal, see Appeal § 230; Saving Questions for Review.

Award of arbitrators as bar or estoppel, see Arbitration § 19.

To question authority of attorney, see Attorneys § 29.

Estoppel to assert preferred claim or trust against insolvent bank, see Banking § 87.

Estoppel of transferee of bank stock to question his liability as stockholder, see Banking § 68.

To question or dispute boundaries, see Boundaries §§ 5-9.

To claim or enforce building restriction, see Buildings §§ 23, 24.

To assert lien outstanding as defense to action on contract, see Building Contracts § 54.

To question delivery by carrier, see Carriers § 35.

Estoppel to claim bill of sale as absolute because filed as chattel mortgage, see Chattel Mortgages § 3.

Estoppel to assert invalidity of chattel mortgage, see Chattel Mortgages § 10.

Estoppel towards third person to question validity of mortgage, see Chattel Mortgages §§ 52-54.

To question constitutionality of statute, see Constitutional Law § 29.

Estoppel to question consideration for contract, see Contracts § 137.

Estoppel to question that other party of same name was mortgagee, see also Contracts ¶ 47.

To claim or deny rights on breach or performance of contract, see also Contracts §§ 259, 260.

To question existence of corporation, see Corporations §§ 12-14.

To question that other party to contract was a corporation, see Corporations § 109.

To dispute or question corporate power, see Corporations §§ 96-98.

To question that person is stockholder, see Corporations § 298.

To question consolidation of corporations, see Corporations § 217.

Estoppel to object to jurisdiction of court, see Courts § 83.

Of public to deny dedication, see Dedication § 35.

Of grantor to deny dedication, see Dedication § 34.

Estoppel to assert dower, see Dower § 27.

To question easement or deny its existence, see Easements § 14.

To question eminent domain proceedings for error or irregularity, see Eminent Domain, VIII, IX.

To assert or deny capacity as personal representative, see Estates of Decedents, IV, A.

To make or assert claim against decedent's estate, see Estates of Decedents, VI.

To ask accounting by representative or to question accounting had, see Estates of Decedents, XII.

Preclusion to assert that things were or were not fixtures, see Fixtures, II.

Estoppel to assert default in mortgage and to foreclose, see Foreclosure, I.

To question regularity of foreclosure sale, see Foreclosure, V.

Estoppel to claim deficiency on foreclosure, see Foreclosure, VI.

To question authority of foreign corporation to do business in state, see Foreign Corporations, II.

To assert fraud or deception, see Fraud, I.

To assert defense of statute of frauds or question want of writing, see Frauds, Statute of, III, IV.

To question fraudulency of conveyance or transfer as against creditors, see Fraudulent Conveyances, II, III.

To assert or question gift, see Gifts, IV.

To assert or deny existence and boundaries of highways, see Highways, II, III.

To assert or deny wife's separate estate or interest, see Husband and Wife, II, IV.

Estoppel to attack other party's contract or conveyance for want of capacity to contract, see Husband and Wife, IV, A; Infants, IV; Insane Persons, IV.

To assert infancy or question majority, see Infants, I, III.

To assert incompetency of person or question sanity or capacity, see Insane Persons, I, III; Incompetents.

To question liability for premiums or assessments for insurance, see Fraternal Associations, III; Insurance, VI.

To forfeit or dispute insurance, see Fraternal Associations, V; Insurance, XII, C.

To question agency in respect to insurance, see Insurance, III.

To attack judgment collaterally or to seek relief against it, see Judgments, VI, VII.

To assert or deny relation of landlord and tenant, see Landlord and Tenant, I.

Of tenant to deny title of landlord, see Landlord and Tenant, III.

Estoppel to revoke license to enter on land, see Licenses to Enter.

To assert or deny operation of statute of limitations, see Limitations, VII.

To question local improvement and assessment proceedings, see Local Improvements, VII.

To question fact of marriage, see Marriage, I.

To affirm or deny relation of master and servant, see Master and Servant, I.
To question or assert mechanics' liens, see Mechanics' Liens, I.
To question powers or acts of municipality, see Municipal Corporations, III.
Respecting negotiable instruments and indorsement or transfer thereof, see Negotiable Instruments.
To claim or seek new trial, see New Trial, I, II.
Estoppel to deny assent to novation, see Novation.
To question emoluments or official salaries, see Officers, VIII; Municipal Corporations, XV.
Estoppel of parties to patent license to dispute validity of patent, see Patents.
To assert or deny partnership or partner's authority to bind firm, see Partnership, I, IV.
To assert or deny pledge, see Pledges, II.
To claim or deny service of process, see Process, II.
To make set-off or recoupment, see Set-off, II.
To assert or deny liability of sheriff or responsibility for his acts, see Sheriffs, IV; Executions, XII.
To assert or deny right of subrogation, see Subrogation, I.
To assert or deny trust, see Trusts, IV, XII.
To make defense or question fact of usury, see Usury, II.
To assert or deny factum of will, see Wills, VII.

§ 56. Modes of urging estoppel.

Necessity of pleading, see post § 57.

¶ 244. It seems that if an estoppel against a municipality from opening a street across a railway track is allowable, it might be urged in the street opening proceeding either by objection on the hearing that no jury need be summoned or on the hearing before the jury by request for a proper charge.—Grand Rapids v. Grand Rapids & I. R. Co., 58 Mich. 641.

§ 57. Necessity and sufficiency of pleading estoppel.

Estoppels by deed, see ante § 23.
Pleading in actions at law, see post § 58.
Pleading estoppel by judgment, see Former Adjudication, VII.
Amendment to plead estoppel in bill, see Equity § 126.
Necessity of amendment or plea puis darrein to admit estoppel arising since suit begun, see Pleading, VI, VII.
Necessity of special allegation of estoppel under contract, see also Contracts ¶ 1181.
Proof under general issue in trover, see also Conversion § 27.

¶ 245. An estoppel relied upon as a basis of relief or as an objection to a defense must be alleged.—Cicotte v. Gagnier, 2 Mich. 381; Moran v. Palmer, 13 Mich. 367; Connerton v. Millar, 41 Mich. 608.

¶ 246. Estoppels, where they form the foundation of the relief asked, and are relied on to defeat a legal title, cannot be proved unless alleged in the bill.—Cicotte v. Gagnier, 2 Mich. 381; Moran v. Palmer, 13 Mich. 367.

¶ 247. A defense based upon an estoppel in pais cannot be relied upon unless it is pleaded.—Dale v. Turner, 34 Mich. 405.

¶ 248. Estoppel in pais from maintaining a bill in equity cannot be relied on unless pleaded.—Dale v. Turner, 34 Mich. 405.

¶ 249. Estoppels, where they form the foundation of the relief asked for in equity, and are relied upon to defeat a legal title, cannot be proved unless alleged.—Sheldon v. Michigan Cent. R. Co., 161 Mich. 503.

¶ 250. An estoppel in pais must be pleaded in equity where it constitutes the basis of a right to sue and ground for relief, or as relied upon as a defense.—Saginaw Suburban Ry. Co. v. Connelly, 146 Mich. 395.

¶ 251. A plea of estoppel must be properly framed as such, especially in opening and closing, and it must set forth a claim that the plaintiff should not be admitted to make use of what the estoppel would exclude. The matter of estoppel alleged must be material and traversable.—Whittemore v. Stephens, 48 Mich. 573.

¶ 252. Allegations of facts in an answer to a bill to foreclose are sufficient to permit the defense of estoppel in the absence of an express averment of estoppel in the pleadings.—Union Trust Co. v. Detroit & R. St. C. Ry., 127 Mich. 252.

§ 58. ——In actions at law.

¶ 253. The rule that an estoppel in pais must be pleaded where it constitutes the basis of a right to sue and ground of relief, or is relied upon as a defense, applies to equity cases only, and not to an action at law.—Dean v. Crall, 98 Mich. 591, overruling on this point Gooding v. Underwood, 89 Mich. 187; Pearson v. Hardin, 95 Mich. 360.

¶ 254. An equitable estoppel in pais need not be pleaded in order to be available in an action at law.—Lang v. Lundy, 185 Mich. 390.

¶ 255. Actions of the grantor of the plaintiff in ejectment in relation to the establishment of the true boundary line between his premises and those of the defendant may be shown by the latter without pleading the estoppel.—Mowers v. Evers, 117 Mich. 93.

¶ 256. An estoppel against plaintiff's claiming an interest in the converted goods is available for defendants in trover under the general issue without notice.—Rogers v. Robinson, 104 Mich. 329.

¶ 257. An estoppel against plaintiff because of his having elected a remedy in assumpsit, whereby he disaffirmed title in himself, is available to defendant in trover under the general issue.—Thomas v. Watt, 104 Mich. 201.

¶ 258. An estoppel constitutes a distinct cause of action and cannot be taken advantage of, either as a ground of recovery or as a defense, unless specially pleaded.—Wessels v. Beeman, 87 Mich. 481; Gooding v. Underwood, 89 Mich. 187.

¶ 259. The object of a declaration is to give the defendant fair notice of the case he is called into court to meet; and a count charging a defendant with the acceptance of a bill of exchange cannot be held to inform him that he will be called upon to meet a liability on the ground of estoppel.—Gooding v. Underwood, 89 Mich. 187.

¶ 260. An estoppel that constitutes a distinct cause of action must be declared upon.—Pearson v. Hardin, 95 Mich. 360.

¶ 261. Where, as in the case of a fraudulently raised note, an estoppel is the only ground of recovery, it must be pleaded.—Pearson v. Hardin, 95 Mich. 360.

§ 59. Burden of proof and evidence of estoppels.

General law of evidence and competency of evidence, see Evidence.

Competency of one to testify of his own intent in making representations or of his own reliance on other's, see Evidence § 235.

Admissibility of evidence of ignorance to rebut estoppel, see also Evidence ¶ 2348.

Estoppel as proper matter to be proved on cross-examination, see Examination of Witnesses § 45, ¶ 233.

¶ 262. Where a party relies upon an estoppel he must show the facts necessary to constitute it.—Bond v. Markstrum, 102 Mich. 11.

¶ 263. If the plaintiff in ejectment claims that defendant is estopped to deny his title, he must show the facts constituting the estoppel.—Clee v. Seaman, 21 Mich. 287.

¶ 264. Where an estoppel in pais is relied on, the facts that support it must be clearly made out.—Rust v. Bennett, 39 Mich. 521.

¶ 265. An estoppel is not established if the evidence fails as to any essential element of it, but if there is more than a scintilla of evidence to establish it, the court will not inquire into its weight.—Maxwell v. Bay City Bridge Co., 46 Mich. 278.

¶ 266. For the purpose of showing an estoppel it was relevant to introduce a stipulation to pay certain costs on attachment of a boat, where the claim was that by agreement there was a substitution of other property for the boat, which had been levied on, and the action was replevin for the substituted property and defense was estoppel by conduct to attack execution sale.—Payment v. Church, 38 Mich. 776.

¶ 267. Evidence, in an action on a contract, of the temporary postponement of its performance at the request of defendant, but without any contract therefor, is relevant to show that defendant was estopped from denying performance during that time.—Barton v. Gray, 57 Mich. 622.

¶ 268. Evidence that a defendant in a suit was joined as a codefendant in another suit by stipulation of an attorney representing the person claimed to be her partner is incompetent, since it is not an admission by the defendant as evidence of an estoppel, unless she had knowledge of and had ratified it.—Munton v. Rutherford, 121 Mich. 418.

¶ 269. A minor mortgaged a horse belonging to his father, as also one purchased by himself, to secure the purchase price of the latter horse. Prior to the purchase the father had informed the mortgagee that his son had a horse similar to the one owned by the mortgagee; that the son wanted to get a team, and would give the mortgagee a good deal for his horse if he would sell it. When the mortgage became due the father refused to surrender his horse, and it was seized under the mortgage, and the father replevied it. Held, that there is nothing in the evidence to justify a finding that the father is estopped from asserting title to his horse.—Barney v. Rutledge, 104 Mich. 289.

¶ 270. Evidence that plaintiff, actually employed by the C. I. M. Co., an operating corporation, receipted to it for his pay and had a workman's brass check bearing its initials, overcomes evidence that another corporation, controlling the operating one by stock ownership and similar in name, so conducted affairs as to raise an estoppel to deny when sued for injuries that it was the master.—Hannula v. Cleveland Cliffs Iron Co., 188 Mich. 543.

§ 60. Court and jury questions.

Province of court and jury in general, see Trial, VI.

¶ 271. The application of the doctrine of estoppel in pais is a mixed question of law and fact, and in cases of jury trial must be submitted to the jury with proper instructions, and the conclusion from the evidence must be drawn by the jury and not by the court.—Maxwell v. Bay City Bridge Co., 41 Mich. 453.

¶ 272. Where the elements of an alleged estoppel relied upon as a defense in trover are neither admitted nor conclusively ascertained, and there is evidence tending to show plaintiff's ownership, the case is one for the jury under proper instruction, and should not be taken from them.—Ashman v. Epsteine, 50 Mich. 360.

¶ 273. In an action of trover the elements of a supposed estoppel against the plaintiff from claiming ownership of a watch pawned by her husband should be submitted to the jury under hypothetical instructions.—Ashman v. Epsteine, 50 Mich. 360.

¶ 274. The question of whether plaintiff in trover is estopped to claim the property by her silence is one for the jury under proper instructions, where she contends that she asserted her title to the property in suit when the chattel mortgage upon which it was seized was given by her husband and she refused to execute it; that she again asserted it when the officer attempted to get the property upon the chattel mortgage, and did not allow him to take it until it was replevined; but where her testimony was contradicted.—Holmes v. Smith, 149 Mich. 327.

¶ 275. Where, in a suit for damages for negligently permitting fire to escape upon plaintiff's premises, the plaintiff testified that the defendant stated he would come up later, as soon as the snow was off, look at the damages, straighten up the matter, and pay plaintiff the amount of the damages, the question is properly submitted to the jury whether defendant was estopped to deny that he was the person liable and the proper party to sue.—Ripley v. Priest, 169 Mich. 383.

§ 61. Instructions and requests.

General law of instructions, see Instructions.

¶ 276. Where, in an action to recover for goods sold by plaintiffs to defendants, and upon a like claim that had been assigned to plaintiffs by a third person, the chief question was whether defendants were partners, and where there was testimony, which, if believed, would estop defendants from denying the existence of the partnership as against the assignor, although not as against plaintiffs in their own right, an instruction allowing the jury to apply such estoppel to both claims was erroneous.—Armstrong v. Potter, 103 Mich. 409.

¶ 277. The court should have instructed the jury as to the duty resting upon a party to speak when by silence another acting in good faith is misled, in an action for the price of a carload of lumber; where, even though the lumber was ordered in defendant's name without his knowledge, the evidence shows that plaintiff sent an invoice to defendant stating that the lumber had been sold to defendant, and later various letters and telegrams relating to such shipment, and yet the defendant failed to disclaim having ordered the lumber until several months after such shipment.—Long-Bell Lumber Co. v. Nyman, 145 Mich. 477.

ESTRAYS to EVICTION.

Cross-References.

Estrays—
- See Animals; Fences; Railroads, VIII, F.

Evasion—
- Contempt by evasion of decree or process, see Contempt.
- In pleading, see Equity, VII; Pleading.
- In testimony or answers, see Examination of Witnesses, I.
- Presumption from evasive answers, see Evidence §§ 62-65.
- Hindrance of creditors, see Fraudulent Conveyances; Creditors' Suits.
- Illegality of contracts in evasion of law, see Contracts § 50.

Evening Schools—
- See Schools.

Eviction—
- As breach of covenants for title, see Covenants for Title, III.
- Of tenant, see Landlord and Tenant, IV.
- Of cotenant, see Tenants in Common, II.
- By forcible entry, see Forcible Entry.
- Remedy by ejectment, see Ejectment.
- Elements and measure of damages, see Damages.
- In sense of ejection of passenger, see Carriers, IV.

EVIDENCE.

TREATS of the means and rules for proof or disproof of facts in issue or involved in the issues in civil cases, and of the burden of proof and the presumptions of law and the judicial knowledge which take the place of positive evidence. It excludes the Examination of Witnesses, which see, the practice on introducing or offering proof and the order in which the proofs shall be received (see Trial, V), the necessity and sufficiency of objections to evidence (see Trial, V; Saving Questions), and the calling, competency, credibility, and impeachment of witnesses and also incompetency of priviliged communications to witnesses (see Witnesses). It also excludes evidence and rules of evidence in prosecutions for crime (see Indictment, VIII).

I. JUDICIAL NOTICE (§§ 1-28).
II. PRESUMPTIONS AND BURDEN OF PROOF (§§ 29-70).

Analysis and Index to Sections.

III. RELEVANCY AND COMPETENCY IN GENERAL (§§ 71-106).
IV. BEST AND SECONDARY RULES (§§ 107-154).
V. PAROL OR EXTRINSIC EVIDENCE TO VARY OR EXPLAIN WRITINGS (§§ 155-206).
VI. OPINIONS AND CONCLUSIONS (§§ 207-306).
VII. HEARSAY, CHARACTER, DECLARATIONS, AND RES GESTÆ (§§ 307-490).
VIII. DOCUMENTARY EVIDENCE (§§ 491-566).
IX. EVIDENCE ADDRESSES TO THE SENSES; REAL EVIDENCE (§§ 567-577).
X. WEIGHT, PREPONDERANCE AND SUFFICIENCY (§§ 578-610).
XI. WITNESSES AND MEANS OF PRODUCTION (§ 611).
XII. INTRODUCTION, OFFER AND STRIKING OR WITHDRAWING (§ 612).
XIII. EXAMINATION AND OBJECTIONS (§ 613).

Analysis.

I. Judicial notice.

§ 1. In general, nature, scope and restrictions.
§ 2. Matters of general, common or scientific knowledge.
§ 3. Qualities and characteristics of things.
§ 4. Animal traits and dispositions.
§ 5. Meanings of current words or phrases or abbreviations.
§ 6. Divisions of time, Sundays and holidays.
§ 7. Mortality tables.
§ 8. Historical and political facts.
§ 9. Geographical and geological facts.
§ 10. Political divisions and boundaries.
§ 11. Public revenues and fiscal affairs.
§ 12. Business methods, usages and facts.
§ 13. Travel, transportation and communication.
§ 14. ——Operating and structural facts and conditions.
§ 15. ——Speed and time of transit.
§ 16. Mechanical facts and working experience.
§ 17. Care, skill and negligence.
§ 18. Public records and files, legislative journals, etc.
§ 19. Judicial records.
§ 20. Courts, judges and public officers.
§ 21. ——Courts and officers of other states.
§ 22. Official usages, practices and actions.
§ 23. Statutes and laws.
§ 24. ——Acts of incorporation and charters.
§ 25. ——Operation, effect or application of statutes.
§ 26. Ordinances and police regulations.
§ 27. Foreign laws and statutes.
§ 28. Corporate by-laws and regulations and internal affairs.

II. Presumptions and burden of proof.

§ 29. Classes, nature and effect of presumptions.
§ 30. Exclusion of presumptions by evidence, offer or law.
§ 31. Inference upon inference or presumption.
§ 32. Neutralizing and opposing presumption.
§ 33. Conclusiveness of presumptions.
§ 34. Normality, sequence and regularity of action.
§ 35. ——Receipt of letters mailed or goods shipped.
§ 36. Legality and validity.
§ 37. Performance of legal duty.
§ 38. Performance of official duty.
§ 39. Causes and effects, natural laws.
§ 40. Continuance of existing conditions.
§ 41. Prior condition or facts.
§ 42. Identity, status or personal conditions and relations.

§ 43. Corporate attributes, existence and facts.
§ 44. Human actions and conduct.
§ 45. Interest or motive.
§ 46. Intent, knowledge or notice.
§ 47. ——Knowledge of the law.
§ 48. ——Knowledge of laws of one's own corporation.
§ 49. As to innocence, good faith or fraud.
§ 50. Assent, acquiescence or waiver.
§ 51. As to contracts and their legality and consideration.
§ 52. As to payment, discharge or satisfaction.
§ 53. As to titles, grants and wills.
§ 54. As to ownership or seizin.
§ 55. ——Grantor in possession after grant.
§ 56. As to possession.
§ 57. As to damages and values, worth or salability.
§ 58. As to jurisdiction and procedure and records.
§ 59. As to foreign laws or common law elsewhere.
§ 60. ——As to validity of transactions abroad.
§ 61. Presumptions against stale claims.
§ 62. Presumption from falsification or contrivance.
§ 63. Presumptions from failure to attend and make proofs.
§ 64. ——Nonproduction or destruction of books or papers.
§ 65. ——Nonproduction of witnesses.
§ 66. Burden of proof in general.
§ 67. ——Negation, avoidance or exception.
§ 68. Burden of proving foreign laws.
§ 69. Burden of proving foundation for evidence offered.
§ 70. Rule as to shifting of burden.

III. Relevancy and competency in general.

§ 71. In general, relation to issues and theory of case.
§ 72. Legal and equitable rules.
§ 73. Facts admitted, presumed or not questioned.
§ 74. Reason or genesis of facts in issue.
§ 75. Reality and origin of plaintiff's interest in suit.
§ 76. Preliminary or foundation facts.
§ 77. Indirect or circumstantial facts.
§ 78. Hypothetical and speculative facts.
§ 79. Cumulative or corroborative evidence.
§ 80. Negative evidence.
§ 81. Evidence to prove attentiveness, observation and memory of witness.
§ 82. Evidence against public policy.
§ 83. Evidence wrongfully procured.
§ 84. Rebuttal and explanatory evidence.
§ 85. ——Relationship, authority or financial condition.
§ 86. ——Explanation to rebut discrediting evidence or inferences.
§ 87. Evidence supplementary or explanatory of view by jury.
§ 88. Evidence to meet or rebut statements of court or counsel.
§ 89. Evidence made relevant or competent by other evidence.
§ 90. ——By admission of improper evidence.
§ 91. ——Complementary portion of records, correspondence or conversation.
§ 92. ——Writings referred to in testimony.
§ 93. Admissibility for some but not for all purposes.

§ 94. Prior and subsequent facts.
§ 95. Similar distinct or disconnected facts.
§ 96. Comparisons or tests with other things, times or places.
§ 97. Acts or transactions with third persons.
§ 98. To prove particular facts.
§ 99. To prove mental state or attitude.
§ 100. To prove physical or bodily conditions, causes and effects.
§ 101. To prove expectancy of life.
§ 102. To prove intent, knowledge or motive.
§ 103. To prove ownership, control or possession.
§ 104. To show identity, genuineness or authorship.
§ 105. ——Identity or location of land.
§ 106. Solvency and insolvency.

IV. Best and secondary rules.

A. DISTINCTION BETWEEN BEST AND SECONDARY; WHAT IS BEST.

§ 107. In general, nature and distinctions.
§ 108. Duplicates and multiple originals.
§ 109. Photographic or mechanical facsimiles.
§ 110. Oral statements reduced to writing.
§ 111. Copy itself as primary evidence.
§ 112. Records and official copies as primary evidence.
§ 113. One's own age.
§ 114. Ownership, title or claim.
§ 115. Amount or debt or payment.
§ 116. Notices.
§ 117. Identity, existence or custody of writing or entry.
§ 118. Location, identity or possession of property.
§ 119. Execution, filing and recording of instruments.
§ 120. Contents of writings in general.
§ 121. Public acts and resolutions, ordinances and statutes.
§ 122. Judgments and judicial acts and process.
§ 123. Ballots and elections.
§ 124. Establishment and location of roads and public places.
§ 125. Private corporate acts and resolves.
§ 126. Official or representative or trust capacity.
§ 127. Contracts and their terms and effect in general.
§ 128. ——Contracts partly written.
§ 129. Sales and transfers.
§ 130. Warrants, commercial paper, payments and receipts.
§ 131. Grants and conveyances and mortgages.
§ 132. Leases and leaseholds and tenancies.
§ 133. Trusts and their terms.
§ 134. Administration, probate and settlement.
§ 135. Existence and contents of wills.
§ 136. Advancements to heirs or legatees.

B. WHEN SECONDARY IS ADMISSIBLE; LAYING FOUNDATION.

§ 137. Admissibility in general.
§ 138. ——After failure to produce on notice.
§ 139. Restorable papers and records.
§ 140. Original invalid or deficient.
§ 141. Original inaccessible or beyond jurisdiction.
§ 142. Public records and documents not producible.
§ 143. Voluntary or intentional destruction.

§ 144. Failure to preserve stipulated evidence or record.
§ 145. Copies attached to depositions or pleadings.
§ 146. Necessity and sufficiency of notice to produce.
§ 147. Sufficiency of search for original.
§ 148. Preliminary proofs for foundation.
§ 149. ——Public and judicial documents and records and files.
§ 150. ——Deeds, contracts, notes, and private papers.
§ 151. ——Letters or messages.
§ 152. Competency or propriety of secondary proofs.
§ 153. ——Proper witnesses.
§ 154. Degrees in secondary parol or written proofs.

V. Parol or extrinsic evidence to vary or explain writings.

A. In General; Particular Instruments and Recitals.

§ 155. General rule as to contradiction or variance.
§ 156. Admissibility to annul, invalidate or disprove factum of instrument.
§ 157. ——To show conditional execution.
§ 158. ——To show genuineness or true contract.
§ 159. Purpose or circumstances of contract or writing.
§ 160. Execution and date of instrument.
§ 161. Explaining or showing true consideration.
§ 162. ——Where effect of contract would be changed.
§ 163. Failure, illegality or nonexistence of consideration.
§ 164. Explaining or completing instrument.
§ 165. ——Ambiguity or incompleteness.
§ 166. ——What admissible generally, custom and usage.
§ 167. ——Admissibility of particulars of other contracts.
§ 168. ——Restriction of parol to matters in doubt or incomplete.
§ 169. Complementary and supplementary portions of agreements.
§ 170. Contemporaneous oral or written agreements.
§ 171. Prior or contemporaneous negotiations, letters or statements.
§ 172. Intent or understanding of parties.
§ 173. Terms and words of trade, science and art.
§ 174. Changing, restricting or extending liability.
§ 175. ——Showing suretyship or secondary liability.
§ 176. Time, place or manner of performance, payment or discharge.
§ 177. Compensation or rate of payment.
§ 178. Attaching or discharging conditions.
§ 179. Adding or qualifying warranties.
§ 180. Attaching defeasance or condition to absolute transfer.
§ 181. Nature or character of instrument.
§ 182. Capacity, character and identity of parties.
§ 183. Identification of subject or object or debt.
§ 184. Situs and boundaries of land.
§ 185. Obligation and condition of mortgage.
§ 186. Estates and interests transferred.
§ 187. Writings and written provisions within the rule.
§ 188. ——Orders and bills of sale.
§ 189. ——Letters and noncontractual writings.
§ 190. Receipts and written acknowledgments.
§ 191. ——Containing contract or recital of contract.
§ 192. Bills of lading and shipping receipts.

§ 193. Wills and codicils.
§ 194. Private corporation's or association's records and papers.
§ 195. Legislative and official records and writings.
§ 196. ——Election records, ballots and papers.
§ 197. ——Title records.
§ 198. Judgments and judicial records and writings.

B. As to Strangers or When Issues Are Collateral.

§ 199. As to strangers to the writing.
§ 200. Relation of issues to the writing; collateralness.
§ 201. Relations and rights of parties to commercial paper.
§ 202. Other contracts or writings between the parties.
§ 203. Oral contracts involving written ones.

C. As to Subsequent Facts and Transactions.

§ 204. In general; subsequent acts and modifications.
§ 205. ——Practical construction by parties.
§ 206. Acts of waiver, election, acceptance or estoppel.

VI. Opinions and conclusions.

A. Conclusions or Facts and Nonexpert Opinions.

§ 207. General rule as to admissibility.
§ 208. Opinions made admissible by other testimony.
§ 209. Direct evidence excluding opinions.
§ 210. Hypotheses, probabilities and speculations.
§ 211. Admissible deductions, opinions and observations.
§ 212. Legal rights, duties and liabilities.
§ 213. Existence, effect and terms of agreements.
§ 214. Ownership or title.
§ 215. ——By gift.
§ 216. Demand, presentment or refusal.
§ 217. Partnership, agency or authority.
§ 218. Existence and contents of records.
§ 219. Public interest, uses and necessities.
§ 220. Causes and effects.
§ 221. ——Injuries to person and property.
§ 222. Identity or resemblance of things or persons.
§ 223. Distances, directions and boundaries.
§ 224. Estimates of quantity, value, cost, or damages.
§ 225. Speed or motion.
§ 226. Structural and physical conditions and mechanics.
§ 227. Interference, hindrance and obstructions.
§ 228. Care, skill or neglect.
§ 229. Safety or danger.
§ 230. Animal traits and characteristics.
§ 231. Mental attitude or feelings.
§ 232. Motives and reasons for actions.
§ 233. Knowledge, understanding, intent, and assent.
§ 234. Imposition, fraud or undue influence.
§ 235. One's own intent, reasons or thoughts.
§ 236. Bodily conditions, pain, sickness, and health.
§ 237. Personal ability and faculties.
§ 238. Ability to see or hear.
§ 239. Sanity and competency.
§ 240. Intoxication.

§ 241. Proper questions for nonexperts or experts.
§ 242. ——Operation of cause and effect.
§ 243. ——Bodily conditions, sickness and health.
§ 244. ——Mental state or capacity.
§ 245. ——Boundaries, landmarks and surveys.
§ 246. ——Travel, transportation and mechanics.
§ 247. ——Speed of trains or vehicles.
§ 248. Knowledge or observation as basis for nonexpert opinions.
§ 249. ——Proof of data, knowledge or observation.
§ 250. ——As to values, cost or damages.
§ 251. ——As to sanity or mental state.
§ 252. ——As to handwriting or signatures.
§ 253. Comparisons as basis for opinions.

B. Expert Opinions.

1. Subjects for and qualifications of witness.

§ 254. In general; proper subjects and scope.
§ 255. Rebuttal opinions.
§ 256. Professional and trade skill and practices.
§ 257. Bodily conditions, causes and effects, and prognosis.
§ 258. Expectancy of life.
§ 259. Mental capacity or conditions.
§ 260. Signatures, writings, alterations, and genuineness.
§ 261. Meanings and translations.
§ 262. Customs, usages and matters of trade.
§ 263. Values and damages or loss.
§ 264. Surveys, boundaries and landmarks.
§ 265. Mechanics and construction.
§ 266. Railroads, transportation and shipping.
§ 267. Logging and lumbering.
§ 268. Agriculture and domestic animals.
§ 269. Danger or safety.
§ 270. Qualifications of experts.
§ 271. ——Evidence as to qualifications and experience.
§ 272. ——As a question of law.
§ 273. ——On medical, pathological and physiological questions.
§ 274. ——On skill or competency of persons.
§ 275. ——On questions relating to animals.
§ 276. ——On signatures and handwriting and forgeries.
§ 277. ——Knowledge of handwriting.
§ 278. ——On trade terms, usages and customs.
§ 279. ——On engineering and surveying.
§ 280. ——On mechanics and construction.
§ 281. ——On railroad and transportation questions.
§ 282. ——As to speed, times and distances.
§ 283. ——On mining questions.
§ 284. ——On logging and lumbering and scaling.
§ 285. ——On navigation and shipping.
§ 286. ——As to values and prices or damages.
§ 287. ——As to land values and damages.
§ 288. ——As to value of services or labor.
§ 289. ——As to value of one's own services or property.
§ 290. ——As to depreciation or loss.
§ 291. ——On expectancies and probable value of earnings.

2. Basis of opinion and form of question or hypothesis.

§ 292. Basis or predicate for opinion.
§ 293. Necessity and sufficiency of proof of data or predicate.
§ 294. Sources of knowledge or experience.
§ 295. ——Personal experience, observation and attendance.
§ 296. ——Market reports and comparative values.
§ 297. ——Comparison of questioned writings.
§ 298. Form and scope of question.
§ 299. ——Of hypothetical questions.
§ 300. ——Long or confusing questions.
§ 301. ——Ambiguity or uncertainty in question.
§ 302. ——Questions based on hearing of testimony by expert.
§ 303. ——Allusions to quotations from books.
§ 304. Reduction of question to writing.
§ 305. Relation of question to the issues, specificness and details.
§ 306. Form, construction and responsiveness of the opinion.

VII. Hearsay, character, declarations, and res gestæ.

A. HEARSAY AND DECLARATIONS OUT OF COURT IN GENERAL.

§ 307. Hearsay in general, what constitutes.
§ 308. Party's acts and declarations as hearsay.
§ 309. Conversations between parties.
§ 310. Common remark or bystanders' comment.
§ 311. Testimony by witness based on others' statements or knowledge.
§ 312. Testimony by others as to what a party said or did.
§ 313. Testimony as to source of information or authority.
§ 314. Testimony partly hearsay.
§ 315. Private writings and entries as hearsay.
§ 316. Writings emanating from third persons.
§ 317. Statements based on writings made by others.
§ 318. Market quotations.
§ 319. Conversations over telephone.
§ 320. Official or public statements and declarations.
§ 321. Exceptions to hearsay rule, matters provable.
§ 322. Recitals in ancient documents.
§ 323. Pedigree, age and relationship.
§ 324. Identity, existence or residence of persons.
§ 325. Possession, title, identity or ownership of property.
§ 326. Admissibility on issues other than facts stated.
§ 327. ——To prove the making of the statement.
§ 328. ——To bring notice or knowledge to others.
§ 329. Declarations evincive of claim or dominion.
§ 330. ——Evincive of adverse claim or possession.
§ 331. ——Evincive of responsibility or authorship.
§ 332. ——Evincive of feelings or mental attitude.
§ 333. ——Evincive of good or bad faith, knowledge or intent of declarant.
§ 334. ——Evincive of understanding, recognition, demand, claim, or protest.
§ 335. ——To show sanity, mentality or rationality of declarant.
§ 336. Declarations by persons since deceased.
§ 337. Former testimony of witness present or available.
§ 338. Testimony on former trial by person since dead, absent or incompetent.

§ 339. ——Testimony available by deposition.
§ 340. ——Completeness and character of former examination.
§ 341. ——Identity of theories, issues and parties.
§ 342. ——For or against whom admissible.
§ 343. ——Sufficiency of foundation proof.
§ 344. ——Stipulations for admission.
§ 345. Sufficiency of proof of declaration; exact words or substance.
§ 346. Means and sufficiency of proof of former testimony.
§ 347. Witnesses to portions of conversation or testimony.

B. Reputation and Character.

§ 348. In general, what constitutes.
§ 349. General reputation and specific facts.
§ 350. When admissible.
§ 351. ——In libel and slander.
§ 352. Sobriety or temperateness.
§ 353. Disposition, peaceableness or quarrelsomeness.
§ 354. Chastity and morality.
§ 355. Financial repute or credit, honesty and integrity.
§ 356. Reputed qualities and traits of animals.
§ 357. Common report and understanding.
§ 358. Mode and means of proving reputation.

C. Admissions and Declarations Against Interest.

1. In general; subject-matter and relation to issues.

§ 359. In general.
§ 360. Concessions or admissions of law.
§ 361. Relevancy to or connection with matters in issue.
§ 362. Competency of declarant or his statements.
§ 363. Interest or motive of declarant at time.
§ 364. Declarations or acts in derogation of title or possession.
§ 365. ——As to boundaries or extent of possession.
§ 366. Rebuttal or contradiction by admissions.
§ 367. Foundation evidence of interest, privity, etc.

2. Nature, form and sufficiency of admission; implied admissions.

§ 368. In general.
§ 369. Ambiguous, noncommittal or uncertain statements.
§ 370. Fragmentary or incomplete admissions.
§ 371. Fear, threats or favor inducing admissions.
§ 372. Statements made in different capacity or relationship.
§ 373. Statements to two or more persons jointly.
§ 374. Official acts, declarations and writings.
§ 375. Oral admissions where writing is requisite.
§ 376. Testimony or admissions in other proceedings.
§ 377. Statements, reports and writings as admissions.
§ 378. Entries and charges on account books.
§ 379. Accounts rendered or stated.
§ 380. Receipts and acknowledgments of payment or delivery.
§ 381. Statements and recitals in pleadings.
§ 382. Statements and recitals in contracts.
§ 383. Statements and recitals in deeds and grants.
§ 384. Statements contained in invalid writings.
§ 385. Implied from conduct, secretiveness and denials of fact.

§ 386. Silence in the face of assertions of fact.
§ 387. Omission to reply to letters.
§ 388. Assertion or nonassertion of claim or suit.
§ 389. ——Claim and proofs of insurance loss.
§ 390. Claims of title or possession in general.
§ 391. Claiming common source of title.
§ 392. Making payment or tender or delivery.
§ 393. Assessment or payment of taxes.
§ 394. Offers of compromise or settlement.
§ 395. ——Proposal to buy, sell or lease.
§ 396. Settlements or offers to settle with others.
§ 397. Proposals to contract and unexecuted drafts.
§ 398. Proposal to make legacy or devise.
§ 399. Subsequent acts as admissions of negligence.
§ 400. ——Making repairs and changes.

3. Statements and acts by third persons, privies, representatives, and agents.

§ 401. By third persons in general.
§ 402. Statements not heard or communicated to party to be affected.
§ 403. ——Statements to interpreter.
§ 404. By witness out of court.
§ 405. By parties joined or related in interest.
§ 406. ——Parties to bills and notes.
§ 407. By coheirs or colegatees.
§ 408. ——As to competency of testator or validity of will.
§ 409. Declarations by decedents in general.
§ 410. ——As to advancements or gifts.
§ 411. ——Bookkeepers' entries and statements.
§ 412. By testator evincive of undue influence or mental condition.
§ 413. By testator to contents of will.
§ 414. By predecessor in title or estate.
§ 415. ——Declarations prior to interest.
§ 416. ——Declarations after interest ceased or grant made.
§ 417. By mortgagor or mortgagee.
§ 418. By person in possession.
§ 419. By coconspirators and persons in concert of action.
§ 420. By copartners.
§ 421. ——After dissolution or before partnership.
§ 422. ——As to fact of partnership.
§ 423. By parent, child or relative of party.
§ 424. By husband or wife against each other.
§ 425. ——In crim. con. and alienation suits.
§ 426. By trustees, guardians, and the like.
§ 427. By agents in general.
§ 428. ——By agent's servant or subagent.
§ 429. Pertinency of statements to scope of agency.
§ 430. ——Statements after the fact.
§ 431. ——Explanations of accidents and injuries.
§ 432. By corporate officers or agents.
§ 433. By attorneys at law.
§ 434. By persons referred to for information or decision.
§ 435. ——Award of umpire, arbitrator or scaler.
§ 436. By public officers.
§ 437. Foundation proof of agency or privity.

§ 438. ——Of conspiracy or concert.
§ 439. ——Declarations or assumptions by agent that he is such or has authority.

4. Scope and effect of admissions, and explanation or rebuttal.

§ 440. Scope, effect and construction of the admission.
§ 441. ——Construction of admission against maker.
§ 442. Explanation and rebuttal of admissions.
§ 443. ——Contrary statements.

D. Res Gestæ.

§ 444. In general; nature and admissibility.
§ 445. Spontaneousness; answers to questions.
§ 446. Statements of reason, purpose or explanation.
§ 447. To characterize possession or claim of right.
§ 448. ——Location of boundaries.
§ 449. To show assent or dissent.
§ 450. To characterize feelings or state of mind.
§ 451. To evince malice, intent, fraud or knowledge.
§ 452. To show hearing, attentiveness or consciousness.
§ 453. Exclamations and complaints of pain or sickness.
§ 454. ——Incident to medical examination or treatment.
§ 455. ——Made to prospective witness.
§ 456. Narratives and statements relating to past injury or sickness.
§ 457. Of existence, formation and terms of contract.
§ 458. ——Oral contracts.
§ 459. ——Performance, acceptance or rejection.
§ 460. Of scale, measurement or survey.
§ 461. Of recordation of instruments.
§ 462. Of accounting and settlements.
§ 463. Of execution of writs, levy and sale.
§ 464. Of torts and wrongdoing.
§ 465. To prove or rebut neglect or care or skill.
§ 466. ——Acts of others in like or common situation.
§ 467. ——Statement or act of driver carrying guest.
§ 468. Statements and acts after the time.
§ 469. ——Statements and acts relative to injury.
§ 470. Manner or demeanor as res gestæ.
§ 471. Entries, memoranda or writings as res gestæ.
§ 472. ——Correspondence.
§ 473. ——Orders and receipts.
§ 474. ——Writings involved in alleged fraud.
§ 475. Acts of coconspirators and persons in concert.
§ 476. Acts or statements by husband or wife.
§ 477. Acts and statements of copartners.
§ 478. Acts and declarations by agents.
§ 479. ——By corporate agents or officers.
§ 480. ——As showing nature of authority.
§ 481. ——Declarations incident to possession, reception or refusal of property.
§ 482. ——Relation of act or statement to duty or authority.
§ 483. ——Railroad clerks and agents and trainmen.
§ 484. ——Subsequent statements; time and connection.

E. Self-serving Declarations.

§ 485. In general.
§ 486. Claims and declarations of title.
§ 487. Writings and memoranda by party.
§ 488. Statements and declarations by decedents.
§ 489. By others in party's interest.
§ 490. By party's agents.

VIII. Documentary evidence.

A. In General; Private Writings.

§ 491. Admissibility in general.
§ 492. Deeds and mortgages.
§ 493. ——Connection with or relation to party's claim or title.
§ 494. Invalid or unstamped deeds, contracts or instruments.
§ 495. Instruments showing alteration.
§ 496. Unrecorded or illegally recorded plats and deeds.
§ 497. Preparatory drafts and unexecuted writings.
§ 498. Papers connected by reference or otherwise.
§ 499. Papers bearing diverse instruments.
§ 500. Private record books or diaries.
§ 501. Memoranda or minutes.
§ 502. Indorsements and stamped impressions on papers.
§ 503. Corporate books.
§ 504. Maps and diagrams.
§ 505. Photographs.
§ 506. Records of data, work or operations involving complexity.
§ 507. ——Train and car records.
§ 508. Ancient documents and records.
§ 509. Baptismal records and parish registers.
§ 510. Marriage certificates and registers.
§ 511. Books on science, art or special subjects.
§ 512. Self-proving documents.
§ 513. ——Acknowledged or recorded deeds and mortgages.
§ 514. ——Executed abroad or for foreign lands.
§ 515. Foundation proof of authenticity.
§ 516. ——Writings for purpose of comparing handwriting.
§ 517. ——Of correctness of map or diagram.
§ 518. ——Of authority of agent to execute.
§ 519. ——Necessity of proof by attesting witnesses.
§ 520. ——Sufficiency of proof of execution.
§ 521. ——Right to inspect and cross-examine.

B. Books of Account.

§ 522. In general; admissibility.
§ 523. Firm and individual books.
§ 524. Corporate books.
§ 525. Books of original entry.
§ 526. Foundation proofs.
§ 527. ——Necessary or proper witnesses to prove books.

C. Official and Public Records and Documents.

1. Admissibility in general.

§ 528. In general.
§ 529. Improper and unnecessary recitals and records.

§ 530. ——Deeds and plats improperly recorded.
§ 531. Proof of absence of matters from records or documents.
§ 532. Published books of laws and ordinances.
§ 533. Public reports and documents.
§ 534. Municipal records and books or minutes.
§ 535. Official indorsements and file marks.
§ 536. Certificates of death or birth or marriage.
§ 537. Inquest of death and verdict.
§ 538. Weather records.
§ 539. Official grants, deeds and transfers.
§ 540. Tax receipts, certificates and deeds.
§ 541. Official surveys and certificates.
§ 542. Records of deeds, mortgages, etc.
§ 543. Record of will or probate.
§ 544. Judgment and judicial records.
§ 545. Mode and means of proving judgments.
§ 546. ——Of inferior courts and justices.
§ 547. Stenographers' notes or transcripts.
§ 548. Pleadings, files and affidavits.
§ 549. Foundation proof.
§ 550. ——Of authenticity of foreign book of statutes or reports.

2. Transcripts and copies.

§ 551. Certified or authenticated copies of records.
§ 552. ——Of land office maps and records.
§ 553. ——Of filed certificates of birth, death and marriage.
§ 554. ——Of parish registers.
§ 555. Copies and transcripts of foreign laws.
§ 556. Requisites of copy or transcript, certification and authentication.
§ 557. ——Of deed or title record.
§ 558. ——Of records of federal courts and government offices.
§ 559. ——Of judgments and judicial records.
§ 560. ——Of foreign judgments and records under statute.
§ 561. ——Of foreign records and judgments under act of congress.
§ 562. Transcripts and certifications of inferior judgments.
§ 563. ——Of foreign justices and inferior courts.
§ 564. Certificate going to part only of record or copy.
§ 565. Sworn copies.
§ 566. Probative force and effect of copies and certificates.

IX. Evidence addresses to the senses; real evidence.

§ 567. Objects, models and things as evidence.
§ 568. Inspection and comparison of goods.
§ 569. Inspection and comparison of questioned writings by jury.
§ 570. Demonstrations and operation of machines.
§ 571. Reproduction of sound by phonograph.
§ 572. Appearance as shown by photographs.
§ 573. Inspection of person for resemblance or identity.
§ 574. Examination of alleged incompetent.
§ 575. Exhibition of person or injured part.
§ 576. Foundation proofs of identity, etc.
§ 577. Power to compel exhibition or demonstration.

Analysis and Index to Sections.

X. Weight, preponderance and sufficiency.

§ 578. In general; preponderance rule.
§ 579. "Positive" or other statutory degrees and kinds of proof.
§ 580. Statutory effect to be given record evidence.
§ 581. Stipulations for proof.
§ 582. Sufficiency of proofs.
§ 583. ——Of negative fact.
§ 584. ——Secondary evidence.
§ 585. ——Issues of criminality in civil suits.
§ 586. ——Of particular facts.
§ 587. ——To establish foreign law.
§ 588. ——To prove title or possession.
§ 589. ——Authorship or genuineness of writings.
§ 590. Weight, effect and construction.
§ 591. ——Uncontradicted evidence.
§ 592. ——Error or falsity affecting weight.
§ 593. ——Withholding or suppression affecting weight.
§ 594. ——Admissions and declarations out of court.
§ 595. ——Documentary or official evidence.
§ 596. Consideration as a whole.
§ 597. ——Testimony of adverse party.
§ 598. ——Of cross-examination with direct.
§ 599. Conclusions by nonexperts.
§ 600. Opinions of experts.
§ 601. Conclusiveness or unimpeachability of evidence.
§ 602. ——Admissions by party.
§ 603. ——Receipts and acknowledgments in writing.
§ 604. Conflict or balance of evidence.
§ 605. Positive and negative evidence.
§ 606. ——What regarded as negative.
§ 607. Written and oral evidence.
§ 608. Acts and declarations in conflict.
§ 609. Presumptions or inferences against positive evidence.
§ 610. Evidence opposed to natural probability.

XI. Witnesses and means of production.

§ 611. In general; cross-references.

XII. Introduction, offer and striking or withdrawing.

§ 612. In general; cross-references.

XIII. Examination and objections.

§ 613. In general; cross-references.

Establishment of facts otherwise than by evidence, see as follows:
Admissions in pleadings, see Pleading, IX; Equity, VII, F.
Admissions in open court, see Trial, V.
Preclusion by estoppel, see Estoppel; Former Adjudication.
Stipulations of fact, see Stipulations.

What law governs rules of evidence, see Conflict of Laws § 42.
Depositions and use of them as evidence, see Depositions.
Rules against pleading evidence, see Equity § 81; Pleading.
Newly discovered evidence as ground for rehearing, bill of review or new trial, see Equity, XI; New Trial, II, H.

I. JUDICIAL NOTICE.

§ 1. In general, nature, scope and restrictions.

Nature of presumptions as substitute for affirmative proof, rule against indulgence, see post § 30.

Necessity of proof of facts to which judicially known statute applies, see post § 25.

Inadmissibility of recourse to judicial knowledge to help out demurrer to bill, see Equity ¶ 440.

Judicial notice taken in criminal cases, see Indictment, VIII, A.

Judicial notice on appeal or error, see Appeal § 344.

Judicial notice of identity of attorney of court where effect would be to prove illegal action, see Appeal ¶ 1442.

¶ 1. Where the statute itself prescribes what shall constitute the evidence that its provisions are in force in a particular county, it negatives the taking of judicial notice of such fact.—People v. Murphy, 93 Mich. 41.

¶ 2. Where by statute judicial notice is required to be taken of organizations incorporated under a general act, some means of public information should be provided.—People ex rel. Shumway v. Bennett, 29 Mich. 451.

¶ 3. Judicial notice cannot be taken, especially in contradiction of the return on certiorari, that special commissioners in a drain-opening proceeding were interested.—Roberts v. Smith, 115 Mich. 5.

¶ 4. The court will not take notice of the natural laws relating to centrifugal force and rely upon them when to do so it must disregard the testimony of witnesses.—Dupuis v. Saginaw Valley Traction Co., 146 Mich. 151.

§ 2. Matters of general, common or scientific knowledge.

Various subjects of knowledge, see post §§ 3-28.

Qualities and characteristics of particular things, see post § 3.

Mechanical and working experiences and knowledge, see post §§ 14, 16.

Specific gravity and buoyancy of substances in water, see post ¶ 23.

Testimony contradicting natural forces, see also ante ¶ 4.

¶ 5. The obvious laws of nature and of the human mind, and such dictates of common sense and principles of human action as are assumed as truths by the mass of sane minds, constitute a part of the law of the land, and courts are bound judicially to know and apply such laws and principles accordingly.—Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Miller, 25 Mich. 274.

¶ 6. Courts usually take notice of matters of which everyone takes notice.—People v. Plummer, 189 Mich. 415.

¶ 7. Courts will take judicial notice of modern discoveries and inventions that have become of general and almost universal use in our commercial life.—Theisen v. Detroit Taxicab & Transfer Co., 200 Mich. 136.

¶ 8. The perilous conditions surrounding the people, due to widespread forest fires in Michigan, may be taken judicial notice of. Konieczny v. Detroit & M. Ry. Co., 164 Mich. 66.

¶ 9. The court will take judicial notice that lodge halls to be used by secret societies need to have the floors deadened in order to prevent communications being heard outside the room, or else will not be suitable for such use.—Young v. Collett, 63 Mich. 331.

¶ 10. Judicial knowledge is taken that the cost of building and running railroads in the upper peninsula is much greater than in the lower; that being a matter of general knowledge.—Wellman v. Chicago & G. T. R. Co., 83 Mich. 592; affirmed in 143 U. S. 339, 36 L. ed. 176, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 400.

¶ 11. Judicial notice will be taken of the fact that it is impossible to make an accurate inventory of saw-logs afloat in a stream.—McGuire v. Saginaw Circuit Judge, 101 Mich. 275.

¶ 12. Judicial notice will be taken of a custom of reading from the Bible in the presence of students, and of offering prayer.—Pfeiffer v. Board of Education of Detroit, 118 Mich. 560.

¶ 13. In a divorce proceeding, where one of the grounds of cruelty was the display of force in breaking down the door of the room in which complainant had fled to prevent defendant's taking from complainant the certificate of her marriage, the court judicially noticed that every wife desires to preserve her marriage certificate.—Creyts v. Creyts, 133 Mich. 4.

¶ 14. Where a health board had reason to fear danger from diseases which are generally recognized as communicable and dangerous to public health, the court could properly take judicial notice that the disease was within Comp. L. 1897, chap. 108, § 4424, relating to the care of sick or infected persons, which in plain terms includes "all diseases" where there is danger to the public health from a threatened spread of the disease.—Township of Cedar Creek v. Wexford Co. Sup'rs., 135 Mich. 124.

¶ 15. Under Comp. Laws 1897, § 11853, permitting the testimony before an examining magistrate to be reduced to writing under his direction, the court on mandamus to compel action by the magistrate will take judicial notice that some time is required to reduce it to typewriting.—Oblaser v. Wayne Circuit Judge, 159 Mich. 665.

§ 3. Qualities and characteristics of things.

As to business of dealing in specific things like ice, see post § 12.

As to care in dealing with dangerous things like electricity, see post § 17.

¶ 16. Neither court nor legislature can have knowledge of the merits or defects of oleomargarine so as to be able to declare its hygienic value.—Northwestern Mfg. Co. v. Wayne Circuit Judge, 58 Mich. 381.

¶ 17. Judicial notice cannot be taken that Calcutta fish poles are perishable property. —Imbrie v. Wetherbee & Co., 70 Mich. 103.

¶ 18. It is a matter of common knowledge that there is a great difference in the quality and value of furniture which looks much alike.—Raymond v. McKenna, 147 Mich. 35.

¶ 19. The court cannot judicially know that a rejected portrait of defendant's child will be worthless to plaintiff, the artist who painted it on an order from defendant.—Turner v. Mason, 65 Mich. 662.

¶ 20. Judicial notice was taken in a prosecution for violating an ordinance relative to disposal of garbage, that table refuse when dumped into receptacles for disposal, will speedily ferment and emit noisome odors calculated to affect public health.—People v. Gardner, 136 Mich. 693; affirmed in 199 U. S. 325, 50 L. ed. 212, 26 Sup. Ct. Rep. 106.

¶ 21. On a bill to restrain the flooding of lands it must be held to be a matter of common knowledge that lands may be damaged, even though not covered, by water which stands along them.—Miller v. Bank of Belleville, 148 Mich. 339.

¶ 22. The supreme court might well take judicial notice of the fact that the testing of automobiles is a hazardous occupation.—Blick v. Olds Motor Works, 175 Mich. 640.

¶ 23. Judicial notice will be taken of the fact that water-soaked logs, which become greater in specific gravity than the water, will sink to the bottom, and become imbedded in the soil.—Whitman v. Muskegon Log Lifting & Operating Co., 152 Mich. 645.

¶ 24. Judicial notice will be taken of the dangerous qualities of electric currents.—Warren v. City Elec. Ry. Co., 141 Mich. 298.

¶ 25. Judicial notice may be taken that it is a matter of general knowledge that electric wires of high voltage, even if insulated, are dangerous, and to be avoided.—Sweezo v. Cheboygan Electric Light & Power Co., 166 Mich. 25.

¶ 26. The fact that gasoline is a dangerous explosive will be judicially noticed.—Whittemore v. Baxter Laundry Co., 181 Mich. 564.

¶ 27. Judicial notice is taken of the fact that gasoline either alone or mixed with kerosene constitutes a highly explosive agent and that extreme care should be used by vendors thereof to prevent their mixture.—McLawson v. Paragon Refining Co., 198 Mich. 222.

¶ 28. Judicial notice will be taken that many trees annually shed large numbers of dead limbs.—Miller v. City of Detroit, 156 Mich. 630.

§ 4. Animal traits and dispositions.

As to usual measures to prevent frightening of horses on highways, see post ¶ 94.

¶ 29. Judicial notice will be taken that a box freight car standing still at a highway crossing is not of itself a frightful object to horses of ordinary gentleness; the question is not for the jury.—Gilbert v. Flint & P. M. Ry. Co., 51 Mich. 488.

¶ 30. The court cannot have judicial knowledge that an ordinarily gentle horse would or would not take fright at a given hole in a bridge floor. As a matter of common knowledge it is for the jury to determine.—Smith v. Township of Sherwood, 62 Mich. 159.

¶ 31. It is a matter of common knowledge that steam from a locomotive will frighten a gentle horse at close range.—Mahan v. Clee, 87 Mich. 161.

§ 5. Meanings of current words or phrases or abbreviations.

¶ 32. Courts take judicial notice of the meaning of the current phrases which everybody else understands, e. g., that "Beecher business" means adultery.—Bailey v. Kalamazoo Publishing Co., 40 Mich. 251.

¶ 33. A fund raised in Detroit by general contribution to aid in the building of a railroad to Butler, Ind., was commonly known as the "Butler bonus." But in proceedings to condemn land for a road to be leased to the Butler road a court could hardly take judicial notice of what the Butler bonus was for the purpose of sustaining a challenge to a juror on the ground that he had subscribed thereto.—Detroit, W. T. & J. R. Co. v. Crane, 50 Mich. 182.

¶ 34. It is a fact of which courts may take knowledge that notes known as "Bohemian Oat Notes" are all obtained and given upon a similar scheme or arrangement, and are void, as against public policy, between the maker and payee, or any other person having knowledge or information of the scheme upon which they are based and by which they are procured.—Ward v. Doane, 77 Mich. 328.

¶ 35. The court has no judicial knowledge that the phrase, "mill tally," in a contract for the delivery of logs, may not need interpretation.—Corneil v. New Era Lumber Co., 71 Mich. 350.

¶ 36. Court will not take judicial notice of the meaning of abbreviations peculiar to the description of stock in the shoe trade, but not in common use.—Dages v. Brake, 125 Mich. 64.

§ 6. Divisions of time, Sundays and holidays.

¶ 37. Judicial notice will be taken that the date of a lease in suit falls on Sunday, though neither party calls attention to it.—Hoard v. Stone, 58 Mich. 578.

§ 7. Mortality tables.

¶ 38. Judicial notice is taken of the contents of the mortuary tables of the expectancy of life, based upon American experience.—Denman v. Johnston, 85 Mich. 387.

§ 8. Historical and political facts.

Political divisions, see post § 10.

¶ 39. Matter of public history is judicially noticed.—May v. Rumney, 1 Mich. 1.

¶ 40. Judicial notice will be taken of the history of the period of the war of the rebellion.—Smith v. Aplin, Auditor-General, 80 Mich. 205.

¶ 41. Courts will take notice of the recital in public statutes of the time when a turnpike was laid out and built by the general government, and of the fact that it afterwards became subject to the state authority and went into the charge of the ordinary town officers.—Boyd v. Conklin, 54 Mich. 583.

¶ 42. In an action against a street car company for negligent injury to a hearse judicial notice as of a matter of current history may be taken of popular excitement and anger culminating in mob violence against a street car company.—Geist v. Detroit City R. R., 91 Mich. 446.

¶ 43. In a suit for injuries to the premises from the negligent spreading of fires, the court from its files and records, and from its knowledge of the history of the locality, will take judicial notice of a great drought during the period in question, and of the great danger to life and property from the extensive forest fires.—Inglis v. Millersburg Driving Ass'n, 169 Mich. 311.

¶ 44. The courts of Michigan cannot take judicial notice of the value of Canada currency, or the rate of Canada interest, as matters of historical knowledge.—Kermott v. Ayer, 11 Mich. 181.

§ 9. Geographical and geological facts.

Use of streets in travel, see post § 13.

As to times necessary for travel, see post § 15.

Political boundaries in Lake St. Clair, see post § 10, ¶ 60.

¶ 45. The court will take judicial notice of the existence of such a body of water as Lake St. Clair.—People v. Brooks, 101 Mich. 98.

¶ 46. The court took judicial notice of the fact that the city of Port Huron lies to the north of the city of St. Clair.—Vossen v. City of St. Clair, 148 Mich. 686.

¶ 47. Judicial notice is taken of the fact that the great lakes are practically tideless.—Rice v. Ruddiman, 10 Mich. 125; Lorman v. Benson, 8 Mich. 18.

¶ 48. The court will take judicial knowledge that the natural watercourses in this state have all decreased in volume, and many of them dried up, by the cultivation and clearing of the country.—Hilliker v. Coleman, 73 Mich. 170.

¶ 49. Courts will take judicial notice of the fact that small streams grow less year by year.—Andrews v. Weckerman, 144 Mich. 199.

¶ 50. It is a matter of common knowledge that in the course of the seasons the contour of the shore line in inland lakes varies.—Bird v. Stimson, 197 Mich. 582.

¶ 51. A court cannot take notice that a particular boom or any part thereof is within the limits of a certain county.—Two Hundred Thousand Feet of Logs v. Sias, 43 Mich. 356.

¶ 52. Judicial notice cannot be taken that any certain building in a city—e. g., Detroit—is situated in a certain ward.—Schaale v. Wasey, 70 Mich. 414.

¶ 53. The supreme court has no judicial knowledge of the contents of Detroit plats or of the location of Detroit lands, except as identified or affected by legislation or other public action.—Cicotte v. Anciaux, 53 Mich. 227.

¶ 54. Judicial notice is not to be taken of the relative situation of lots and blocks on a map or plat that is not put in evidence, nor of their application to the ground.—Shepard v. Shepard, 36 Mich. 173.

¶ 55. Judicial notice may be taken by the trial court that certain named streets are public streets of the city where it sits. Wheeler v. City of Detroit, 127 Mich. 329.

§ 10. Political divisions and boundaries.

Of statutes under which townships and other divisions of government are created, see post § 23 et seq.

Location of cities relatively to natural geographical places, see ante § 9.

Sufficiency of log lien petition to admit of judicial notice as to county, see Forestry ¶ 105.

¶ 56. Judicial notice is taken of the political divisions of the state.—Wright v. Dunham, 13 Mich. 414, 418.

¶ 57. The court must take judicial notice of the fact that the state and the township are distinct organizations.—Town of La Grange v. Chapman, 11 Mich. 499.

¶ 58. Courts are bound to know judicially the existence of the various township organizations.—People v. Maynard, 15 Mich. 463; People v. Waller, 70 Mich. 237.

¶ 59. Judicial notice is taken whether lands described by township and range in a guardian's petition for leave to sell are located in a township described only by name in the notice of sale.—Dexter v. Cranston, 41 Mich. 448.

¶ 60. The courts will take judicial notice that a portion of the St. Clair river is beyond the state boundary.—Cummings v. Stone, 13 Mich. 70.

¶ 61. Judicial notice will be taken that territory specifically described and located in Midland county does not include any part of Saginaw county.—Sackrider v. Saginaw County Sup'rs, 79 Mich. 59.

¶ 62. Judicial notice can be taken by the supreme court and by the Detroit Recorder's Court that Detroit is in Wayne county.—People v. Curley, 99 Mich. 238.

¶ 63. The supreme court will take judicial notice that with one exception the congressional districts into which Michigan is divided are composed of more than one county.—Beakes v. Board State Canvassers, 172 Mich. 408.

§ 11. Public revenues and fiscal affairs.

Value of foreign currency, see also ante ¶ 44.

¶ 64. Judicial notice may be taken of the fact that sufficient moneys will come from the liquor taxes into the hands of the city treasurer of Detroit to replace moneys directed by Local Acts of 1895, No. 337, § 27, to be placed to the credit of the board of health, and replaced from liquor tax moneys.—Davock v. Moore, 105 Mich. 120.

¶ 65. The court will take judicial notice that the amount raised by the fee imposed on automobiles by virtue of Public Acts 1913, No. 181, would create a surplus so far in excess of the expense of regulation as to make the act a tax measure and not an exercise of the police power.—Vernor v. Secretary of State, 179 Mich. 157.

§ 12. Business methods, usages and facts.

Official business usages, see post § 22.

¶ 66. Courts must recognize present methods of doing business, and under established common-law principles enforce new classes of agreements arising from them if not against public policy, e. g., the usage as to buying and selling through brokers.—Gregory v. Wendell, 39 Mich. 337; Gregory v. Wendell, 40 Mich. 432.

¶ 67. Courts are bound to pay some regard to the well-known incidents of ordinary business, e. g., to know that ice is gathered in cold weather, and that when an ice house is filled it must continue to hold its contents until distributed, and will be useless for any other purpose.—Clark v. Lake St. Clair & Up-River Ice Co., 24 Mich. 508.

¶ 68. Judicial notice must be taken of the ordinary rules and necessities of banking business.—American Nat. Bank v. Bushey, 45 Mich. 135.

¶ 69. Judicial notice is properly taken of the fact that stringent regulations in regard to charging off probable losses are found necessary in our banking system, federal and state.—Owen v. Potter, 115 Mich. 556.

¶ 70. Banks are collection agencies and judicial notice will be taken of the fact that notes and other evidences of debt accompany the agency and are placed in the hands of the banks to be surrendered when the debt is paid.—Bloomer v. Dau, 122 Mich. 522.

¶ 71. Judicial notice was taken that the drawing of a line through a signature on a check was the usual way of erasing or canceling the name.—Samberg v. American Exp. Co., 136 Mich. 639.

¶ 72. Judicial notice is taken of the mercantile custom of mutual credits under which business establishments furnish each other's clerks or customers with goods and charge them to each other.—Cameron v. Blackman, 39 Mich. 108.

¶ 73. It is matter of judicial knowledge that the business of manufacturing illuminating gas is not a domestic one.—Williams v. Mutual Gas Co., 52 Mich. 499.

¶ 74. A Michigan court may well take judicial notice that stockholders in the mining corporations of the state are largely nonresidents and beyond its jurisdiction for rendering personal judgments.—Milroy v. Spurr Mountain Iron Min. Co., 43 Mich. 231.

¶ 75. Courts will recognize that in the ordinary course of business local insurance agents act largely through clerks.—Steele v. German Ins. Co., 93 Mich. 81.

¶ 76. The ordinary authority of mining superintendents must be recognized judicially, like that of bank cashiers, vessel captains and other known agents.—Adams Min. Co. v. Senter, 26 Mich. 73.

¶ 77. It seems that a court may take notice of a general custom to designate as "agents" persons who sell pianos on commission.—Whittemore v. Weiss, 33 Mich. 348.

¶ 78. Judicial notice based on the court's experience was taken of the long general use in the state of a certain printed blank for a warranty deed.—Hovey v. Smith, 22 Mich. 170.

¶ 79. Judicial notice will be taken of custom of letting contracts on the basis of cost plus percentage of contract price.—Carleton v. Foundry & Machine Products Co., 199 Mich. 148.

¶ 80. Judicial notice may be taken that as the contract alleged by an attorney at law to have been made was that he should accomplish a certain thing for a fixed fee, the services required might depend upon the nature of the opposition, and that the fee would be gauged accordingly.—Shakespeare v. Baughman, 113 Mich. 551.

¶ 81. Judicial notice may probably be taken of the existence of a custom that as the real estate business is ordinarily conducted, the seller and not the purchaser, pays the commissions of the agent.—Downing v. Buck, 135 Mich. 636.

¶ 82. The court will take judicial notice that the tangible property of a street railway company has a much larger market value as a railway than it would have if dismantled and sold as material.—Detroit Citizens' St. R. Co. v. Common Council of Detroit, 125 Mich. 673.

¶ 83. The court may take judicial notice of the fact that a six per cent mortgage for one hundred dollars, upon vacant land selling for five hundred dollars, is the equivalent of and readily convertible into cash.—Walling v. Poulsen, 160 Mich. 302.

§ 13. Travel, transportation and communication.

Possibility of measuring timber afloat, see ante ¶ 11.

As to care or negligence in riding, see also post § 17.

¶ 84. The court will take judicial notice that in rural districts the traveled portion is but a small part of the land within the limits of a highway.—Austin v. Detroit, Y. & A. A. Ry., 134 Mich. 149.

¶ 85. A court cannot take judicial notice as to how much a particular city street is used.—Cleveland v. Newsom, 45 Mich. 62.

¶ 86. Judicial notice may be taken that a good highway is as essential to the use of bicycles as to that of any other vehicle.—Murfin v. Detroit & E. P. R. Co., 113 Mich. 675.

¶ 87. Judicial notice may be taken that landed proprietors seek with their products the shortest possible route to a railroad.—Cornell v. Manistee & N. E. R. Co., 117 Mich. 238.

¶ 88. Courts must take judicial notice of what everybody knows with regard to the incidents of railway travel.—Downey v. Hendrie, 46 Mich. 498.

¶ 89. Judicial notice is taken of the fact that passengers are constantly riding upon the platforms of street cars.—Upham v. Detroit City R. Co., 85 Mich. 12.

¶ 90. Having in mind the common method of conducting railroad business at the present day, the court can take judicial notice of the fact that nearly every railroad in this state does issue, and prior to the enactment of Pub. Acts 1891, No. 90, did issue, mileage books or 1,000-mile tickets.—Smith v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co., 114 Mich. 460; reversed in 173 U. S. 684, 43 L. ed. 858, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 565.

¶ 91. The court will take judicial notice of the fact that all interurban electric railways in the state have a terminus in a city.—Halladay v. Detroit United Ry., 155 Mich. 436.

¶ 92. The court may take judicial notice that a railway is engaged in interstate commerce.—Dingman v. Duluth, S. S. & A. Ry. Co., 164 Mich. 328.

§ 14. ——Operating and structural facts and conditions.

As to customary care in providing fenders and other safety appliances, see also post § 17.

¶ 93. The court will take judicial notice of the material and mode of construction of sidewalks, as well as the method and period of their use.—Harden v. City of Jackson, 137 Mich. 271.

¶ 94. In an action against a village for personal injuries to plaintiff caused by his horse going down an embankment, judicial notice may be taken that barriers are usually limited to places where a highway and its surroundings are of such a character as of themselves to create the danger of fright, and that they are not common along our highway ditches or causeways.—Bell v. Village of Wayne, 123 Mich. 386.

¶ 95. Courts are bound to recognize the essential differences in the nature and modes of travel and transportation upon railroads and ordinary highways, both of which are authorized by law; that greater speed in travel and transportation is one of the objects of authorizing conveyance by rail; that locomotives and heavy trains cannot be suddenly stopped or turned out of their course, and that the authority given by law to railroads to cross highways and fixing no limit to their speed necessarily gives them the preference at the crossings, for otherwise their rate of speed must be so reduced, and the regularity of trains so interrupted, as to defeat the very object of railroad transportation.—Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Miller, 25 Mich. 274.

¶ 96. The court will take notice as part of the general knowledge of the business community that the railroads of the country conduct inspections under a system which all persons so employed as to be interested are presumed to understand.—Smith v. Potter, 46 Mich. 258.

¶ 97. Courts will take notice of the width of the standard railroad gauge.—Bay City Belt Line R. Co. v. Hitchcock, 90 Mich. 533.

¶ 98. Judicial cognizance may properly be taken of the fact that it is impracticable to construct railroads upon a level.—Balhoff v. Michigan Cent. R. Co., 106 Mich. 606.

¶ 99. The court will take judicial notice of the fact that it is difficult, if not impossible, to handle freight trains of varying length upon roads of varying grade without concussions.—Moore v. Saginaw, T. & H. R. Co., 115 Mich. 103.

¶ 100. Judicial notice will be taken that concussion is the necessary result of the coupling of freight cars by the use of link and pin, and that it is usually sufficient to destroy the equilibrium of a person standing.—Moore v. Saginaw, T. & H. R. Co., 115 Mich. 103.

¶ 101. A court as well as a jury is justified in taking notice of the fact that it is impossible, by means of any present known appliances, to so equip a locomotive that it will not sometimes scatter sparks and cinders.—Mann v. Pere Marquette R. Co., 135 Mich. 210.

¶ 102. The supreme court will take judicial notice that the use of street cars is attended by imminent danger to users of the highway and to the passengers.—People v. Detroit United Ry., 134 Mich. 682.

¶ 103. The supreme court will take judicial notice that it is desirable to compel the equipping of street cars with a means of stopping with certainty and expedition.—People v. Detroit United Ry., 134 Mich. 682.

¶ 104. The supreme court in considering the reasonableness of an ordinance requiring street cars to be so equipped will take judicial notice that air brakes are rarely ineffective.—People v. Detroit United Ry., 134 Mich. 682.

¶ 105. Judicial notice is taken of the fact that conductors are in control of street cars, and may cause them to be stopped at any time or place if circumstances require it.—Orth v. Saginaw Valley Traction Co., 162 Mich. 353.

¶ 106. Judicial notice will be taken of the fact that it is usual for railroad sidings to be so constructed as to permit cars to stand close to buildings, such as elevators and coal bins, thereby facilitating the loading and unloading, and reducing the cost and danger of operation.—Pahlan v. Detroit, G. H. & M. R. Co., 122 Mich. 232.

¶ 107. The court may take judicial notice that manufacturing concerns all over the country enjoy facilities of sidetracks by agreement with railroad companies.—Pontiac, Oxford & N. R. Co. v. Reed, 130 Mich. 661.

¶ 108. Judicial notice is taken that November risks in marine insurance are heavier than June risks.—Barry v. Boston Marine Ins. Co., 62 Mich. 424.

¶ 109. Judicial notice will be taken that there is much weather when steamers and sailing vessels may be operated with safety when it would be futile to attempt to tow logs, and that there may be a time before navigation is usually abandoned when the towing of logs would be hazardous.—McLean v. Sandusky Lumber & Box Co., 160 Mich. 324.

¶ 110. No court in Michigan can judicially know that in midwinter the railway is the only available outlet for freight from Windsor, Canada.—People v. Clark, 10 Mich. 310.

¶ 111. The court cannot take judicial notice that the weather on the 1st of April in parts of the Northern Peninsula is always such that the lakes and streams are never then open for the floating of logs.—Haines v. Gibson, 115 Mich. 131.

¶ 112. In a proceeding to enjoin the forcible seizing of complainant's improvements erected along certain rivers, to facilitate logging and prevent the flooding of complainant's lands and injury to the timber, the court took judicial notice that to drive 12,000,000 logs down a known small stream would take an entire season.—Hall v. Nester, 122 Mich. 141.

§ 15. ——Speed and time of transit.

Difference between railroads and highway travel, see ante ¶ 95.

¶ 113. The court will take judicial notice of the time it takes to travel from one city to another.—McCall v. Jacobson, 139 Mich. 455.

¶ 114. The court will take judicial notice that automobiles may be driven at a speed of at least 40 miles an hour.—People v. Schneider, 139 Mich. 673.

¶ 115. The courts will take judicial notice of the fact that it is part of the business of a locomotive engineer to estimate speed by observation of objects which he was passing while in his engine, both day and night. —Harnau v. Haight, 189 Mich. 600, 13 N. C. C. A. 566.

§ 16. Mechanical facts and working experience.
Scientifically or generally known qualities and characteristics, see also ante § 2.
Qualities and characteristics of things, see also ante § 3.
Operating and structural facts relative to railroads and facilities for transportation and travel, see ante § 14.
Sound carrying tendency of floors and walls, see ante ¶ 9.
Greater construction and operating costs in Upper Peninsula, see ante ¶ 10.
Danger attending testing of automobiles, see ante ¶ 22.

¶ 116. Such matters as the proper method of boring and tubing salt wells are matters of fact upon which a court cannot assume to have a judicial knowledge.—Clark v. Babcock, 23 Mich. 164.

¶ 117. Judicial notice may be taken without the aid of testimony that a spark arrester lessens the danger of a mill which, with the natural draft, has a tendency to emit sparks. —Webster v. Symes, 109 Mich. 1.

¶ 118. Judicial notice will be taken that boilers and engines used in equipping a shingle mill are usually so attached as to become part of the realty and to pass by a deed of the latter.—Wickes Bros. v. Hill, 115 Mich. 334.

¶ 119. The court may properly take judicial notice that when earth is to be removed, or stone quarried, it is a common and economical method to undermine it, causing it to loosen and fall by its weight, thus facilitating its removal.—Welch v. Brainard, 108 Mich. 38.

¶ 120. Judicial notice could not be taken, in an action for personal injury sustained in an elevator, whether tests of the strength of the elevator cables were common or that it would have been prudent to make them.— Hall v. Murdock, 119 Mich. 389.

¶ 121. In trespass quare clausum fregit against a telephone company for injury to plaintiff's trees in the highway, the court will take judicial notice that telegraph poles must be set near the sides of a street or road and that they are generally outside of the curb or ditch line and therefore necessarily in line with trees.—Wyant v. Central Telephone Co., 123 Mich. 51.

¶ 122. While the court may not judicially notice that there is a choice among machines for doing certain work, it may well be supposed that there is.—Plano Mfg. Co. v. Ellis, 68 Mich. 101.

§ 17. Care, skill and negligence.
Danger from forest fires, see also ante ¶ 8.
Of time of drought calling for special care with fire, see ante ¶ 43.
As to common use of spark arresters on vessels, see also post ¶ 160.
Danger attending testing of automobiles, see ante ¶ 22.
Dangerousness of electric currents, see ante ¶¶ 24, 25.
General doctrine that negligence is a question of fact, see Negligence, V, and topics there referred to.

¶ 123. Judicial notice is taken that to attempt to alight from a train after it has passed a station and is running at a speed of four miles an hour is not the conduct of an ordinarily prudent person.—Jacob v. Flint & P. M. R. Co., 105 Mich. 450.

¶ 124. Judicial notice cannot be taken that it is negligent for a person to sit between two piles of logs upon a car, when riding upon a siding, where he expected to get off to make a coupling before reaching another car.—Balhoff v. Michigan Cent. R. Co., 106 Mich. 606.

¶ 125. Judicial notice may reasonably be taken that a surgeon's skill depends somewhat upon his experience and opportunity for witnessing operations, and it is to be expected that the degrees of surgical skill met with in different localities will be affected by these things.—Pelky v. Palmer, 109 Mich. 561.

¶ 126. In an action for breach of warranty in the sale of fruit trees, the court will not take judicial notice that sowing oats or planting corn in the same field is not good care of fruit trees nor decide how far proper care would make poor varieties bear good fruit.— Long v. Pruyn, 128 Mich. 57.

¶ 127. The court will take judicial notice of the fact that it is the custom of electric railway companies operating their cars in the public streets to equip them with fenders or some similar device, and their object is the protection of the public engaged in ordinary business or travel upon the streets, whence arises a duty on the part of such railways to provide such fenders.—Love v. Detroit, J. & C. R. Co., 170 Mich. 1.

¶ 128. The court cannot take judicial notice of the fact that general inspection of a mine is necessary.—Lewis v. Detroit Vitrified Brick Co., 164 Mich. 489.

¶ 129. The court will take judicial notice that a freight elevator is a place of danger to life and limb, in the hands of an inexperienced boy of fourteen, within the meaning of a statute prohibiting the employment of children under the age of sixteen in the management of dangerous machinery.—Braasch v. Michigan Stove Co., 153 Mich. 652.

¶ 130. Electricity is to be classed with gunpowder, dynamite, and other treacherous and destructive agents, of whose dangerous qualities, and the fact that society recognizes them and acts accordingly, and that no prudent man handles these things with a low degree of caution, judicial notice may be taken.—De Kallands v. Washtenaw Home Tel. Co., 153 Mich. 25.

§ 18. Public records and files, legislative journals, etc.

Of judicial records, see post § 19.

¶ 131. "Courts, in the determination of matters involving the acts of public officials and construing contracts between the state and its citizens, will take judicial notice of public documents, of reports of public officers of the acts of public officials, and of reports required by law from citizens of the state with whom it contracts, to be presented to, and filed with, the officers of the state. Courts will consult them as freely as they would if they were stated in the pleadings or introduced in evidence."—People ex rel. Attorney General v. Michigan Cent. R. Co., 145 Mich. 140, per Grant, J., at p. 154, citing authorities.

¶ 132. Courts are bound judicially to take notice what the law is; and to enable them to determine whether all the constitutional requisites to the validity of a statute have been complied with they can take notice of the journals of the legislature.—People v. Mahaney, 13 Mich. 481; Callaghan v. Chipman, 59 Mich. 610; Attorney General v. Rice, 64 Mich. 385.

¶ 133. Courts have no power to take notice of legislative journals as respects the facts attending the election of the several members of the legislature, even after those facts have been spread upon the legislative journals, for the purpose of impeaching by such notice the validity of an act on the ground that illegally chosen legislators voted for it.—People v. Mahaney, 13 Mich. 481.

¶ 134. Judicial notice will be taken of the journals of the legislature.—Rode v. Phelps, 80 Mich. 598.

¶ 135. The court cannot take judicial notice that the resolution required from a foreign insurance company consenting to service upon agents is on file in the office of the secretary of state, or that persons excepting service as such agents are agents appointed under seal or agents at all.—Hebel v. Amazon Ins. Co. of Cincinnati, 33 Mich. 400.

¶ 136. The court will not take judicial notice of the fact that lands have been bid off in the name of the state.—Peninsular Sav. Bank v. Ward, 118 Mich. 87.

¶ 137. The supreme court cannot take judicial notice of facts contained in the records of tax proceedings.—Auditor General v. Clifford, 143 Mich. 626.

¶ 138. In a suit to set aside notices of tax sales, judicial notice cannot be taken of the forms and dates of the tax deeds, nor of whether or not they were void upon their face, where such deeds are not set forth either in substance or form in the bill.—Fitschen v. Olson, 155 Mich. 320.

§ 19. Judicial records.

See also ante ¶ 43.

Of matters pertaining to the court, its officers, and its terms, see post § 20.

¶ 139. The supreme court can take notice of facts in a record before it in deciding another case with which they are involved.—Chittenden v. Witbeck, 50 Mich. 401.

¶ 140. The supreme court can take notice in a cause that has been once before it of the fact that recovery was then sought upon a particular ground.—Hoffman v. Harrington, 25 Mich. 146.

¶ 141. Judicial notice is taken from the record in a suit begun by declaration that no appearance has been entered and no plea filed by defendant.—Edson v. LaLonde, 88 Mich. 162.

¶ 142. In garnishment proceedings the record in the principal case may be considered without separate proof.—Farrington v. Sexton, 43 Mich. 454.

¶ 143. The court will, on its own motion, enter a defendant's failure to plead in the absence of an affidavit thereof.—Steers v. Holmes, 79 Mich. 430.

¶ 144. The court may take judicial notice of its records in a former related case, to supply defects in the record.—Culver v. Fidelity & Deposit Co. of Maryland, 149 Mich. 630.

¶ 145. The probate court will take judicial notice of its own files and records.—Wilkinson v. Conaty, 65 Mich. 614.

§ 20. Courts, judges and public officers.

Courts and officers of other states, see post § 21.

As to official practices, usages and modes of action, see post § 22.

Judicial notice of jurisdictional situs in loglien proceedings, see also Forestry, III.

¶ 146. The court will take judicial notice of the time of holding its terms.—Trombie v. Hoffman, 130 Mich. 676.

¶ 147. Judicial notice may be taken of the fact that there was no regular term of court intervening between the filing of a petition for the sale of lands for taxes, and the making of a decree ordering such sale.—Roberts v. Loxley, 121 Mich. 63.

¶ 148. The court will take judicial notice of its own officers, but not of those of another court.—Norvell v. McHenry, 1 Mich. 227.

¶ 149. Judicial notice may be taken of the signatures of court officers, including, in some cases, attorneys, where they occur in connection with some kind of official function.—Johnson v. Delbridge, 35 Mich. 436.

¶ 150. Judicial notice is taken of the extent of the jurisdiction and powers of the justices' courts in this state.—Goodsell v. Leonard, 23 Mich. 374.

¶ 151. Chancery may take judicial notice of the terms of a court of law out of which an execution has issued, for the purpose of seeing whether a levy was made during its lifetime.—Williams v. Hubbard, 1 Mich. 446.

¶ 152. Judicial notice will be taken of the fact that a certain person is deputy auditor-general, that being a state office known to the law.—People v. Johr, 22 Mich. 461.

¶ 153. Where the return of service of a justice's writ of replevin is signed "A. S. K., city marshal," the justice may take judicial notice that the person so signing is marshal of the city wherein the court is held.—Fleugel v. Lards, 108 Mich. 682.

§ 21. ——Courts and officers of other states.

Judicial notice that county clerk in New York is clerk of a court of record, see also Acknowledgments ¶ 50.

¶ 154. The supreme court of Michigan will take judicial notice that the supreme court of Massachusetts is a court of record.—Shotwell v. Harrison, 22 Mich. 410.

¶ 155. Judicial notice will so far be taken of the composition of a court of record of another state as to see that by a constitutional provision of that state the county clerk belongs to such court as its recording officer.—Morse v. Hewett, 28 Mich. 481; Munroe v. Eastman, 31 Mich. 283.

§ 22. Official usages, practices and actions.

School usages (Bible readings), see ante ¶ 12.

¶ 156. Judicial notice is taken that the statute authorizing the deputy auditor-general to act in his principal's stead has long been construed in the auditor-general's office as authorizing him to act in his own name when the circumstances arise which enable him to act at all.—Westbrook v. Miller, 56 Mich. 148.

¶ 157. Judicial notice may be taken of the general course of business in the federal land office, in that a purchase commonly precedes the issue of a patent a good while.—Fisher v. Hallock, 50 Mich. 463.

¶ 158. The supreme court took judicial notice that the uniform practice of the land commissioner has not been to refuse patents to lands under legislative grant because not located or entered or patent applied for within the time of limitations for recovering possession of land by action.—Robson v. State Land Commissioner, 148 Mich. 12.

¶ 159. The court judicially notices that a board of supervisors does not meet monthly.—People ex rel. City of Grand Rapids v. Kent County Sup'rs, 40 Mich. 481.

¶ 160. So common has been the use of spark arresters upon vessels that the court is justified in taking judicial knowledge of the fact that the United States inspectors, whose duty it is to inspect vessels from time to time, must have had knowledge of their existence, and have not considered them dangerous to the safety of a vessel, or they would have prohibited their use.—Cheboygan Lumber Co. v. Delta Transp. Co., 100 Mich. 16.

¶ 161. The court may take judicial notice that no actions have been begun by the commissioner of railroads to recover penalties for failure to equip cars with proper coupling devices.—Wight v. Michigan Cent. R. Co., 161 Mich. 216.

§ 23. Statutes and laws.

Ordinances and police regulations, see post § 26.

Of legislative journals, see ante § 18.

Of historical recitals in statutes, see ante ¶ 41.

¶ 162. The courts must take judicial notice of public statutes, and disregard all allegations in pleadings which are inconsistent with them.—People ex rel. Attorney General v. River Raisin & L. E. R. Co., 12 Mich. 389.

¶ 163. Judicial notice must be taken of a public statute.—Jackson v. James, 74 Mich. 733.

¶ 164. Judicial notice will be taken of the legal consequences of the consolidation of domestic corporations.—Jackson Consol. Traction Co. v. Jackson Circuit Judge, 155 Mich. 522.

¶ 165. Judicial notice is taken of the statute which permits a corporation to become a surety on a liquor dealer's bond, and it is not necessary that it be alleged in the declaration in a suit under the Civil Damages Act, that the bonding company was qualified by law to execute the bond sued upon.—Rauhala v. Maki, 172 Mich. 112.

§ 24. ——Acts of incorporation and charters.

¶ 166. Judicial notice is taken of a statute organizing a township and of the existence of a particular township.—Ives v. Kimball, 1 Mich. 308; Town of La Grange v. Chapman, 11 Mich. 499; Wright v. Dunham, 13 Mich. 414; People v. Maynard, 15 Mich. 463; Bouchard v. Bourassa, 57 Mich. 8; People v. Waller, 70 Mich. 237.

¶ 167. Judicial notice will be taken of an act organizing a township.—Ives v. Kimball, 1 Mich. 308.

¶ 168. Acts of incorporation are public acts, and judicial notice is taken of them.—Hurlburt v. Britain, 2 D. 191; People v. River Raisin & L. E. R. Co., 12 Mich. 389.

¶ 169. Judicial notice is taken of the provisions of a city charter.—People ex rel. Bolt v. Riordan, 73 Mich. 508.

¶ 170. Our courts take judicial notice of all domestic statutes, and when they know under what law a corporation exists they know its powers and the limitations thereon.—Chapman v. Colby Brothers Co., 47 Mich. 46.

¶ 171. In an action based on a contract made with a corporation chartered in another state, the court cannot take judicial notice of the laws under which the corporation was chartered, and they must be proved and its charter produced before the rights and liabilities of the parties can be determined.—Chapman v. Colby, 47 Mich. 46.

§ 25. ——Operation, effect or application of statutes.

¶ 172. Judicial notice is to be taken of a public law, general in its operation; but not whether facts that do not appear would bring a case within the statute.—Holdridge v. Farmers' & Mechanics' Bank, 16 Mich. 66.

¶ 173. The supreme court can take judicial notice of the law under which a contract may have been made with the state, but cannot judicially notice whether it has been made.—People ex rel. County of Houghton v. State Land Office Com'r, 23 Mich. 270.

¶ 174. A city cannot be enlarged except by a public statute, of which all persons must take notice, so that any illegality in a tax founded on the invalidity of such a statute would be a defect apparent to all persons, and requiring no testimony or inquiry into facts, and not a latent defect or illegality of which there might be no general knowledge.—Curtis v. City of East Saginaw, 35 Mich. 508.

¶ 175. It is presumed to be a matter of judicial knowledge that the danger of a cloud upon the title arising from an assessment which has been held void is removed by a subsequent statute recognizing the invalidity of the assessment and providing for a reassessment.—Byram v. City of Detroit, 50 Mich. 56.

¶ 176. While courts are presumed to know what laws of a public nature are in force in the state, they cannot be presumed to know what counties have voted to suspend such laws.—In re Hauck, 70 Mich. 396.

§ 26. Ordinances and police regulations.

¶ 177. Municipal ordinances are not general laws, and cannot be judicially noticed by the courts except so far as they are in proof before them.—Motz v. City of Detroit, 18 Mich. 495.

§ 27. Foreign laws and statutes.

See also post ¶ 370.
Charter or organic act of foreign corporation, see ante ¶ 171.
Value of foreign currency and interest rates, see also ante ¶ 44.
Presumption as to common law of other states or as to foreign laws in general, see post § 59.
Printed books of foreign laws as evidence, see post § 532.
Statutory authority to take judicial notice of common law or statutes of other states and foreign countries as published by authority or used in evidence in such foreign states, see Jud. Act, chap. XVII, §§ 25-27; Comp. L. 1915, §§ 12513-12515.

¶ 178. Judicial notice cannot be taken of a statute of another state invalidating a contract that would be valid if made here.—Jones v. Palmer, 1 D. 379.

¶ 179. Where a foreign law is in question nothing can be known of its purport until it is proved.—Chapman v. Colby Bros. & Co., 47 Mich. 46.

¶ 180. Judicial notice cannot be taken of the laws of a foreign state under which a corporation exists and whence it derives its powers.—Chapman v. Colby Bros. & Co., 47 Mich. 46.

¶ 181. Judicial notice cannot be taken of a statute of another state regulating the rate of interest.—Millard v. Truax, 73 Mich. 381.

¶ 182. Judicial notice will not be taken of foreign statutes.—Swan v. Gregory, 195 Mich. 457.

¶ 183. Where the record in a personal injury suit contains no evidence as to the existence and terms of a statute of limitations in Canada, the supreme court cannot take judicial notice of such statute.—Daniels v. Detroit, G. H. & M. Ry. Co., 163 Mich. 468.

¶ 184. Judicial notice will not be taken of usury laws of a foreign state.—Phelps v. American Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 121 Mich. 343.

§ 28. Corporate by-laws and regulations and internal affairs.

¶ 185. Courts cannot take judicial notice of the by-laws of a corporation, or assume that it agreed, through a by-law or otherwise, that, upon the disablement and withdrawal of a member, he should receive a specified sum of money; but the existence of such by-law or agreement must be averred, together with such facts as are essential to show that the corporation became liable under and by virtue thereof.—Portage Lake Miners' & Mechanics' Benev. Soc. v. Phillips, 36 Mich. 22.

II. PRESUMPTIONS AND BURDEN OF PROOF.

§ 29. Classes, nature and effect of presumptions.

[Note. The classification of presumptions into those of law and those of fact has not been attempted. Instead the presumptions are classified according to the nature of the fact to which the presumption leads, and as far as practicable the presumptions about a given subject have been treated in the separate specific topics which deal with the facts and issues to which the presumptions relate. See cross-references throughout this division.

The distinctions between presumptions of law and inferences of fact, where passed on by the courts, are treated incidentally in the connection where it becomes material.

Presumptions relating to particular subjects have been treated in the topics devoted to those subjects as far as possible. Those cases which are general in application or which illustrate the more general presumptions which are not referable to any one subject are retained in this topic. For specific presumptions other than those retained here see those portions of specific topics treating of "evidence and presumptions."]

Inadmissibility of presumptions against evidence or where evidence is required affirmatively, see post § 30.

Inference upon inference, rule against, see post § 31.

Neutralization of one presumption by another, see post § 32.

Conclusive and rebuttable presumptions, see post § 33.

Person against whom or in whose favor presumption of acquiescence runs, see post ¶ 266.

Effect of presumptions to shift burden, see post § 70.

As to credibility and truthfulness of witnesses, see Witnesses, VI, A.

As to irrepealability of statutes, see Statutes, VII.

Presumptions in prosecutions for crime, see Indictment, VIII, A.

¶ 186. The fact that a party is compelled to rely on the testimony of persons in an adverse interest and that they testify reluctantly may justify special indulgence in the mode of examination, or have weight in passing upon the testimony, but it cannot supply the lack of proof or change the tendency of plain statements or admissions.—Walker v. Detroit Transit R. Co., 47 Mich. 338.

§ 30. Exclusion of presumptions by evidence, offer or law.

See also post ¶ 400.

Affirmative evidence in addition to presumption, see post § 73.

¶ 187. Presumptions are never allowable when better evidence of a primary nature is required by law to be preserved.—People v. Treadway, 17 Mich. 480.

¶ 188. Presumptions of fact never obtain against positive proof, and are only introduced to supply the want of real facts.—Hill v. Chambers, 30 Mich. 422.

¶ 189. A plain issue of title is to be determined according to the evidence for and against it, and not merely by presumptions.—McKay v. Ross, 40 Mich. 548.

¶ 190. Proof that one received checks from another at a prior time has no tendency to prove a loan and a debt existing to repay it, where the parties are present and might testify.—Dyer v. Rosenthal, 45 Mich. 588.

¶ 191. Abstract presumptions as to title from possession become inapplicable when evidence is introduced of the actual title.—Gavigan v. Evans, 45 Mich. 597.

¶ 192. Presumptions are not allowable when better evidence of a primary nature is required by law to be preserved.—City of Muskegon v. S. K. Martin Lumber Co., 86 Mich. 625.

¶ 193. The presumption that public officers perform their duty cannot sustain their action where the mandatory requirements of a statute concerning the record of such action are wholly disregarded.—Pearsall v. Eaton County Sup'rs, 71 Mich. 438.

¶ 194. The presumption of right official action does not aid records which do not contain what is essential to the validity of the proceedings, and which, being in evidence, must speak for themselves.—Harding v. Bader, 75 Mich. 316.

¶ 195. An unsuccessful effort to point out by direct evidence the exact cause of a negligent injury does not estop the plaintiff from relying on presumptions drawn from the testimony.—Waidelich v. Andros, 182 Mich. 374.

§ 31. Inference upon inference or presumption.

¶ 196. An inference cannot be based on an inference.—Rattenbury v. Pere Marquette Ry. Co., 172 Mich. 106.

§ 32. Neutralising and opposing presumption.

¶ 197. One officer cannot be assumed to be in default on the mere presumption in behalf of another that the latter has done his duty; this presumption is of equal force for both.—Weimer v. Bunbury, 30 Mich. 201; Houghton County Sup'rs v. Rees, 34 Mich. 481.

§ 33. Conclusiveness of presumptions.

Of presumption of knowledge of law, see also post § 47.

Effect of presumptions against positive evidence, see post § 609.

¶ 198. The presumption that one is cognizant of the contents of his own books of account may be entirely overcome by his positive, uncontradicted testimony that the accounts were kept, and entries made, by a bookkeeper, and were never examined by the party himself and that he had no knowledge thereof.—Hurley v. Watson, 68 Mich. 531.

¶ 199. The presumption that a public officer has performed his duties faithfully and in accordance with law may be rebutted by evidence.—Bangs v. Stephenson, 63 Mich. 661.

¶ 200. Possession of personalty is not conclusive evidence of title.—Mannausau v. Wallace, 87 Mich. 543; Hoppin v. Avery, 87 Mich. 551.

¶ 201. A letter properly addressed, stamped and mailed is presumed to be delivered, but where its receipt is denied it raises a question for the jury.—Rauch v. Michigan Millers' Mut. Fire-Ins. Co., 131 Mich. 281.

¶ 202. The presumption is that letters mailed and telegrams sent in due course of business, by consignor of a carload of lumber to the consignee, were received by him; but this presumption may be rebutted by evidence.—Long-Bell Lumber Co. v. Nyman, 145 Mich. 477.

¶ 203. One who has full knowledge of the facts is conclusively presumed to know the law applicable thereto.—City of Detroit v. Martin, 34 Mich. 170.

¶ 204. Every one is usually bound as if he had knowledge of the law, whether he has or not, but there is no rule which conclusively presumes such knowledge as a fact where that fact is important.—Black v. Ward, 27 Mich. 191.

¶ 205. The presumption that all know the law is in many cases a weak one, and it disappears entirely in the face of a positive representation of what the law is, and upon the truth and good faith of which reliance is placed.—O'Neil v. Lake Superior Iron Co., 63 Mich. 690.

¶ 206. Actual knowledge of the law is not so conclusively presumed as to charge with malice one who is acting in reliance on what he reasonably believes to be lawful procedure.—Hill v. Taylor, 50 Mich. 549.

¶ 207. While a man is, for public reasons, held responsible for his conduct, although ignorant of law, there is no conclusive presumption that he actually knows the law.—Hess v. Culver, 77 Mich. 598.

§ 34. Normality, sequence and regularity of action.

Particular presumptions of legality and regularity, see post §§ 36-38, 51.

As to jurisdiction and regularity of judicial and official proceedings, see also post § 58.

As to regularity and validity of incorporation, see Corporations § 15.

¶ 208. Of several acts done together that one will be regarded as prior which ought to be prior.—Hubbardston Lumber Co. v. Covert, 35 Mich. 254; People v. Cummins, 47 Mich. 334.

¶ 209. It is presumed that a grantor known to be a careful lawyer kept his title papers.—King v. Carpenter, 37 Mich. 363.

¶ 210. Acts done on the same day will be presumed to have been done together, if necessary to their validity.—Rash v. Whitney, 4 Mich. 495.

¶ 211. Between suit by declaration and another by attachment begun on the same day the former is presumed to have been commenced first.—Wales v. Jones, 1 Mich. 254.

§ 35. ——Receipt of letters mailed or goods shipped.

That message of notice transmitted by messenger was delivered, see Notices.

Rebuttableness of presumption, see ante § 33.

Burden of proving mailing, see post § 66, ¶ 362.

Necessity of proof of mailing as part of foundation for secondary evidence of contents, see post § 151.

Presumption overcoming denial of receipt, see post § 609.

Sufficiency of proof by stenographer as to writing and mailing, see also post ¶ 1830.
Presumption of receipt of mailed letter containing corporate reports as overcoming presumption that failure to file reports was intentional, see Corporations ¶ 667.

¶ 212. A presumption arises that a letter is duly received where it is placed in the mails properly addressed and with postage prepaid.—Farmers' Handy Wagon Co. v. Newcomb, 192 Mich. 634.

¶ 213. A protest was sent by mail accompanying the payment of taxes, and a postal card purporting to be from the township treasurer and acknowledging the receipt of the payment "and protest" was introduced in evidence. There was but one protest sent, and no evidence was introduced tending to show that the protest was not received. Held, that the presumption was irresistible that the protest sent was received, and that, being a mere notice, it could be proved by copy.—Michigan Land & Iron Co., Ltd. v. Township of Republic, 65 Mich. 628.

¶ 214. Due consignment of goods to their owner, though not conclusive evidence that they were received, is such evidence as is acted on in ordinary business, and will support an inference of the receipt sufficiently strong to call for a counter-showing.—Bacon v. Johnson, 56 Mich. 182.

§ 36. Legality and validity.

Of due performance of legal or official duty, see post §§ 37, 38.
For presumptions as to legality of specific procedure or act, see specific topics treating of such procedure or act.
For various presumptions indulged on error as to facts essential to regularity or right, see Appeal §§ 373-378.
Presumptions and burden of establishing invalidity of statute, see Constitutional Law §§ 23, 24.
As to legality of contracts, see post § 51; Contracts § 305.
As to usuriousness of transaction, see Usury, II, B.
Presumption of legality in aid of pleading, see also Equity ¶ 637.
Presumption in aid of equity pleading that instrument alleged is legally sufficient, see Equity ¶ 592.
Presumption that agreement conforms to statute of frauds, see Frauds, Statute of, IV.

§ 37. Performance of legal duty.

Exclusion of presumption where law requires evidence by record of action taken, see ante § 30.
Presumption as to notice of annual meetings of corporations, see Corporations ¶ 675.
Maxim that equity regards that as done which ought to be done, see Equity § 8.

¶ 215. There can be no presumption that a party will hesitate in the prompt performance of a legal duty.—Edson v. Gates, 44 Mich. 253.

¶ 216. It will be presumed that any action found to be an invasion of another's rights will be discontinued.—Morrison v. Queen City Elec. Light & Power Co., 193 Mich. 604.

§ 38. Performance of official duty.

Presumption of performance against like presumption in another's favor, see ante ¶ 197.
Inadmissibility of presumption where record is required, see ante § 30.
Burden of proving nonperformance, see post ¶ 359.
Rebuttableness of presumption, see ante § 33.
As to rights and regular qualification of de facto officer, see Officers.
As to legality and regularity of exercise of powers of county board, see Counties § 12.
Of regularity of meetings of county board, see Counties ¶ 18.
As to regularity in returning delinquent drain assessments, see also Drains ¶ 185.
That notice of election was given, see Elections § 6.
That ballots were regularly cared for, see Elections ¶ 257.
That bond-issuing officers intended to issue sealed instruments, see Municipal Bonds, II.
Inference of amount secured by mortgage from amount of revenue stamps thereon, see Mortgages, III.

¶ 217. The presumption is that a public officer has faithfully and correctly performed his duty.—Clark v. Mowyer, 5 Mich. 462; Peck v. Cavell, 16 Mich. 9; Wayne Auditors v. Benoit, 20 Mich. 176; Blair v. Compton, 33 Mich. 414; Smith v. Rich, 37 Mich. 549; Westbrook v. Miller, 56 Mich. 148; Crane v. Hardy, 1 Mich. 56.

¶ 218. The presumption is that a public officer performs his duty.—Auditor General v. Monroe County Treasurer, 167 Mich. 453.

¶ 219. Where an act of public duty is enjoined, the law presumes, unless the contrary appears, that everything necessary to give it validity was observed in the performance; e. g., that all persons empowered by law to execute a public trust were present.—Scott v. Detroit Young Men's Society's Lessee, 1 D. 119, 150. Writ of error dismissed, 5 How. (U. S.) 343, 12 L. ed. 181.

¶ 220. An officer is presumed, until the contrary is proved, to have performed h's duty.—McCammon v. Detroit, L. & N. R. Co., 103 Mich. 104.

¶ 221. Regularity rather than irregularity is to be presumed of the action of a public officer.—Auditor-General v. Ayer, 109 Mich. 694.

¶ 222. It is presumed, in favor of official regularity, that an officer did not attach his certificate prematurely.—Yelverton v. Steele, 36 Mich. 62.

¶ 223. Where officers had the power to act it cannot be presumed from ambiguous facts that they erred in exercising it.—Cuming v. City of Grand Rapids, 46 Mich. 150.

¶ 224. The presumption of performance of official duty supports the action of boards as well as of officers acting singly.—Upjohn v. Richland Tp. Board of Health, 46 Mich. 542.

¶ 225. It is presumed that public officers, in assessing benefits for opening a street, have done their duty.—Grand Rapids School Furniture Co. v. City of Grand Rapids, 92 Mich. 564.

¶ 226. It is presumable that a township board in reviewing the accounts of school districts after boundary changes for the purpose of adjusting their financial rights among them were performing a legal duty and did so fairly without regard to formal or technical irregularities or language, where there is no record presented to show how they proceeded.—Riverside School Dist. No. 3 v. Township of Riverside, 67 Mich. 404.

¶ 227. It is not to be presumed that public officers will neglect to do their duty.—Common Council of Detroit v. Rush, 82 Mich. 532.

¶ 228. After the lapse of thirty years, it will be presumed in the absence of a showing to the contrary, that the probate court and the executors of the estate did their duty in the settlement of the estate, and that there are no creditors.—Harris v. Bow, 156 Mich. 28.

¶ 229. Where a magistrate with a stenographer examines one accused of murder and orally commits him for trial, it will be presumed on mandamus to compel proper action that he later intends, after having the testimony written up and signed by the witnesses, to enter a formal written order holding the accused over.—Oblaser v. Wayne Circuit Judge, 159 Mich. 665.

§ 39. Causes and effects, natural laws.

Judicial notice of natural laws, see ante § 2.
Normality, sequence and regularity as presumable consequences, see ante §§ 34-38.
Continuance as presumable consequence, see post § 40.
Presumable human actions or conduct, see post § 44.
Presumable intention that natural consequences of acts shall follow, see post § 46.
Presumption as to cause of death, see also Death by Wrongful Act § 17.
Presumptions as to negligence as proximate cause, see Negligence, V, and see also specific topics like Carriers; Highways, XII, XIII; Master and Servant, III; Railroads, VIII; Street Railways, IV.

§ 40. Continuance of existing conditions.

Presumption as to former conditions, see post § 41.
Presumption that action remains pending, see Actions ¶ 30.
Of continuance of agency until revoked, see Agency § 17.
Presumption as to continuance of authority of agent, see Agency ¶ 226.
Presumption of continuance of life, see Death and Survivorship § 1.
As to continuance of membership in fraternal association, see Fraternal Associations, V, VIII.
As to continuance of possession to time of taking in replevin, see Replevin, III.

¶ 230. In the absence of anything to the contrary, the presumption is that things continue as they are once shown to be; e. g., that ownership once shown continues.—Ormsby v. Barr, 22 Mich. 80.

¶ 231. One shown to have been an officer at a certain time is presumed to continue such until the term for which he was elected has expired.—Kinyon v. Duchene, 21 Mich. 498.

¶ 232. Where there is evidence of the value of goods at the date of shipment and a subsequent sale at that rate, it will be presumed, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, that the same price could have been obtained in the interval.—Howland v. Davis, 40 Mich. 545.

¶ 233. There is no presumption that goods shown to have been in the possession of a firm engaged in buying and selling such articles continue in its possession for four months and a half after.—Bethel v. Linn, 63 Mich. 464.

¶ 234. Possession shown to have been in a person is presumed to have continued in him.—Sanford v. Millikin, 144 Mich. 311.

¶ 235. Reputation once established may well be presumed to continue.—People v. Russell, 110 Mich. 46.

§ 41. Prior condition or facts.

¶ 236. A state of facts once existing is usually presumed to continue, but the facts are not presumed to have always existed.—Blank v. Township of Livonia, 79 Mich. 1.

§ 42. Identity, status or personal conditions and relations.

As to sanity or competency of persons, see Insane Persons, I; Incompetents; and see also Indictment, VIII, A.

As to mental condition of testator and continuance of condition, see Wills, II.
Presumption as to identity of two actions, see Abatement ¶ 31.
As to identity of persons from identity or similarity of names, see Names.
Presumption of legitimacy, see Bastards § 1.

¶ 237. Where two parties are subscribers to the same telephone exchange and one party, using the telephone directory to ascertain the number of the other party, calls for such other party, and is connected by central with such other party, and a conversation ensues in which the party called responds and informs the party calling that he is the party called, upon proof of such facts, a rebuttable presumption or inference arises sufficient to make a prima facie case of identity.—Theisen v. Detroit Taxicab & Transfer Co., 200 Mich. 136.

§ 43. Corporate attributes, existence and facts.

The presumptions as to incorporation, corporate existence and powers, officers and agents, stock, stockholders and dissolution, are treated in Corporations, which see.
As to knowledge of laws of one's own corporation, see post § 48.

§ 44. Human actions and conduct.

As to human thoughts and intents, see post §§ 45-50.
Presumption as to careful person preserving important papers, see ante ¶ 209.
Presumptions as to care or negligence, see Negligence, V; and see also various specific topics treating of negligence, e. g., Carriers, II-IV; Highways, XII, XIII; Master and Servant, III; Railroads, VIII; Street Railways, IV.
Presumption that person dying unwitnessed was careful for his own safety, see Death by Wrongful Act § 18.
Presumption in absence of eyewitnesses that employee was injured in performance of duty and while in the exercise of due care at the time of fatal accident, see note, 7 N. C. C. A. 1042-1061.

§ 45. Interest or motive.

As to intent or knowledge, see post §§ 46-49.
As to ownership or possession of property, see post §§ 54-56.
Presumptions as to fraudulent motive, see Fraud; Fraudulent Conveyances.
As to malice in torts, see Assault; False Imprisonment; Malicious Prosecution; Trespass; Damages, XI, A.

¶ 238. It is presumed that the grantor of lands has an interest in having them discharged of incumbrances.—Norton v. Colgrove, 41 Mich. 544.

§ 46. Intent, knowledge or notice.

As to hearing audible speech, see post ¶ 268.
Intent to violate law, see also post § 49.
Admissibility of declarations evincing intent or knowledge, see post § 333.
Rebuttal of presumption of knowledge of one's own books, see ante ¶ 198.
As to specific intent or knowledge or notice of specific thing, see topics treating thereof.
Presumption as to intentional failure to file corporate reports, see Corporations § 179.
Presumptions as to mistake, see Mistake.
Presumptions as to knowledge of customs, see Customs § 7.
Presumable knowledge of contents of instrument as signed, see Execution of Instruments, I; Mistake.
Presumption that parties to bond know import thereof, see Bonds ¶ 4.
Presumptions as to notice and receipt of notices sent, see Notices; Negotiable Instruments, XIII, XIV; Notice and Record of Title, I.
As to notice of equities and defenses affecting purchaser or taker, see Negotiable Instruments, XIII, XIV; Notice and Record of Title, I.
Presumption that joinder by wife in husband's deed was for purpose of release of dower, see Dower ¶ 39.
Presumption as to intent in criminal cases, see Indictment, VIII, A; Homicide, VII; Rape.

¶ 239. One is presumed to intend the natural consequences of his acts.—People v. Potter, 5 Mich. 1; People v. Scott, 6 Mich. 287; People v. Getchell, 6 Mich. 496; Allison v. Chandler, 11 Mich. 542; People v. Sweeney, 55 Mich. 586.

¶ 240. The presumption is, in the absence of later evidence, that one intended what his solemn deed naturally imports.—Ward v. Ward, 37 Mich. 253.

¶ 241. One is presumed to intend the natural and necessary consequences of his own act.—Schaible v. Ardner, 98 Mich. 70; People v. Resh, 107 Mich. 251.

¶ 242. Subscribing witnesses to a will are presumed to have had full knowledge of what they were doing at the time.—Abbott v. Abbott, 41 Mich. 540.

¶ 243. Subscribing witnesses are not presumed to know the contents of a lost paper they have attested.—Eslow v. Mitchell, 26 Mich. 500.

¶ 244. There is a presumption that a person is cognizant of the contents of his own books of account, including the bookkeeper's individual account.—Hurley v. Watson, 92 Mich. 121.

¶ 245. The rule that parties are presumed to know the law and that ignorance of it is no excuse, does not apply to the existence or nonexistence of acts which may appear upon some public records, or may be shown by extrinsic evidence.—G. F. Sanborn Co. v. Alston, 153 Mich. 456.

§ 47. ——Knowledge of the law.

As to facts of public record, see ante ¶ 245.
Conclusiveness of the presumption, see ante § 83.
Applicability in fraud cases of presumption as to knowledge of law, see Fraud, I, III; and see also Mistake.
Of knowledge of taxability and place for payment, see Taxes.

¶ 246. All persons are bound to know and are presumed to know the law.—Cargill v. Power, 1 Mich. 369; Woodruff v. Phillips, 10 Mich. 500.

¶ 247. All men are presumed to know the law.—Spitzer v. Village of Blanchard, 82 Mich. 234; Auditor-General v. Lake George & M. R. R. Co., 82 Mich. 426; Adsit v. Osmun, 84 Mich. 420; Wayne County Savings Bank v. Airey, 95 Mich. 520.

¶ 248. One must be presumed to know the law.—Harris v. Cable, 104 Mich. 365.

¶ 249. Every man is supposed to know what the law is, and his rights are to be determined accordingly.—Hammond v. Michigan State Bank, W. 214.

¶ 250. Every one knows or must be presumed to know the law, and what the law requires to enable him to enforce his claims and within what time he must proceed.—Robert v. Morrin's Estate, 27 Mich. 306, 307.

¶ 251. A testator is presumed to have been acquainted with the rules of law.—Fraser v. Chene, 2 Mich. 81.

¶ 252. It is presumed that one layman knows as much about law as another layman does.—Stanton v. Hart, 27 Mich. 539.

¶ 253. All persons are bound to take notice of a public law.—Le Roy v. East Saginaw City Ry. Co., 18 Mich. 233.

¶ 254. One must be held to know the law that a note given by husband and wife is void as to the wife, unless the money was borrowed for her separate estate.—Schmidt v. Spencer, 87 Mich. 121.

¶ 255. A trustee is presumed to know the law.—Perrin v. Lepper, 72 Mich. 454.

¶ 256. Those to whom a city contract is let are supposed, equally with the common council, to have knowledge of the law.—Mathewson v. City of Grand Rapids, 88 Mich. 558.

¶ 257. A city and its legal counsel must be presumed to know the law.—Canfield v. City of Jackson, 112 Mich. 120.

§ 48. ——Knowledge of laws of one's own corporation.

¶ 258. All members of a mutual insurance company must be presumed to have knowledge of the law and of the company's articles of association.—Goss v. Peters, 98 Mich. 112.

¶ 259. All members of a mutual fire insurance company must be deemed to have knowledge of the law under which the company is incorporated.—Brock v. Dwelling-House Ins. Co., 102 Mich. 583.

§ 49. As to innocence, good faith or fraud.

As to fraud or honesty, see Fraud, III.
As to fraud or undue influence, see Fraud, III; Wills, III; Fraudulent Conveyances, I, V.
As to bona fide purchase or transfer, see Negotiable Instruments, XIII, XIV; Notice and Record of Title, I; and see Fraudulent Conveyances.
Presumptions and burden as to fraud in assignments, see Assignments for Creditors § 15.
Presumption of good faith in architect's or superintendent's measurements or certificates, see Building Contracts §§ 11, 39.

¶ 260. All reasonable presumptions should be indulged in favor of innocence.—Matteson v. Morris, 40 Mich. 52.

¶ 261. The presumption of innocence of criminal conduct exists even in a civil case.—Monaghan v. Agricultural Fire Ins. Co. of Watertown, N. Y., 53 Mich. 238.

¶ 262. Intention to violate the law will not be presumed.—Detroit Savings Bank v. Truesdail, 38 Mich. 430.

¶ 263. Falsehood and wrong are not to be presumed.—Thayer v. McGee, 20 Mich. 195.

¶ 264. The presumption of law is in favor of honest rather than dishonest motives.—In re King's Estate, 94 Mich. 411.

¶ 265. Although bad faith is not presumed, it is presumed that there may be bad faith.—Prince v. Clark, 81 Mich. 167.

§ 50. Assent, acquiescence or waiver.

Presumption that declaration in an action was by plaintiff's sanction, so as to bind him by admission therein, see post ¶ 2001.
Presumptions and evidence of waiver and election, see Election and Waiver § 18.
Burden of proof and presumptions as to duress, see Duress § 7.
Presumable acceptance of delivery of instrument, see Execution of Instruments, III.

¶ 266. The inference of assent from mere passiveness is always made against the passive party, and never in favor of that party against the other.—White v. Campbell, 25 Mich. 463; Payne v. Walker, 26 Mich. 60.

¶ 267. One's assent may be presumed to that which benefits him, but not to that which prejudices him.—Higman v. Stewart, 38 Mich. 513.

¶ 267a. Acceptance of a beneficial grant is presumed.—Hatch v. Village of St. Joseph, 68 Mich. 220.

¶ 268. It is presumed that one within hearing and likely to hear did hear a statement by another to a third person bearing on the rights of the first, and that the hearer acquiesced; so held where the statement was offered as an admission by a wife, it having been made regarding her separate estate to one who loaned money on the security thereof while she and her husband, who made it, and the other person were sitting at dinner together.—Vosburg v. Brown, 119 Mich. 697.

§ 51. As to contracts and their legality and consideration.

Admissibility of parol evidence that sealed instrument or note had no actual consideration, see post § 163.
Presumptions as to genuineness and execution and delivery and acceptance on instruments, see Execution of Instruments, I, III.
As to date of delivery of instrument, see Execution of Instruments, III.
Presumption as to time of alterations, see Alteration of Instruments § 12.
As to gratuitousness of services rendered or expectation of pay, see Implied Contracts, II.
Presumptions respecting consideration for contracts, see Contracts §§ 138, 139.
Presumption as to contract with particular custom in view, see Customs §§ 1, 2, 11.
Presumptions in actions on contracts, see Contracts §§ 303-308.
As to sale being on credit or for cash, see Sales, VII.

¶ 269. A written agreement bearing the genuine signatures of the parties in interest is presumed to embody the terms of the preliminary oral negotiations.—Sheley v. Brooks, 114 Mich. 11.

¶ 270. A sufficient consideration to support a restrictive provision in a bill of lading will be presumed.—McMillan v. Michigan Southern & N. I. R. Co., 16 Mich. 79.

¶ 271. Where a deed grants lands in one state to a corporation created by the laws of another, but does not show any consideration, it will be presumed to have been made for any species of consideration that will support it: courts will not presume illegality.—Thompson v. Waters, 25 Mich. 214.

¶ 272. The considerations recited in a deed are not sufficient evidence in behalf of a party who has the burden of showing, in a suit between the grantee and third persons, that the consideration was valuable.—Ripley v. Seligman, 88 Mich. 177.

¶ 273. A presumption of fact obtains, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, that the sum mentioned in a mortgage as the consideration therefor is correctly stated.—Cady v. Burgess, 144 Mich. 523.

§ 52. As to payment, discharge or satisfaction.

Presumptions as to payment, either generally or from lapse of time, see Payment, V.
As to application of payments, see Payment, V.
Payment or loan presumable from delivery of money or possession of canceled check or receipt, see Payment, V.
As to check or note representing loan or payment, see Payment, V; Contracts, § 303; Implied Contracts, II; Negotiable Instruments, XIV.

§ 53. As to titles, grants and wills.

As to intent of party to deed, see also ante § 46.
As to knowledge by attesting witnesses of quality of their act, see ante § 46.
Presumptions regarding execution and genuineness, see Execution of Instruments, I, III; Wills, II-V.
Presumption arising from acknowledgment and certificate thereof on deeds, etc., see Acknowledgments § 20.
Presumptions on probate, see Wills, V.
Presumptions indulged in construing wills, see Wills, VI.
Presumption as to testacy, see Descent ¶ 7.

¶ 274. All titles to lands in this state are presumed to have been granted or originally recognized and confirmed by the United States or by the state.—Gamble v. Horr, 40 Mich. 561.

¶ 275. There can be no presumption of title from ancient grant as against the state in a case where the right of the state accrued prior to March 1, 1847, and is not barred by any statute of limitations; nor will such presumption be allowed to dispute the accuracy of public acts and records in a case where there is positive and unquestioned evidence that no such title existed or was ever set up beyond the assumption of possession.—Crane v. Reeder, 21 Mich. 24.

¶ 276. No presumption of title in the grantee who brings an action in trespass is raised by a conveyance by warranty deed by a stranger to the title, of wild and unoccupied land of which the grantor never had possession.—Crawford v. Corey, 99 Mich. 415.

§ 54. As to ownership or seisin.

See also ante ¶ 276.
As to source of titles, see ante ¶ 274.
As to continuing ownership, see ante § 40.
As to possession of grantor after grant, see post § 55.
As to possession following title as incident to it, see post § 56.

As to grants and wills, see ante § 53.
Inconclusiveness of presumption based on possession, see ante § 33.
Consignee as prima facie owner of goods, see Carriers § 23.
Possession of stock certificates properly indorsed as presumptive evidence of title, see Corporations § 284.
As to relative interests and shares of cotenants, see Tenants in Common, II; Wills, VI; Deeds, III.
As to relative rights and estates of husband and wife, see Husband and Wife, II.
As to relative interests and shares of partners, see Partnership, V.

¶ 277. Where one occupies land several years and dies in possession, seizin in favor of his heirs or of purchasers from his estate is presumed.—Hall v. Kellogg, 16 Mich. 135.

¶ 278. Proof of possession under a claim of title, founded upon a deed not emanating from the source of title, or traced back to a person so claiming, does not raise a legal presumption of seizin in fee; and, if such possession were evidence of seizin, it would be at most but a bare presumption, liable to be overcome by other proof, as of title in a third person.—Lull v. Davis, 1 Mich. 77.

¶ 279. Mere occupancy or possession, without color or claim of title, cannot be evidence of seizin, particularly as against a prior occupant.—Millerd v. Reeves, 1 Mich. 107.

¶ 280. Possession and claim of title under a deed which purports to convey it is prima facie evidence of title as against one who shows no right in himself.—McFarlane v. Ray, 14 Mich. 465.

¶ 281. One who assumes as owner to convey lands of which he has peaceable possession and occupancy must be deemed prima facie to have the right to do so.—Gamble v. Horr, 40 Mich. 561.

¶ 282. Possession of personal property under a claim of ownership is presumptive evidence of ownership until the contrary is shown.—Trevorrow v. Trevorrow, 65 Mich. 234.

¶ 283. Wood cut on land which has been for several years peaceably held under claim of title is presumptively owned by the possessor until a better title is shown to exist in some one else.—Beeman v. Black, 49 Mich. 598.

¶ 284. The ownership of animals is not necessarily presumed to go to the person who owns what they feed on.—Burdick v. Michael, 32 Mich. 246.

¶ 285. The mere fact of possession of tax sale certificates after the death of the decedent owner is not proof of ownership nor does it show a prima facie assignment.—Root v. Beymer, 146 Mich. 692.

¶ 286. In replevin A.'s possession and use, for more than a year under claim of title, of a team of horses, raises a presumption of ownership in him that is sufficient until evidence to the contrary is introduced, and that is not rebutted or materially weakened by the fact that the defendant A.'s father bought the team from B. a year and a half before A.'s death.—Trevorrow v. Trevorrow, 65 Mich. 234.

§ 55. ——Grantor in possession after grant.

¶ 287. Possession held without change by a grantor, after conveyance, is presumed to be in subordination to his conveyance.—Bloomer v. Henderson, 8 Mich. 395; Dawson v. Danbury Bank, 15 Mich. 489; Humphrey v. Hurd, 29 Mich. 44; Jeffery v. Hursh, 45 Mich. 59.

¶ 288. A grantor's continued possession is presumed to be in subordination to his own conveyance, unless while he is allowed to remain as apparent owner third persons have in good faith, and relying on appearances, acquired rights under him.—Jeffery v. Hursh, 45 Mich. 59.

¶ 289. The presumption that a grantor's possession is in subordination to his grant would be strengthened rather than weakened by the grantor's taking an assignment of a mortgage given to his grantee on a sale by the latter of the premises, and his rights thereafter would be no greater than those of a mortgagee in possession.—Humphrey v. Hurd, 29 Mich. 44.

¶ 290. The grantor's retention of possession is not incompatible with any other right as against the grantee, if such right exists, and is not inconsistent in fact with the existence of the grant.—Bower v. Earl, 18 Mich. 367.

¶ 291. Where the grant is of a part of a larger tract, and delivery of actual possession follows, retention up to a certain line, and surrender beyond it, by the grantor, indicate a claim of ownership up to that line.—Bower v. Earl, 18 Mich. 367.

¶ 292. The continued possession of a grantor long after the recording of his deed to another may raise a presumption that, as between himself and his grantee, he has either retained or since acquired some right to the land or its possession.—Bennett v. Robinson, 27 Mich. 26; Stevens v. Hulin, 53 Mich. 93.

§ 56. As to possession.

Presumption of receipt from proof of sending or mailing, see ante § 35.
As to possession of grantor after grant, see ante § 55.
Presumption as to continuance of possession, see ante § 40.
Possession as incriminating evidence, see Indictment, VIII, A.

¶ 293. Possession of unoccupied lands is presumed to follow the title.—Safford v. Basto, 4 Mich. 406; Gamble v. Horr, 40 Mich. 561.

¶ 294. A purchaser of property at an auction sale presumptively takes possession.—Hall v. City of Kalamazoo, 131 Mich. 404.

§ 57. As to damages and values, worth or salability.

Presumptions as to damages and amount of same, see Damages, XI, A.
As to eminent domain damages, see Eminent Domain, V, D.
As to values, see Values.

¶ 295. An article that has a market value is presumably salable.—Grosvenor v. Ellis, 44 Mich. 452.

§ 58. As to jurisdiction and procedure and records.

Presumptions as to jurisdiction in general, see Courts § 80; Judgments, VII; Justices of the Peace, III; Municipal Courts, II; Probate Courts, I.
As to scope and subjects of adjudication on plea of res adjudicata, see Former Adjudication, VII.
As to existence of judgment and other valid prerequisites for execution, see Executions, VII, X.
As to correctness of judgments on collateral attack, see Judgments, VII.
As to regularity of tax law administration, see Taxes.
As to legality and regularity of proceedings for local improvements and assessments, see Local Improvements, VII, A.
Presumption as to authority to appear, see Appearance § 4.
Presumptions arising on record on appeal or error, see Appeal, XII, C.
Presumption on error as to admissibility of evidence received or rejected, see Appeal §§ 370, 371.
Presumption on error that there was sufficient evidence, see Appeal § 378, and see also Appeal, XII, E.
Presumptions on certiorari, see Certiorari § 59.
Presumption as to alteration of application for drain, see Drains § 48.

¶ 296. The law presumes that all officers intrusted with the custody of public files and records will perform their official duty by keeping the same safely in their offices. If a paper is not found where, if in existence, it ought to be deposited or recorded, the presumption arises that no such document has ever had existence.—Platt v. Stewart, 10 Mich. 260; Hall v. Kellogg, 16 Mich. 135.

§ 59. As to foreign laws or common law elsewhere.

Burden of proving foreign laws, see post § 68.
Printed books of foreign laws as evidence, see post § 532.
Presumption as to validity of transactions elsewhere which would have been invalid in Michigan, or vice versa, see post § 60.
Presumption as to law of foreign state, see also Conflict of Laws ¶ 62.
Presumption as to inheritance laws of other states, see also Descent ¶ 51.

¶ 297. The court will presume that the law of a sister state is the same as that of Michigan unless the contrary is shown.—Crane v. Hardy, 1 Mich. 56.

¶ 298. The common law, as in force in this state, will be presumed to prevail in a foreign country in the absence of proof to the contrary.—In re High, 2 D. 515.

¶ 299. If any presumption exists as to the laws of another state it is that they conform to the general principles of the common law. How general such a presumption would be, quære.—Ellis v. Maxson, 19 Mich. 186.

¶ 300. As to things that are usually matters of statutory regulation, it cannot be presumed that the laws of another state are the same as our own.—Gordon v. Ward, 16 Mich. 360.

¶ 301. Our local statutes cannot be presumed to have been adopted elsewhere.—Kermott v. Ayer, 11 Mich. 181.

¶ 302. The presumption that the common law prevails in another state cannot be extended so as to invalidate a transaction that would be valid under our statute if made here.—Worthington v. Hanna, 23 Mich. 530.

¶ 303. Statutes similar to those of Michigan invalidating contracts that would be good at common law will not be presumed to have been enacted by another state.—Kling v. Fries, 33 Mich. 275; Roethke v. Phillip Best Brewing Co., 33 Mich. 340; Webber v. Donnelly, 33 Mich. 469.

¶ 304. In the absence of proof of a statute to the contrary a parol contract for the sale of lands in the state of Illinois must be held valid.—Ellis v. Maxson, 19 Mich. 186.

¶ 305. The rates of interest being established by statute in this state, it is not a presumption of law that the rate in a foreign country is the same.—Kermott v. Ayer, 11 Mich. 181.

¶ 306. Where a New York note is defended because made on Sunday, any New York laws invalidating notes for that reason must be proved.—O'Rourke v. O'Rourke, 43 Mich. 58.

¶ 307. Where a common-law rule—e. g., that giving a husband all his wife's personalty—has been altered by statute here, it cannot be presumed that the common law still prevails in another state so as to invalidate a transaction that would be valid in Michigan.—Worthington v. Hanna, 23 Mich. 535.

¶ 308. A statute of another state disqualifying a married woman residing in such state from giving notes for goods purchased by her must be proved.—Wheeler v. Constantine, 39 Mich. 62.

¶ 309. The common-law rule in respect to wife's share in deceased husband's personalty is presumed, in the absence of proof, to prevail in Wisconsin.—Knapp v. Knapp, 95 Mich. 474.

¶ 310. Though it may be questionable whether the doctrine can be applied universally that the common law as it prevails among us will be presumed to prevail in a foreign country in the absence of proof to the contrary, yet the reason of it is applicable to all marriages celebrated in Christian countries, in which it may properly be assumed that a general common law on the subject of marriage still prevails.—Hutchins v. Kimmell, 31 Mich. 126.

¶ 311. It is not presumed that there are regulations anywhere restricting the common right of marriage.—Hutchins v. Kimmell, 31 Mich. 126.

§ 60. ——As to validity of transactions abroad.

¶ 312. A contract made in another state for the sale of intoxicating liquors will be presumed to be valid there, unless shown to be contrary to the law of that state.—Kling v. Fries, 33 Mich. 275; Roethke v. Philip Best Brewing Co., 33 Mich. 340; Webber v. Donnelly, 33 Mich. 469.

¶ 313. It will not be presumed that a transaction valid under the laws of this state is not valid elsewhere, although, in the absence of proof to the contrary, foreign transactions have been held valid when conforming to the common law.—Worthington v. Hanna, 23 Mich. 530.

¶ 314. There is no presumption that a transaction valid here is void elsewhere.—Worthington v. Hanna, 23 Mich. 530.

¶ 315. It cannot be presumed that vendors in another state of liquors to be transported into this state intended to assist vendee in violating our statute.—Kling v. Fries, 33 Mich. 275.

¶ 316. It cannot be presumed that a contract valid by our laws is not valid in another state.—Millard v. Truax, 73 Mich. 381.

§ 61. Presumptions against stale claims.

Presumption of payment based on lapse of time, see Payment, V.

Undue delay in claiming under contract as evidence of its nonexistence, see also Contracts ¶ 1267.

Doctrines of laches and estoppel, see Estoppel; Equity, IV.

¶ 317. If a creditor asserts a demand which the law requires to be evidenced by writing, but which rests in parol, as he alleges, because of the dishonest or fraudulent refusal of the debtor to execute the writing agreed upon, a strong presumption arises against his claim if for a considerable period of time—as here eight years—without any obvious or assigned reason, he neglects to take legal proceedings.—McClintock v. Laing, 22 Mich. 212.

¶ 318. Where a claimant to property has acquiesced in dealings adverse to his alleged rights, which he did not assert until the property became valuable, such neglect operates as strong proof that his claim is ill-founded, and shows such laches as will disincline a court of equity to entertain his suit.—Russell v. Miller, 26 Mich. 1.

¶ 319. Pretended beneficiaries who sleep twenty or thirty years upon their rights, and wait until it is fair to assume that important primary evidence will be difficult of access, have no claims upon the indulgence of equity. Claims must be presumed unfounded when not urged within some reasonable time.—Loomis v. Brush, 36 Mich. 40.

¶ 320. Courts of equity, when dealing with matters of fact not barred by lapse of time, consider a delay in bringing suit as an element of judgment, and require stronger testimony in stale cases.—Shadock v. Alpine Plank Road Co., 79 Mich. 7.

¶ 321. In an action for negligent injuries which was begun almost six years after the accident, it is error to instruct the jury that no prejudicial inferences should be drawn from plaintiff's delay in suing.—Shadock v. Alpine Plank Road Co., 79 Mich. 7.

§ 62. Presumption from falsification or contrivance.

From staleness of claim, see ante § 61.

From failure to attend and make or furnish available proofs, see post §§ 63-65.

Evasion or suppression or falsehood as affecting credibility of the witness, see Witnesses, VI, A.

Tampering with evidence as contempt, see Contempt § 9.

¶ 322. In an action by a real estate dealer against the purchaser of the land, for the value of services rendered, the fact that he has included an item for services in going with the purchaser to look at the land which he was employed to sell, may be taken into consideration by the jury in determining whether the other items in the bill of particulars were legitimate or not.—Hale v. Knapp, 134 Mich. 622.

§ 63. Presumptions from failure to attend and make proofs.

From staleness of claim, see ante § 61.

From falsification or contrivance, see ante § 62.

Destruction or nonproduction of books and papers, see post § 64.
Failure to call other person as witness, see post § 65.
Failure to take stand in person, see also post § 341.
Failure to call member of family, see also post ¶ 341.
Evidence to rebut presumption, see post § 86.
Effect of presumption as against positive contrary evidence, see post § 609.
Admissibility of document where party has committed laches, see post ¶ 2570.
Assumption of truth of uncontradicted evidence, see post § 591.
Withholding or suppression as affecting weight of evidence adduced, see post § 593.
Admissions against interest implied from conduct or silence, see post § 385 et seq.
Failure to deny testimony of another as an admission, see post ¶¶ 2068, 2070.
Presumption against person refusing to submit to physical examination of injuries, see also Discovery ¶ 30.
Weighing the credibility of the witnesses, see post, X; Witnesses, VI.
Duty to call witnesses or of party to take stand, see Trial, V.
Calling and examination of party as witness and cross-examination, see Examination of Witnesses.

¶ 323. It is to be presumed that when a witness refuses to explain what he can explain, the explanation would be to his preju dice.—Heath v. Waters, 40 Mich. 457.

¶ 324. Where a party who has the burden of proof neglects to produce evidence that may fairly be presumed to have been within his reach and is needed to make a satisfactory case, he cannot complain if the court declines to extend his showing by construction to meet the defense.—Ruppe v. Steinbach, 48 Mich. 465.

¶ 325. Where a party omits, when on the stand, to testify as to matters peculiarly within his knowledge, his silence may fairly be made to weigh against him.—Tompkins v. Hitchcock, 69 Mich. 121.

¶ 326. Where there is no fact in issue to which it is material or necessary to call plaintiff as a witness, no unfavorable presumption can arise from his failure to testify.—Farrand v. Aldrich, 85 Mich. 593.

¶ 327. The failure of a party interested in a suit to take the stand may strengthen the inference to be legitimately drawn from testimony in the case, but it does not warrant an inference in no manner justified by that testimony.—Blackman v. Andrews, 150 Mich. 322.

¶ 328. Where a party who is not called as a witness in his own behalf possesses knowledge of the facts in controversy unknown to others who are called as witnesses, which facts would supply positive evidence of what must otherwise be established by inference from other facts proved, and upon which inference he relies, a presumption arises that the facts within his knowledge would, if produced, be harmful to him, which presumption may be rebutted by a satisfactory explanation of the absence of the party, or of the failure to take his deposition.—Cole v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co., 81 Mich. 156.

¶ 329. Where, in an action for negligent injury, a fact solely within plaintiff's knowledge is sought to be established in behalf of her case by evidence from other facts, the jury may consider her failure to appear as a witness as a circumstance indicating that if she had testified her testimony would have weakened her case.—Cole v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co., 81 Mich. 156.

¶ 330. Refusal to answer proper questions on cross-examination warrants unfavorable inference.—Goodrich v. Smith, 87 Mich. 1.

¶ 331. In an action for personal injuries plaintiff's absence at a former trial is a circumstance to be considered against her by the jury, and if not explained might be considered against her indicating that her evidence would have weakened her case, it being her duty, if physically and mentally able, to be present and to testify.—Cole v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co., 95 Mich. 77.

¶ 332. A presumption against a husband and wife may be indulged in because of their failure to take the stand and testify to matters peculiarly within their knowledge, where judgment creditors seeking to set aside conveyances as fraudulent, introduce evidence showing that the husband represented himself as being worth $20,000 at the time that the indebtedness was incurred, that he had nothing shortly afterwards and that some of the conveyances were kept off the record for a long time, as in such case the complainant has shown sufficient to cast the onus probandi upon the grantees and vendees in the conveyances.—Manhard Hardware Co. v. Rothschild, 121 Mich. 657.

¶ 333. The failure of complainant who is present in court to testify as a witness is significant in determining on appeal whether a deed signed by her was intended as a mortgage or a sale, she contending that it is a mortgage.—Sowles v. Wilcox, 127 Mich. 166, per Grant, J.

¶ 334. Where a party defendant to a suit to enforce an oral contract to convey land, the defense to which is a written contract of sale of the premises by defendant to complainant, fails to appear as a witness, all doubts as to whether the written agreement was to be binding must be resolved in complainant's favor.—Woodard v. Walker, 192 Mich. 188.

¶ 335. Where a defendant in a suit for an accounting denies the genuineness of a part of the vouchers produced against him, but does not designate those which are spurious though he has an opportunity to do so, they must all be regarded as prima facie valid in the absence of other evidence that they are not so.—University of Michigan v. Rose, 45 Mich. 284.

¶ 336. An administrator's omission on the hearing of a claim before commissioners to take the stand to contradict the claimant's testimony is not a safe basis for inferences against the estate.—Anderson v. Russell, 34 Mich. 109.

§ 64. ——Nonproduction or destruction of books or papers.

Instructions on effect of suppression or nonproduction of evidence, see Instructions, V.

Presumption against spoliator as aid in restoring destroyed papers, see Restoration of Papers.

Presumption on accounting against party failing to produce evidence, see Accounting Suits ¶ 41.

Nonproduction of evidence as affecting credibility of witnesses, see Witnesses, VI, A.

Failure to introduce instrument in evidence, effect to raise estoppel to claim thereunder in later trial, see also Estoppel ¶ 95.

¶ 337. Where questions arose concerning money payments, sworn to from reliance on books of account, the failure, without excuse, to produce the books for scrutiny, furnishes reason for disregarding such evidence. The suppression of important documentary testimony, under such circumstances, justifies presumptions against the party who should have produced it.—Page v. Stephens, 23 Mich. 357.

¶ 338. Inability to produce a contract that has been fulfilled does not furnish any conclusive presumption against its existence.—Lamore v. Frisbie, 42 Mich. 186.

¶ 339. The refusal of a defendant in foreclosure to produce business books which are in his possession, and which may reasonably be expected to shed light upon the transactions in dispute, is suspicious.—Wiswall v. Ayres, 51 Mich. 324.

¶ 340. A party's unexplained failure to preserve letters received by him from the opposing party, thus rendering him unable to produce them on the trial when notified to do so, raises a presumption against his statement of their contents where it differs from the other's version, especially if he was apprised of the importance of keeping letters bearing in his favor.—Francis v. Barry, 69 Mich. 311.

¶ 341. Where the question is as to the date of delivery of a deed to defendant, which deed after being recorded was taken from the register's office by defendant's daughter, the omission to produce the deed and to call herself and daughter as witnesses requires the evidence to be construed most strongly against defendant.—Lake v. Nolan, 81 Mich. 112.

¶ 342. Where, in an action for personal injuries on a railroad, plaintiff was seeking to prove that defendant was operating the road at the time of the injuries, under a traffic arrangement with the company which owned the road, a witness for defendant, who had been treasurer of the road owning the line, testified on cross-examination that $80,000 of the earnings of the road were sent by him to bankers in New York city, at the direction of the president of his company, who was also defendant's president, and that certain books in defendant's possession, which books it had failed to produce pursuant to notice, would show what disposition was made of said money. Held, that the natural and proper inference, if these facts were established, was that defendant did not care to produce said books, for the reason that they would show the receipt of this money by defendant, and counsel might properly urge it to the jury.—Williams v. Cleveland, C., C. & St. L. R. Co., 102 Mich. 537.

¶ 343. In an action on a promissory note where it is claimed that the defendant is merely an agent of the payee who has disposed of it to a bona fide purchaser and subsequently repurchased it through the alleged agent, the conduct of the plaintiff, of the payee, and of the attorney for the payee, in refusing to produce correspondence between the parties, and also upon the witness stand, may be taken into consideration by the jury in determining the question of whether or not the plaintiff is the agent of the payee.—Battersbee v. Calkins, 128 Mich. 569.

¶ 344. As a general rule, the destruction of documentary evidence raises a presumption that its contents were as alleged by the adverse party.—Barras v. Barras, 191 Mich. 473.

¶ 345. The rule that the destruction of documentary evidence raises a presumption that its contents were as alleged by the adverse party has no application where the instrument is a nullity.—Barras v. Barras, 191 Mich. 473.

¶ 346. Where a trustee wilfully destroys a declaration of trust the maxim "omnia præsumuntur contra spoliatorem" applies.—Pitcher v. Rogers' Estate, 199 Mich. 114.

§ 65. ——Nonproduction of witnesses.

Propriety of offer to call spouse in order to force claim of privilege and raise adverse presumption thereon, see Trial, V.

¶ 347. A husband's neglect to call his wife to prove his case when he might do so is not necessarily suspicious, especially if he can sufficiently establish it by other witnesses.—Dickerson v. Dickerson, 50 Mich. 37.

¶ 348. The mere omission of a party to call a witness, other than the party himself, who might with equal propriety have been called by the other party, is no ground for a presumption that the testimony of the witness would have been unfavorable.—Cole v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co., 81 Mich. 156.

¶ 349. Where plaintiff sues for injuries received from falling into a hole on defendant's ground, his failure to call as a witness his wife, who had fallen into the same hole with him, raises no presumption against him.—Cross v. Lake Shore & M. S. Ry. Co., 69 Mich. 363.

¶ 350. Failure of plaintiff in an assault and battery case to produce as witnesses physicians who attended her is proper for jury to consider in determining the merits.—Cooley v. Foltz, 85 Mich. 47.

¶ 351. Where, after a consent order excluding witnesses from the court room in a will contest is made, it is announced that the legatee will not be offered as a witness, and opportunity is given contestants to cross-examine him, which is not done, and it is claimed that legatee's presence in court is necessary and that by his remaining under a modified order of the court he can no longer be called to the witness stand without the consent of the contestants, the benefit of the presumption arising from the failure of the legatee to take the stand and testify in his own behalf may not be claimed by contestants, they, by their actions, having foreclosed him from so doing.—In re Sparks' Estate, 198 Mich. 421; Hodgman v. Sears, Id.

§ 66. Burden of proof in general.

[Note. As far as possible the cases on the burden of proof of specific issues have been treated with the other procedural law relating to those issues. See the appropriate specific topics, in addition to cross-references in this and following sections (§§ 66-70).]

Matters judicially known without proof, see ante, I.

Of negative contentions, see post § 67.

Of proving foreign laws, see post § 68.

Of proving foundation for evidence offered, see post § 69.

Shifting of burden, see post § 70.

Quantity of proof required to sustain burden, see post § 578 et seq.

Discharge of burden by admissions in pleading, see Pleading, IX.

Necessity of affidavit with plea or declaration to require proofs on particular issues, see Pleading, IX.

Burden of proof in equity, see Equity § 158.

Effect of admissions or denials in equity to cast or discharge burden, see Equity § 160.

Burden of proving set-off or recoupment, see Set-off, IV.

Facts assumed to be true in passing on motions to direct verdict, see Directing Verdict § 19.

Burden on appeal or error to show error on the record, see Appeal § 352.

Burden in contempt proceedings, see Contempt § 34.

Burden of proof in stating accounts, see Accounting Suits § 13.

Burden of rebutting accord and satisfaction inferable on plaintiff's case, see Accord and Satisfaction § 16.

Burden of overcoming force of acknowledgment on deed, see Acknowledgments § 20.

Burden of proof as to legality of alterations on paper, see Alteration of Instruments § 12.

Burden of proof on petition to dissolve attachment, see Attachment § 122.

Burden of proving equitable estoppel, see Estoppel § 59.

Burden of proving infancy or other disability, see Infants, VII; Insane Persons, V; Husband and Wife, VI.

Burden of showing discharge, payment or release, see Accord and Satisfaction: Election and Waiver; Releases; Payment, V.

Burden of proving bona fides, see Negotiable Instruments, XIV; Municipal Bonds, III; Notice and Record of Title, I.

As to care or negligence, see Negligence, V: and see also specific topics, e. g., Carriers; Highways, XII, XIII; Master and Servant, III; Railroads, VIII; Street Railways, IV.

As to undue influence in making of will, see Wills, III.

Burden in probate or contest of wills, see Wills, V.

Burden of proof of damages and amount of same, see Damages, XI, A.

Burden of proof of death of person, see Death § 2.

Right to open and close evidence, see also Trial, V.

Right to open and close arguments, see Argument of Counsel § 6.

¶ 352. The burden of proof is on plaintiff to make out his case.—Gillett v. Detroit Board of Trade, 46 Mich. 309.

¶ 353. The burden of proof rests upon plaintiff to make out a case.—Barker v. Hebbard, 81 Mich. 367.

¶ 354. A plaintiff has always the burden of showing his cause of action, and a defendant is entitled to go free unless made answerable by legal testimony. There are no presumptions against him, and, if there is no such testimony to be found, it is not admissible to make out a case without it.—Lendberg v. Brotherton Iron Mining Co., 75 Mich. 84.

¶ 355. The burden is upon complainant to prove a fact that is essential to his case.—Peters v. Canfield, 74 Mich. 498.

¶ 356. In civil cases the burden of proving any fact lies upon the party who substantially avers the affirmative of the issue.—White v. Campbell, 25 Mich. 463; Stewart v. Ashley, 34 Mich. 183.

¶ 357. In civil cases the burden of proof is generally upon the party who affirms the existence of facts necessary to make out his case.—People v. Coughlin, 65 Mich. 704.

¶ 358. The general rule is that the party holding the affirmative of an issue takes the onus of proof, and that, in all instances where the right of action depends upon the negative averment, the party making it is charged with the burden of proving it.—People v. Swineford, 77 Mich. 573.

¶ 359. One who claims that the county surveyor has not performed his duty, or has blundered in performing it, has the burden of showing that fact.—Smith v. Rich, 37 Mich. 549.

¶ 360. The burden of proof is upon plaintiff to maintain a point essential to his cause of action; as that a taking of a railroad company's property for a residence crossing is justified upon the ground of public police regulation.—People v. Detroit, G. H. & M. R. Co., 79 Mich. 471.

¶ 361. Where pleadings or papers prepared by solicitors in a suit have been given to the jury as admissions by way of evidence in another suit, it devolves on the client against whom they were admitted to show that they were made by mistake or without authority.—Hamilton Provident & Loan Soc. v. Northwood, 86 Mich. 315.

¶ 362. One claiming to have mailed a letter has the burden of proving it.—Smith v. City Nat. Bank of Lansing, 182 Mich. 76.

¶ 363. Common-law rules of pleading are of little aid in determining who has the burden of proof under the general issue.—Ingalls v. Eaton, 25 Mich. 32.

¶ 364. Where defendant pleads the general issue and does not rely upon payment or other discharge as a defense, the burden of proof is on plaintiff throughout.—Berringer v. Lake Superior Iron Co., 41 Mich. 305.

¶ 365. Wherever a prima facie right is disputed the burden of proof is on the party attacking it.—Walker v. Detroit Transit R. Co., 47 Mich. 338.

§ 67. ——Negation, avoidance or exception.

Burden of proof of facts avoiding admission, see ante ¶ 361.

In criminal cases, see Indictment, VIII, A.

Burden of proving negative in allegation of breach of bond, see Bonds § 7.

Direction of verdict against party failing to disprove negative within his knowledge, see Directing Verdict ¶ 9.

¶ 366. As to the burden of proof in case of negative averment, see People v. Swineford, 77 Mich. 573.

¶ 367. The burden of avoiding an accord and satisfaction rests on the plaintiff to prove not only the accord but also that it remains unsatisfied, where he pleads in avoidance of it as a part of his cause of action on the original debt. If, however, an accord is pleaded defensively the defendant must prove both elements of it.—Browning v. Crouse, 43 Mich. 489.

¶ 368. When the party having the affirmative of the issue introduces competent evidence in support thereof, and the adverse party, instead of offering evidence upon the facts alleged by the plaintiff, sets up another and distinct fact in avoidance, then the burden of proof is upon him to establish such defense.—Manistee National Bank v. Seymour, 64 Mich. 59.

¶ 369. Where a statute makes transactions of a certain kind illegal, with specified exceptions, the party claiming the benefit of an exception takes upon himself, in civil cases, the burden of proving his case within it.—Niles v. Rhodes, 7 Mich. 374.

§ 68. Burden of proving foreign laws.

Rules as to judicial notice, see ante § 27.

Presumptions as to foreign laws, see ante §§ 59, 60.

Sufficiency of proofs, see post § 587.

¶ 370. As our courts cannot judicially notice a foreign statute, one who seeks to recover upon a liability arising from the violation thereof must aver and prove such statute.—Great Western Ry. Co. of Canada v. Miller, 19 Mich. 305.

¶ 371. A note made on Sunday is not void at common law, and in a suit on a foreign note any foreign statute invalidating it must be proved.—O'Rourke v. O'Rourke, 43 Mich. 58.

§ 69. Burden of proving foundation for evidence offered.

¶ 372. The burden of proof is upon the proponent to show that an exclamation was spontaneous so as to be admissible as a part of res gestæ under the exception to the hearsay rule.—Rogers v. Saginaw-Bay City Ry. Co., 187 Mich. 490.

§ 70. Rule as to shifting of burden.

See also ante ¶ 368.

[Note. As appears by the following case the burden is shifted by whatever suffices to make a prima facie case. For cases deciding what suffices to make a prima facie case, see specific topics.]

¶ 373. The burden of proof is shifted by presumptions of law, by presumptions of fact of the stronger kind, and by evidence strong enough to establish a prima facie case.—Bly v. Brady, 113 Mich. 176.

III. RELEVANCY AND COMPETENCY IN GENERAL.

§ 71. In general, relation to issues and theory of case.

[Note. "Relevancy," as used in this analysis, means "applicability to the issue joined," and "competency" means fitness or propriety of the evidence to be used. Technically the rules of competency operate to exclude on grounds of unfitness, impropriety or impolicy evidence which might otherwise relate to the issues and tend towards proof. Only the more general rules of relevancy are illustrated by the cases retained in Evidence. Relevancy to prove a few facts not easily referable to any specific topic (see post §§ 98-106) is also treated here, but in the main relevancy is treated in the specific topics. See references post § 98. On the other hand the treatment of competency in Evidence is full and exclusive. See post this division (III), also Best and Secondary Rules, post, IV; Parol or Extrinsic Evidence, post, V; Opinions and Conclusions, post, VI; Hearsay, Character, Declarations, and Res Gestæ, post, VII; Documentary Evidence, post, VIII; Real Evidence, post, IX. The competency of witnesses, as distinguished from the competency of evidence, is treated in Witnesses, II-V.

Materiality or immateriality of the evidence offered is treated herein as practically the same as "relevancy." In this sense evidence is immaterial when its tendency to prove the issues is so slight as to be negligible, even if deemed relevant. See post §§ 71-80.]

Circumstantial or indirect evidence, see post § 77.
Cumulative or corroborative evidence, see post § 79.
Negative evidence, see post § 80.
Evidence against public policy or wrongly procured, see post §§ 82, 83.
Rebuttal, explanatory or supplementary facts, see post §§ 84-92.
Facts prior or subsequent to times in issue, see post § 94.
Similar disconnected facts, see post § 95.
Comparisons and tests with other things, see post § 96.
Acts and transactions with third persons, see post § 97.
To prove various particular facts, see post §§ 98-106.
Admissibility for some but not for all purposes, see post § 93.
Res inter alios acta, see post § 97.
Irrelevant rebuttal, see also post § 84.
Irrelevancy of evidence to rebut court's or counsel's statements, see post § 88.
Opening door to admission by putting in other evidence, see post §§ 89-92.
Best and secondary rule, see post, IV.
Parol evidence as to contents or meaning of instruments, see post, V.
Conclusions and opinions, see post, VI.
Declarations and statements made out of court, hearsay, character, res gestæ, see post, VII.
Documents and records as evidence, see post, VIII.
Tangible things and experiments in evidence, see post, IX.
Competency of conversations over telephone, see post § 319.
Competency of evidence of reputation and character, see post, VII, B.
Admissibility of witness' testimony given in former case where witness has become incompetent or is not available, see post §§ 337-344.
Relevancy of admissions, see post § 361.
Necessity that documents be relevant as well as competent, see post § 491.
Admissibility of deeds variant from issues, see post § 492.
Admissibility of photographs as documents, see post § 505.
Admissibility and competency of depositions and of matter contained therein, see Depositions, VI.
Corroboration of witnesses, see Witnesses, VI, D.
Discretion to close case or refuse further cumulative proofs, see Trial, V, D.
Admission or rejection as harmless error, see Harmless Error.
Insufficiency of cumulative newly discovered evidence to warrant new trial, see New Trial, II.
Contract provisions and stipulations for measurement or ascertainment of facts of performance or compensation as excluding other evidence, see Contracts §§ 316-318; Insurance, XX; Sales, VIII, IX; Stipulations.
Admissibility as affected by likelihood that offered evidence will appeal improperly to jury's sympathy, see Damages ¶ 1219.
Probative and legal effect of custom, see Customs § 9.
Test for relevancy and materiality of question on deposition in proceedings to compel answer, see Depositions § 14.
Relevancy and competency in trials for crime, see Indictment, VIII, B.
Materiality of false testimony to predicate perjury or subornation thereon, see Grimes § 116.

¶ 374. In all testimony the object of the law is to enable the jury to know all that the witness knows which is pertinent to the issue; and every rule of evidence is designed to secure this end.—Beaubien v. Cicotte, 12 Mich. 459.

¶ 375. The relevancy of evidence depends on the issue to be tried.—White v. Bailey, 10 Mich. 155.

¶ 376. All evidence should have some legitimate tendency to establish or disprove the fact in controversy, otherwise it should be rejected.—Stroh v. Hinchman, 37 Mich. 490.

¶ 377. The opinions of the attorney general and of the officers of the federal land department, embodied in another's deposition, cannot go to the jury as evidence of the law of the case. The law is for the court to give.—Roberts v. Cooper, 20 How. (61 U. S.) 467, 15 L. ed. 969.

¶ 378. Plaintiff cannot shift his position from the issue presented by him in his opening to the jury, and introduce testimony under a different issue.—Hood v. Olin, 80 Mich. 296.

¶ 379. A single item of evidence cannot be rejected for failing to establish the whole case, but should be received if it contributes to that end; and its sufficiency in connection with the other evidence must be determined on a review of the whole when the case is closed.—Collins v. Beecher, 45 Mich. 436.

¶ 380. It is no objection to the admissibility of a party's testimony that it is only admissible upon his own theory. He is entitled to have the case submitted to the jury upon his theory if there is any testimony tending to prove it.—Wheeler & Wilson Mfg. Co. v. Walker, 41 Mich. 239; Wilcox v. Young, 66 Mich. 687.

¶ 381. Plaintiffs cannot complain that evidence is irrelevant when it meets the only issue on which they could possibly recover, under their own theory; so when A. sues B. for money B. owed C., his subcontractor and a debtor of A., and sues upon the theory that B.'s debt to C. is money had and received to A.'s use, it is relevant to show that B. had in fact overpaid C.—Barden v. Briscoe, 36 Mich. 254.

§ 72. Legal and equitable rules.

Sameness of rules of evidence in equity and at law, see also Equity ¶ 315.

Statutes relating to taking proofs in equity, see Jud. Act, chap. XVII, § 1 et seq.; Comp. L. 1915, § 12489 et seq.

¶ 382. In general the rules of evidence are the same at law as in equity, and the principles which govern the means of obtaining proof are substantially the same in the one court as in the other.—Dougherty v. Randall, 3 Mich. 581.

¶ 383. The rules of evidence at law and in chancery are the same.—Pittman v. Burr, 79 Mich. 539; Bush v. Merriman, 87 Mich. 260.

§ 73. Facts admitted, presumed or not questioned.

Admissions to exclude res gestæ, see also post ¶ 2354.

Admissions made in open court on trial to dispense with proofs, see Trial, V.

Stipulations of fact, see Stipulations.

¶ 384. Evidence tending to prove facts not in question is inadmissible.—Ortmann v. Merchants' Bank of Canada, 41 Mich. 482.

¶ 385. In an action to recover money lent to pay off incumbrances there was no error in excluding the securities themselves, if the purpose of the borrowing was conceded and the only dispute was as to who provided the means.—Waterman v. Waterman, 34 Mich. 490.

¶ 386. It is immaterial whether or not the terms of a certain contract in issue were settled while two of the partners on one side of it were present, where those terms were all merged in a written contract which was in evidence and assented to by all.—Ellis v. Whitehead, 95 Mich. 105.

¶ 387. It is not error to exclude letters and telegrams which either throw no light upon the controversy or relate to admitted facts.—Scheibeck v. Van Derbeck, 122 Mich. 29.

¶ 388. The fact that affirmative proof of a matter as to which there is a rebuttable presumption, is unnecessary, does not show that it is inadmissible.—O'Dell v. Goff, 153 Mich. 643.

¶ 389. Hearsay to prove a collateral fact which is not necessary to be proved is inadmissible.—Wright v. Dickinson, 67 Mich. 590.

¶ 390. A party cannot, by admitting a fact, prevent his adversary from producing documentary evidence on the subject.—John Hancock Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Moore, 34 Mich. 41; Kimball & Austin Mfg. Co. v. Vroman, 35 Mich. 310.

¶ 391. Defendant's admission on the trial that there was a valuable consideration for an agreement does not deprive plaintiff of the right to show what the consideration actually was.—De Camp v. Scofield, 75 Mich. 449.

¶ 392. Lessees suing their lessor for forcible ouster are not shut out by defendant's offer on the trial to admit that he kept them out of possession from giving evidence of the fact and of the circumstances attending it.—Baumier v. Antiau, 79 Mich. 509.

¶ 393. An offer to admit the effect of written documents does not render them inadmissible in evidence.—Milligan v. Sligh Furniture Co., 111 Mich. 629.

¶ 394. In an action by an administrator upon a policy insuring his intestate's life, defendant admitted plaintiff's representative character and the existence of his letters of administration. Held, that the letters were nevertheless properly admitted to show plain-tiff's capacity, and could not be excluded as not being evidence of death or on any theory.—John Hancock Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Moore, 34 Mich. 41.

¶ 395. It was not prejudicial error to refuse testimony on an issue settled by stipulation. In re McNamara's Estate, 154 Mich. 671: Richter v. McNamara's Estate, Id.

§ 74. Reason or genesis of facts in issue.

Res gestæ, see post, VII, D.
Evidence in explanation made relevant by other evidence, see post §§ 89-92.
Rebuttal by showing reasons, see post §§ 84-86.

¶ 396. Evidence as to trouble experienced between the parties in concluding an accounting required of a new corporation and its promoter at the instance of majority stockholders of a defunct corporation in a former suit to enforce the assignment and delivery by the promoter to complainants of stock of the new corporation and for performance of an agreement between the promoter and such stockholders relative to a division of stock of the new corporation, is wholly irrelevant in a later accounting suit based upon alleged material facts obtained in the partial accounting entitling them to other or further relief. The material thing was proof of such facts, not how they were secured.—Millen v. Potter, 201 Mich. 1.

§ 75. Reality and origin of plaintiff's interest in suit.

Evidence of title, interest or capacity of plaintiff, see specific topics treating of the property, interest or capacity claimed.
Irrelevancy of evidence that original plaintiff died and present plaintiff was substituted, see Abatement §§ 18, 19.

¶ 397. Where the cause of action survives, the fact of a plaintiff's death cannot enter into the merits, and evidence thereof may be excluded on the trial.—Mason v. Finch, 28 Mich. 282.

¶ 398. On cross-examination evidence that third persons paid the fees of a witness for plaintiff, who, though not subpoenaed, came from a distance to attend the trial, is incompetent to show that plaintiff is not prosecuting the suit and that some one else is doing so, though it would be admissible on interest and bias of the witness.—Connor v. Levinson, 115 Mich. 297.

¶ 398a. Where the grantee in a deed received in evidence seeks to recover in ejectment under it, it is competent for defendant, although no party to the deed, to show that a third person, the real owner, caused it to be made to the grantee without consideration; as, in such case, the stamps required would depend upon the value of the land and be indicative of a consideration.—Groesbeck v. Seeley, 13 Mich. 329.

§ 76. Preliminary or foundation facts.

For secondary evidence, see post § 148 et seq.
For opinions, see post §§ 248 et seq., 271, 272.
For declarations, former testimony or other statements out of court, see post §§ 343, 367, 437, 438.
For documents, see post §§ 515-521, 526, 527, 549, 550.
For admission of articles in evidence, see post § 576.
Proof of agency or authority to sustain admission of agent's admissions, see post §§ 437, 439.
Preliminary question as to land ownership, applicability of secondary evidence rule, see post § 114, ¶ 580.
Oral evidence as to existence, identity or custody of writing, see post § 117.
Order of proof of foundation and probative evidence, see Trial, V, B.

¶ 399. In an action by a woman for an indecent assault upon her committed by defendant in her own rooms, it was proper in examining a witness for the plaintiff to ask, as preliminary to more definite inquiries, whether the witness had ever seen defendant in plaintiff's rooms.—Mawich v. Elsey, 47 Mich. 10.

§ 77. Indirect or circumstantial facts.

Hypothetical and speculative facts, see post § 78.
To show attentiveness or observation by witness, see post § 81.
Sufficiency of circumstantial evidence, see post § 582, and see specific topics treating of the fact to be proved.
Circumstances probative of fraud, see Fraud, III; Fraudulent Conveyances, I, V.
Latitude allowable on hearing of claims against decedents' estates, see Estates of Decedents ¶ 610a.

¶ 400. It is not proper to prove a physical fact indirectly and by inference when it is susceptible of direct proof.—Perkett v. Manistee & N. E. R. R. Co., 191 Mich. 106.

¶ 401. Where defendants' promise was to pay plaintiff for extra work done by him in running the mixed logs of both parties should he do proportionally more on their logs than they did on his, it was competent for defendants to show how much their own men did in running the mixed logs.—Bewick v. Butterfield, 60 Mich. 203.

§ 78. Hypothetical and speculative facts.

Conjectural and speculative opinions, see post § 210.
Hypothetical questions to experts, see post § 299 et seq.
Insufficiency of evidence leading only to speculation or conjecture, see post § 582 et seq., and see specific topics treating of the facts to be proved, e. g., Negligence, V.

¶ 402. Where there is full proof of the actual condition of merchandise, evidence of the damage it might possibly have suffered under supposable circumstances is theoretical and improper.—Kimball & Austin Mfg. Co. v. Vroman, 35 Mich. 310.

¶ 403. Where defendant has contracted to take all the pine blocks sawed at plaintiff's mill and delivered during the season, and defendant after a time refuses to receive any more, the number of loads delivered by plaintiff during the preceding period cannot be considered in determining the number that plaintiff might have delivered after the refusal; the amount sawed at the mill after such refusal being easily ascertainable without speculation.—McFadden v. Wetherbee & Co., 63 Mich. 390.

§ 79. Cumulative or corroborative evidence.

Evidence admissible because of other evidence, see post §§ 89-92.
Affirmative evidence in addition to presumption, see ante ¶ 388.
Corroboration of witnesses when impeached, see Witnesses, VI, D.
Discretion of court to exclude further cumulative evidence of fact when sufficiently proven, see Trial, V.
Newly-discovered cumulative or corroborative evidence as ground for new trial, see New Trial, II, H.
Admission or rejection as harmless error, see Harmless Error.

¶ 404. In order to be relevant, testimony need not be essential; it may be cumulative, or it may be supererogatory.—Comstock v. Smith, 20 Mich. 338.

¶ 405. A principal's personal knowledge of danger may be shown as bearing on the care required, although the agent's knowledge would suffice to fix a liability.—Hoyt v. Jeffers, 30 Mich. 181.

§ 80. Negative evidence.

Mode of proving absence of matters from records, see post § 531.
Absence of mention in books and writings as negative evidence of fact, see post ¶ 2569.
Quantity and degree of proof required to establish negative, see post § 583.
What is negative, see post § 606.
Conflict between positive and negative, see post § 605.
Evidence of observation to fortify testimony in negation of observable fact (train whistling), see post ¶ 414.
Admissibility of negative evidence in particular actions, see also specific topics, e. g., Carriers § 211 et seq.; Highways, XII; Master and Servant, III; Railroads, VIII; Street Railways, IV.

¶ 406. Where a witness has testified to a material conversation in the family of a decedent, a neighbor cannot be called to testify merely that he never heard such a conversation in the family; such negative testimony has no positive legal value.—Chambers v. Hill, 34 Mich. 523.

¶ 407. Defendant in an action for criminal conversation introduced testimony to show that plaintiff's wife was subject to fits of stupor and insensibility and was afflicted with hysteria, and showed by experts that persons so troubled were subject to hallucinations and unreliable. Held proper for the plaintiff to show by the evidence of relations and their neighbors that they were well acquainted with his wife and frequently at his house and never saw or heard of her having "unconscious spells."—Johnston v. Disbrow, 47 Mich. 59.

¶ 408. A boy was struck on the head by a stone thrown in a mining blast. Held, that in an action for the injury it was not clearly error to allow the testimony of witnesses that they had not heard any warning before the blast was fired, even though there was positive testimony that such warning had been given.—Beauchamp v. Saginaw Min. Co., 50 Mich. 163.

¶ 409. In an action for an injury caused by an obstruction in a highway, a witness cannot be permitted to testify that he had never heard nor known of any one being injured on the obstruction before the accident to plaintiff.—Langworthy v. Township of Green, 88 Mich. 207.

¶ 410. In an action by an employee, the testimony of coemployees that they were not informed of the dangerous character of the common employment is inadmissible to rebut defendant's testimony that plaintiff was so informed.—Fox v. Peninsular White Lead & Color Works, 92 Mich. 243.

¶ 411. Plaintiff's testimony that he never heard of a certain report, viz., that he was heavily indebted at three or four banks at rates of interest of from eight to ten per cent, was offered to negative the statement in an alleged libel that it was so reported. There was, however, no testimony that plaintiff would have been likely to have heard such report, if made. Held, that such negative testimony was incompetent.—Simons v. Burnham, 102 Mich. 189.

§ 81. Evidence to prove attentiveness, observation and memory of witness.

Res gestæ showing attention or hearing, see post § 452.
Likelihood of seeing, hearing and observing as rendering testimony positive rather than negative, see post § 606.
Explanations of answers by witness, see Examination of Witnesses, I.

¶ 412. A witness may be allowed to state any reason or circumstance which induced him to give particular attention to facts observed by him, and to which he has testified.—Angell v. Rosenbury, 12 Mich. 241.

¶ 413. In giving the reasons for his recollection of a transaction a witness cannot be permitted to state facts inadmissible by the rules of evidence, nor to relate his own conversation with other persons, containing reflections on the motives of another witness.—McBride v. Cicotte, 4 Mich. 478.

¶ 414. Where a witness in a personal injury case testified that the train in question did not whistle for the crossing, it was competent for him to state that he and his brother conversed about it at the time (the conversation not being given), for the purpose of showing that the attention of the witness was called to the fact at the time.—Grenell v. Michigan Cent. R. Co., 124 Mich. 141.

¶ 415. In trover for property bought at an assignee's sale, but withheld by the assignee, who disputed the amount of the bid, claiming it was eleven dollars while the bidder claimed it was eleven cents, it is proper to admit the evidence of a bystander, who had also bid on the property, as to his understanding and hearing of the amount of plaintiff's bid.—Ives v. Tregent, 29 Mich. 390.

§ 82. Evidence against public policy.

Evidence wrongfully procured, see also post § 83.

Evidence violating secrecy of ballots, see Elections, XI.

Evidence or affidavits impeaching verdicts or revealing matters of secrecy, see Verdicts and Findings, VI.

Privileged communications to counsel, clergy, husband, or wife, see Witnesses, V.

Privileged nature of return of taxable property, see Witnesses, V, E.

Admissibility of self-criminating testimony not objected to as privileged, see also Examination of Witnesses ¶ 218.

¶ 416. Where a question concerns the marital relations of a woman plaintiff and the subject-matter is against public policy, an answer is properly excluded.—Renaud v. City of Bay City, 124 Mich. 29.

§ 83. Evidence wrongfully procured.

Wrongdoing or neglect as objection to admission of document, see post § 491.

¶ 417. Physicians cannot testify in a divorce suit to what they have found out by compulsory examination of a party thereto; and such examinations are illegal and improper and a party should refuse to submit to them.—Page v. Page, 51 Mich. 88.

¶ 418. A witness who obtained his information concerning the contents of books while they were in the sheriff's possession under an unauthorized attachment, in abuse of the process of the court, may, in behalf of one who was in no way responsible for the abuse or wrong by which such information was obtained, testify as to such contents, even though the wrongdoer could not.—Cluett v. Rosenthal, 100 Mich. 193.

¶ 419. The fact that a brother of plaintiff's counsel, upon finding in the street a sealed envelope containing a letter from a defendant, placed the same in the hands of such counsel, instead of forwarding it to another defendant, to whom it was addressed, did not deprive plaintiff of the right to introduce the letter in evidence.—Schloss v. Estey, 114 Mich. 429.

§ 84. Rebuttal and explanatory evidence.

[Note. The question, "what is proper rebuttal?", when applied to a particular issue involves the general rule that evidence is relevant, which tends to explain, repel, counteract, or disprove evidence adduced or inferences raised by the opposite party; and also, and usually, the real question is on the relevancy of offered evidence to a specific issue. For convenience of the user the general expressions of this rule are here treated and the specific applications are treated in the topics to which the issue relates. E. g., see Agency, I, A (rebuttal of evidence of agency), II, A, C (rebuttal of evidence of authority or of ratification); and like portions of other topics. For the proper practice in adducing rebuttal matter and the order in which it ought to be put in, see Trial, V; and for proper mode of interrogation, see Examination of Witnesses.]

Mode of examination to bring out rebuttal, see Examination of Witnesses, II, III.

Order of proof of evidence in chief and in rebuttal, see Trial, V, B.

Order of proof, rebuttal in anticipation or after the evidence to be rebutted, see Trial, V, B.

Examination on redirect or on recall of witness for purpose of rebutting other evidence, see Examination of Witnesses, III.

Rebuttal of other party's theory, see also ante ¶ 381.

Rebuttal of presumptions, see ante § 33.

Showing want of consideration for deed to rebut plaintiff's claim of title under it, see ante ¶ 398a.

Rebuttal of promise to pay for extra work by proof that none was done, see ante ¶ 401.

Rebuttal by negative evidence that given fact was unheard of, see also ante § 80, ¶ 407.

Rebuttal of relationship, authority or financial condition, see post § 85.

Rebuttal or explanation of discrediting inferences, see post § 86.

Evidence made relevant or competent by other evidence, see post §§ 89-92.

Nonpayment of taxes to rebut ownership, see post ¶ 549.

Rebuttal of character evidence, see post § 358.
Admissions to rebut testimony, see post § 366.
Explanation and rebuttal of admissions, see post §§ 442, 443.
Rebuttal of conversations by inconsistent statements later, see also Brokers ¶ 167.
Self-serving declarations as rebuttal, see post ¶ 2545.
Admissibility of rebutting version of transaction though tending to prove improper matters, see post § 93.
Proper rebuttal or explanation in trespass for assault where threats or quarrelsomeness are shown, see Assault § 27.
Admissibility of evidence of erroneous or correct datum used for survey, see Boundaries § 31.
Evidence making it improbable that party would have made disputed contract, see Contracts § 312.
Ability or means as evidence bearing on probability of making contract with person, see Contracts § 312.
Admissibility of evidence bearing on probability that agreement would have been made as alleged, see also Brokers ¶ 157.
Financial conditions as evidence of improbability of subscription to corporate stock, see Corporations § 59, ¶ 215.
Right of witness to explain answers and admissible matter of explanation or correction, see Examination of Witnesses, I.

¶ 420. The relevancy of rebutting evidence is to be tested, not by its convincing or persuasive character, but whether it tends to cut down, limit, explain or obviate the defense, or to illustrate some legitimate answer to the defense.—Comstock v. Smith, 20 Mich. 338.

¶ 421. What may be proved may be disproved.—Jacobs v. Callaghan, 57 Mich. 11.

¶ 422. The testimony of defendant's witnesses, in so far as it contradicts the testimony of the plaintiff and shows admissions made by him, is admissible for that purpose. —Marx v. King, 162 Mich. 258.

¶ 423. Evidence in rebuttal contradictory to evidence on part of defendant is proper.—Ward v. Carey, 200 Mich. 217.

¶ 424. When the character of evidence, whether it be rebutting or not, depends upon the effect which the jury may give to evidence which it is introduced to rebut, it is not error to admit it, even though its tendency as rebutting evidence is doubtful.—Hollister v. Brown, 19 Mich. 163.

¶ 425. As against one claiming that a wife made a certain request, stating that her husband had sent word to her to do so, the husband may testify for her that he sent her no such word; since the husband's testimony tends to show which claim is the more probable, hers or the contrary one of defendants. —Eberenkrook v. Webber, 100 Mich. 314.

¶ 426. A purported copy of an inventory having been put in evidence as secondary proof on failure to produce the original, it was error to exclude rebutting testimony by the other party that the copy was not a copy of any inventory made by him or of any such as it purported to be, and that witness never had possessed such an instrument as he was notified to produce.—Moulton v. Mason, 21 Mich. 364.

¶ 427. Where, in an action upon a building contract, the parties are in dispute upon the question of a waiver of delay for completing the building, and of an acceptance of the work by defendant, a contract between defendant and a third person, whereby he had agreed to construct and sell to the latter half of the building, and to complete and deliver the same at the time when by the contract in suit the work was to be completed, is admissible as bearing on the probabilities.—Andre v. Hardin, 32 Mich. 324.

¶ 428. Where an attorney suing for services rendered shows that after a note had been placed in his hands by defendant for collection and after he had ascertained, through correspondence, the maker's residence, defendant took back the note and accepted a new one from the maker, it was incompetent for defendant to show in rebuttal that such new note had not been paid.—Wildey v. Crane, 69 Mich. 17.

¶ 429. Where a defendant sued for assault and battery has testified that he had seen a fight between plaintiff and a policeman in which the former was the aggressor, the policeman's testimony as to what occurred is admissible.—Culley v. Walkeen, 80 Mich. 443.

¶ 430. In an action for assault and battery all circumstances leading up to the assault that tend to explain the relations or the rights of the parties may be shown.—Gillespie v. Beecher, 85 Mich. 347; Pokriefka v. Mackurat, 91 Mich. 399.

¶ 431. If defendant suing for assault and battery offers testimony tending to show some other cause or reason for plaintiff's injury, plaintiff may rebut such testimony.—Pokriefka v. Mackurat, 91 Mich. 399.

¶ 432. Where testimony of the reputed time of particular trotters is admitted to show the value of a horse of their blood, it is error to exclude evidence in rebuttal that certain horses of the same blood have not developed into fast trotters.—Ellis v. Simpkins, 81 Mich. 1.

¶ 433. In an action to recover damages for overflowing plaintiff's lands where plaintiff has introduced in evidence a stump of a small tree grown on his land now covered with water, in order to establish the fact—based upon his theory that timber cannot grow in water—that the water must have been raised upon the land by defendant's dam since the growing of the tree some ten or fifteen years before, testimony is admissible from one whose land adjoins plaintiff's, that water from defendant's dam backed upon his land and that trees like the one introduced in evidence grew in water there.—Shearer v. Middleton, 88 Mich. 621.

¶ 434. Where the attention of a defendant is called on cross-examination to a chattel mortgage given by him to plaintiff, the existence of which tends to support plaintiff's claim upon the trial, plaintiff cannot, by not offering the mortgage in evidence, deprive defendant of the right to explain its execution; but if such explanation is made, it is error to reject the mortgage when afterwards offered in evidence by plaintiff.—Williams v. Clink, 90 Mich. 297.

¶ 435. A witness called by defendant to show that carbonate of iron would not stain marble was asked on cross-examination if he had not seen soot and creosote coming out of the electric light works chimney in large quantities, and if he had not so told a certain person, both of which questions were answered in the negative; whereupon the person referred to was called on rebuttal, and, against defendant's objection, permitted to testify that from a conversation had with the witness he got the impression that the witness meant that he had seen some substance come from said chimney. No foundation for an impeachment of the witness had been laid. Held, that to admit such testimony was error, it being hearsay, and well calculated to corroborate plaintiff's claim that something came from said chimney to his injury.—Skelton v. Fenton Elec. Light & Power Co., 100 Mich. 87.

¶ 436. Where, in an action upon a breach of warranty of the value of mining stock, sold to one who became a corporate employee as part of the inducement, defendant offered evidence to show that plaintiff's work in constructing a mill on the mining property was not well done, testimony is inadmissible in rebuttal to show plaintiff's ability as a carpenter or millwright, that matter not being necessarily involved.—Maxted v. Fowler, 94 Mich. 106.

¶ 437. It was proper to permit a witness to state the difference in results reached by measuring timber by the Canadian and American methods, where he had testified that a measurement of timber was made by the objecting party's request on the Canadian system and that such system would show less than by the American system.—Duplanty v. Stokes, 103 Mich. 630.

¶ 438. Upon objection to allowance of compensation to an administrator, where the contestant testifies that the administrator obtained her consent to his appointment by agreeing to act without compensation, it is proper to exclude on the ground of immateriality, when offered in rebuttal, a consent for his appointment as administrator in Canada, as that did not tend to negative the testimony of the contestant.—Morton v. Johnston, 124 Mich. 561.

¶ 439. Upon the trial of a claim against an estate on a promissory note which it is alleged had been turned over to the deceased upon his promise to deliver a new note to replace it and never returned by him, and on testimony by the claimant that she never owned any other note given by the deceased, it is not error to admit in evidence a note by the deceased payable to the claimant for a less amount indorsed with payments of interest, checks showing payment of interest and part of the principal and notes for the balance, which papers had been found among the deceased's effects.—Taylor v. Greene, 129 Mich. 564.

¶ 440. In an action on a life insurance policy, in which the defense was that the insured was guilty of having procured a criminal abortion upon herself in violation of terms of the policy making it void for violation of the criminal laws of the state, where a witness for defendant, a nurse, testified that she heard deceased, on the day before her death tell the attending physician, in answer to his direct inquiry, that an abortion had been performed on her the day before she was brought to the hospital, and that the deceased told witness that the reason the act was done was that she could not afford to raise any more children, and the witness stated on cross-examination that upon the day deceased was brought to the hospital she stated that she had suffered a miscarriage, brought on by working in the garden, held that evidence of facts tending to show the improbability of the statement implying criminality and the probability of the other was proper in rebuttal.—Gilchrist v. Mystic Workers of the World, 196 Mich. 247.

§ 85. ——Relationship, authority or financial condition.

¶ 441. A note made payable to a certain person or bearer was by that person assigned by writing his name under the maker's instead of by indorsement. In an action by the assignee defendant claimed he was an indorser and not a maker, that such was his contract when he let plaintiff have the note, and that no notice of protest was given him. Held, that plaintiff could prove in rebuttal that when the defendant signed the note it was understood by the parties that his liability was to be that of maker, not indorser.—Cook v. Brown, 62 Mich. 473.

¶ 442. Where defendants had given evidence tending to show that plaintiff had treated with a third person for a new lease to such third person, prior to the expiration of the lease to them, and plaintiff had introduced evidence tending to show that such negotiations were brought about by collusion between defendants and such third persons to make a show of surrender of their lease, it was competent to ask such third person whether he had any conversation with defendants prior to his obtaining such lease from plaintiff.—Hill v. Robinson, 23 Mich. 24.

¶ 443. Where the defense has introduced testimony to show other persons to have been joint parties with plaintiff to the contract, rebutting evidence is admissible to show the contrary.—Owen v. Union Match Co., 48 Mich. 348.

¶ 444. In trover by an administrator for the value of property alleged to have been converted by defendant, who was decedent's father, the defense of purchase from decedent was set up, and defendant introduced evidence tending to show that his relations with his son were friendly and that his son owed him money. Held, that he could not object to rebutting evidence on the same point.—Ransom v. Bartley, 70 Mich. 379.

¶ 445. C. sued N. on orders which C. had cashed, and which were drawn upon N. by a firm who managed a lumber camp for him, and who used the orders to pay them. C. claimed that N. had asked him to cash such orders, and had promised to repay the money advanced in doing so. N. denied this and claimed that he had nothing to do with paying the men, and that his relations with them were inconsistent with his assuming any such liability. Held, that C. could put in evidence, as relevant and material to his case, a written contract between N. and the firm whereby it was contemplated that N. would or might look after the wages.—Comstock v. Norton, 36 Mich. 277.

¶ 446. Where, in an action against a principal, the letter of an agent is put in evidence to show ratification, it is error to exclude on cross-examination a subsequent letter which would rebut the inferences to be drawn from the first.—Turner v. Phœnix Ins. Co. of Hartford, 55 Mich. 236.

¶ 447. Even if testimony as to statements of defendant's alleged agent bearing on the question of his authority is admissible as part of the res gestæ, it is error to admit it and at the same time to exclude direct testimony of defendant and of such agent as to the authority which was in fact conferred.—Hansel v. Maas, 94 Mich. 563.

¶ 448. Where plaintiff in an action for money lent, claims that he had lent defendant money with which to meet a mortgage on his farm, and defendant denies it, the latter's admissions and declarations that plaintiff had an interest in the farm may be shown.—Waterman v. Waterman, 34 Mich. 490.

¶ 449. Where, in defense to an action for money lent, the attempt is made to show that plaintiff could not have lent the amount because he did not have enough money, plaintiff can show in reply what means he had from which he could have made the loan.—Waterman v. Waterman, 34 Mich. 490.

¶ 450. In trover for goods seized on attachment the defense gave evidence as to the state of the debtor's bank account. Held, that on rebuttal the debtor could be asked how much he had checked out of the bank within the period under examination, as it was pertinent to a portion of his affairs examined into by the defense.—Beurmann v. Van Buren, 44 Mich. 496.

¶ 451. Where the defense in an action upon a check, given in part payment for a quantity of cedar posts, is that payment of the check was stopped by the vendee because of the failure of the vendor to furnish a bill of lading of the posts, which defendant claims he agreed to do, but which plaintiff denies, it is competent for plaintiff to show, as rebutting such defense, that the check was dishonored because defendant had no funds in the bank to meet it.—Cullen v. Detroit Tug & Wrecking Co., 99 Mich. 23.

§ 86. ——Explanation to rebut discrediting evidence or inferences.

Admissibility of evidence of good character to rebut inference, see also post ¶ 1930.
To rebut fact coupled with statement of opposing counsel, see post ¶ 463.
Rebuttal of admissions, see post § 442.
Admissibility of evidence to rebut or explain impeaching evidence, see Witnesses, VI, D.

¶ 452. Testimony explaining the omission of a witness to testify at a previous trial is admissible.—McDonald v. City Elec. Ry. Co., 144 Mich. 379.

¶ 453. It is always competent to show that any evidence in a cause is given for the first time, when there have been previous trials, or to explain why it is so given, and the reason it was not produced before.—Seligman v. Ten Eyck's Estate, 74 Mich. 525.

¶ 454. A party on the trial of a case may explain a mistake made in the trial of another case between the same parties, for the purpose of avoiding a conclusion against him which, but for the explanation, would be obvious. As where the plaintiff in replevin, who has sued the same defendant in assumpsit, has by mistake in the latter action treated the value of the property replevied as an item of set-off.—McDonald v. McDonald, 55 Mich. 155.

¶ 455. Where the plaintiff's witness has testified to admissions made in conversation by the defendant's agent, it is competent for the defendant to prove by another witness who was present immediately after such admissions were alleged to have been made, and while the conversation continued upon the same subject, subsequent statements by the agent, which, though not directly contradicting the alleged admissions, would tend to convince the jury that they were not in fact made as testified to by the prior witness.—Continental Life Ins. Co. v. Willets, 24 Mich. 268.

¶ 456. A woman brought suit against her husband's employer for an indecent assault. The employer had discharged the husband before the action was brought. Held proper for him to show the reason why, in order to exclude the pretense that it was induced by any change caused by defendant's alleged misbehavior.—Mawich v. Elsey, 47 Mich. 10.

¶ 457. In an action of assumpsit to recover money alleged to have been misappropriated by defendant while a clerk in plaintiff's store, another clerk who testified for plaintiff that he had knowledge of the misappropriation two years before he informed plaintiff, should be permitted to explain why he withheld the information in order to rebut the inference which would arise from such concealment.—Adams v. Elseffer, 132 Mich. 100.

§ 87. Evidence supplementary or explanatory of view by jury.

¶ 458. Where a view of the locus by the jury was had and there is nothing to show whether the jury noticed or observed the physical situation with reference to a particular fact of impermanent character, an officer who accompanied it on the view may be asked what he saw for the purpose of showing whether the situation was the same as at the time the declaration speaks of.—Close v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co., 73 Mich. 647, per Sherwood, C. J., and Morse and Long, JJ., concurring in result.

¶ 459. Evidence of the action of a freight elevator subsequent to an accident held competent where at the request of the defendant and with the consent of the plaintiff, the jury were permitted to view it.—McGary v. Buick Motor Co., 182 Mich. 345.

§ 88. Evidence to meet or rebut statements of court or counsel.

See also post ¶ 1942.

¶ 460. Statements of counsel to the jury on summing up are not testimony, and evidence to contradict them is inadmissible.—Hirschfield v. Waldron, 83 Mich. 116.

¶ 461. In an action for labor done by plaintiff and his wife on defendant's farm, testimony of their financial condition when they went to defendant's and when they left there is inadmissible as rebuttal of a statement made by defendant's counsel in his opening speech to the jury, but not supported by any evidence in the record, that plaintiff had used his opportunity of living at defendant's home to accumulate property.—Alderton v. Wright, 81 Mich. 294.

¶ 462. Testimony is not admissible to rebut a statement made by counsel in his opening to the jury, which there is no evidence to sustain.—Munzer v. Stern, 105 Mich. 523.

¶ 463. Where defendant's counsel has by implication charged counsel for plaintiff with having advised a witness to get out of town on a certain train, the charge may be refuted by the testimony of plaintiff's counsel as to his connection with the subpoenaing of the witness, and his reason for not calling him, in order that the jury may correctly understand his conduct.—Lockard v. Van Alstyne, 155 Mich. 507.

§ 89. Evidence made relevant or competent by other evidence.

Evidence to show reason or history of fact to be proved, see also ante § 74.

Opinion made admissible by other opinion or evidence, see post § 208.

Effect of proof of accounts to make bill of particulars made up from them admissible as evidence, see post ¶ 2778.

Admission or rejection of evidence as harmless error because of other evidence admitted or rejected or because of other ruling or practice, see Harmless Error.

¶ 464. A builder's contract is irrelevant to a suit brought by him for extra work which in no way depends upon the contract; and the incidental mention of the contract by one of his witnesses does not make it necessary to produce it.—Webber v. Hanke, 4 Mich. 198.

¶ 465. An inquiry as to what a certain person who by appellant's own evidence had charge of securing witnesses on a former trial of the case, did in that connection, is proper if kept within reasonable limits.—Fulton v. Priddy, 123 Mich. 298.

¶ 466. Where a defendant sued for a criminal assault upon plaintiff in his house has made the state of the weather on the night of the alleged assault material by claiming that it was so hot on that night that the family had to sleep with the doors and windows open, the weather records kept at the insane asylum twelve miles distant are admissible as rebutting evidence in plaintiff's favor.—Hart v. Walker, 100 Mich. 406.

§ 90. ——By admission of improper evidence.

Opening door to transactions with deceased person by offering proof thereof, see Witnesses, IV.

Disability to object by first putting in improper evidence, see Saving Questions.

Admission rendered harmless by other improper evidence in case, see Harmless Error.

¶ 467. Where irrelevant testimony has been introduced by one party he cannot object to rebutting evidence on the same point. —Ransom v. Bartley, 70 Mich. 379.

¶ 468. Where a party has put a fact in issue by his pleadings and has testified to it, he cannot, on the ground that it is immaterial, prevent his opponent from rebutting it.—Ribble v. Starrat, 79 Mich. 204.

¶ 469. Under the general issue without any notice of special defenses, the fact that the plaintiff in an action on a written contract testified as to preliminary conversations does not render competent testimony by the defendant as to the same conversation in order to show fraud or to show a subsequent modification of the writing; the rule permitting incompetent testimony by one party to be contradicted by incompetent testimony by the other does not permit trial of issues not raised by the pleadings.—R. K. Carter & Co. v. Weber, 138 Mich. 576.

¶ 470. Where defendant, in an action for personal injuries alleged to have been caused by a defective brake, introduced in evidence plaintiff's original declaration, which had been amended, it is not error to admit a letter written by plaintiff to his counsel showing that plaintiff was not responsible for the mistake in the declaration.—Bernard v. Pittsburg Coal Co., 137 Mich. 279.

¶ 471. To the statements of a witness which were not properly admissible in the cause, contradictory evidence was given by the opposite side; evidence corroborative of the statements of such first witness is equally inadmissible, though offered as rebutting merely to such contradictory evidence.—McBride v. Cicotte, 4 Mich. 478.

§ 91. ——Complementary portion of records, correspondence or conversation.

See also post ¶ 2496.
Later letter to rebut earlier, see ante ¶ 446.
Declarations and acts as res gestæ of other act, fact or event, see post, VII, D.
Correspondence as res gestæ, see post § 472.
Complete files in other action to show fact, see also post ¶ 2773.
Pleadings and files requisite to proof of judgments, see post §§ 545, 546.
Offers of documents in whole or in part and construction and effect of offers, see Trial, V.
Right to bring out entire conversation by cross-examination, see Examination of Witnesses, II.
Whole instrument as evidence when part is admissible as declaration against interest, see also Adverse Possession ¶ 248.

¶ 472. Where one party to an action on a replevin bond puts in evidence a part only of the files in the replevin case, the other can introduce the rest; as showing, e. g., that more executions have been issued on the judgment than has been made to appear. —Greenlee v. Lowing, 35 Mich. 63.

¶ 473. In a suit for damages from a wrongful attachment, the affidavit for attachment and the other proceedings are properly put in evidence by the defendant plaintiff having proved only the taking under the writ and the value of the goods.—Blanchard v. Brown, 42 Mich. 46.

¶ 474. Where a letter is put in evidence, the letter to which that is an answer, and which is referred to in it, is proper evidence. —Lester v. Sutton, 7 Mich. 329.

¶ 475. Where, upon plaintiff's direct examination, he puts in evidence letters constituting part of the contract sued on, defendant, on cross-examination, may put in evidence letters written in reply to those introduced.—Gage v. Meyers, 59 Mich. 300.

¶ 476. Letters introduced as parts of a series relating to the period under consideration, in an action for breach of contract of employment, and covered by other letters, are admissible as evidence; where some of the letters objected to were in answer to letters introduced by defendant's counsel on cross-examination of plaintiff, and others were competent as bearing upon the good faith of defendant's statements regarding the claim in controversy.—Proctor v. Hobart M. Cable Co., 145 Mich. 503.

¶ 477. Where plaintiff introduced in evidence a letter from defendant, upon which he relied to support his claim of employment by defendant, which letter referred to one received by defendant from a third party, and which caused defendant to write the letter to plaintiff, as he claimed, the letter so received is admissible in evidence.—Parrish v. Bradley, 73 Mich. 610.

¶ 478. Where on rebuttal plaintiff introduces letters from defendant who had no occasion to introduce testimony on the subject earlier, the latter may show the full correspondence.—Pinkham v. Cockell, 77 Mich. 265.

¶ 479. In an action for goods sold and delivered where the defendants had agreed to make a cash payment and give a note for the balance but had not given the note, there was no error in admitting a letter from plaintiff to defendant relative to the subject-matter and calling attention to the fact that the agreement had been ignored, and stating that unless complied with suit would be brought.—Illinois Roofing & Supply Co. v. Aerial Advertising Co., 142 Mich. 698.

¶ 480. The exclusion of parts of conversations between the parties which are connected in sense with admitted parts and are pertinent to the matter in controversy is error.—Barry v. Davis, 33 Mich. 515.

¶ 481. Where part of a party's statement or conversation is put in evidence as an admission against his interest, he may himself bring out whatever has been omitted that bears upon it.—Vanneter v. Crossman, 42 Mich. 465.

¶ 482. In an action for the value of land which defendant agreed to convey to plaintiff in exchange for other lands, defendant's statements about the trade made before the alleged delivery of the deed though irrelevant standing alone would be relevant, when coupled with the testimony of what he said to the same witness the next day to the effect that the trade had been consummated, as tending to show that the deed was delivered and accepted as claimed by the plaintiff.—Dikeman v. Arnold, 83 Mich. 218.

¶ 483. It is not the rule to allow that part of a conversation which is favorable to a party to be testified to, and to exclude that which may be against him; but the entire conversation is admissible.—People v. Palmer, 105 Mich. 568.

¶ 484. Plaintiff corporation had employed defendant to install a heavy wheel which was broken in placing and plaintiff sought to hold defendant responsible. Plaintiff's superintendent testified that on the next day defendant, admitting that his negligence caused it, said that he would pay for the wheel. Defendant testified that he said he supposed that he would have to pay for it, but that he afterwards stated that he had learned that he was not liable and "was not going to pay." Held that defendant might show all conversations respecting liability had with the superintendent until their discussion ceased.—Swift Electric Light Co. v. Grant, 90 Mich. 469.

¶ 485. A witness having testified in a replevin suit that he sold the horses in question to the wife of the defendant, that the defendant had told him the property given in exchange for the horses belonged to the defendant's wife and that it looked as though he would get beaten, an answer on cross-examination that the defendant said he was so blind he could not see and if he did not get the horses he would go to the poorhouse cannot be held competent on the ground that the defendant is entitled to the entire conversation. He is entitled only to the part which is relevant and material.—Atherton v. Defreeze, 129 Mich. 364.

¶ 486. In an action to recover against the sureties upon the official bond of a township treasurer, a witness may be allowed to testify to a conversation which he had with members of the town board at a certain meeting, although none of the defendants were present, where defendant had cross-examined a town clerk, at length, as to what the witness had claimed at the same meeting.—Township of Alpena v. Mainville, 153 Mich. 732.

§ 92. ——Writings referred to in testimony.

See also ante ¶ 434.

Admissibility of copy of writing without foundation for secondary evidence where other evidence makes it an object of original inquiry, see post § 111.

Copy of letter admissible because of admission that it is a true copy, see also post ¶ 570.

Lease as evidence of character of agreement based thereon, see also Estoppel ¶ 9.

¶ 487. Where a plaintiff had been cross-examined as to certain instruments executed by her and her husband with certain third persons, the instruments themselves could be put in evidence to explain what had thus been drawn out.—Pierce v. Rehfuss, 35 Mich. 53.

¶ 488. Recoupment for breach of warranty was claimed in an action on a note given for the articles sold. The plaintiff claimed that defendant had sent certain letters expressing his satisfaction with the article and asking an extension of time for payment. Held proper to introduce the letters so that the jury, by comparing them with the note, and from other evidence, might determine whether they were genuine and were written by the defendant or by his authority.—Worth v. McConnell, 42 Mich. 473.

¶ 489. A settlement of partnership accounts was claimed to have been made from a memorandum drawn from the books of a firm instead of from the books themselves. Held, that the fact of such settlement being for the jury to determine, the memorandum was admissible in evidence.—Miner v. Lorman, 66 Mich. 530.

¶ 490. A contract may be introduced in evidence on redirect examination, in an action for breach of a contract of purchase, where the defendant testifies on cross-examination to the making of another one-sided contract. The existence of the contract having been testified to on cross-examination, it is admissible.—Blitz v. Roach, 121 Mich. 135.

¶ 491. Where, in a suit by an architect against an owner for services in the supervision of the construction of a building, the defense is that the plaintiff did not compel the contractor to live up to the plans and specifications and the plaintiff admits that his report shows items and details in which the building as completed did not comply with the specifications, it is error to exclude the report as evidence.—Johnson v. O'Neill, 172 Mich. 334.

§ 93. Admissibility for some but not for all purposes.

See also post ¶ 1779.

Testimony partly hearsay but otherwise competent, see post § 314.

Testimony as to statements made out of court admissible for other purposes but not as hearsay on the direct facts stated, see post §§ 326-335.
Declarations by testator as admissions or evidences receivable for certain purposes or against certain persons, see post § 412.
Paper bearing two instruments, one not relevant and other admissible, see also post § 499.
Necessity of foundation for proper purposes, see also ante ¶ 435.
Effect of admission without restriction, see post ¶ 2911.
Reception or offer limiting purpose for which evidence is admissible, see Trial, V, C.
Cautionary instructions, see Instructions, VI.
Previous unchastity as matter of mitigation alone if unknown at time of breach of promise, see also Damages ¶ 676.

¶ 492. Testimony competent for one purpose cannot be excluded because incompetent for another purpose.—McKenzie v. Vandecar, 105 Mich. 232.

¶ 493. Testimony admissible for one purpose cannot be excluded because tending to prove a fact that is inadmissible.—Dalton v. Dregge, 99 Mich. 250.

¶ 494. On a bill of interpleader to determine the right to the proceeds of certain insurance policies, evidence as to the purpose expressed by insured in changing the beneficiary from his wife to his sister was admissible upon the issue of mental incompetency of the insured, but was not admissible for the purpose of proving a gift to the sister.—Great Camp Knights of the Modern Maccabees v. Deem, 143 Mich. 652.

¶ 495. Testimony offered for a purpose for which it is competent is not to be excluded because it tends to prove another fact which is incompetent.—Benedict v. City of Port Huron, 124 Mich. 600.

¶ 496. In replevin where the plaintiff testified to conversations with the defendant in which the defendant agreed to return the property, the defendant is entitled to give his version of the conversations in rebuttal even though they tend to show an unaccepted offer of compromise.—Padgett v. Jacobs, 128 Mich. 632.

¶ 497. Testimony competent for one purpose cannot be excluded because it is incompetent for another purpose.—Sykes v. Village of Portland, 193 Mich. 86; Whittemore v. Walter, 193 Mich. 365.

¶ 498. In a suit by an administrator to reach funds of the estate, where the defense relied on is that the funds in question were given by deceased to defendant, and where there was evidence that defendant had admitted that the funds belonged to the estate, defendant is entitled to deny the conversations as to her admissions, to state what the conversations were, and to show that she had claimed the money as hers. However, these statements are not admissible as substantive evidence of the gift, but only to repel the inference of an admission against her ownership.—Campbell v. Sech, 155 Mich. 634.

¶ 499. Where defendant had agreed to give plaintiff half the profits realized from a sale of lands which plaintiff should look up and procure the purchase of, in an action to recover such profits, evidence of a conversation in which defendant stated that he sold the land was admissible in connection with the amount received as showing maturity of the conditions, not being offered to show title.—Davis v. Gerber, 69 Mich. 246.

¶ 500. Letters complaining of delays because materials were not furnished are not evidence in favor of the writer introducing them to show the delay and the complaint, but may show the time of giving orders for shipment.—Carnegie, Phipps & Co. v. Holt, 99 Mich. 606.

§ 94. Prior and subsequent facts.

Acts and declarations subsequent to accident or injury as admissions, see post §§ 399, 400, and see note under § 399.
Deed record made after commencement of suit, where deed was prior to suit, see post ¶ 2747.
Of subsequent conditions as explaining view by jury, see ante ¶ 459.
Doctrine that pleadings speak from time of commencement of action, see Pleading, IX, X.
Evidence of conditions subsequent in time to wrong as affording basis for estimating damages, see Damages, XI, B.
Evidence of physical and bodily condition before and after personal injury, see Damages § 320 et seq.
Evidence of prior injury to and condition of uninjured eye to show impairment of one alleged to have been hurt, see Damages ¶ 1218.

¶ 501. In the absence of direct, circumstantial evidence is admissible to prove the origin of a fire in an action for the damages caused thereby; e. g., it is proper to show that a certain mill chimney often threw sparks and set fire to sawdust, sidewalks, etc., in the neighborhood of the building burned, when the wind and other circumstances were the same, and the burning since of another building from the same alleged cause.—Hoyt v. Jeffers, 30 Mich. 181.

¶ 502. In an action by a physician for his pay in a case in which it was to be contingent on a cure, it was perhaps admissible to allow the jury to consider the patient's condition at the time of the trial, a year after he was discharged, provided there was evidence fairly tending to show that his then infirm condition related back to the disease for which he was treated.—Beebe v. Koshnic, 55 Mich. 604.

¶ 503. On the issue how a sidewalk appeared to a person killed by a defect, evidence to show the appearance of a sidewalk under exactly similar circumstances and surroundings on the night succeeding an accident is not objectionable as relating to facts observed subsequent to the time of the accident.—Stone v. Standard Life & Accident Ins. Co., 71 Mich. 81.

¶ 504. In an action for the price of articles of which the courts cannot take notice as being perishable property, and which were rejected on arrival as not merchantable, it is not error, in the absence of evidence that their condition is subject to change, to admit evidence of their condition nine months after their arrival.—Imbrie v. Wetherbee & Co., 70 Mich. 103.

¶ 505. In an action for breach of warranty in the sale of fruit trees on account of furnishing trees of inferior variety, testimony of the destroying of trees by frost subsequent to starting suit is inadmissible. The warrantor's liability is determined at the time of bringing suit.—Angell v. Pruyn, 126 Mich. 16.

¶ 506. Where one who has purchased from a partner his interest in the firm sues for false representations that the business is profitable, evidence that the business was unprofitable after the sale is inadmissible unless accompanied by evidence that it was so before the sale.—Totten v. Burhans, 91 Mich. 495.

¶ 507. In an action for personal injuries alleged to have been caused by a defective brake on a hoisting derrick, evidence showing how the brake operated a year after the accident is inadmissible where it had been changed so as to be a different appliance.—Bernard v. Pittsburg Coal Co., 137 Mich. 279.

¶ 508. In a suit for alienation of affections, it is not error to exclude questions relating to something which occurred after the suit was commenced.—Gornetzky v. Gornetzky, 174 Mich. 492.

¶ 509. Measurements taken a week after an accident constitute proof that the defects in a railroad gauge existed at the time of the accident where the evidence of the adverse party is that in repairing the track after the accident no change was made.—Anderson v. Michigan Cent. R. Co., 168 Mich. 207.

¶ 510. Testimony as to the disposition, temperament and gentleness of a certain mare, both before and after the accident, is material and relevant upon the question of her disposition, temperament and gentleness on the day of the accident.—Putnam v. Phoenix Preferred Acc. Ins. Co., 155 Mich. 134.

¶ 511. Evidence of the strength of a bridge to sustain heavy loads at the time of the trial of an action for injuries from its nonrepair, and after the structure has been changed, is inadmissible.—Woodbury v. City of Owosso, 64 Mich. 239.

¶ 512. Where a city is sued for injuries from a defective bridge, evidence that a few days before the accident another person drove over it and found the planks loose, by reason of which his horses fell through, is competent as tending to show the bridge's condition before the accident complained of occurred.—Woodbury v. City of Owosso, 64 Mich. 239.

¶ 513. On an issue raised by recoupment in assumpsit that plaintiff suffered his machinery to be out of repair during the period of the contract so that defendant was on its part subject to enforced delays to its damage, it is not proper to receive evidence that the machine was in bad repair at a later time.—Robinson v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co., 103 Mich. 607.

§ 95. Similar distinct or disconnected facts.

Facts related to times other than those pleaded, see ante § 94.

Other forged notes, see post ¶ 553.

Reputation of associates and colleagues of defamed person, see post ¶ 1934.

Admissibility of other alterations as proof of alteration in question, see Alteration of Instruments ¶ 41.

Proof of other illegal certifications to characterize certification in question, see also Banking ¶ 134.

Evidence of treatment of other cattle in action for injury to cattle, see Bailments ¶ 17.

Instances of fright of other horses as evidence of dangerous character of bridge, see Bridges § 16.

Admissibility of other acts of intercourse in bastardy proceedings, see Bastards § 9.

Transactions and correspondence relating to other deals in action for broker's commissions, see also Brokers ¶ 173.

Admissibility of other similar acts under divorce bill to show character of those alleged, see also Divorce § 55.

Evidence of other contract for purpose of proving relative time, see also Contracts ¶ 1334.

Evidence of other times, things and places to show proper performance of contract, see Contracts § 319.

¶ 514. In an action to recover rent, receipts for rent for certain months preceding those for which recovery is sought, standing by themselves and unconnected with the case by any other evidence, are irrelevant.—Campau v. Traub, 27 Mich. 215.

¶ 515. Where a person sued upon a subscription defends upon the claim that he signed the paper "as a starter" upon the condition that it should not be delivered until he should authorize it, evidence that the holder of the paper made a similar agreement with another person is inadmissible in support of his claim.—Davis v. Kneale, 97 Mich. 72.

¶ 515a. In a suit to recover for the loss of property by fire alleged to be due to the negligent driving of defendant's engine near plaintiff's barn, evidence that the same engine, under similar weather conditions and using the same fuel, set another fire on the day following, is admissible to show the lack of a suitable spark arrester.—Ainsworth v. Hover, 162 Mich. 135.

§ 96. Comparisons or tests with other things, times or places.

In rebuttal, see also ante ¶ 433.

Rejection of comparison as indirect evidence when direct is available, see ante § 78, ¶ 403.

Transactions with third persons, see post § 97.

Other contracts as extraneous evidence in aid of contract, see post § 167.

As basis for opinions by experts, see post §§ 296, 297.

Comparison of goods by jury, see post § 568.

Comparison of questioned writings by jury, see post § 569.

Admissibility of conditions or acts at other times or places in action for injuries to passenger, see Carriers § 212.

Relevancy of evidence as to warehouses of other carriers, see also Carriers ¶ 232.

Admissibility of written lease to show terms of related oral lease, see Landlord and Tenant, I, V.

In dispute over missing deposit check, evidence of other deposit checks as fixing amount deposited, see Banking ¶ 48.

Relative wealth or poverty as evidence of contract or ability to perform, see Contracts § 309 et seq.

¶ 516. In an action for the price of goods sold, but rejected by the vendee on their arrival as not merchantable, it is not error to permit the exhibition of some of the goods to the jury, and to admit testimony as to how they compared with others, and also to allow, in connection with such testimony, the exhibition of a sample of goods taken from the original packages of other merchants to show that the goods were not No. 1, as ordered.—Imbrie v. Wetherbee, 70 Mich. 103.

¶ 517. Where the question is about the saving of fuel effected by an engine sold under warranty, tests made with other boilers differently constructed and located and using different fuel are properly excluded as too remote and uncertain for purposes of comparison.—Wickes Bros. v. Swift Electric Light Co., 70 Mich. 322.

¶ 518. Evidence as to the use and effect of spark catchers on steamboat and locomotive smokestacks and the iron smokestacks of mills was held admissible in a case where suit was brought to recover damages for a fire caused by sparks from the brick chimney of a mill.—Hoyt v. Jeffers, 30 Mich. 181.

¶ 519. In an action to recover the price of a machine constructed for defendant, and which he has refused to accept because it does not meet the contract, evidence of the workings of other machines, not like the one in suit, and as to the amount of help required to operate them, is inadmissible.—Locke v. Priestly Express Wagon & Sleigh Co., 71 Mich. 263.

¶ 520. In an action against a railroad company for fire from sparks scattered by a particular engine known and designated, it is not competent to show that another of defendant's engines caused fire at other times and places.—Ireland v. Cincinnati, W. & M. R. Co., 79 Mich. 163.

¶ 521. In an action for personal injuries sustained by stepping off a train where the stop was so short as to necessitate haste in getting on or off the train it was not error to exclude testimony of a subsequent test to determine the length of time that the engineer probably took to oil his engine at the station at the time of the accident.—O'Dea v. Michigan Cent. R. Co., 142 Mich. 265.

¶ 522. Where a street car collided with an automobile, the testimony of a policeman, who used a motorcycle having upon it a speedometer, as to the speed of a car at the place of the accident on the day prior thereto (based on the testimony of the motorman that all cars ran at about the same rate of speed) is incompetent.—Puffer v. Muskegon Traction & Lighting Co., 173 Mich. 193. (Moore, C. J., and Bird, J., dissenting.)

¶ 523. In a suit to recover for property destroyed by fire from a locomotive, reports of the United States Weather Bureau showing the direction of the wind 120 miles from the place in question are not admissible, where no evidence is offered to show that the wind would likely be in the same direction at both places at the same time.—J. H. Worden Lumber & Shingle Co. v. Minneapolis, St. P. & S. S. M. Ry. Co., 168 Mich. 74.

¶ 524. The general condition of a bridge at the time of an accident from its nonrepair being in issue, it is proper to ask, after evidence had been offered showing the condition of the lugs carrying the floor joists where the accident occurred, about the condition of the lugs on other parts of the bridge.—Woodbury v. City of Owosso, 64 Mich. 239.

¶ 525. In order that evidence that other plants in the immediate vicinity of a cement company were started on the same plan and successfully operated may be competent on an issue as to watering of stock in an action on notes given for stock, it is necessary not only to offer to show a similarity in the soil and means of access to the market but also to offer to show that the material facts in the organization of the neighboring companies were the same.—Loud v. Solomon, 188 Mich. 7.

¶ 526. In an action for the loss of crops, resulting from defendant's flooding plaintiff's land, plaintiff's testimony as to the amount of crops from the land the year before is admissible to show the land's capacity for producing.—Witheral v. Muskegon Booming Co., 68 Mich. 48; Grand Rapids Booming Co. v. Jarvis, 30 Mich. 308.

¶ 527. In an action to recover freight overcharges on interstate shipments, the tariffs and classifications having been duly published, and the only question being whether wastes and overflows and traps were subject to the minimum tariff as brass goods or to a maximum tariff as plumbers' supplies, held that the report of the Interstate Commerce Commission in another case was inadmissible in evidence where it appeared that the report was based upon the fact that the wastes and overflows were mixed in a package with other goods which were clearly plumbers' supplies, thus subjecting the whole shipment to the higher rate.—Wolverine Brass Works v. Southern Pac. Co., 187 Mich. 393.

§ 97. Acts or transactions with third persons.

Hearsay and admissions involving third persons, see post, VII.

Pleadings and files in other actions as documentary evidences, see post § 548.

Admissibility of judgments between strangers or between one of the parties and strangers, see Former Adjudication, I.

Admissibility of judgment as bar or estoppel between parties and their privies, see Former Adjudication.

Matters relating to other persons as evidence in trespass for assault, see also Assault ¶ 92.

¶ 528. The quality of goods furnished at a given time by plaintiff to defendant being in question, it is competent for plaintiff to show that the quality of like articles furnished by him at the same time to another party was good, if such evidence be followed by evidence that the goods furnished by him at that time to defendant were of the same kind and quality.—Ames v. Quimby, 106 U. S. 342, 27 L. ed. 100, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 116.

¶ 529. In an action by a firm of merchants against their traveling man to recover money overpaid to him in refunding his traveling expenses, the action being based on the theory that he had reported his expenses as larger than they actually were, it was not error to exclude evidence of the actual expenses of other traveling men over the same route in the same years, and that they were much less than were charged by defendant. Such matters are res inter alios acta, and if the circumstances are not identical they cannot be relevant.—Linn v. Gilman, 46 Mich. 628.

¶ 530. Where one of the parties to a contract sues the other for preventing its performance, a prior contract, made by the defendant with a third person, can have no bearing unless it appears from the contract in suit that it was made with reference to the prior contract.—Goodrich v. Hubbard, 51 Mich. 62.

¶ 531. In a garnishment proceeding on an issue of a fraudulent transfer by the principal debtor to the garnishees according, as claimed, to a purpose of buying goods on credit and transferring them in satisfaction of a fictitious indebtedness to the garnishees, it is improper to admit evidence that the garnishees had settled with other creditors or to show the record of judgment in a case between them and other creditors.—Gumberg v. Treusch, 103 Mich. 543.

¶ 532. Evidence by plaintiff that defendant "company through its agent paid other claims similar to his" is inadmissible either to show the agent's authority or to raise an inference that an agreement to pay plaintiff's claim was made.—Wierman v. Bay City-Michigan Sugar Co., 142 Mich. 422.

¶ 533. Evidence, in trover for logs alleged to have been converted by defendant, of defendant's conversions and attempted conversions of logs belonging to others, tending to show that defendant was engaged in the business of stealing and sawing the logs of others, was incompetent.—Seymour v. Bruske, 140 Mich. 244.

§ 98. To prove particular facts.

[Note. Both the relevancy and the sufficiency of the evidence offered and receivable in proof of specific facts are treated in the specific topics dealing with such facts. See generally those portions of the other topics devoted to "evidence" or "actions and procedure."]

Sufficiency of proofs, see post § 586, and cross-references there collected.

Best and secondary evidence of particular facts, see post §§ 113-136.

Admissible opinions and conclusions, see post, VI.

Proof of pedigree, age or relationship by hearsay, see post § 323.

Proof of matters of general interest by hearsay, see post § 321.

Proof by recitals in ancient documents, see post § 322.
Admissibility of character and reputation as bearing on particular facts, see post §§ 349-357.
Birth, baptismal and marriage records as evidence of age, see also post §§ 509, 510.
Proof of sounds by phonograph, see post § 571.
Proof of appearance by photographs, see post § 572.
Issues of fact as to jurisdiction, and evidence thereon, see Courts, V.
Mode of proving customs and usages, see Customs § 7.
Habits and appearance of animals as bearing on viciousness, see Animals § 16.
Evidence as to vicious character of animal, see Animals § 16.

§ 99. To prove mental state or attitude.

Declarations competent to show intent, knowledge or thoughts of declarant, see post §§ 329-335.
Admissible opinions and conclusions, see post §§ 231 et seq., 259.
Evidence as to insanity, see Insane Persons, I.
Evidence as to intent and malice, see topics treating of torts in which intent or malice may be an element, e. g., False Imprisonment; Malicious Prosecution; Libel.
Deed as evidence of mental state or belief though superseded by later deed, see also Easements ¶ 79.

¶ 534. Where one's consent to the flowing of water on his lands is in issue, he may show all things done by him or by others in his behalf by way of protest or remonstrance against such diversion.—Chapel v. Smith, 80 Mich. 100.

§ 100. To prove physical or bodily conditions, causes and effects.

Admissible opinions and conclusions, see post §§ 236 et seq., 257.
Evidence as to damnatory consequences of injury, see Damages, XI.

¶ 535. In an action for negligently causing the death of plaintiff's decedent, who was struck by a street car, and received injuries from which he died, testimony of what appeared by a post-mortem examination of the decedent is competent as furnishing one of the means of ascertaining what the result of the injury was.—McClellan v. Fort Wayne & B. I. R. Co., 105 Mich. 101.

¶ 536. On the issue whether there was a drug addiction it may be shown that the alleged subject manifested certain symptoms, since these might become a proper basis for expert testimony on the issue.—Buxton v. Emery, 139 Mich. 341.

§ 101. To prove expectancy of life.

Admissible opinions and conclusions, see post §§ 236, 243, 258.
Admissibility of mortality tables in action for death, see Death by Wrongful Act § 26.
Admissibility of mortality tables on expectancy for purpose of measuring prospective damages from injury, see Damages §§ 329, 330.
Proving money value of dower interest by mortality tables, see Dower § 56, ¶ 143.

¶ 537. Testimony as to longevity of a person's ancestors is admissible on the question of such person's expectancy of life, the mortality tables not being conclusive on that point.—Sterling v. Union Carbide Co., 142 Mich. 284; and see also Nelson v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co., 104 Mich. 582, per McGrath, C. J.

¶ 538. In a suit by an administrator under the Survival Act (Comp. Laws 1897, § 10117) for injuries to a child resulting in its death, the father may be permitted to testify whether or not his grandparents are living, and the mother to testify as to the age of her father and other ancestors.—Love v. Detroit, J. & C. R. Co., 170 Mich. 1.

¶ 539. Computation of the value of the estate of a dowress may be based on mortality tables, but conjecture as to the probable duration of the claimant's life, based on her present state of health or bodily condition, seems inadmissible.—Brown v. Bronson, 35 Mich. 415.

§ 102. To prove intent, knowledge or motive.

Competency of one to testify to his own intent, see post § 235.
Books of account as evidence of knowledge of person having access to them, see also post ¶ 2691.
Admissible opinions and conclusions, see post § 232 et seq.
Best and secondary evidence of notices, see post § 116.
Evidence probative of intent, see generally topics treating of subjects or torts whereof intent is a factor, e. g., Malicious Prosecution; Libel; Fraud; Fraudulent Conveyances.
Evidence of notice or knowledge, see topics treating of thing which is the subject of notice, e. g., Negotiable Instruments, XIII, XIV; Notice and Record of Title, I.
Other agreements and letters to show knowledge and assent to alleged contract, see also Contracts § 312.
Acts evincing intent to have domicile, see Domicile § 7.

¶ 540. Where the motive of a person for doing an act out of the ordinary course of events is a legitimate subject of inquiry, under the issue, all the surrounding circumstances and influences that might have contributed to or caused such motive may be inquired into.—White v. Bailey, 10 Mich. 155.

¶ 541. In torts not involving intent evidence of the good faith of the defendant is irrelevant where actual damages only are sought.—Grant v. Smith, 26 Mich. 201; Maxwell v. Bay City Bridge Co., 46 Mich. 278.

¶ 542. Where, in an action for damages from a collision in a highway it appeared that defendant, who was approaching plaintiff in a buggy on the opposite side of the road drove across and ran into plaintiff's horse, injuring it, evidence of defendant's ill-will towards plaintiff before and up to the time of the collision was admissible as bearing upon his motive in crossing the road.—Tyler v. Nelson, 109 Mich. 37.

¶ 543. The fact that one had such an interest as might have afforded a motive for giving a bonus is not admissible where tending solely to corroborate the giving of the bonus of which there was no evidence.—Devereaux v. Estate of Phillips, 97 Mich. 104.

¶ 544. In an action on a life insurance certificate, where waiver of a forfeiture for nonpayment of assessments is in issue, evidence of statements made by the insured to an officer of the company relative to its custom of reinstating delinquent members upon a showing of good health, is admissible to show his knowledge of such custom.—Jones v. Preferred Bankers' Life Assur. Co., 120 Mich. 211.

¶ 545. In an action by one daughter of the testatrix against another daughter to set aside a deed made by the mother, evidence that the testatrix of full mental capacity executed a deed to a daughter and granddaughter, in order ostensibly to claim a dependent's pension, has a legitimate bearing on the question of the actual intention of testatrix as to the distribution of her estate, since a deed to the two daughters would have accomplished her ostensible object as well as one to a daughter and granddaughter.—Price v. Hagle, 171 Mich. 455.

¶ 546. On the question whether a certain mare was known to be vicious and unmanageable, it was competent for plaintiff disputing such knowledge to prove by a former owner that she was valued at $250 as bearing on the reputation and quality of the mare.—Putnam v. Phoenix Preferred Acc. Ins. Co., 155 Mich. 134.

§ 103. To prove ownership, control or possession.

Admissible opinions and conclusions, see post §§ 213-215.
Best and secondary evidence, see post § 114.
Best and secondary evidence of custody of writing, see post § 117.
Declarations and acts in derogation of or as res gestæ of title or possession, see post §§ 364, 365, 414 et seq., 447, 448.
Admissibility of common report as to claim, see post § 357.
Admissibility of deeds and mortgages, see post §§ 492, 493.
See generally topics treating of actions based on right or possession, e. g., Ejectment; Replevin; Conversion; Trespass.
Evidence of title by particular method, see Adverse Possession; Easements; Descent and Distribution; Gifts; Wills.
Evidence as to ownership or control of railroad, see also Carriers § 215.
Relevancy of evidence as to who were decedent's heirs in ejectment by one claiming under heir, see Ejectment ¶ 157.

¶ 547. In trover for the conversion of a heifer which both parties claimed to have raised, it was proper, in proving identity, to ask a witness who had testified to having been among the plaintiff's cattle for two or three years, about their being gentle and coming about people; all such facts and circumstances or characteristics as would tend to settle the question of ownership would be competent evidence.—De Armond v. Neasmith, 32 Mich. 231.

¶ 548. Where, in order to show title to the note in suit, plaintiff testifies to the purchase and to the amount paid, the check given in payment is admissible as part of the transaction, and as tending to corroborate the alleged purchase.—Pearson v. Hardin, 95 Mich. 360.

¶ 549. Proof that the claimant of land has not paid the taxes on it has some tendency to rebut his claim of absolute ownership.—Stevens v. Hulin, 53 Mich. 93.

¶ 550. As tending to show insincerity and baselessness of one's claim of right to occupy land with a house bought as a chattel on the ground that such right of occupancy passed with sale of the house, it is admissible to receive the bill of sale to claimant's immediate predecessor and a chattel mortgage back for the purchase price, where the absence in such instruments of anything indicative of a tenancy in land or the creation of one tends to show a total want of such right in claimant, who took by a parol sale.—Thurkettle v. Frost, 137 Mich. 115.

Proof of ownership of vehicle causing injury, see note, 2 N. C. C. A. 580-587.

§ 104. To show identity, genuineness or authorship.

Best and secondary evidence of identity and genuineness of writing, see post § 117.
Admissible opinions and conclusions, see post § 222.
Admissibility of hearsay, see post § 324.

See generally specific topics dealing with the subject whereof identity, genuineness or authorship becomes material.
As to genuineness of instruments, see Execution of Instruments, I.
As to authorship of and responsibility for another's acts, see topics treating of torts, and see also Agency, II; Master and Servant, IV; Independent Contractors.
Presumption of identity of persons of same or similar names, see Names.
Mode of proving identity of goods sold, see also Account Stated ¶ 39.
Evidence to identify animals, see Conversion ¶ 153.
Appearance of dog compared with other dogs in the county as evidence to establish liability for injury, see Animals ¶ 77.

¶ 551. Where an exhibit consists of a blank leaf from a scratch pad, and is alleged to have been a writing made at a certain bank, a witness may be allowed to testify that there was paper used in the bank similar to that upon which the exhibit was written.—Township of Alpena v. Mainville, 153 Mich. 732.

¶ 552. Where an exhibit is in evidence which is claimed to be an original memorandum of figures made by the parties at a certain settlement alleged to have taken place at a bank, the cashier of the bank may be allowed to testify that at the time paper similar in color and size was in the room where the settlement was made.—Township of Alpena v. Mainville, 153 Mich. 732.

¶ 553. Where the defense to an action upon a note is forgery, evidence from which the jury might infer that another note which plaintiff had attempted to collect was a forgery, is admissible as bearing upon the question.—Hyman v. Kirt, 153 Mich. 113.

§ 105. ——Identity or location of land.

Best and secondary evidence, see post § 118.
Hearsay to identify land, see post § 325.
Official surveys as documentary evidence, see post § 541.

¶ 554. In ejectment for lands described as "a certain lot according to the plat of the village of Portsmouth," the identity of the lands may be proved by persons acquainted with it, without the production of the recorded plat.—Johnstone v. Scott, 11 Mich. 232.

¶ 555. The location of lands may be proved by any kind of evidence that would be admissible to prove any fact.—Twogood v. Hoyt, 42 Mich. 609.

¶ 556. Where the controversy was whether lumbering on certain lands ceased in 1873, a witness testified that subsequently he worked upon lands the government description of which he could not give, but which he had pointed out to another witness. Held, that the latter witness, after testifying that the lands were so pointed out to him, and that he knew the descriptions, could give the same.—Wright v. Dickinson, 67 Mich. 590.

¶ 557. In an action of ejectment, where land is described as lying in a given direction from a certain creek, and in later deeds as lying in a like direction from a supposed river, the identity of the two streams may be shown for the purpose of showing the identity of the land.—Sanscrainte v. Torongo, 87 Mich. 69.

§ 106. Solvency and insolvency.

Rebuttal evidence as to pecuniary resources or ability, see ante ¶¶ 449-451.
Admissible opinion or conclusion, see post ¶ 1247.
Admissibility of reputation, see post § 355.
Solvency or insolvency of person as bearing on probability that credit was extended to him or contract made with him or as basis of inference of motive to defraud, see Contracts, X; Sales, VIII, IX; Fraud, III; Fraudulent Conveyances, I, V; etc.

IV. BEST AND SECONDARY RULES.

A. DISTINCTION BETWEEN BEST AND SECONDARY; WHAT IS BEST.

§ 107. In general, nature and distinctions.

Various writings and reproductions considered as originals or copies, see post §§ 108-112.
What is best and what secondary evidence of particular facts, see post §§ 113-136.
Best evidence rule applied to matters usually or necessarily required to be in writing, see post §§ 117-126.
Rule as applied to contracts and particular kinds of contracts and conveyances, see post § 127 et seq.
Testimony to fact of deed, contract or ownership, etc., without going into contents of the writing, see generally post §§ 117-119, 127-133.
Competency of one to testify to his own intent, see post § 235.
Contents of writing tendered and refused, see post ¶ 608.
Inadmissibility of presumptions where better evidence is required, see ante § 30.
Right to have best evidence of fact as reason for compelling production of books and papers, see Discovery ¶ 22.
Best and secondary rules in prosecutions for crime, see Indictment, VIII, B.

¶ 558. The rule requiring the best evidence does not operate to exclude evidence merely because it is not all or the most satisfactory that might be adduced, when the evidence offered and that withheld is of the same general quality and grade.—Shotwell v. Harrison, 22 Mich. 410.

¶ 558a. Degrees of evidence exist only in the case of documents to which the best evidence rule applies, and that rule does not exclude testimony of lay witnesses to matters observed of which they are competent to testify merely because there are medical witnesses to testify to the same matters.—Elliott v. Van Buren, 33 Mich. 49.

¶ 559. One who tallied lumber on a shingle and who threw the shingle away after copying the result into a certificate may testify to the amount of the tally against an objection that the shingle was the best evidence.—Crane Lumber Co. v. Otter Creek Lumber Co., 79 Mich. 307.

¶ 560. Evidence of a scale of logs held competent where, from the nature of the lumbering business, greater certainty was impossible.—Seligman v. Ten Eyck, 60 Mich. 267.

¶ 561. Defendant, a boom company, agreed to drive plaintiff's logs at a certain sum per 1,000 feet, the final settlement to be made on the woods' scale. Plaintiff employed a scaler in the woods, who scaled the logs cut and put afloat in the river there, and payment was made on the basis of the scaler's statement. After the logs had been taken out of defendant's boom and sawed, plaintiff, claiming that there was a gross mistake in the woods' scale, sued for the overpayment. Held, that it was competent to prove by the mill-tally sheets and the scalers who made them the actual amount of logs taken out of defendant's boom; the mill tally being the best evidence then obtainable, and the difference between it and a woods' scale being properly explained to the jury.—Lane v. Pere Marquette Boom Co., 62 Mich. 63.

¶ 562. Since a waiver need not be in writing, parol evidence is admissible to prove the exercise by a party of his option to waive a written stipulation or condition in his own favor.—Cobbs v. Fire Ass'n of Philadelphia, 68 Mich. 463.

§ 108. Duplicates and multiple originals.

Equal admissibility of oral evidence or carbon copy to prove lost letter, see post § 154.

Competency of copy of lost duplicate as secondary proof without accounting for other original, see post ¶ 760.

Which is "original" of contracts in duplicate, see Contracts § 5.

¶ 563. In an action upon a contract executed in duplicate plaintiff may put his contract in evidence without calling for the production, or explaining the absence of its duplicate.—Cleveland & T. R. Co. v. Perkins, 17 Mich. 296.

§ 109. Photographic or mechanical facsimiles.

Photographic copies of handwriting, see post ¶ 2851.

¶ 564. Copies of any kind, photographic or otherwise, are merely secondary evidence.—In re Foster's Will, 34 Mich. 21.

¶ 565. An X-ray picture of an injury is the best evidence of what the picture reveals.—Jolman v. Alberts, 192 Mich. 25.

¶ 566. Where an original letter was sent to a third person, a carbon copy thereof being at the same time sent to defendant which it failed to produce on notice, a carbon copy retained by plaintiff was held not to have been improperly received in evidence.—Fremont Canning Co. v. Pere Marquette R. Co., 180 Mich. 283.

¶ 567. Carbon copies of letters are inadmissible, because not best evidence, where no showing is made of demand upon the adverse party to produce the originals.—Plankinton Packing Co. v. Berry, 199 Mich. 212.

§ 110. Oral statements reduced to writing.

¶ 568. Copies of statements made orally to a commercial agency of what a merchant stated as to his financial standing, which were written down by persons receiving such statements at the time, and which the testimony tends to show were subsequently approved of by the merchant, but not signed by him, are admissible as evidence in favor of creditors who claim to have been defrauded by such representations.—Mooney v. Davis, 75 Mich. 188.

¶ 569. Parol testimony as to testimony given in another case was competent, although the testimony in such other case was taken by a stenographer and the latter testified from his minutes.—Lange v. Klatt, 135 Mich. 262.

§ 111. Copy itself as primary evidence.

Carbon copy as original when duplicate copy was mailed, see also ante ¶ 566.

¶ 570. Where a defendant testifying admits that an alleged copy of a letter written by him is substantially correct, this is sufficient to make it evidence.—Kelly v. McKenna, 18 Mich. 381.

¶ 571. Oral testimony as to the contents of a communication written to a defendant is competent where the loss has first been proven, even though no notice to produce was given to the defendant, it appearing that during the course of negotiations a copy of the communication was read to him.—Meade v. Bowles, 123 Mich. 696.

¶ 572. A copy of a letter in which plaintiff informed defendant as to his fraudulent misrepresentations regarding the mortgages in question, was properly admitted as against objection that the original and not the copy should have been produced; where the identical paper, to wit, the copy in question, formed the subject matter of a conversation between defendant and plaintiff's representative.—Simonds v. Cash, 136 Mich. 558.

¶ 573. A copy of a verified bill of complaint served on the defendant in an action between two defendants in another action, in which it is sought to hold one of them liable for the acts of the other as agent, is competent to show admissions on the part of the alleged principal tending to prove the existence of an agency, such copy being the one served, and objection being that the original should be offered although the weight of such admission as evidence is for the jury.—Mally v. Excelsior Wrapper Co., 181 Mich. 568.

§ 112. Records and official copies as primary evidence.

Admissibility of records of instruments, see post, VIII, C, 1.
Admissibility as original proofs of transcripts and copies of records and documents, see post, VIII, C, 2.
Certified copies, see post, VIII, C, 2.
Necessity and sufficiency of authentication and certification of copies offered as proof, see post, VIII, C, 2.
Certificate of record indorsed on deed, see post § 535.

¶ 574. In the absence of a statute authorizing it, the record of a deed is not primary evidence of the existence and genuineness of the original.—Brown v. Cady, 11 Mich. 535.

¶ 575. A document certified by the secretary of state under the great seal of the state to be a true transcript of a record kept in his office, of a patent from the state, is not admissible as primary evidence of title.—Bradley v. Silsbee, 33 Mich. 328.

§ 113. One's own age.

¶ 576. One's testimony as to his own age cannot be rejected on the ground that it is not the best evidence.—Cheever v. Congdon, 34 Mich. 296; Morrison v. Emsley, 53 Mich. 564.

§ 114. Ownership, title or claim.

Deed as best evidence of extent of possession thereunder, see also Adverse Possession ¶ 247.

¶ 577. A party owning property consisting of chattels and choses in action is presumed to know it, and may testify to the fact of ownership where it is material; the means of his knowledge can be disclosed on cross-examination.—Cilley v. Van Patten, 68 Mich. 80.

¶ 578. Ownership of lands cannot, against objection, be proved by parol evidence.—Jennison v. Haire, 29 Mich. 207.

¶ 578a. The record of title to the land is not the best evidence of the right of one of the spouses owning by the entirety to have the crops, where the claim to them was not on the title but was based on a parol agreement by husband and wife that he should have all of the crops.—Parks v. Norris, 101 Mich. 71.

¶ 579. Parol evidence is admissible of a bare license to do certain acts on another's land, although a claim of right therein must be based on writing.—Millerd v. Reeves, 1 Mich. 107.

¶ 580. In an action of ejectment for land purchased from heirs, it is admissible, by way of identifying the original owner of the land, to ask whether he had owned real estate at the locus in quo. The question is preliminary and not objectionable as an attempt to prove title to lands by parol.—Taylor v. Youngs, 48 Mich. 268.

¶ 581. Parol testimony as to the size of the lot claimed by plaintiff in ejectment was not admissible, where plaintiff's only claim of title was an executory contract for a lot in a plat from one who is not shown to be seised of such property, and where nothing was offered to show the location of such property or what were its dimensions.—Stolnski v. Pulte, 77 Mich. 322.

¶ 582. One suing to recover back taxes paid under protest on lands not owned by him may testify what lands he owns in the township, without producing the deeds, his purpose being not to establish title to lands but to show what he does not own.—Babcock v. Township of Beaver Creek, 65 Mich. 479.

§ 115. Amount or debt or payment.

¶ 583. Mortgagees bringing replevin against an officer who has attached the goods may testify from their recollection as to the amount due upon the mortgage, and are not compelled to put in evidence books produced in court which they say contain the account between them and the mortgagor.—Hyde v. Shank, 93 Mich. 585.

¶ 584. Where the validity of a tax and of a deed based thereon is involved, it is admissible to show by parol the payment and actual receipt of unlawful additional compensation to certain judges out of the tax levy where the records show the tax was raised for the purpose of such payment.—Culbertson v. H. Witbeck Co., 127 U. S. 326, 32 L. ed. 134, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1136.

§ 116. Notices.

Secondary evidence without notice to produce original, see post § 146.

¶ 585. A notice to quit may be proved by copy without notice to produce the original.—Falkner v. Beers, 2 Dougl. 117.

¶ 586. A tax protest, being a mere notice, may be proved by secondary evidence, and is provable by copy made at the same time with the original, without showing loss of the original or notice to produce it.—Michigan Land & Iron Co. v. Township Republic, 65 Mich. 628.

¶ 587. Parol evidence of contents of a notice to quit may be given by plaintiff in ejectment, who served it, where the notice retained by plaintiff has been lost, and defendant, being notified, fails to produce it at the trial.—Johnson v. Johnson, 70 Mich. 65.

¶ 588. The notice served by a wife upon a liquor dealer forbidding him to sell to her husband need not be in writing, and, in proving it, it is not therefore necessary to give notice to produce the original, even if it was written.—Loranger v. Jardine, 56 Mich. 518.

§ 117. Identity, existence or custody of writing or entry.

See also post ¶ 658.

Proof that deed was executed and delivered, see also post § 119.

¶ 589. Where the immediate issue is whether there was a contract in writing, oral testimony bearing on that issue cannot be excluded on the assumption that such writing exists.—Kalamazoo Novelty Mfg. Works v. Macalister, 40 Mich. 84.

¶ 590. Oral evidence is admissible to show identity of an affidavit returned to files with one taken therefrom.—Beebe v. Morrell, 76 Mich. 114.

¶ 591. To identify a lien statement a witness may be asked whether or not at a specified time he swore to a statement of lien in another's behalf.—Huntoon v. O'Brien, 79 Mich. 227.

¶ 592. Parol evidence is admissible to show the existence of a note which has been surrendered to the maker upon his agreement to pay the balance due thereon.—Hanselman v. Doyle, 90 Mich. 142.

¶ 593. Testimony that a plaintiff claiming to have been damaged by an enforced shutdown of its mill had orders ahead is admissible without producing the orders, where loss of time and not loss of the orders was the gravamen of the claimed damages.—Michigan Paper Co. v. Kalamazoo Valley Elec. Co., 141 Mich. 48.

¶ 594. A witness may testify without producing them whether books contain a given entry.—Maxwell v. Paine, 53 Mich. 30; and see also Hoffman v. Pack, Woods & Co., 114 Mich. 1.

§ 118. Location, identity or possession of property.

Mode of proving identity and location of lands, see ante § 105.

To identify property levied on rather than to show contents of writ, see also post ¶ 621.

¶ 595. Parol evidence is admissible to show that certain lands are within a specified school district where it becomes material to show it in determining the legality of school taxes.—Brooks v. Fairchild, 36 Mich. 231.

¶ 596. Parol testimony that the property in question had been taken on an execution may be given, not to show the contents or validity of the execution, but to identify the transaction.—Hunt v. Strew, 33 Mich. 85.

§ 119. Execution, filing and recording of instruments.

¶ 597. Where it is necessary, in order to show performance of a condition, to prove the execution and delivery of a deed, the deed should be produced or accounted for. It is not sufficient for a witness to testify that such a deed was executed and delivered.—Thompson v. Richards, 14 Mich. 172.

¶ 598. Oral testimony that a deed was made by a third person to the defendant is sufficient to support a claim for an agreed commission for inducing a third person to make a deed in the absence of objection to the evidence and no contrary testimony.—Gruett v. Dibble, 126 Mich. 623.

¶ 598a. A conditional delivery of a deed in escrow to a third person for ultimate delivery to the grantee, may be shown by parol.—Brown v. Keiser, 182 Mich. 432.

¶ 599. Testimony of a witness in regard to returning or filing a public document is limited to such a general description as will suffice to identify it.—City of Muskegon v. S. K. Martin Lumber Co., 86 Mich. 625.

¶ 600. The testimony of a mortgagee that he left a copy of his mortgage with the township clerk for record, and paid him his fees, as he thinks, upon a certain day, cannot be considered by the jury as evidence of the filing of the mortgage, in the absence of the copy with the filing upon it, or of some showing why it cannot be produced.—Curtis v. Wilcox, 91 Mich. 229.

§ 120. Contents of writings in general.

Particular contracts and their terms, see post §§ 127-136.

When secondary is admissible, see post, IV, B.

Evidence of corporate purposes and objects, see also Corporations § 72.

Testimony that record does not contain given matters, see also post § 531.

¶ 601. A witness cannot be asked what he stated in an affidavit, but the proper practice is to produce the affidavit itself.—De May v. Roberts, 46 Mich. 160.

¶ 602. The contents of a receipt for a permit to make sewer connections should be proved by the receipt and not by oral evidence.—Zube v. Weber, 67 Mich. 52.

¶ 603. Testimony as to the contents of a paper which is not introduced in evidence is incompetent.—Coburn v. Muskegon Booming Co., 72 Mich. 134.

¶ 604. Oral testimony as to letters written by the witness is incompetent, the letters themselves being the only competent evidence of their contents.—McDuff v. Detroit Evening Journal Co., 84 Mich. 1.

¶ 605. A question as to whether a letter was ever written and what it contained is objectionable as calling for the contents of a writing.—Conroy v. Haffner, 182 Mich. 289.

¶ 606. A question calling for the name of an association to which the witness has referred in a letter written by him does not necessarily call for the contents of a written instrument.—Leo Austrian & Co. v. Springer, 94 Mich. 343.

¶ 607. A plaintiff's testimony that goods sold were charged to defendant married woman on his books and not to her husband is not the best evidence as to whether they were so charged at the time of the purchase, if the books might show that fact.—Powers v. Russell, 26 Mich. 179.

¶ 608. A plaintiff may state the contents of a receipt presented to him by defendant, for a certain sum in full of all claims, which plaintiff refused to sign, and returned to the defendant, without producing the paper or giving notice to the defendant to produce it; it amounts only to proof of a conversation of which the receipt was a part.—Ranney v. Donovan, 78 Mich. 318.

§ 121. Public acts and resolutions, ordinances and statutes.

See also post ¶¶ 1173, 1175, 1177.
Sufficiency of foundation proofs to admit secondary, see post §§ 148, 149.
Admissibility of parol to add to or contradict or explain records, see post §§ 195-197.
Documentary proofs, see post §§ 532, 534.
Necessity of proving foreign laws by copy or transcript, see post § 555.
Admissibility of parol evidence of common law in other states and countries, see Jud. Act, chap. XVII, § 27; Comp. L. 1915, § 12515.

¶ 609. Parol evidence, if objected to, is inadmissible to prove a resolution of a school district board fixing the rate of tuition of nonresident pupils.—Thompson v. Crockery School District No. 7, 25 Mich. 483.

¶ 610. Whenever the law requires written evidence of the action taken by officers in tax proceedings, the record is the only proper evidence.—Mills v. Township of Richland, 72 Mich. 100.

¶ 611. A city or township treasurer may testify to the fact and time of making a return or statement of unpaid personal taxes to the county treasurer in a suit for their collection.—City of Muskegon v. S. K. Martin Lumber Co., 86 Mich. 625.

¶ 612. The county clerk may testify, from an examination of the record of the board of supervisors, that the signatures of the chairman and clerk are wanting, and that a certain transcript of a part of the record comprises all that appears therein upon a particular subject.—Hoffman v. Pack, Woods & Co., 114 Mich. 1.

¶ 613. Under Local Acts 1897, No. 374, title 9, § 31 (Charter of Grand Rapids), requiring the board of public works to keep a record of its proceedings and determinations showing the vote of each member on every question, no other evidence of the action of the board than its records on a subject of action can be considered.—Graham v. City of Grand Rapids, 141 Mich. 612.

¶ 614. Testimony of the presiding officer of the board of supervisors sitting in review of the assessment of taxes, and the minutes of an unofficial stenographer, transcribed long after the record of the action of the board was made, to the effect that at the close of each day's proceedings an adjournment was publicly announced to the date of the next session, will not make valid the certificate and record of such board, in which no adjournments are shown; since such a holding would be permitting the levy and assessment of taxes to be founded upon parol.—Delray Land Co. v. Township of Springwells, 149 Mich. 397.

§ 122. Judgments and judicial acts and process.

When secondary is admissible, see post IV, B.
Admissibility of parol evidence to explain, vary or impeach, see post § 198.
Record and documentary proofs, see post §§ 544-546.
As to identity of levy under process, see ante ¶ 596.
Proof of proceedings before justice by his oath, see Jud. Act, chap. XVII, § 31; Comp. L. 1915, § 12519.

¶ 615. Journal entries and interlocutory orders and decrees in chancery are to be considered as originals; and are admissible in evidence without producing the enrollment.—Lothrop v. Southworth, 5 Mich. 436.

¶ 616. An order of partition by the territorial register of probate (1 Ter. Laws, p. 160), requiring conveyance of a parcel of land to a certain person, held to be the best and only legitimate evidence that such person's right to the conveyance had been established.—Willetts v. Mandlebaum, 28 Mich. 521.

¶ 617. The paper in a justice's files which he treated as a confession of judgment is the best evidence to show its own real character, though the judgment recites that it was made on confession.—Dodge v. Bird, 19 Mich. 518.

¶ 618. Under Michigan Const., art. 6, § 10, providing that "the decisions of the supreme court shall be in writing, signed by the judges concurring therein," and any judge "dissenting therefrom shall give the reasons of such dissent in writing, under his signature." and all "such opinions shall be filed in the office of the clerk of the supreme court," a written opinion so filed is the best evidence of what was decided, for the purpose of determining the conclusiveness of the decree.—Stearns v. Lawrence, 83 Fed. 738, affirming Lawrence v. Stearns, 79 Fed. 878.

¶ 619. Since the day on which a justice renders judgment is required to be entered on his docket, the entry when made imports his presence within the jurisdiction as well as the fact and amount of the judgment, and as to such occurrences the docket is the best evidence and may not be disputed.—Swantek v. Jarmoszki, 162 Mich. 617.

¶ 620. In an action of replevin, parol evidence that at the time the goods were taken from the plaintiff he was served with an attachment against a third person and in favor of the defendants, without any proof of the process or proceedings in attachment, is insufficient to prove that the goods were in the custody of the law when the replevin suit was brought.—Van Baalen v. Dean, 27 Mich. 104.

¶ 621. It was held proper, for the identification of a transaction, to ask whether certain property had been taken on an execution in favor of the plaintiffs in an attachment, the question being relevant to the issue, and its purpose not being to show the contents or validity of the execution.—Hunt v. Strew, 33 Mich. 85.

§ 123. Ballots and elections.

Parol evidence to explain or contradict, see post § 196.

¶ 622. The ballots cast by the voters constitute the best and are the primary evidence of the intention and choice of the voters.—Andrews v. Otsego Probate Judge, 74 Mich. 278.

¶ 623. The best accessible evidence must be introduced in case of an election contested upon the votes, and the ballots themselves are primary and the best evidence.—Keeler v. Robertson, 27 Mich. 116.

§ 124. Establishment and location of roads and public places.

¶ 624. The maps, plats, and deeds of land referring to a specified road, of which all traces have disappeared, are the most reliable data to establish its location.—Hoffman v. City of Port Huron, 110 Mich. 616.

¶ 625. Where maps, plats and surveys were available in an action to recover land described as "lying between the Lake road and the lake," it was error to permit witnesses to give their opinions as to the location of the road, based upon their recollection of where they used to travel in passing along the shore—especially where no road of any definite or uniform width had ever been cut out.—Hoffman v. City of Port Huron, 110 Mich. 616.

§ 125. Private corporate acts and resolves.

Effect of failure to make records on right to put in secondary proofs, see post § 144.

Inadmissibility of prior discussions by directors to show terms of appointment made by them, see post ¶ 964.

Corporate books and records as documentary evidence, see post §§ 503, 524.

Parol evidence as to purposes and objects of corporation, see also Corporations § 72.

Admissibility of parol evidence as to authority of corporate officers, see also Corporations § 129.

¶ 626. Resolutions adopted at a meeting of a board of directors of a private corporation may be shown by the record of the proceedings if one was made and is kept; otherwise parol evidence is permissible to show what was resolved upon and by what vote it was carried.—Ten Eyck v. Pontiac, O. & P. A. R. Co., 74 Mich. 226.

¶ 627. When an original minute book of a corporation is in existence and can be compared with a copy the latter is not admissible in evidence.—Bartholomew v. Walsh, 191 Mich. 252.

¶ 628. If the authenticity of a notice of sale under proceedings to foreclose a mortgage by advertisement over the name of a bank can be questioned at all for want of its authority, the fact that the foreclosure was authorized by the directors may be shown by parol.—Gage v. Sanborn, 106 Mich. 269.

¶ 629. Parol evidence to show that all the directors of an agricultural fair association voted for a resolution authorizing the negotiation of a loan secured by mortgage on land owned by the association, was admissible to supply the omission from the minutes, as the law did not require a record of the vote.—Ismon v. Loder, 135 Mich. 345.

§ 126. Official or representative or trust capacity.

Of the trust or its terms, see post § 133.

Of the incidents of administration, see post § 134.

¶ 630. Parol proof is admissible to prove a person's official character.—Scott v. Detroit Young Men's Society's Lessee, 1 D. 119, writ of error dismissed, 5 How. (U. S.) 343, 12 L. ed. 181; Cahill v. Kalamazoo Mut. Ins. Co., 2 D. 124; Johns v. People, 25 Mich. 499.

¶ 631. Where the question of official character arises collaterally parol evidence is admissible to prove an actual incumbency de facto.—Druse v. Wheeler, 22 Mich. 439.

¶ 632. Parol proof is admissible to show who are the officers of a school district.—Crane v. Bennington Township School Dist. No. 6, 61 Mich. 299.

¶ 633. Parol evidence is inadmissible to prove administration, or the appointment of administrators, for the sake of proving title through them.—Albright v. Cobb, 30 Mich. 355.

¶ 634. Proof of administration and as to who are administrators does not fall within the rule applicable to the proof of official character in the case of a public officer or officer of a corporation, which makes proof that they are officers de facto sufficient; where the office or trust is of a private nature, rather, or where the appointment is the result of the proceedings or determination of a court, the appointment must be strictly proved in the original way.—Albright v. Cobb, 30 Mich. 355.

¶ 635. Parol testimony is not admissible to prove the granting of letters of administration by a court, but such fact must be proved by the record.—General Conference Ass'n of Seventh-Day Adventists v. Michigan Sanitarium and Benevolent Ass'n, 166 Mich. 504.

¶ 636. Executors cannot prove their office by general reputation in an action brought by them.—Middlesworth v. Nixon, 2 Mich. 425.

¶ 637. Oral evidence is admissible, if no objection is made, to show that plaintiff in replevin is trustee in bankruptcy of the owner of the property, and that his previous right as assignee of the owner is not cut off by the decree in bankruptcy so far as relates to the right to maintain the action.—Gordon v. Farrington, 46 Mich. 420.

¶ 638. Parol evidence is admissible to prove the official character of trustees of a religious society, where the only proof required is that they are officers de facto.—Walrath v. Campbell, 28 Mich. 111.

§ 127. Contracts and their terms and effect in general.

Correspondence as best evidence of contract therein contained, see also post ¶ 1135.
Parol proof of waiver of conditions, see also ante ¶ 562.
Inadmissibility of prior terms to control or vary written contracts, see post, V, A.
Admissibility as documentary writings and proof of authenticity, see post, VIII, A.
Requirements of the statute of frauds for writings, see Frauds, Statute of.
Necessity of written new promise to take contract obligation out of statute of limitations, see Jud. Act, chap. IX, § 21; Comp. L. 1915, § 12331.

¶ 639. Oral testimony as to the terms of a partnership agreement is inadmissible where the terms are contained in written contracts.—Smith v. Walker, 57 Mich. 456.

¶ 640. As between the proprietor of a building and the builder, the contract is the best evidence whether the relation between them is that of principal and agent or master and servant.—Wilkinson v. Detroit Steel & Spring Works, 73 Mich. 405.

¶ 641. Evidence of oral negotiations preliminary to the execution of a written agreement cannot be considered by the jury as independent evidence of the agreement.—Sheley v. Brooks, 114 Mich. 11.

¶ 642. Parol evidence as to the contents of a written agreement is incompetent.—Johnson v. O'Neill, 181 Mich. 326.

¶ 643. Where a plaintiff vendee of rye sues a defendant vendor for a breach of the warranty of quality, plaintiff on the question of damages may introduce secondary evidence to show what were the terms of its written agreement with the person to whom it resold the rye.—Stockbridge Elevator Co. v. Booth, 165 Mich. 212.

¶ 644. Upon the question whether certain items of indebtedness were included in a statement and settlement so as to preclude further recovery for them, the admission of the oral evidence of plaintiff's witness that the items were not so included because they were not yet entered on the ledger at the date of the settlement, is not error as contravening the best evidence rule.—Rock Island Plow Co. v. Smith, 162 Mich. 180.

¶ 645. When parties put their contract in writing, the writing is the evidence of what such contract is.—Boston Piano & Music Co. v. Pontiac Clothing Co., 199 Mich. 141.

§ 128. ——Contracts partly written.

¶ 646. Where a contract, not required by the statute of frauds to be in writing, rests partly in writing and partly in parol, the whole is regarded as a parol agreement and may be orally proved, and the jury must determine its terms from the whole testimony. In such a case the writing is competent evidence to prove the terms of the contract so far as they are expressed therein, and may be regarded as admissions of the facts, and, indeed, the best evidence of the facts so stated therein.—Stahelin v. Sowle, 87 Mich. 124.

¶ 647. In an action by an agent in his firm's name against a third party for the amount of an order for goods forwarded to the firm defendant, where there has been no written acceptance of such order, may show the negotiations and conditions upon which it was given.—Bronson v. Herbert, 95 Mich. 478.

¶ 648. The terms of a special contract of carriage may be proved by oral evidence, and such terms are not determined entirely by the provisions in the tickets purchased several days after the contract was made.—Hayes v. Wabash R. Co., 163 Mich. 174.

§ 129. Sales and transfers.

Necessity of writing, see Frauds, Statute of.

¶ 649. Where plaintiff sues upon defendant's agreement to give him half the profits of the sale of lands, the purchase whereof plaintiff should have procured for defendant, the conveyance of the land is the best evidence of the performance of the condition precedent to plaintiff's claim, and it should be produced.—Davis v. Gerber, 69 Mich. 246.

¶ 650. Where it becomes important to show whether a sale under a written contract was completed before a given event, it is error to admit parol evidence of the sale when the contract is accessible as written evidence.—Hatch v. Fowler, 28 Mich. 205.

¶ 651. If actual sale and transfer of possession of personalty is shown, the writing by which the sale was perfected need not be put in evidence in a case where the terms of the agreement are not material, and though such writing is admissible it cannot exclude parol evidence of the transaction.—Sirrine v. Briggs, 31 Mich. 443.

¶ 652. Proof of sales may be made without introducing the books of the business.—Steketee v. Kimm, 48 Mich. 322.

¶ 653. A parol assignment of a mortgage debt is admissible even in a court of law to show that the mortgagee has parted with his interest.—Dougherty v. Randall, 3 Mich. 581.

¶ 654. Where, in an action to recover the amount secured by a mortgage, plaintiff has the burden of showing that there was no sale under the mortgage, the testimony of a certain witness that he went to plaintiff's office and, looking at plaintiff's books, found there had been no sale, is inadmissible.—Hamilton Provident & Loan Soc. v. Northwood, 86 Mich. 315.

¶ 655. In an action on a written guaranty to pay for goods sold by plaintiff to a third party, the original order for the goods need not be produced to identify what goods were sold and delivered to the vendee; that may be shown by other evidence.—Feustmann v. Gott's Estate, 65 Mich. 592.

§ 130. Warrants, commercial paper, payments and receipts.

¶ 656. The orders upon which money is said to have been paid out are the best evidence of such payment, if accessible, and parol proof of it is properly excluded until it is shown that they cannot be produced.—Mason v. Scio Fractional School Dist. No. 1, 34 Mich. 228.

§ 131. Grants and conveyances and mortgages.

Proof of leaseholds and tenancies, see post § 132.

Necessity of writing, see Frauds, Statute of.

¶ 657. Parol evidence of the contents of a United States patent is not admissible.—Platt v. Haner, 27 Mich. 167.

¶ 658. A witness may be asked whether a deed and mortgage have been given; the question not calling for their contents.—Clemens v. Conrad, 19 Mich. 170.

¶ 659. Where under an Indian treaty the selections of land were in writing, oral testimony of such fact is incompetent, in the absence of a legal excuse for the nonproduction of the writing or of a certified copy.—Brown v. Quinland, 75 Mich. 289.

¶ 660. Parol testimony is admissible to show to whom a deed or mortgage ran, and, if material, in whose custody the instruments were placed.—Showman v. Lee, 86 Mich. 556.

¶ 661. A deed under which title is claimed is the best evidence as to the extent of the claim of title.—Greene v. Anglemire, 77 Mich. 168.

¶ 662. The deposition of a register of deeds as to the contents of deeds recorded in his office, without giving copies thereof, is inadmissible. And where the purpose for which the evidence is offered is collateral to the issue the rule is still the same.—Angell v. Rosenbury, 12 Mich. 241.

¶ 663. One suing to recover back taxes compulsorily paid under protest on lands not owned by or listed to him may testify what lands he owns in the township, without producing the deeds, his purpose being not to establish title to lands but to show what he does not own.—Babcock v. Township of Beaver Creek, 65 Mich. 479.

¶ 664. Certain parol proof, and also a resolution of the governor and judges of the territory of Michigan, offered in evidence for the purpose of showing an assignment by them prior to 1823 of certain premises, held irrelevant and inadmissible.—Scott v. Detroit Young Men's Society's Lessee, I D. 119. Writ of error dismissed, 5 How. (U. S.) 343, 12 L. ed. 181.

¶ 665. Where defendant had agreed to give plaintiff half the profits realized from a sale of lands which plaintiff should look up and procure the purchase of, held, in an action to recover such profits, that evidence of a conversation in which defendant stated that he sold the land was admissible for plaintiff in connection with the amount received to show maturity of his right.—Davis v. Gerber, 69 Mich. 246.

§ 132. Leases and leaseholds and tenancies.

¶ 666. If it appears that plaintiff in trespass q. c. f. is not the owner of the land, but holds under a written lease, and the damages are not confined to an injury to the possession only, the plaintiff will not be allowed to prove the nature of his tenure by parol, but must produce the lease.—Gilbert v. Kennedy, 22 Mich. 5.

¶ 667. The fact of a tenancy may be proved by parol, though the lease creating it is in writing.—Rayner v. Lee, 20 Mich. 384.

§ 133. Trusts and their terms.

Necessity of written instrument declaring or creating trusts, see Trusts, II.

¶ 668. Parol evidence is admissible to prove the facts that create a trust in favor of a principal whose agent has purchased land of him concealing important facts so that the transaction amounts to a fraud.—Moore v. Mandlebaum, 8 Mich. 433.

¶ 669. Parol evidence is admissible to show that land was conveyed by heirs to an administrator in trust to sell and divide the proceeds among the heirs.—Bitely v. Bitely, 85 Mich. 227.

¶ 670. Where a trust for the sale of land and disposition of proceeds is evidenced and defined by writing, parol testimony regarding its terms is inadmissible.—Collar v. Collar, 86 Mich. 507.

§ 134. Administration, probate and settlement.

Of appointment and character of personal representatives, see ante § 126.

When secondary is admissible, see post, IV, B.

As to will and its contents, see post § 135.

§ 671. The fact that an estate has been settled may be proved by testimony of a witness without introducing the probate records.—Turnbull v. Richardson, 69 Mich. 400.

¶ 672. Proof of the payment of legacies need not be matter of probate record; it may be by parol.—Chapman v. Craig, 37 Mich. 370.

§ 135. Existence and contents of wills.

Documentary proof of probate record, see post § 543.

¶ 673. Parol evidence of the contents of a later will, on the ground of which will probate of an earlier one is resisted, cannot be objected to by the proponents of the earlier will as not being the best evidence.—In re Hope's Appeal, 48 Mich. 518.

¶ 674. In ejectment for land purchased from heirs it is admissible, as a preliminary question, and by way of identifying their ancestor, to ask whether he left a will.—Taylor v. Youngs, 48 Mich. 268.

¶ 675. The precise character of the powers granted by a will to executors and trustees cannot be shown by parol.—Weise v. Rich, 77 Mich. 325.

§ 136. Advancements to heirs or legatees.

¶ 676. Parol evidence of a decedent's declarations prior to and after the execution of a deed of land which he certifies in a separate paper that he has given to a child as a portion of his patrimony is inadmissible; since advancements must be evidenced in writing.—Power v. Estate of Power, 91 Mich. 587.

B. WHEN SECONDARY IS ADMISSIBLE; LAYING FOUNDATION.

§ 137. Admissibility in general.

See also post ¶ 738.

Where paper may be restored, see post § 139.

Where original is invalid or deficient, see post § 140.

Original not accessible or producible, see post §§ 141, 142.

Effect of voluntary destruction, see post § 143.

Effect of failure to preserve written primary evidence, see post § 144.

Admissibility of copies forming part of pleadings or depositions, see post § 145.

Necessity and sufficiency of notice to produce or search for original, see post §§ 146, 147.

Necessity and sufficiency of foundation proofs, see post §§ 148-151.

What is receivable as secondary evidence, see post §§ 152, 153.

Admissibility of copy of a copy, see also post ¶ 766.

Proof of notice by copy, see also ante ¶ 213.

Oral statements as to contents or effect of instrument as good admissions, see post § 375.

Admissibility of testator's declarations as to contents, see post § 413.

Reasonable time to subpoena attesting witnesses so that execution of document may be proved by others, see post § 519.

As to lost lease claimed to have broken adverse possession, see also Adverse Possession ¶ 255.

Secondary evidence of execution on creditors' suit, see also Creditors' Suits § 28.

In criminal cases, see Indictment, VIII, B.

Admission of secondary evidence as harmless error or error cured by other evidence or ruling, see Harmless Error.

Mode and sufficiency of objection to secondary evidence, see Trial, V; Saving Questions.

Waiver of objection to secondary evidence, see Trial, V, C; Saving Questions.
Admissibility of secondary proofs against objection to parol evidence to change contents, see post ¶ 1208.
Parol proof of contents of lost negotiable bill or note in action or set-off based thereon, see Jud. Act, chap. XVII, §§ 55, 56; Comp. L. 1915, §§ 12543, 12544.

¶ 677. Secondary evidence may be given of the contents of court records or files that have been lost or destroyed.—Drake v. Kinsell, 38 Mich. 232; Dalton's Appeal, 59 Mich. 352; Cilley v. Van Patten, 68 Mich. 80; Cook v. Bertram, 86 Mich. 356.

¶ 678. Secondary evidence is admissible to prove a writ of attachment in collateral proceedings, where the writ is gone from the files.—Millar v. Babcock, 29 Mich. 526.

¶ 679. Parol evidence is admissible of the contents of a petition for the appointment of a guardian, the loss of such petition having been proved.—Dalton's Appeal, 59 Mich. 352.

¶ 680. Where the records and files in probate proceedings for the sale of a ward's land have been lost or destroyed, their contents may be proved as in other cases by a party not in fault.—Blanchard v. De Graff, 60 Mich. 107.

¶ 681. Where an executor's order for the sale of real estate has been lost or destroyed without the fault of those claiming title under the sale, its existence may be shown by any competent testimony.—Egan v. Grece, 79 Mich. 62.

¶ 682. Upon proof of the loss of an execution under which defendant seeks to justify a seizure, he may orally show that the execution was properly issued and levied upon the property and that notices of sale were duly posted according to law.—Freedman v. Campfield, 92 Mich. 118.

¶ 683. Parol evidence is admissible in an action on a recognizance to show the contents of a lost or destroyed indictment, which the recognizance bound the principal to answer to.—People v. Dennis, 4 Mich. 609.

¶ 684. Where the entry on a justice's docket does not show the time summons was served, and the files are lost, the time of service may be proved by the justice—the statute not requiring the time to be entered on the docket.—Van Kleek v. Eggleston, 7 Mich. 511.

¶ 685. Parol evidence was admitted in the absence of the record of the action of the joint board of school inspectors altering district boundaries, where it was apparent that some action was taken, and that the matter was for several years after such action treated as settled.—Pine River School Dist. No. 1 v. Union School Dist. No. 1, 81 Mich. 339.

§ 138. ——After failure to produce on notice.
Originals beyond state, see post § 141.
Necessity and sufficiency of notice, see post § 146.
Admissibility of copies of notices without notice, see ante § 116.
Refusal to produce as affecting right to introduce document, see post ¶ 2571.

¶ 686. A copy of written representations may be put in evidence where the original has been returned to the person making them, and he has failed to produce it on being notified to do so.—Genesee County Sav. Bank v. Michigan Barge Co., 52 Mich. 164.

¶ 687. Parol proof is admissible of the contents of a paper in the possession of the adverse party who has been duly notified to produce the same on the trial and fails to do so.—Pangborn v. Continental Ins. Co., 62 Mich. 638.

¶ 688. The books of a company sued in assumpsit for services by one who had been in its employ contained a statement, made by it, of a portion of the account claimed by plaintiff to be due to him; they were not produced on proper notice, and were taken out of the state. Held, that plaintiff could testify as to the contents of the books concerning a material point in his case.—Boglarsky v. Singer Mfg. Co., 65 Mich. 510.

¶ 689. Where the executors fail, after due notice, to produce a former will, it is provable by a copy, shown to be such by parol evidence, and the execution of the will may be shown by the same kind of evidence.—Keagle v. Pessell, 91 Mich. 618.

§ 139. Restorable papers and records.

¶ 690. The statute for restoring lost records (Comp. L. 1871, §§ 6055-6059, How. St., §§ 7639-7643) does not exclude secondary evidence of their contents, especially where the restoration is difficult.—Drake v. Kinsell, 38 Mich. 232.

§ 140. Original invalid or deficient.
Oral statements or acts where writing is essential as admissions against interest, see post § 375.

¶ 691. Where instruments have been entered on the registry of deeds, copies can be used as secondary evidence of the contents of lost or destroyed originals, even though the latter were not so executed as to entitle them to record.—Post v. Rich, 36 Mich. 16; Heinmiller v. Hatheway, 60 Mich. 391.

§ 141. Original inaccessible or beyond jurisdiction.
See also post ¶ 728.
Length of notice requisite, see post § 146.

¶ 692. The contents of a paper which is beyond the jurisdiction of the courts of this state may be shown by secondary evidence.—Knickerbocker v. Wilcox, 83 Mich. 200.

¶ 693. In a suit in this state secondary evidence is admissible of a bond which, never having been in plaintiff's possession, had been sued on in Indiana, and was presumably out of the jurisdiction of Michigan courts.—Knickerbocker v. Wilcox, 83 Mich. 200.

¶ 694. The books of a company sued by one who had been in its employ contained a statement, made by it, of a part of the account claimed by plaintiff to be due to him; they were not produced on proper notice, and were taken out of the state. Held, that plaintiff could testify as to the contents of the books concerning a material point in his case.—Boglarsky v. Singer Mfg. Co., 65 Mich. 510.

¶ 695. Parol evidence of the contents of an application for membership in a fraternal organization is inadmissible in the absence of a showing that the written document is lost or destroyed, and the fact that the document is outside the jurisdiction of the court does not vary the rule.—Phillips v. U. S. Benevolent Society, 120 Mich. 142.

§ 142. Public records and documents not producible.

¶ 696. The general rule in regard to proof of documents is that the original shall be produced unless required to remain in some public office. If it belongs in such a place it can be proved by an exemplification. If belonging in private hands it must be introduced in evidence, unless lost or otherwise beyond the power of parties to prove it except by secondary evidence.—Bradley v. Silsbee, 33 Mich. 328.

§ 143. Voluntary or intentional destruction.

Voluntary removal beyond state, see ante § 141.

Presumption against destroyer or spoliator of papers, see ante § 64.

¶ 696a. Where the grantee in an unrecorded deed consents to its destruction and to the conveyance of the land described therein to a third party, he is estopped from proving the contents of such deed by parol evidence in asserting title thereunder.—Gugins v. Van Gorder, 10 Mich. 523.

¶ 697. In a claim against the estate of a deceased son based on his promise to pay the claimant for supporting his father in accordance with the son's written promise to the father, secondary evidence of the contents of the written agreement between the father and the son is competent where the writing was destroyed by the son in the claimant's presence and no suspicion of fraud on the part of the claimant is shown.—Davis v. Teachout's Estate, 126 Mich. 135.

§ 144. Failure to preserve stipulated evidence or record.

¶ 698. The failure of timber owners who have contracted for its manufacture, and for the delivery of the lumber upon their docks, where the manufacturers' control over it ends, to make and preserve a tally of the lumber as per their agreement, entitles the manufacturers to introduce any other competent proof of the amount of lumber manufactured.—Welch v. Palmer, 85 Mich. 310.

¶ 698a. A society that is sued upon its own obligations cannot take advantage of its own neglect to keep records to object that record proof of its proceedings is not produced to establish its liability. The party bringing suit can resort to such evidence as is obtainable when the party sued has put it out of his power to produce record evidence.—Scott v. First Methodist Church Trustees of Jackson, 50 Mich. 528.

§ 145. Copies attached to depositions or pleadings.

¶ 699. A copy of a bill of sale attached to a deposition by the commissioner, pursuant to an interrogatory calling for the production of the original and the attachment of said copy, is competent evidence without the production of the original paper.—Nash v. Manistee Lumber Co., 75 Mich. 346.

§ 146. Necessity and sufficiency of notice to produce.

Subpoenas duces tecum to witnesses, see Witnesses, I.

¶ 700. Where one has agreed to execute and deliver a deed of certain lands as a condition precedent to the performance of a contract by the other party, he cannot prove the execution and delivery by the admission of such other party without first calling upon him to produce the deed.—Thompson v. Richards, 14 Mich. 172.

¶ 701. Evidence of the contents of a letter sent to the opposing party or his agent cannot be given unless notice has been served upon him to produce it.—Ferguson v. Hemingway, 38 Mich. 159.

¶ 702. The contents of a bill of sale in the hands of the opposing party cannot be shown until after notice to him to produce it and his neglect or refusal to do so.—Hood v. Olin, 80 Mich. 296.

¶ 703. Defendants to an action on a contract are entitled, without notice, to the production of all papers which formed any part of the contract.—De Witt v. Prescott, 51 Mich. 298.

¶ 704. Where the written contract sued upon was in defendant's possession or under its control, plaintiff was excused from producing it at the trial.—Lorscher v. Knights of Honor, 72 Mich. 316.

¶ 705. Where trover is brought for the conversion of a promissory note, plaintiff is entitled to prove its existence and contents without giving defendant notice to produce it.—Rose v. Lewis, 10 Mich. 483.

¶ 706. The rule that the original must first be accounted for and notice given to the plaintiff to produce the original before secondary evidence is admissible does not apply so as to render notice necessary where the paper to be produced is in itself a notice.—Holmes Realty Co. v. Silcox, 194 Mich. 59.

¶ 707. The contents of a mere notice may be proved by secondary evidence—by compared copy or by parol—without notice to produce the original.—Falkner v. Beers, 2 D. 117; Michigan Land & Iron Co. v. Township of Republic, 65 Mich. 628.

¶ 708. Parol evidence of contents of a notice to quit served by plaintiff in ejectment may be received where the notice retained by plaintiff has been lost, if defendant, being notified, fails to produce it at the trial.—Johnson v. Johnson, 70 Mich. 65.

¶ 709. In an action for personal injuries due to a defective sidewalk, the offer to prove the contents of a petition to the city for compensation is equivalent to a notice to produce, and secondary evidence to prove the contents of the petition is admissible where application had been made to the city clerk who could not find the petition and there was no claim of surprise or request for time to contradict the proof.—Wheeler v. City of Detroit, 127 Mich. 329.

¶ 710. It is better practice to give notice to produce desired papers in possession of the opposite party before entering upon the trial, but the reasonableness of the notice depends upon the circumstances of each case, and is a matter for the court.—Hanselman v. Doyle, 90 Mich. 142.

¶ 711. Proper practice requires reasonable notice to be given opposing counsel to produce papers before secondary evidence of their contents is admissible, and what constitutes "reasonable notice" depends upon the surrounding circumstances.—Muir v. Kalamazoo Corset Co., 155 Mich. 624.

¶ 712. Notice to produce papers is insufficient if it barely allows time to procure them by telegraphic communication with clients, unless longer notice is impracticable.—De Witt v. Prescott, 51 Mich. 298.

¶ 713. A notice to counsel to produce letters in the possession of his client in another state, and which, to meet the notice, must be forwarded by the next mail after the receipt of a telegram to mail them, is too short.—Julius King Optical Co. v. Treat, 72 Mich. 599.

¶ 714. A notice to produce certain letters, served upon counsel, on the morning of the day when copies are offered in evidence, does not warrant such secondary testimony, the counsel claiming that the originals, if any exist, are in the possession of their clients, who are absent in another state.—Mortlock v. Williams, 76 Mich. 568.

¶ 715. A copy of a postal card alleged to have been mailed to nonresident plaintiffs by defendants is not admissible in evidence where the notice to produce the original is served on plaintiffs' attorneys on the same day that production is called for, and where such attorneys disclaim any knowledge of the original.—Pitt v. Emmons, 92 Mich. 542.

¶ 716. As a basis for the introduction of secondary evidence, a notice to produce all letters and papers from a certain date to the time of trial, five years later, without indicating date or subject or referring to any particular transactions, is too vague.—Arnstine Brothers & Mier v. Treat, 71 Mich. 561.

§ 147. Sufficiency of search for original.

Evidence of search, see post §§ 148-151.

¶ 717. The contents of a letter can be proved by the recollection of the recipient and by that of others to whom a letter has been shown which is identified as the one in question, if proof is made that diligent search has been made for the letter itself and that it cannot be found.—Huff v. Hall, 56 Mich. 456.

¶ 718. It is not necessary, as preliminary to secondary proof of the contents of a lost execution, to show a search among the papers of an attorney who once produced and read it on a trial before the justice in whose legal custody it then was.—Rash v. Whitney, 4 Mich. 495.

¶ 719. Under the circumstances of a particular case the defendant in a bill in equity was deemed to be the proper custodian of an unrecorded deed, and it was held that if the deed could not be found in his hands complainant might make parol proof thereof.—Holcomb v. Mosher, 50 Mich. 252.

¶ 720. The loss of a paper, which the witness says he left with another party, is not sufficiently shown to warrant parol proof of its contents, by his testifying that he has searched for and been unable to find the paper, but not stating in what particular place or places the search was made, or that he asked the custodian where the paper was, and no effort having been made to secure the testimony of the custodian, whose home was at the same town, in another state, as that of the witness.—Darrow v. Pierce, 91 Mich. 63.

¶ 721. Parol evidence of the contents of a written instrument (a bill of sale) is inadmissible upon testimony merely tracing the writing into the possession of a third party (e. g., an insurance adjuster), and failing to disclose any further inquiry.—Tanner v. Page, 106 Mich. 155.

§ 148. Preliminary proofs for foundation.

Circumstances making secondary proof receivable, see ante §§ 137, 138.
Of search made, see also ante § 147.
Necessity and sufficiency of notice to produce or of search for original, see ante §§ 146, 147.
As to public and judicial writings and records, see post § 149.
As to deeds, contracts, and other private papers, see post § 150.
As to letters and messages, see post § 151.
Kind or competency of secondary evidence required, see post §§ 152, 153.
Order of proofs, foundation proofs before offer of evidence, see Trial, V, B.
Sufficiency of foundation proofs as court or jury question, see Trial, VI.
Right to call adverse party to disprove loss of instrument, see Jud. Act, chap. XVII, § 54; Comp. L. 1915, § 12542.

¶ 722. Secondary evidence cannot be received to prove a fact without first laying a foundation for it in accounting for the absence of that which is primary.—Gugins v. Van Gorder, 10 Mich. 523.

¶ 723. The best and most direct testimony must always be produced, and where for any reason that becomes impossible, such fact must be shown before other evidence is admissible.—Sullivan v. Godkin, 172 Mich. 257.

¶ 724. Parties relying upon parol evidence to establish the contents of a written agreement claimed to be lost should explain fully the circumstances of the loss or destruction, so as to relieve themselves from any reasonable suspicion of having connived at its loss. —Shouler v. Benander, 80 Mich. 531.

¶ 725. On offering secondary proof of the contents of an application for membership in a society, which had been sent to a place out of the jurisdiction and not lost or destroyed, the foundation should show that there is some reason for not producing the original or a copy thereof.—Phillips v. United States Benevolent Society, 125 Mich. 186. (Montgomery, C. J., and Hooker, J., dissented on the ground that under the rule in Eslow v. Mitchell, 26 Mich. 500, there are no degrees in secondary evidence requiring a copy rather than parol testimony.)

¶ 726. A party relying upon a lost document must establish its execution and its loss, and a diligent but unsuccessful search for it in the places where it is most likely to be found.—Thomson v. Flint & P. M. R. Co., 131 Mich. 95.

¶ 727. In a suit on a promissory note, it must be shown that the original note is lost or destroyed, or otherwise beyond the power of the party to produce it, before secondary evidence of its contents can be admitted.—Gelder v. Welsh, 169 Mich. 490.

¶ 728. That defendant is a director of a corporation may be proved by parol, where prior evidence is offered that the books of the corporation are not available.—Deloria v. Van Winkle, 162 Mich. 660.

§ 149. ——Public and judicial documents and records and files.

Presumption where record is not found in place, see ante ¶ 296.
Contracts filed with justice, see post ¶ 739.

¶ 729. Parol evidence that an affidavit required by law was brought to the proper office and filed by the witness is incompetent where there is no showing that the affidavit has been searched for or has been lost or destroyed.—Monaghan v. McKimmie, 32 Mich. 40.

¶ 730. Proof of the original existence of the lost files and record of guardian's proceedings in the probate court for the sale of land, held sufficient to warrant evidence of their contents.—Blanchard v. De Graff, 60 Mich. 107.

¶ 731. A justice's docket showing judgment in an attachment case, but no affidavit or bond, and showing also an execution issued, but not its return, is not competent evidence in support of an execution sale, without proof of the files in the case or of a proper search therefor.—Hogsett v. Ellis, 17 Mich. 351.

¶ 732. Proof that the return of the highway taxes for a road district, which was procured for the purpose of a former trial from the township clerk, has been lost, does not, in view of How. St., § 1416, requiring the filing of such return with the supervisor, lay a sufficient foundation for the introduction of parol proof as to its contents, unless it is shown that the return is not in the supervisor's office.—Township of Deerfield v. Harper, 115 Mich. 678.

¶ 733. Foreign statutes cannot be proved by parol without some showing why secondary evidence becomes necessary.—People v. Lambert, 5 Mich. 349; Kermott v. Ayer, 11 Mich. 181.

¶ 734. Where the making on a certain date of an order allowing a claim is testified to by the judge of probate and by a person who was present when the order was announced, such order is presumed to have been lost from the records, and its contents may be proved by parol.—Howd v. Breckenridge, 97 Mich. 65.

§ 150. ——Deeds, contracts, notes, and private papers.

¶ 735. To prove the existence and loss of a deed in a chain of title it was relevant to show that a former register of deeds who had been concerned in making an abstract of titles to lands in the county, and had made a list or abstract of unrecorded deeds, of which a large number had accumulated in the register's office, had seen among these unrecorded deeds such a one as that said to be lost.—Raymor v. Norton, 31 Mich. 210.

¶ 736. The loss of a deed was after the lapse of nearly forty years considered sufficiently proved by testimony of a second grantee that he believed it to have been among his papers which had been casually destroyed; this grantee being an expert lawyer who had inquired into the title when he purchased, and had presumably retained his title papers.—King v. Carpenter, 37 Mich. 363.

¶ 737. Testimony by a witness who executed a deed, that he executed it in the custom house, that he looked everywhere for it where he thought it was likely to be; that after he left the custom house he "went through all the papers where it was likely to be; that he did not take it into the estates' office at all, that it never was in the estates' office that he knew of," standing uncontradicted justifies the court in holding that reasonable search had been made and that the loss of the deed had been proved.—Thomson v. Flint & P. M. R. Co., 131 Mich. 95.

¶ 738. A written contract cannot be proved by copy without first showing the loss, destruction or absence from the jurisdiction of the original.—Woods v. Burke, 67 Mich. 674.

¶ 739. Evidence that a contract was filed with a justice of the peace at the time of commencement of suit thereon, that the justice has been dead several years, and that the custodian of his docket, who is a successor in office, as well as plaintiff's counsel in the case, have been unable, after search, to find it, renders a copy of the contract admissible.—Stanley v. Anderson, 107 Mich. 384.

¶ 740. In an action by the owner of a warehouse against a railroad company for the loss of a building by fire alleged to be due to negligence of defendant in the operation of its engine while attempting to rerail a car on a sidetrack of plaintiffs, in which defendant gave notice in its plea that it would rely upon a certain contract or lease of the sidetrack which exempted it from liability, and it failed to comply with an order of discovery of the document, presumably because it was unable to produce it, but on the trial offered an application for a sidetrack signed by a former owner of plaintiffs' premises together with a form of contract or lease which its own witness admitted did not always follow the application, held that sufficient foundation was not laid for the admissibility in evidence of the application.—William R. Roach Co. v. Blair, 190 Mich. 11.

¶ 741. On an issue of nonpayment of drafts taken as payment of other paper, it was error to admit evidence of the protest, nonpayment and return of the drafts without first producing them, or accounting for their absence.—Simpson v. Waldby, 63 Mich. 439.

¶ 742. In a suit on a note alleged to have been lost, a witness stated that he had the entire care of the notes belonging to the plaintiff; that the pocketbook containing the note disappeared, and that diligent search was made for it without success. He also stated that an individual was prosecuted criminally for stealing the note, and confessed his guilt, and stated what he had done with the note. Held, that the loss of the note was sufficiently proved to allow parol evidence of its contents.—Higgins v. Watson, 1 Mich. 428.

¶ 743. A claim before commissioners on an estate was based upon contractors' proposals, the originals of which were not produced. Testimony was given that they had been left in the custody of an architect and he failed to find them. Held sufficient proof of loss to warrant secondary evidence of the proposals by copy.—McKeown v. Harvey, 40 Mich. 226.

